Feels a Lot Better When Black-Draught Relieves Constipation

From many states come reports like the following from Mr. W. M. Henderson, of Jasper, Fla: "I have been taking Thedford's Black-Draught twenty years. I take it for constipation that gives me a dull, tired, aching feeling, and I have headache, too. Black-Draught relieves me of this trouble. After a few doses, I feel as good as new. I keep it in my home. I have a big family. When one of us is ailing (from constipation), we take Black-Draught and almost always feel a lot better. It has been worth its weight in gold to my family." . . . Sold in 25¢ packages. "Children like the Syrup."

Gorman Says Bosses Do Best To Provoke New Textile Crisis

Southern Manufaiturers Perilously Near Again Forcing War, Union Leader Charges, Declaring Workers Will Not Shrink from Anything Necessary to Win Justice.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Textile employers are doing everything in their power to provoke a new crisis in the textile industry, Francis J. Gorman, first vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America and secretary of the organizing committee, charged at union headquarters here.

"The wool section of the industry is making a wholly unwarranted complaint to the president and southern cotton textile interests are coming perilously near flying battle flags," Gorman declared.

"Right now I want to call attention to the fact that while the United Textile Workers of America notified President Roosevelt of acceptance of his truce proposal, the employers did not accept the truce," he continued. "If they withheld acceptance of the truce so as to retain freedom to make war, they will have to accept the consequences. The union will not shrink from anything that is necessary to bring about an end of mediaeval conditions in the textile industry.

"As a result of the textile strike, which up to Sept. 22 had the textile industry absolutely paralyzed, the Winant board brought forth a formula for peace with justice to both sides. The president has agreed to that program and by proclamation has put the program into effect. It provides for changes only after hearing—a system of adjudication on a basis of proof. I feel confident the president intends to see that his orders are obeyed. The union can assure the industry that the union has the intention to do that—and it has the power, as the industry ought to know.

> "It seems high time that this industry, which has always been the beneficiary of subsidy of one kind or another and which has always piled up profits out of exploitation, became civilized enough to accept the ways of peace.

"Mr. Arthur Besse, president of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, has protested to the president, saying the board ordered created by the president will be 'prejudicial' to the interests of employers because it requires employers to prove the necessity for the workday. That is just too bad. Until now the burden of proof has been on the workers and under that system the whole abuse known as the stretch-out grew up. Isn't it possible for Mr. Besse and his organization to submit finally to the same kind of adjudication that almost every American recognizes as traditionally American and the outgrowth of our own experience and sense of justice? I hope so.

Bosses Want "One-Way Street."

"Meanwhile the American Cotton Manufacturers' association, meeting at Greenville, was adopting resolutions, on the one hand asking the government to help them further, while on the other hand demanding that the government get out. The textile industry has been subsidized always and it hasn't yet learned how to get along otherwise, but it wants a one-way street. It wants cessation of government activities 'which set aside the right to self-government,' by which they mean, of course, interference with the power of the mills to exploit the workers to the limit.

"These employers ask the government to hurry negotiation of trade agreements for more export market. If the employers are not willing to abide by the provisions laid down by the president pursuant to the Winant board report, then the United Textile Workers of America will oppose with all possible vigor all trade agreements and we will ask foreign labor movements to join us in that opposition, until the textile manufacturers of America deal fairly with the workers. Life in the textile industry is not a one-way street and it will not be if we can help it.

Union Ready to Co-operate.

"Our great anxiety is that the industry should cease its ancient tabtics and develop a co-operative relationship. We shall be glad to co-operate, but the day of giving our last ounce of strength for textile profit is over and we want that understood."

NEW TEXTILE WORK PLAN.

Joseph Ott, managing director of the Royal Weaving company, Pawtuckett, R. I., is reported to have proposed to President Roosevelt a plan to reduce employment in the textile industry. He advocates abolishment of all overtime work and the two and three-shift system. He proposed that the industry agree that only four looms be assigned to each worker, and asked a standard 40-hour week. With this plan, he said, "In thirty days we will be short of textile workers."

GET 30-HOUR WEEK.

The construction industry's code provides for regional agreements on wages, hours and other conditions of employment, to be reached by collective bargaining. The agreement recently reached by electricians and contractors in the region of Portland, Ore., provided for a minimum of $1.25 an hour for journeymen and $1.50 an hour for foremen, with the 6-hour day and 5-day week.

It is generally a month or two after the efficiency expert leaves that things get to working right again.

Mill Owners Spread Communist Propaganda

Charlotte, N. C.—Reproductions of communist publications in New York City relative to the strike of the textile workers, and bitterly assailing the United Textile Workers of America and its officials, continue to flood the mails in southern mill centers.

These circulars are reported to be printed in a private printing shop in Charlotte reputed to be subsidized by cotton mill owners. They are being shipped direct by express to the cotton mills, where they are mailed in plain envelopes to the names of employes appearing on mill payrolls, and to the names of citizens and farmers appearing in local telephone directories.

In every case that has come to light where a worker has received one of these circulars, his name and initials are spelled in the same identical way that it appears on his pay envelopes from the mill where he is employed.

The envelopes are addressed on typewriters. In some cases typewriters with the peculiar "all capital" letters have been used, and similar in this respect to the communications which in the past have come to employes from the managements of nearby mills.

More than 2,000 of these documents in plain envelopes were dumped in the mails in Abbeville, S. C., on Oct. 12. On the same day more than 1,000 of them were mailed in Greenville, S. C., and others mailed in Greenwood, S. C.; Spartanburg, S. C., and Kings Mountain, N. C.

These circulars are regarded as a part of the campaign of the mill owners throughout the south to discredit the United Textile Workers with mill workers. The mill owners failed in efforts to show that the textile workers' union had affiliations with communist groups. Since then the mill towns have been flooded with circulars anonymously mailed that carried attacks of the communists on the textile workers' union.

WALSH-WEIDNER STRIKE IS ENDED

Men to Go Back With Recognition Of Representatives

Five-Week Strike Ends When Various Unions Vote on Peace Pact.

Combustion Engineering Corp. Head Comes to City and Agreement Reached—Permanent Terms to Be Drawn Later.

Chattanooga Times went down swinging once more in their consistent efforts to align themselves against working people of this city in their struggle for their rights when the five-weeks strike of the Hedges-Walsh-Weidner plant was settled last night. Negotiations have been carried on for the past week with President F. A. Schaff, of the Combustion Engineering corporation of New York, of which Hedges-Walsh-Weidner is a subsidiary.

Workers claim the settlement as a victory of their attempts to enforce Section 7-a, and makes possible clearing of differences and misusage of employes which have existed for many years. Terms include return to work of all striking employes as fast as possible, and without discrimination of any kind.

Attorney Gus Wood, who did yeoman service for the union boys throughout the strike, will take immediate steps to secure dissolvement of the federal injunction held against fifteen of the strikers.

As the workers went back through the plant gates this morning there was a spring to their steps and an air of optimism that pervaded which speaks well for prospects of cooperation from both sides and permanent peace for all.

Praise and thanks to the public and sympathizers who helped take care of the strikers were heard on all sides, while labor marches on despite reactionary opposition.

Ortman, Union Hater, Leaves Des Moines

Moving Spirit in Lock-Out of Meredith Printers Will Not Be Missed.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 2.—Hadar Ortman, against whom a fight has been directed by organized labor, by reason of his labor-hating tactics, has departed from Des Moines for Chicago and "The Iowa Unionist" comments that "Des Moines is glad that he is gone, but cannot refrain from feeling a little sorry for Chicago."

Ortman was regarded as the leading spirit in the famous lockout of thirteen union printers at the Meredith Publishing company, and the importing of twenty "rugged individualists" to take their places, contending that a workman could not be loyal to an employer and the union at the same time. Editor Simmons states further:

"Many of the 'rugged individuals' imported to take the places of union men didn't even own a clean shirt when they came there. The union workers, locked out, were home owners of Des Moines, or were buying homes. Today, over two-thirds of them have lost their homes through efficiency' methods in Sweden. To the everlasting credit of these people, it should be mentioned that every one of them refused to 'kneel to the dictator' and remained steadfast to the co-operative principles with which they, and other union workers, in harmony with the late Ed. Meredith, had built the Meredith Publishing company from virtually nothing to one of the greatest farm publications in the middle west."

A. & P. STORES CLIMAX LONG FIGHT ON UNIONS IN CLEVELAND SYSTEM

Big Chain Seeks To Stop National Unionization Drive

Back of Bitter Cleveland Cleveland Controversy is History of Resentment Aroused by Stores' Policies and Tactics.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 1.—The background of the controversy here between labor and the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company reaches back several years when labor sought to organize A. & P. employes and was fought with every resource of the giant store chain. A. & P. executives at that time saw in the unionization campaign here the beginning of a move to organize its employes nationally and left no stone unturned to defeat the unions.

The hostility of the A. & P. organization to labor has continued to this day, coming to a climax in the decision to close its 300 stores and warehouses here, in brazen disregard of the public welfare. Action of the company throws 2,200 workers into the ranks of the unemployed. The company announced that the stores would remain closed and that it was withdrawing permanently from the Cleveland area.

Back of the controversy, too are other factors, including resentment aroused in Cleveland by revelations in years past of sharp practices on the part of A. & P. stores. Contributing also was a tremendous anti-chain store campaign in recent years and the growth of the co-operative movement, which has been bitterly opposed by the chains.

Refused Relief Aid.

Resentment was further aroused by the failure of the A. & P. stores to extend credit to local relief agencies in the depression before the federal government began to supply funds last year. As a result of its action, local relief officials refused to give any business to A. & P. firms when the federal money was granted. This resulted in a loss of business to the A. & P. of large sums annually.

Competition of other chain stores was affecting the A. & P. chain here and perhaps was a factor in its announced decision to withdraw from Cleveland. There was a probable feeling on the part of its executives that it could afford to take drastic action here as a warning to A. & P. workers in other cities not to organize.

The company announced that it was leaving Cleveland because of labor troubles and the alleged failure of Mayor Davis to protect trucks attempting deliveries of goods to its stores.

Cleveland Federation of Labor officials denounced the company and said that the A. & P. must consent to unionization, which was declared to be the only way labor could get a fair deal from the A. & P. management.

Mayor Scores Company.

Mayor Davis denied that the city has not given the stores sufficient police protection and scored the company for its "hasty action." "We feel," he said, "that the A. & P. company, having taken hundreds of thousands of dollars out of Cleveland, owes something to this city. Its employes have been faithful for many years. It is unfair for the company to pull out of the city so suddenly."

Seven unions involved in the controversy with the A. & P. declared in a joint statement that the company was seeking by terrorism to prevent organization of its employes, and that it was flagrantly violating Section 7-A of the recovery act. The statement said:

"We believe that the action of this company in their threat to close their business in our city is only a further line of intimidation and coercion as a final stroke to prove to everybody that they will stop at nothing to con-

Typewriter Fixers Strike in Chicago; All Shops Tied Up

Union Recognition Main Issue; Are Machinists Union Members; Police Rebuked.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Typewriter mechanics and other office machine repair men are on strike here. The men, members of Local No. 717, International Association of Machinists, walked out after five months of continued refusal on the part of the employers to bargain collectively with their union.

Every typewriter and office machine company in the city is affected. According to officials of the machinists, the so-called independent dealers are willing to sign an agreement with the union but are being kept from doing so by the four big companies which dominate the industry here—the Underwood-Elliott Fisher, the Royal, the Woodstock and the L. C. Smith-Corona.

Everything Tied Up.

"The strike is exceedingly effective," said J. J. Uhlmann, business representative of the machinists. "Not an office machine—typewriter, adding machine, check writer, or bookeeping machine—of any description is being repaired by the struck firms."

A number of the strikers have been arrested for picketing, and in each case the judge has promptly dismissed the case after reprimanding the police for their interference.

The Shipman-Ward company tried to get an injunction, but its petition was denied by Judge Upstein.

The strikers are asking for a minimum monthly wage of $160, time and one-half for overtime, seniority rights, and two weeks' vacation with pay.

"Closed Shop" Test Entered in New York

New York.—A court test of the constitutionality of the "closed shop" under Section 7-A, of the national industrial recovery act, is being made here by the National Association of Manufacturers and the American Federation of Labor.

Joining in a suit of the Doll and Toy Workers' union against Ralph A. Freundlich, a leading toy manufacturer, the manufacturers contended that Section 7-A outlawed the closed shop as "impossible and illegal." It required, it was held, that the employer make membership in a union a condition of employment contrary to the text of the law.

A. F. L. Backs Union.

The American Federation of Labor, on the other hand, decided to back the toy workers' union. Counsel for the union, who is also counsel for a special committee of the A. F. of L., insisted that court decisions both before and after enactment of NRA upheld the right of labor to enforce the closed shop. Congress in enacting the recovery act did not intend to curtail any of the rights previously enjoyed by labor, it was explained.

The suit originated with the doll workers' union, which had been granted a temporary injunction against Freundlich when his plant was moved from New York City to Clinton, Mass. The union contended that this had been done to evade an existing union contract.

SPECIAL MEETING CALLED BY BAKERS

Special meeting has been called for Bakers Union No. 25 for Saturday, Nov. 3, to discuss negotiations for settlement of the bakery controversy now going on. Meeting will be held in the labor hall.

Thirty U. S. Senators Who Opposed Labor in Parker Case "Out"

Five More Up This Year for Re-election — Defeat Predicted.

Organized Labor Determined to Defeat Anti-Labor Senators in Coming Campaigns.

Washington, Nov. 1.—In keeping with the declaration long ago to the country covering the political policy of the American Federation of Labor, that it will "stand faithfully by our friends and elect them; oppose our enemies and defeat them," regardless of political party, an unceasing fight has been waged against re-election of the U. S. senators who, in 1930, betrayed the wishes and interests of labor by favoring the confirmation of Judge John J. Parker to the U. S. supreme court.

The potent power of organized labor aroused is well reflected in the result.

"Yellow dog" Judge.

It will be readily recalled that Judge John J. Parker was nominated for the U. S. supreme court by President Hoover, in 1930. It appeared that the judge's chief claim to fame was that he rendered a number of decisions in lower courts directly opposed to the best interests of wage-earners and not in the interest of the country as a whole.

Chief of his decisions in this respect was one upholding the infamous "yellow dog" labor contract, by which greedy employers have in the past been enabled to exploit workers and hold them in virtual industrial slavery.

Due to the wide use of the term "yellow dog" in connection with the Parker case, he has been referred to as "Yellow Dog" Judge Parker.

His confirmation was defeated, and the "yellow dog" contract has since been outlawed by congress.

Thirty Already "Out."

A survey made by the American Federation of Labor, and now released for publication, shows that, since the defeat of the appointment of Judge Parker, in 1930, twenty-six members of the U. S. senate who voted to confirm are not now members of congress, or not nominees for re-election. In addition to these, four who were "paired" in favor of confirmation are not now in the congress. This makes a total of thirty who are "out," nearly all of them actually defeated.

The senators voting against the interests of labor in 1930 who are no longer senators or nominees include: Allen, Baird, Bingham, Blease, Broussard, Dale, Gillette, Goldsborough, Gould, Greene, Jones, McCulloch, Oddie, Overman, Ransdell, Shortridge, Simmons, Smoot, Steck, Stephens, Sullivan, Swanson, Thomas (Idaho), Waterman and Watson.

Those who were paired in favor of confirmation of the appointment of Judge Parker and not now in congress are: Phipps, Goff, Grundy and Moses.

Five Up This Year.

Five other U. S. senators who voted for confirmation of Judge Parker are nominees for their respective parties for re-election to the senate this year, and they are all strongly opposed by labor.

These include: Fess (Ohio), Hatfield (W. Va.), Hebert (R. I.), Reed (Penn.), and Walcott (Conn.).

The decisive defeat of these five current candidates is freely predicted by officials of organized labor, and their defeat will make thirty-five senators "out" who favored the confirmation of Judge Parker, and who by that vote tacitly favored the "yellow dog" labor contract.

Friends Up for Re-election.

In the current campaign, there are fifteen U. S. senators who have been nominated by their respective parties and are up for re-election, who voted in favor of labor and against the confirmation of the appointment of Judge Parker to the U. S. supreme court. These include:

Ashurst, Connally, Copeland, mell, Vandenburg, Walsh and cutting, Frazier, Johnson, La Follette, McKellar, Pittman, Robinson (Ind.), Shipstead, Tram-Wheeler.

Vital Issue.

The Parker case, of course, was not the only matter in which organized labor was vitally concerned, although it is held to be an outstanding issue. This is particularly emphasized by a perusal of the complete records of voting in the senate, as a study discloses the fact that nearly all who betrayed the wishes and interests of labor in the Parker case followed a similar policy in other matters in which organized labor was concerned; while those senators who voted against Judge Parker's confirmation have usually followed the policy of voting favorably on measures in which organized labor has been chiefly affected.

Anti-Labor Campaign.

According to President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, "It is thoroughly established that a campaign for anti-labor legislation is in progress and when the Seventy-fourth congress meets it will be flooded with bills detrimental to the interests of labor."

Organized labor is therefore very much concerned about the election of U. S. senators and members of congress who have shown a disposition to co-operate with labor in protecting and advancing the interests of wage-earners and of the country as a whole.

NONPARTISAN COMMITTEE INDORSES CANDIDATES IN COMING ELECTIONS

Meeting of nonpartisan committee of Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods was held Oct. 24, 1934. Democratic candidates for governor, U. S. senators and congressmen were indorsed on their previous records. Candidates in other congressional districts were passed on and recommendations were made which does not affect voters of this district.

Unionist Declines Offer of Atlanta Postmastership

Patriotic and Competent Services in Civic Leadership Basis for Offer of Appointment.

(From Atlanta Journal of Labor)

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 1.—After being mentioned for many months as the probable successor to E. K. Large as postmaster of Atlanta, A. Steve Nance, president of the Federation of Trades, declined the appointment when it was offered him by Congressman Ramspeck Thursday.

While Mr. Nance had never been a candidate for this or any other office, his friends in the labor movement, as well as in the business world, were deeply grateful to Congressman Ramspeck for his recognition of the outstanding fitness of Mr. Nance to fill the position.

In reply to a telegram from Congressman Ramspeck asking his consent to present his name, Mr. Nance declined, in a telegram which said:

"Your confidence greatly appreciated, but on account of business reasons and also my position in the labor movement I would not feel justified in accepting the postmastership."

Upon receipt of this telegram, Mr. Ramspeck announced the appointment of Don F. Livingston as postmaster and Mrs. Z. V. Peterson as assistant postmaster.

Mr. Livingston has long been connected with the local postoffice here and is held in high esteem by organized labor. It is the opinion of all trades unionists that no better assistant could have been appointed than Mrs. Peterson, who has rendered great service to her city in the past.

Tells Labor-Baiter Hosiery Union to Be Here From Now On

Cites Yellow Dog Contracts Forced on Southern Workers by Employers—Requests Public Debate on Fairness.

John W. Edelman, research director of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, makes a very fine answer to the Chattanooga Times' scurrilous attack on Fred G. Held, vice-president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers. It will be recalled, several weeks ago an editorial in the Times in a subtle and venomous manner inferred that Mr. Held was "cleaning up" in a financial way in connection with organization activities during the recent strike. Although the policies of the Times are well known to laboring people as particularly vindictive and unrelenting in its anti-labor ranting, it is believed that Mr. Edelman hit the nail squarely on the head when he asked: "Is the animus of the Times due to the fact that the American Federation of Hosiery Workers seeks to raise wages of Chattanooga hosiery employes to the level now being paid in northern mills doing the same work?"

October 26, 1934.

Mr. A. S. Ochs, President,
Chattanooga Times,
Chattanooga, Tenn.
Dear Sir:

We received a copy of your recent editorial entitled, "As the Strike Ends, Who Are the Victors?" The concluding paragraph of this editorial reads as follows:

"Everybody seems to have lost in the strike, except, possibly Mr. Held. It is assumed that he will be leaving Chattanooga in the next few days. As a farewell gift to the community he might tell before leaving just exactly how much of the workers' hard-earned money he is taking away with him. Or, if he objects to giving the exact amount, round figures will be sufficiently informative."

Even at this late date we must enter an emphatic and forceful protest against the editorial as a whole and particularly against the utterly unwarranted and malicious attack on the character and purpose of the union which Mr. Fred G. Held represents.

You insinuate very broadly that the American Federation of Hosiery Workers is some sort of a racket or "shake-down" organization. And you fall back on the commonest arguments against a labor union—that the officials are interested only in collecting dues from workers and make no effort to render service in return.

The reputation of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers is safe enough because of those who have taken the trouble to inform themselves as to the character and achievements of various labor organizations in this country. There is ample evidence to be secured from wholly impartial sources to show beyond all question, not merely the integrity, humanity and dependability of the union, but also to demonstrate the intelligence and idealism which has characterized the policies of this body in all its dealings with employers, the government and its members.

The fact of the matter is that the southern press is hostile towards labor organizations whose membership is, at the moment, largely located in the north, simply because the unions have exhibited more real concern for the welfare of the southern workers than have the so-called leaders of southern public opinion. Is the animus of the Chattanooga Times due to the fact that the American Federation of Hosiery Workers seeks to raise wages of Chattanooga hosiery employes to the level now being paid in northern mills doing the same work? Surely the welfare of your community will be greatly advanced as a result of our efforts to increase your local payrolls. Or is the interest of your paper in keeping payrolls low and maintaining the unfair competitive advantages which certain southern manufacturers have created for themselves through paying less wages for the same sort of work?

The whole purpose of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in conducting an organization drive in

Railway Shopcrafts Toss Out N. W. P. "Company Union"

"Dummy" Union Swept Into Oblivion by Almost Unanimous Vote.

Choose A. F. L. Railway Employes' Department Unions. Tribute Paid to Machinists' Official

San Francisco, Nov. 1.—Another railroad "company union" was swept into oblivion last week by the shop craft employes on the Northwestern Pacific.

The "dummy" was scrapped by almost unanimous action of the shopmen. According to an official tabulation, certified by L. J. Smith, representative of the United States national mediation board, more than 90 per cent of the machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, sheet metal workers, carmen, electrical workers and firemen and oilers employed on the road formally authorized the standard unions, affiliated with the A. F. of L. railway employes department, to represent them.

The department participated in the tabulation through R. S. Roberts, grand lodge deputy of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen.

According to Roberts, the splendid showing made by the standard unions was due in a large measure to the efforts of Walter Nash, grand lodge representative of the machinists, who had been conducting organization work over the Northwestern Pacific.

The department was represented during the negotiations by Vice-President J. M. Patterson, of the Carmen, and Frank R. Lee, of the Boilermakers.

Organizing crews of the standard unions are now visiting all points on the road to complete arrangements for a system federation convention and the election of system officials to replace the officers of the "company unions" which were deposed in the recent representation election which was supervised by the national mediation board.

Hearings were begun in the United States district court at Topeka, Kan., on the request of the railway employes' department for elimination of a temporary order previously issued by Federal Judge Richard J. Hopkins restraining the Rock Island management from discontinuing the check-off of duties for the "company union."

It is anticipated that order will be set aside now. The recent vote on the Rock Island emphasized definitely that the employes wanted no more "company unions."

A. P. Free to Scab To Its Heart's Content

Big Press Organization Freed From Section 7-A After Flouting President's Agreement.

Officials of the Commercial Telegraphers' union and the American Newspaper Guild are preparing to protest vigorously to President Roosevelt against a ruling just made by the national labor relations board that the Associated Press is not bound by Section 7-A of the recovery act.

The board based its ruling on the fact that the Associated Press is not under a code and has never signed the president's re-employment agreement.

A big majority of the A. P.'s writers and telegraphic employes are members of their respective unions, but the management has ignored repeated requests for conferences. It is the only news service in the country that persists in refusing to bargain collectively with its employes.

The NLRB's ruling was made in connection with a request from the Telegraphers to supervise a union representation election among the A. P.'s keymen.

Holding that the company, because it is uncodified, is entirely outside the recovery act, the board declarod it could not hold the election, and added that in any subsequent action the union would have to proceed "without benefit of the legal sanctions of the recovery act."

ARE TEACHERS UNION PEOPLE?

Someone coined the prase "Are teachers human beings?" but the question teachers in Chattanooga are asking is "Are teachers trade-unionists?" Are they entitled to the same privileges as the members of other crafts? Does any labor man question the prevailing wage scale for skilled and unskilled labor? Skilled labor, presumably, is interpreted as labor which has required a period of training or apprenticeship; which requires skill and delicacy in execution.

Is there any reason why teachers should not be classed as skilled laborers? Are they not required to spend years of training to fit them for their positions? Do they not deal with the most delicate of all instruments, the human minds of the children of the community? If teachers are trades-union people and skilled workers, is there any reason why they should not share the prevailing wage scale of other city employes who are not skilled laborers in the sense that they have had to spend years in the preparation for their positions?

Are the members of the various crafts affiliated with the same labor organization as the teachers going to fight for the teachers in their effort to stop this discrimination in the city of Chattanooga and to obtain for themselves the prevailing wage of other city employes?

The teachers are hoping that all these questions will be answered in the affirmative or that just cause will be shown why they should not be.

The schools of this city have declined in the last few years and are facing a still further decline unless some just scale of wages is adhered to, which will build up the morale of a disappointed and disillusioned teaching force. Years of training and long hours of work in the classroom, and after school hours, have gone unrecognized and unrecompensed. Discriminations as to salaries within the teaching body are not to be compared with the discriminations between salaries of the teachers and other city employes.

If the people of Chattanooga value their public schools they will pay for them; if they do not they will allow the present evils to continue and the best teachers to drift away from the city or become indifferent and unenthusiastic. Poverty, total lack of appreciation, and debt are no incentives to do one's best and teachers are human beings in this respect.

The teachers want a definite answer and some kind of definite action. Nothing else will halt the present decline in what might be a great force for good in this community.

Showing of big events on motion picture screens in a minute and a quarter after they occur is possible by a new invention tested recently in Berlin. The film is shot from a special car, but instead of being wound on a spool, it passes through a canal into the interior of the car, where it is developed, fixed and washed, ready to show. By means of a telephoto system films of events miles away may be made on a theater roof and shown in 75 seconds.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Who said: "The nation which does not provide good home surroundings, good schools and good playgrounds for its children is sowing the wind, and most assuredly will reap the whirlwind?"

A.—Charles R. Mabey, vice-commander of the American Legion, in an address before the San Francisco A. F. of L. convention.

Q.—What was done at the recent A. F. of L. convention on proposals for establishment of food workers', needle trades' and other new federation departments?

A.—The proposals were referred to the Executive Council.

Q.—Does labor favor revival of the civil works administration?

A.—The American Federation of Labor declared at its recent convention in favor of asking the president to revive the CWA.

Mr. Harriman's Substitute for NRA

The president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Henry I. Harriman, is one of the country's most persistent propagandists. Practically every day he delivers a speech presenting his iden of the kind of "set-up" Congress should substitute for the National Recovery Act, which will automatically pass off the statute books next June.

When Mr. Harriman isn't making speeches he is issuing statements. He is a most consistent propagandist — his outgivings seldom convey a new idea, but nevertheless they are given ample space in the daily press.

"The labor clause, Section 7A, has caused more dissatisfaction with codes than any other feature of the Recovery Act," Mr. Harriman told the Grain and Feed Dealers' Association in Memphis last week.

> Mr. Harriman failed to point out, however, that the reason Section 7A has caused a lot of trouble is that large groups of anti-union employers have branzenly defied the law and that up to date our somnolent Department of Justice has not "cracked down" on them.

Mr. Harriman graudgingly concedes that Section 7A should be retained in the law—but with "important modifications." Mr. Harriman would have absolutely no objection to the section—if all its "teeth" were removed.

So far as employers are concerned, Mr. Harriman blandly suggests that they "be given a free hand." They should be permitter to write their own codes of fair competition, he says. He would graciously give the Federal government the privilege of enforcing the codes. In other words, the employers would write the law and Uncle Sam would act as policeman.

It's a great scheme—this plan Mr. Harriman is promoting—for everyone, except the workers and the consumers.

Clergy Hits Profit System

The iniquities of our present industrial system, operated solely for maximum profits, with its idle rich on the one hand and destitute millions of jobless and their dependents on the other, is receiving not only emphatic condemnation from the organized labor movement but also from prominent churchmen.

Declaring that the profit motive controlling those who own and control our industrial system will mean greater concentration of wealth, the Very Rev. John W. Day, dean of Grace Cathedral, of Topeka, Kansas, in an address to 1,000 young men and women attending a mass meeting of the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church at Atlantic City, declared that the profit motive animating those who own and control our industrial system will mean great concentration of wealth with all the evils inherently connected with such an iniquity. As a substitute for what he called "capitalism," Dr. Day advocated a new economic system, "based upon use instead of profit." He also urged public ownership of all public utilities including railroads. He added that war is inevitable until we have a socialized economic system.

The present economic system was also scored by the recent General Conference of the Evangelical Church, at Akron, Ohio. The conference adopted the report of its committee on the family, public morals, temperance and the Sabbath, which included the following statement:

> "Any system which leads to the concentration of wealth into the hands of the few, while the great masses have less and less, makes for national ruin. Any system with the profit motive as its sole impetus is far from the Christian ideal. The present structure stands condemned and must be rebuilt. Only through an adequate process of experimentation can these needed changes be effected."

In addition to the condemnation of the churches, this atrocious system of maximum profits was under fire by the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor at San Francisco. Confronted with the plight of the army of 10,000,000 unemployed, thrown out of the factories by the Shylocks who own them, the convention, without a dissenting vote, declared that "when private business is not able to resume its normal functions, then society is forced to take over the means of production" and put the "unemployed back to work producing wealth."

Scored on every hand for operating industry solely for the maximum profit which can be wrung from the people, regardless of the social consequences, the reactionary industrial bourbons refuse to read the handwriting on the wall and reorganize industry on the basis of social service. Perhaps the rugged individualists of American industry are not far from what may be their economic Armageddon.

TVA Social Experimentation

The increasing opposition of electric light and power profiteers to the far-reaching development undertaken by the Tennessee Valley Authority gives added interest to President Roosevelt's visit, in November, to the Muscle Shoals project, which will permit the nation's Chief Executive to see for the first time the swift realization of the social experimentation which he had in mind a year and a half ago when he announced as one of his objectives "national planning for a complete river watershed involving many states and the future lives and welfare of millions."

Under the policies of the TVA, a demonstration fertilizer plant is nearly finished at Muscle Shoals, where millions of dollars of Government money have remained tied up for a long period, two large hydro-electric power dams are practically completed, electric current at unheard-of cheap prices is being supplied to small towns and rural regions, a $7,000,000 transmission line is rapidly nearing completion, remedies for soil erosion are under way, land planning and reforestation are progressing, young men in large numbers are receiving vocational education, and comprehensive research work is moving forward to determine the industries most appropriate for the region by the Muscle Shoals plants.

It is said that the TVA directors—Dr. Arthur Morgan, Dr. Harcourt E. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal—believe in the principle of public ownership of power plants. Whether this principle be right or wrong, the men managing the social experiments are animated by zeal for the Muscle Shoals project and are enthusiastically supporting the yardstick established by order of President Roosevelt, the object of which is to make the TVA enterprise a vast laboratory where the Federal Government can ascertain how to generate and sell electric power efficiently and at rates so low as to make its broad use possible.

The ultimate object of the President was expressed in his speech at Portland, Oregon, in September, 1932. He said the fact that a community could vote to "create a yardstick of its own, will, in most cases, guarantee good service and low rates to its population."

Evirently visioning the now manifest determination of certain reactionary investors to block by court procedure the extension of the TVA project, the President added:

> "Never shall the Federal Government part with its sovereignty and control over its power resources while I am President of the United States."

TVA officers expected to have the huge $34,000,000 Norris Dam on Clinch River and its companion, the $20,000,000 Wheeler Dam on the Tennessee River, near Muscle Shoals, ready for inspection when the President makes his visit.

Students of judicial procedure are of the opinion that the courts will uphold every element of the TVA to bring light and power into the urban and rural communities throughout the vast territory within transmission distance of the mammoth dams under control of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Bankers have been walking the streets with an open demand to know why they are not entitled to the good will of other years. They have been in convention and perhaps they found courage in numbers.

Some of the bankers filed some hot shots at the administration.

Well, there are some good bankers, of course, but the country isn't exactly flooded with them.

Just why administration officials find it necessary to walk softly in their presence is hard to see.

These are the same birds who were "money changers" a year and a half ago. They haven't changed.

A year and a half ago these same bankers were the cringing proprietors of a busted banking system. Have we forgotten the busted banks and the closed banks? Some have not.

It was not only that the banks as such had gone blooey, but they had helped gyp the people with the fanciest line of rotten stocks and bonds any nation ever beheld. How far would the real estate bond ever have got without the banks? And where is that banker who raised his voice in protest against the looting that went on? No, YOU find him.

And the American Bankers' convention, jittery underneath perhaps, had the unutterable gall to strut the streets with criticisms of hose who still remember the big crash and those who led in building the thing that crashed. It is not time yet to kow tow to bankers.

Get a couple of things straight. Banks and bankers live on credit. Credit is something that promises to be turned into cash with a profit later on because the people will work and produce goods worth money.

Credit is a social force, the creation of the mass. Build a house on a prairie. Then let ten thousand others build houses right around yours. People make all the values there are. What happens when some real estater or banker gets in and grabs the land before the ten thousand do their building? He sees them coming and he plucks them, one by one, artistically and to the bone. Railroads, utilities, steamship lines, coal deposits, forests, all have been milked that way. The bankers have been on the inside of the looting of every natural resource.

And now we seem to have come to a point where the bankers must be promised that there will be no more "encroachment" or they won't play. It wasn't "encroachment" when the bankers were cutting in on the people, taking toll from every particle of toll. That was business.

The best way for the new deal to cease being an inspiration is for it to get shaky in the knees, to forget the brave, fine words of yesterday and to let the marauders back into the public pasture for another bite at the public shins.

If any single thing inspired the American people to go hook, line and sinker, for the new deal it was that one flaming castigation of the money changers and the pledge to throw them out.

Up to this time it seems the bankers have not recaptured Washington.

Virginia Miners Win; Labor Board Gets Case

Union Is Recognized; Strike Off; Semi-Anthracite Coal Industry Not Under Regular Codes.

Richmond, Va.—Following a two-day conference between union representatives ond coal operators, 700 Virginia miners who had been on strike since Oct. 1, gained recognition of their union and an agreement for satisfactory adjustment of differences.

The Montgomery-Pulaski semi-anthracite coal field, where the men are employed, is now regarded as well organized, much progress being made during the past three years. The NRA has recently ruled that the semi-anthracite coal industry is not included as a part of either the anthracite or bituminous coal codes.

It was mutually agreed, however, that the demand for the miners for increased pay and adjustment of working conditions will be referred to the national labor relations board for arbitration.

Labor to Investigate Civil Liberties Union

New York City.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has accepted the American Civil Liberties union's invitation to investigate the charge that the A. C. L. U. is communist-controlled. The union had invited examination in protesting against allegations in Mr. Green's report to the president on communist activity that the A. C. L. U. was a "subversive" organization.

Green wired Harry F. Ward, chairman of the A. C. L. U., as follows: "I assure you I do not wish to do the American Civil Liberties union and the men associated with it an injustice. I hold many members of the Civil Liberties union in high esteem and high regard. For this reason will make inquiry suggested in your telegram."

"Pains Gone," Says Lady, After She Had Taken CARDUI

In describing how her health improved after she had taken Cardui, Mrs. Ralph R. Courtney, of Wytheville, Va., said: "I was run-down and suffered from pain in my side. I wanted to feel well and get rid of the pain in my side, so I sent for Cardui and began taking it. By the time I had taken three bottles of Cardui, I was feeling much better. The pains had gone. I am very glad to recommend Cardui to other young women." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. $1 a bottle, at drug stores.

In return ... that 3 cents the members of the ...es and Labor council give us un...ringly their assistance and time in matters that concern our teaching problems, when we ask it.

The amount paid the American Federation of Teachers comes back to us in the federation magazine, which contains news of national interest and activities of other locals.

Only 17 cents out of our dues remains with our local. The printing of membership cards, statement blanks with envelopes, and postage sent to over 700 members twice each year, is no small item to be taken out of the 17 cents. There are numerous other expenses of our local to be taken out of the 17 cents.

Remember, to economize in some way and pay your dues to help support the organization which is safeguarding your interests.

Remember, to pay as promptly as possible. Some members are in arrears.

Remember, to attend federation meetings in order to know what the organization is doing.

Remember, this is your organization and your interest, activity and presence makes it a greater one and lightens the burden of the board of directors.

Many questions are asked by the members as to where our money for dues goes, so in a very small and rambling way I have tried to tell you through the above scale.

The average wife might act more like an angel if the average husband tried treating her like one.

MEAT CUTTERS' NEWS

Local 600, Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen, has been reorganized and is making great progress both in membership and in getting their contracts with shop owners signed.

Old Local 600 had a membership of about seventy. We have now about 200 members in the combined organization of Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen. Many of the members are new to organized labor and we are glad to say that most of the old guard are with us. They would be!

The public can now enter a market and be assured that, if the union card is displayed in that market, they will find one or more journeymen meatcutters behind the counter that have had three or more years experience in the meat business. And Local 600 asks all trade unionists to look for the union card in the market where they trade, and if it is not displayed to ask the meatcutter and also the owner of the shop why it isn't.

We have 90 per cent of the markets in Chattanooga and Rossville signed up. Only one market, Sharp Bros. on West Ninth street, has refused to deal with the union.

Packers and sausage makers are coming in line. Chattanooga Sausage company and Powell Packing company are 100 per cent. So far Allison's has not signed, although the entire working force is eligible for membership in Local 600.

The newly-elected officers of the local are: O. B. Jones, president; Ted Henson, vice-president; C. R. Chandler, secretary and treasurer; G. R. Hawk, corresponding secretary; Mack Ball, business agent.

Organizer A. V. Landes has been with us for about a month and has given us valuable service and advice in getting organized. We thank him. Brother Mack Ball and Brother Landis have done the real hard work of getting the members signed up and also the contracts signed.

A. F. of L. Campaign Supports Candidates Friendly to Labor

Announces Opposition to Fess, Hebert, Hatfield, Walcott and Reed; Supports Donahey, Holt, Gerry, Maloney, Wheeler and others; Party Lines Disregarded.

Washington.—The fight of organized labor to support its friends and defeat its enemies for political office, started with announcement of opposition to five senators and support for several others.

Special letters have been mailed by William Green, president of the A. F. of L., to all organized labor in Montana, indorsing Senator Burton K. Wheeler; West Virginia, Rush D. Holt; Ohio, Vic Donahey; Rhode Island, Ex-Senator Gerry, and Connecticut, Francis T. Maloney. Definite opposition has been expressed against Hebert, Fess, Hatfield, Wolcott and Reed.

In addition to these states, it has also become known that the federation will support Senator Copeland, New York, for re-election, and Senator La Follette, Wisconsin. John M. Robinson, Ninth Kentucky district, will be supported for the house. The federation's position on many other candidates for the U. S. senate and the house of representatives will likely be announced by President Green very soon.

Approval or disapproval of political candidates by organized labor is not based on party lines, but in keeping with the federation's declaration to "Stand faithfully by our friends and elect them. Oppose our enemies and defeat them; whether they be candidates for president, for congress, or other offices; whether executive, legislative or judicial." Indorsement or opposition is based upon the established record and advance statements of candidates respecting their attitude toward measures in which organized labor is vitally interested.

MORE ABOUT HOSIERY LETTER

the Tennessee valley has been to enable the employes to enjoy earnings and conditions of employment which will be equal to the very best obtaining elsewhere in these United States. We are, at the request of the southerners themselves, leading a fight to remove the differential in the codes which condemns wage-earners in a given geographical location to earn less wages than do employes in another area. It is our firm conviction that industry and community life everywhere is bound to suffer as long as a standard article can be produced for a lower cost in one section than another simply because labor costs are not equalized. If a hosiery worker produces the same average number of dozen stockings in Chattanooga as the hosiery worker in Philadelphia, why should one man be forced to accept half the wages that the other man earns? That is roughly the comparison between Tennessee and Pennsylvania as far as hosiery wages are concerned. There is almost a dollar difference in the average labor cost on a dozen pair of full fashioned hose to the advantage of the non-union southern employer as contrasted with the union manufacturer in other sections of the country. This disparity in wage rates creates a condition of permanent instability in the hosiery industry which is as harmful to Chattanooga as it is to New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin or Indiana hosiery mills.

Your editorial writer attempted to convey the impression that we came to Tennessee to take union dues out of your city to some other place. First of all, it must be understood that as long as manufacturers in your section have the right to sell hosiery in competition with manufacturers employing workers earning union rates, we have an obligation to meet that menace to our higher standards by endeavoring to increase yours to the levels which we enjoy. Actually we were invited by Tennesseans themselves to undertake this organization campaign in your state.

The dues and initiation fees which we will have collected in the entire south by the end of this year will not begin to repay our central treasury for the enormous investment we have made in the past decade in unionization work in unorganized territories. In Chattanooga, a few years ago, when we came into your city, local manufacturers hastily forced employe to sign "yellow dog contracts." Despite that lack of welcome, we have consistently carried on some educational activity in Tennessee for the past six or seven years. If you had cared to learn the facts you would have discovered that we have no intention of quitting organization work in Chattanooga, nor is there any likelihood of our present organization staff being removed, unless, of course, they are replaced by others. Had you inquired, you would also have discovered that most of the funds collected in union dues in Chattanooga remain in the local treasury, or is sent back to the local membership in some form of service by the national body.

In your state, there are manufacturers who serve as members of the hosiery code authority, or as officers of the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers. These gentlemen have come to know the national officers of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers quite well since the advent of the NRA. The president and secretary-treasurer of the union also serve on the hosiery code authority, appointed by the government. We challenge you to inquire of your local manufacturers who are acquainted with the officers of the union whether the American Federation of Hosiery Workers is led by carpet - bagging, money - grabbing, shake-down artists, as you would imply.

It is natural enough to find newspapers disliking the idea of strikes. However, there is only one way to avoid industrial conflict in America today—by granting labor its right to organize and deal collectively with management. The American Federation of Hosiery Workers has no strikes against employers with whom it enjoys contractual relations. Wherever the union is recognized, it enters in binding agreement with employers to settle all disputes by arbitration. The workings of the arbitration pact in the hosiery trade is a matter of public record. A responsible journalist would want to know something about this plan for industrial peace—now several years old—before publishing any very general and sweeping criticism directed in a rather covert manner at a well known labor organization.

There is much more that could be said on this whole question, and we would welcome a public debate under neutral auspices in your city on those issues, if this could be arranged. We would also like to make this offer: If you are still not satisfied with our statement that our southern organization campaign costs far more than it brings in, appoint some certified public accountant to examine our books and we will be glad to give him the evidence covering this point.

And, finally, allow me to pose this query: Have not the code publishing group learned this lesson from the excellent coverage given by Mr. Stark and other labor reporters on the New York Times—that true reports on labor are an excellent circulation and advertising binder? I know, from personal experience, that labor all over the nation buys the New York Times sheerly for that reason. I do, myself. It is apparent that fair coverage of labor news means a steady circulation among a large consumer group. Hosiery workers, more skilled than other workers, usually—even in low-paid centers—earn more than other workers, and are generally better trained and educated. As such, they are often the solidest part of the labor backbone in their district, and are the best consumer class. Therefore, from a business viewpoint, it is obviously not the wisest policy to antagonize them by such editorial matter as I am protesting against. Certainly the few manufacturers in Chattanooga do not buy, in the aggregate, anywhere near as much as labor. Then why, in the name of the newspaper business, go out of your way to print false statements about a labor dispute in hosiery? You may take refuge in the statement that I am prejudiced on the side of labor. But you must admit that there is in Chattanooga a horde who have my sentiments, and who should be treated by your newspaper fairly, if only not to lose their circulation.

If you are at all interested in learning something about the union that you maligned, my suggestion is that you obtain a copy of the magazine, Fortune, of January, 1932, which contains a clear-cut picture of the union—impartial, and certainly not prejudiced on our side. Should you find it difficult to obtain a copy, please write me, and I will have a copy of the article sent you.

Very truly yours,
JOHN W. EDELMAN,
Research Director.

Worker Fired For Unionism Ordered Rehired After Year

Washington.—More than a year after he was discharged for union activity, Virgil Reneau has been ordered reinstated in a final decision by the national labor relations board. He was fired Sept. 21, 1933, by the Harry Abels Machine shop, Healdton, Okla., after he had worked three years for the company.

Harry Abels, the employer, on Nov. 10, testified under oath before a justice of the peace that Reneau had been discharged for attempting to organize a labor organization, and that he was not fired for inefficiency or insubordination.

In August, 1934, Reneau was still out of luck so far as his old job was concerned. His reinstatement was ordered by the Kansas City regional labor board on Aug. 20, but without results. On Oct. 3, the regional board again held a hearing, at which the company did not appear.

On Oct. 11, the NLRB announced that it had made the finding of facts final and that the company must offer "immediate and full reinstatement" within ten days.

of the present trouble the A. & P. company has domineered its employes to the point where they have ceased to be free agents, and it is because of this fact that we, desiring to bring into being the true concept of Section 7-A, have cited that the guarantee this company can give to assure us and the people of our city that they intend to live up to the law is to accede to the unionization of their employes.

"The A. & P. company has continually violated the edict of the government and is known everywhere as the most antagonistic concern toward the organization ofits employes, and we contend that the present action of this concern is to further subject their employes to this unjust domination and to force the public and our administration to accept their tactics by their threat to leave our city.

Ask for "Fair Deal."

"We trust that the administration and the public in general, knowing that the labor movement or any of its units have never asked for anything but a fair deal, are acting in accord with the principles of the government and Section 7-A in demanding that this concern cease to coerce, intimidate and terrorize its employes by agreeing to unionization, and we believe that this threat to leave our city, while unjust to our community, is palpably further induced to, if possible, bring their employes further under their domination, so that they can continue to exploit them."

Signing the statement were the Bakers' union, Meat Cutters' union, Engineers' union, Auto Mechanics' union, Warehousemen's union, Managers' and Clerks' union and the Operating Firemen's union, all affiliated with the Cleveland Federation of Labor.

Milwaukee Strike Called.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's Union No. 73 called a strike of its members in A. & P. stores here, demanding higher wages and elimination of overtime.

Washington.—As the national labor relations board invited both sides in the labor dispute involving the Cleveland A. & P. stores to meet with the board in Washington, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, declared that the federation will co-operate in every possible way to bring about a settlement of the controversy.

"The American Federation of Labor," Green further said, "is giving serious consideration to the industrial differences which arose between the members of the Bakery, Butcher Workers and Retail Clerks' international unions and the management of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company in Cleveland. I have been in constant touch with the situation. The differences arose some time ago because it is alleged by the representatives of the several organizations involved that the management of the Atlantic & Pacific Tea company discharged many of its workers who exercised their rights to join an organization of their own choosing. The workers complained that the management of the company discriminated against workers who joined unions, discharged many of them who were old employes of long years standing, and refused to comply with the provisions of Section 7-A of the recovery act. Representatives of the workers report that the fight which is being carried on against the Atlantic & Pacific Tea company is for the purpose of protecting the workers in the exercise of their right to organize and bargain collectively."

Teachers Launch New Campaign in Interest of Schools

Will Tell "What Is Wrong" With Local System.

Chattanooga-Hamilton County Federation Presents Facts in Connection With Operation of Local Schools—Will Have Whole-Hearted Support of Labor in Effort to Improve Conditions Under Which Community's Children Are Educated.

"What's wrong with the schools of Chattanooga and Hamilton county?" is asked and answered in a paper prepared under the name of the Chattanooga and Hamilton County Federation of Teachers, submitted for Labor World readers this week.

An officer of the federation declared the organized teachers have a program of their own which they expect to put before the public for its consideration, and many facts which have heretofore not been generally known will be brought out in the campaign.

Dangers facing the local system will be pointed out, and it is hoped and believed the campaign of intelligent publicity will arouse the citizenship to the necessity for eternal vigil and action to protect the schools against the encroachments of reactionaries.

That local working people will "go along" with the teachers in their laudable efforts to protect the system goes without saying, the American labor movement being among the pioneers in establishment and development of public schools. Chattanooga Trades and Labor council has upon numerous occasions offered and rendered undivided and enthusiastic support to the teachers, even many years before the local forces realized the necessity of acting collectively under the banner of the American Federation of Labor.

The following, which is submitted as the first in a series of articles relating to local schools, is submitted with a sincere hope that Labor World readers will study it and succeeding contributions and place themselves in position to render intelligent service to the end that the teachers' program may be adopted in its entirety:

Is anything wrong with the schools of Chattanooga and Hamilton county?

Yes, plenty!

How serious is the situation?

If the evils are not corrected, the schools will continue to decline. Good teachers will leave the community or become discouraged. Poor teachers will become satisfied and make no effort to improve.

Who will suffer as a result of this deterioration?

The children who attend public schools and who will some day become the future citizens of Chattanooga and Hamilton county.

Do the people of the community understand the conditions in the schools?

The Chattanooga and Hamilton County Teachers association does not believe that the majority of citizens do.

What does the teachers' association intend to do about the situation?

The teachers intend to tell the public of the evils that exist in the schools and to suggest ways of overcoming them.

What are these evils?

There are two: First, lack of adequate support; second, lack of professional administration which takes into account professional training and scholastic ability when employing teachers or which rewards further efforts toward efficiency during the period of employment.

Are teachers' salaries proportionate with other county and city employes?

No! Clerks in offices of officials and firemen and policemen receive much more than teachers.

Why do teachers necessarily need good salaries?

First, from a sense of dignity for the importance of their positions as directors of the youth of the community; second, from a sense of fairness as compared with employes of like standing; third, to provide means for further study and improvement.

Is not professional training always taken into account in employing teachers in this community?

The bulletin of research published by the University of Chattanooga last summer showed that often students without degrees, of poor or failing standing in the university, were employed as teachers in this community when students, who had received degrees and had records of high standing in the university, were refused positions.

Is not recognition of further training of teachers, already employed, taken into account and encouraged in this community?

This can only be done by proper remuneration according to a fixed scale. Neither Hamilton county nor the city of Chattanooga has such a scale in force at present.

What suggestions does the teachers' association give?

The teachers' association has a tenure bill, which they hope to get enacted into law by the legislature, requiring that all teachers have a degree before they are employed in this community and granting them a probation period of two years to prove their ability to teach. After that period teachers cannot be dismissed without a hearing before a board.

The teachers' association has also approved a salary scale, low as compared with communities of like size in the United States, but one which will almost double the teachers' payroll of this community.

Can the teachers remedy the situation through their own efforts?

No! It will take the combined efforts of citizens, teachers, patrons and officials.

Will you help?

W. C. "Billy" Smith Reported Improving

W. C. "Billy" Smith, city building inspector and veteran member of Local 55, Iron Molders, was reported Thursday as slowly improving at the Physicians and Surgeons hospital from the results of an unfortunate automobile accident which occurred recently on McCallie avenue. Mr. Smith was at first thought to be very seriously injured, but it was said he will fully recover in a reasonably short time. Many friends of the old-timer "hope how soon."

Oil Refiners Name Officers; Make Progress

One of Many New Unions Taking Permanent Place in Family of Locals.

J. E. Hamill, treasurer of Local 18766, Oil Refiners, reports new officers named by that union and affers a "pot shot" at a brother officer's ability to sing.

The list of officers is submitted as follows:

President, Virgil Clarke.
Vice-president, Carl Drake.
Financial secretary, R. T. Green.
Treasurer, J. E. Hamill.
Recording secretary, Edward Hyder.
Guide, Elmer Byrd.
Sergeant-at-Arms, Norman Gaither.
Trustees, John Perry, F. Ballard and Joe Rood.

"Ed Hyder, recording secretary, is under a fine of $1 for not attending a certain special meeting last week," Mr. Hamill reports. "He offered as an excuse that he was entertaining the new pastor of his church by singing. This excuse was not accepted, for we all know that he could not entertain anyone by his singing."

The local of Oil Refiners is progressing splendidly, it was said, and in spite of some handicaps has progressed and is now ready to take its place permanently in the growing family of local unions.

Deplore Passing Fellow Unionist

Cement Workers local has adopted the following resolutions, expressing sympathy for surviving relatives of Roy M. Brown, member of the local, who passed away recently. The Labor World joins the Cement Workers in offering condolences to the family of Brother Brown:

Whereas, it has pleased the Great Maker of our destinies to remove from our midst our fellow worker and brother unionist, Brother Roy M. Brown, while yet in the prime of his life; and

Whereas, we bow with his family before the will of Him whose actions are never questioned, and say "Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven;" now therefore

Be it resolved, that we extend to the family of Brother Brown our deepest sympathy in this their bereavement; be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy spread on the minutes of this union, and a copy furnished our press representative for publication in the Labor World.

DAUGHTER OF G. D. LAWS SUCCUMBS TO REAPER

Many friends of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Laws were shocked Friday morning to learn of the passing of Norma Gena, 8-year-old daughter of the veteran trades unionist and Mrs. Laws, at their home, 2015 East Fourteenth street. Mr. Laws is president of Local 43, Plumbers and Steamfitters, and numbers scores of friends in whose behalf The Labor World extends heartfelt sympathy.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION MEMBERS ARE BEREAVED

Friends of Barney Roedema and E. F. Martin, members of Chattanooga Typographical union and both members of the News chapel, will sympathize with these brothers in the passing of the father of each. Mr. Roedema's father died at Paterson, N. J., on Monday, while the parent of Mr. Martin passed away at Knoxville on Tuesday. The Labor World extends heartfelt condolences to Brothers Roedema and Martin in their bereavements.

C. W. Pfeifer Reports "Missus" Doing Fine

C. W. Pfeifer, well-known member of Lodge 1450, Railroad Machinists, reports in a card to The Labor World dated Oct. 26 that an operation performed on Mrs. Pfeifer at St. Mary's hospital, Rochester, Minn., was successful, and that "the missus" is doing fine.

"Awfully cold up here," the old-timer reports. "Was spitting snow when I came in just now. Will be back home in ten days or two weeks."

LABOR MOURNS LOSS OF FRIEND AND COUNSELOR

Passing of C. A. Carpenter Is Deplored.

WAS A PIONEER LOCAL UNIONIST

Had Long and Honorable Record of Service to Fellow Workers.

C. A. CARPENTER

C. A. Carpenter, pioneer local trades unionist, passed away on Tuesday morning following a brief illness at his home, in East Lake.

Mr. Carpenter was one of the original advocates of organized labor in Chattanooga, having taken an active part in the formation of a central labor body in this city. He had been a continuous active member of Local 53, Iron Molders, since 1892, and although advancing years had slowed his activities, he continued efficient and honorable service to his local union as financial secretary until the day of his death.

Mr. Carpenter was of an unusually retiring disposition, and was widely known locally as a gentleman of the finest character, the soul of honor in his business and personal dealings with those with whom he came into contact, and his passing has caused a general regret among many local friends. Funeral services were held Thursday morning from the Union Congregational church in East Lake, and a large gathering of sorrowing friends attested the unusual esteem in which the deceased was held.

An indication of the modest dispositiou of Mr. Carpenter may be gained from a sketch of his activities published in a "Who's Who" number of The Labor World in 1928, and his fidelity to his principles, indicated in the sketch, was maintained to his last day. The sketch is reprinted verbatim, as follows:

Pleading, cajolery, threats—in fact, all the wiles known to and practiced by newspaper men—were necessary to induce C. A. Carpenter to furnish a brief history of his connection with the organized labor movement, and even then the editor was forced to consult friends of the old-timer to supplement the facts which the latter furnished.

Mr. Carpenter is a native of Cleveland, Ohio, and the date of his birth was given as June 16, 1858. When 16 years of age he came to Chattanooga and learned the Iron Molders' trade, joining Local No. 53 on Jan. 9, 1892.

From his first connection with his trade organization Mr. Carpenter has been active in its official life, holding the office of recording secretary from January, 1899, to June, 1906. He also served as president of Local 53, and has filled other positions of trust in his local union. He was elected financial secretary in November, 1918, and has served continuously since in that capacity.

A charter member of the first Central Labor union organized in Chattanooga, Mr. Carpenter served as financial secretary of that organization for several years, and was a delegate in that and succeeding bodies for almost a score of years.

He is married, and lives at 3004 Twelfth avenue.

The editor of The Labor World feels a deep sense of personal loss in the passing of a true friend, an honorable, upright citizen, and mourns with the surviving relatives and friends of one of the finest characters it has ever been his pleasure to know and love.

Textile Workers Flock to Unions, Gorman Reports

Convinced That Only Strong Organization Can Protect Them Against Abuses.

By FRANCIS J. GORMAN
First Vice-President, United Textile Workers of America.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Aroused to the vital importance of the United Textile Workers of America and convinced that only a strong union can protect the workers against exploitation under any circumstances, textile workers throughout the whole area are flocking into the union.

Growth of the United Textile Workers of America since the strike has been amazing. Applications are coming in by the hundreds, from every textile state.

Members are coming into already established local unions and new unions are being chartered.

Plans for promoting organization work were matured at the meeting of the United Textile Workers of America emergency board meeting just held in New York. The board heard reports from vice-presidents who came from every section. All of them were encouraging in the highest degree.

The board also had before it reports on the work of the government agencies in Washington, including the federal trade commission, the department of labor and the national textile labor relations board.

That the union will be able to thoroughly unionize the entire industry, including wool and worsted, cotton, silk and every other division, was accepted as certain and all plans are to that end.

The blast of the cotton textile employers' organizations, in which a company union proposal was put forward, was regarded in the light of a resort to last ditch proposals by the employers, who knew at heart that the old order of unlimited exploitation has passed.

All vice-presidents have now returned to their posts and work is going ahead under full steam. The Washington office is operating eighteen hours a day, with its burden almost as heavy as during the strike—but every day's work means accomplishments that can never be destroyed. The United Textile Workers are on the march toward a great goal, and they are advancing along the whole line every day.

Davie Improves After Bad Attack

T. J. "Tommie" Davie, who was active in the local labor movement when most of us were in swaddling clothes, was "feeling fine" when visited at Erlanger this week after suffering a bad attack in a local restaurant last Friday night. The only real complaint registered by the old-timer to friends who called upon him Thursday was that he had missed his last week's copy of The Labor World, and this oversight being quickly remedied, he reinstated the usual happy smile which has made scores of friends for him.

Mr. Davie is 76 years old, and has been an active member of Chattanooga Typographical union since the Indians left. The immediate task of close friends is to keep him confined until he completely recovers, but he is "chafing at the bits" in his determination to get back downtown.

Mrs. Hudson Visits Labor World Office

The Labor World was honored this week by a visit from Mrs. Dick Hudson, wife of the well-known official of the Iron Workers, whose headquarters is in Atlanta.

Mrs. Hudson was called to Chattanooga by the death of a brother, and returned home Thursday. Among interesting items which she reported was that Jerome Jones, old warhorse of southern trades unionism, remains active in the editorial work of the Atlanta Journal of Labor, and is still looked to for constructive advice in matters affecting the workers in the Cracker State. Many local friends of Mr. Jones will rejoice to learn that his health continues good, and that he bids fair to, like Tennyson's brook, "go on forever."

Mrs. Hudson contributes to the Journal of Labor, and is assisting Mr. Hudson and Mr. Jones in their duties in connection with the labor movement.

Labor Sees Brighter Day in Avalanche 'New Deal' Votes

Workers Regard Party Victory as of Secondary Importance.

Hold Smashing Defeat of Reactionaries Indicates Changed Sentiment of People—State Races Are Reviewed and Legislative Delegation Approved—Election Seen as Great Personal Tribute to President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

While those partial to the democratic political faith were rejoicing this week at the unprecedented avalanche of votes cast for their standard-bearers throughout the nation, members of organized labor saw in the election results a far deeper significance than mere party victory.

The sweeping victory for the New Deal, which was also a wonderful personal tribute to President Roosevelt, left no possible room for doubt, even among the irreconcilables, that the progressive policies instituted by Mr. Roosevelt have the approval of the rank and file, and regardless of the fact that these policies have been criticized, even among friends of the administration at times, the people of America believe, with the president, that "we are on our way out," and are satisfied to leave in his hands the working out of ideals which have been the foundation for the New Deal movement.

But most heartening of all, according to local trades unionists, is the final and definite elimination of the remnants of the old reactionaries, entrenched by many years of service to privilege and bitter opposition to anything proposed or advocated by or for the benefit of working people. An unbroken reign of many years, it was pointed out, has been enjoyed by such reactionaries as Fess, Robinson and Reed, and the stinging rebuke administered these gentlemen will be hailed from coast to coast by workers and progressive citizens, regardless of party preferences. It was the final and decisive blow in a series of setbacks which has gradually eliminated a type of thought which, as much, perhaps, as anything else, is responsible for the recent years of misery and confusion through which the nation has passed and from which it is now emerging in spite of tactics employed by the die-hards to block a return to prosperity.

STINGING REBUKE TO "FOURTH ESTATE."

Great victory for President Roosevelt and the New Deal is seen also as a setback for the "Fourth Estate," and as a serving of notice by the people to the great dailies that the time when they can "mold public opinion" by insidious propaganda has passed. Time was, local workers recalled, when a daily newspaper was looked upon as a guide and counsellor in matters political and otherwise, but obvious degeneration of some which were supposed to be dependable has worked untold harm to the business as a whole. As an instance, it is recalled that the newspapers, through their powerful "union," the American Newspaper Publishers association, submitted for approval a proposed code which even Hugh Johnson couldn't stomach, and when the president of the United States sharply rebuked them, lacking courage to openly oppose, many began a subtle campaign of propaganda against the administration policies. Be it said to the everlasting credit of the profession, however, that not by any means all the great dailies joined in this abortive attempt to discredit the patriotic efforts of Mr. Roosevelt to lead the nation out of a morass which has shaken its foundations.

STATE RACES OFFER LESSON.

Signal victory of Senators McKellar and Bachman and Gov. McAlister was seen also as offering a lesson to ambitious politicians. Ben Hooper, opposing Senator McKellar on a fusion ticket with Lewis Pope as Gov. McAlister's opponent, was remembered particularly by railroad workers throughout the state for his acts as chairman of the railroad labor board during the war, while Pope had been severely criticized by organized labor for various official acts as commissioner of institutions under a former state administration. It was the opinion of Chattanooga workers that both these gentlemen have been finally and definitely eliminated from Tennessee politics.

Re-election of Mr. McReynolds to congress was also a foregone conclusion, his record having been fair at all times, and his support of the president and his policies being a matter of common knowledge.

Defeat of Mr. John R. Neal by Senator Bachman was a mere formality. Judge Bachman, in his short service in the nation's highest legislative body, has indicated a sympathetic interest in the welfare of the masses, while Mr. Neal, although numbering his personal friends by the thousands, is an advocate of policies which, although considered by increasing numbers as sound, obviously are not felt to be in line with the present national program.

LOCAL TICKET IS APPROVED.

Local legislative ticket is regarded as satisfactory to the workers. Mr. Fletcher Morgan, state senator, has heretofore indicated sympathy with the program of the masses, as has Mr. D. M. Coleman, a veteran in the lower house of the legislature. Mr. Bean and Mr. Patterson, in the opinion of local workers who are best acquainted with these gentlemen, will give due consideration to the problems of the common people before the state lawmaking body.

Offers Plan to Help Needy and Create Work

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—James A. Gorman, umpire of the Anthracite coal board of conciliation, acting in his capacity as an agent for the national labor relations board, has advanced a plan to supply 5,000,000 tons of coal to the needy this winter, which would provide half-time employment to 36,229 anthracite miners now idle.

The proposal was based on a survey made by Dr. Thomas Larkin and C. Fred Henne, aides to Mr. Gorman in the federal investigation of the anthracite mining situation which has been in progress for a year.

Mr. Gorman proposed to have the authorities at Washington distribute the coal among the destitute, so that it would not be in competition with the regular output.

The orders would be limited to the larger companies and larger independent operators. The entire field would share in the production, the workers to be employed three days a week for five months at a minimum rate of $4.62 daily. Where higher wages are called for, the miners would be paid accordingly.

WASTE OF RELIEF FUNDS.

A long editorial wail emanates from the Washington Post because "enormous sums have been wasted in attempts to alleviate distress" caused by unemployment "because of the slapdash manner in which this work has been conducted." It is just too bad that the Post editor has evidently never heard of the much larger "enormous sums" which have not only been wasted but irretrievably lost because of the slapdash manner in which various federal agencies set up by congress have passed out government funds to railroads approaching bankruptcy, insolvent banks and a host of other flotsam and jetsam of the business world who have not brains enough to operate their industrial affairs without hundreds of millions of dollars taken from the treasury of the United States.

FACTORIES LOCKED; CHARITY FEEDS HUNGRY.

The Washington, D. C., branch of the Volunteers of America served 10,871 meals to needy men, women and children of the nation's capital during September.

Creditable charity. But what must we think of the leaders of industry who have developed such an inhuman system for the articles all must have in order to live that not only in Washington but in every city public and private welfare organizations are built up solely for raising funds to feed workers and their dependents when employers refuse to employ and who would starve to death were it not for the handouts of institutions like the Volunteers of America.

UNION SHOP ANGERS EMPLOYERS.

Refusal to recognize the union shop and apply the 30-hour week by the profit mongers who own the silk rayon dyeing and finishing factories in Paterson and other New Jersey districts may cause a strike of the employes who are making these demands.

The union shop is operated under an agreement reached through collective bargaining by which the employer agrees to employ men and women belonging to a bona fide trade union at union wages and hours. Both union wages and hours are in the interests not only of the workers and employers but of all other residents of the community. They mean higher living standards, which benefit every one. Despite this indisputable fact, some employers still stick tenaciously to the discredited system of an economic dictatorship and tell the workers they can accept the wages and hours fixed by the owners and managers of industry or seek a market elsewhere for the use of their labor power.

Unless the Paterson employers yield to the reasonable demands of the organized silk and rayon dyers they will probably be taught a good lesson by seeing their mills closed through their refusal to adjust labor disputes by collective bargaining and their hostility to granting the reasonable demands of the men and women without whose labor the plants of the owners would not be worth 10 cents a cubic foot.

OPTIMISM DESPITE JOBLESS ARMY.

Miss Mildred F. Stone, field secretary of the Mutual Benefit Insurance company of Newark, N. J., after a business trip to a number of the company's agencies in the middle west, reports that she finds a decided spirit of optimism among all classes of people notwithstanding the widespread suffering growing out of the prolonged business depression.

Evidently Miss Stone did not interview the 10,000,000 able-bodied adults who are pounding the pavement now, as they have been for three years, looking for jobs, nor the 4,000,000 families who are on relief rolls according to the federal emergency relief administration.

Optimism during a business depression can always be found if one's observations are limited to those whose living standards may have been pinched but not destroyed and the millions of jobless and their dependents are avoided.

Youth—After all, fools help to make life interesting. When all the fools are killed off, I don't want to be here.

Girl Friend—Don't worry; you won't.

Harriman's Sophistries

Business leaders who have so mismanaged industry as to create a permanent unemployed army of over 10,000,000 persons exhibit an amazing inability to face economic problems in a rational manner and bungle matters still more by trumping up sophistries so transparent that a kindergarten child should have trouble in exposing them.

Henry L. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, strikingly reveals these characteristics in a debate in the New York Times on the 30-hour week with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

He declares that this increase in the length of the work week applied to all industries without reduction in weekly earnings for those now employed and with the same wages for the re-employed would result in a lower standard of living due to decreased output of the good things of life.

The American Federation of Labor's 30-hour week proposal does not vision decreased output. No one knows this better than Mr. Harriman himself. According to reliable estimates, there were 39,387,000 persons at work in the United States in September. A 25 per cent reduction in their hours of work per week would provide jobs for 9,841,750 of the unemployed. It doesn't require a mathematician to ascertain that 49,208,750 men and women working, say, thirty hours per week would normally produce as much commodities as 39,367,000 working forty hours per week. Inasmuch as the 39,367,000 would receive as much wages for the 30-hour week as for the 40-hour week, their standard of living would certainly not be reduced. It is, moreover, evident that the living standards of the 9,841,750 unemployed put to work would increase to the extent that their wages exceeded the amounts they were allotted by relief agencies.

Mr. Harriman's second sophistry is found in his conclusion that in some industries a 33 per cent reduction in the length of the work week would not absorb all the jobless in those industries while the same reduction in other industries would result in there not being enough trained workers to supply the needs of employers. These discrepancies, he claims, would require mass shifting of workers from one industry or plant to another, which, temporarily at least, would mean decreased output due to unskilled labor.

There is nothing new in the shifting of surplus workers from one industry to another. During the halycon days of maximum profit-making which ended in 1929, the anarchistic industrial leaders who managed American industry introduced labor-displacing machinery on such a revolutionary scale that hundreds of thousands of employes were deprived of work for which they were highly qualified through years of practice and compelled to shift to other work about which they knew nothing. In fact, the favorite argument of the economic lightweights who maintained that machinery did not really cause unemployment was the claim that those whose places were taken by machinery were thus "released" for other industries whose owners could profitably employ them.

This shifting was done without planning. Now we are confronted with a problem—the shorter work week—which requires planning. We have a federal government ready and willing to cooperate with the owners of industry to determine just how many workers are required to operate our plants for a specified output. If there is a surplus of workers in any industry, they must, of course, be allocated to other industries and given adequate training to fit them for their new work. If there is a scarcity of workers in any industry, the same system of allocation and retraining would solve the problem. This was done on a comprehensive scale when we mobilized all our forces to win the war against Germany. It is equally practical now when we are required to win the war against unemployment and reorganize industry on the basis of a job for every person able and willing to work.

In addition to resorting to palpable sophistries in his opposition to the 30-hour week, Mr. Harriman utterly fails to see the main issue in the unemployment problem. Quite likely the reorganization of industry on the basis of the 30-hour week would require considerable readjustment in plans and policies. But that is infinitessimal compared with the importance of providing jobs for between ten and eleven million unemployed. These jobs must be provided regardless of the effect on any industry or all industries.

There is only one major problem in America today. That problem is the employment at reasonable wages of every able-bodied adult who is able and willing to work. The shorter work week will solve that problem. No other adequate solution has been offered. And all the sophistries and fallacies of Mr. Harriman and his associates in big business will not swelve the American Federation of Labor from making the 30-hour week effective throughout the United States either by collective bargaining or NRA codes or federal legislation. To this end all the forces—economic and political—of organized labor are being mobilized, and the battle lines will march steadily forward until America can point with pride to the fact that unemployment has been abolished in every state in the Union.

When the Profit System "Worked"

Professor Frank A. Pearson, of Cornell University, a defender of low wages as the best method to bring prosperity to business, in a talk at a luncheon given by the New York State Junior Chamber of Commerce, in the Bankers club, at 120 Broadway, New York City, declared that during the period between March and July, 1933, the industrial system based exclusively on maximum profits for those who own and control industry, regardless of the welfare of the masses, was striding along in fine shape. He said:

> "The profit system was working and men were happy and contented to return to work at the old wage."

In July, 1933, there were 11,793,000 able-bodied working men and women in the army of the unemployed, pounding the pavements throughout the length and breadth of the country, begging for jobs without avail. Evidently the profit system was not working very well for these jobless millions.

About the time mentionel by Prof. Pearson—July, 1933—the president of the United States opened the re-employment drive for shorter hours and higher wages to stimulate purchasing power and hasten recovery. This effort of the chief executive, with the co-operation of a few industries, re-employed 1,685,000 jobless during the next few months, reducing the unemployed army to 10,108,000 in September.

Then the influence of profit mongers in the NRA became paramount and higher wages and re-employment for the idle as the major objects of the recovery program were scuttled and profits for stockholders became the chief objective.

Speaking of this laudable objective of the administration, Prof. Pearson declared that it really retarded recovery, by which he probably meant recovery of maximum profits by those who originally wrecked industry in the pursuit of that subversive scheme. He says:

> "Among other things, the nation decided to create additional purchasing power by raising wages at a time when unemployment was a serious problem."

That is a rich morsel coming from a college professor. If there is ever a time when wages should be raised it is when a large number of people are unemployed. The increased buying power of higher pay makes a larger market for commodities and hence more work for the jobless. But this policy, according to Prof. Pearson, is wholly unreasonable and really retards recovery.

When a university professor declares, as Prof. Pearson does, that low wages make the profit system work, it is time to question whether a university education really enables some of those who possess it to think clearly, reason rationally, and accurately vision the fundamentals of mass prosperity.

THE "BIG FOUR"

Chiseling Labor; Tobacco and Its Low-Wage Record

By GEORGE L. KNAPP

Tobacco has long been the only rival of textiles for the bad eminence of paying the lowest wages among large industries. The largest stock of business and the biggest measure of profits in the tobacco industry comes in the making of cigarettes. Some of the fine work of the Big Four in chiseling labor may well be shown by a few figures from the cigarette industry.

The census bureau reports on manufactures and the wages paid in them only every second year. The following are the averages worked out from these official figures, showing what the cigarette worker got in each of the years given:

This is a cut in wages of a little more than 30 per cent in four years. There is no excuse for this in the fortunes of the Big Four. They have made more money since the depression began than they ever did before.

Cigarette Sales Soar.

As purses thinned and grew bare, the world turned toward its cheapest luxuries, and while the demand for most forms of tobacco went down, that for cigarettes went up. In 1922, 55,763,000,000 cigarettes were produced in this country; but in 1930, the output had more than doubled, and stood at 123,802,000,000. It declined in the next two years, but turned sharply upward again in 1933.

All the Big Four made their biggest profits in depression years. Liggett & Myers had their richest takings in 1930; the other three in 1931. While heaping profits higher than ever before, the Big Four paid their cigarette makers the least the traffic would year.

The entire cigarette wage bill of the whole country in 1929 was $18,529,000; in 1931, $14,664,000; in 1933, $13,818,000.

Worker's Share Small.

The wholesale price of the cigarettes produced in 1933 was $637,579,000. The wage bill, as stated, was $13,818,000. Therefore, the cigarette worker got just a tiny fraction over 2 cents of every dollar paid for cigarettes; paid, not by the consuming public, but by denlers.

In 1931, the latest year for which the figures have been worked out from the government census, the individual worker in different industries produced the following in wholesale value in a year:

Boots and shoes	$ 3,606
Furniture	3,779
Bakery products	6,497
Cigarettes	37,526

In other words, the cigarette worker, in 1931, produced six times as much wholesale value as the worker in bakery products, nearly ten times as much as the furniture worker, and more than ten times as much as the worker in boots and shoes. Labor costs, in the cigarette industry, as shown above, were approximately 2 per cent of the wholesale price. Labor costs could have been doubled without any raise in price.

Excel in Chiseling Labor.

The most productive workers in the land, measured by the money value of the product at wholesale, received almost the lowest pay. In the gentle art of chiseling, the Big Four have few rivals and no superiors.

What Next!

A new type of hopper car, which may boom railraad profits and answer the railroad cry for "relief," has been finished by the Pressed Steel Car company, Pittsburg. The new car has a streamlined, bulging figure, but weighs seven and a half tons less than ordinary freight cars. Built of pressed steel, it has a capacity of 13 tons more freight. Statistics gathered by the Pressed Steel Car company purport to show that if the present freight cars were of the new type, the saving in 1932 would have covered the deficit after fixed charges on all railroads, and left $300,000,000 for dividends.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

President Green Demands 30-Hour Week As Board Asks Auto Code Reopening

Original Code Expires November 3 and Labor Advisory Board Asks NRA to Reopen and Revise It; Industry Expected to Fight.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The NRA labor advisory board, by unanimous vote, has asked that the code of fair competition for the automobile industry, which expires Nov. 3, 1934, be reopened.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who is chairman of the NRA labor advisory board, entered a formal demand that the code be revised to provide for the 30-hour work week, the complete elimination of the so-called "merit clause," elimination of unnecessary exemptions and an increase in minimum pay rates.

"The question involves reopening the code," President Green said, "continuing it in present form or abandoning it."

Green and other labor leaders assembled for the first meeting of the NRA labor advisory board since the retirement of Administrator Hugh S. Johnson. They had as their objective reduction of hours in other codes as well as increase of wages, especially for white collar workers.

"We don't think the problem of employment is being met in the proper way," President Green said. "The hours are too long. We object to seasonal peaks which bring in thousands of new workers and when the season ends they are dismissed to shift for themselves and their communities must care for them. Emphasis should be placed upon annual income rather than hourly earnings." In addition to the automobile code, the steel and rubber codes come up for renewal soon. Workers in these three industries are expected to exert pressure for shorter hours. President Green indicated that the 30-hour week objective for the automobile industry would be "near the standard sought for all codes."

Seek Aid for "White Collar" Workers.

The A. F. of L., committed to the program of a general 30-hour week per industry, has centered its drive on revising codes in approaching its objective, pending efforts to obtain legislation at the next session of congress.

Other points facing discussion by the labor board includes the organization of industrial unions, first in mass production industries, and labor's attitude toward Williams as chairman of the NRA governing board in line with an A. F. of L. convention request that President Roosevelt be asked to investigate his alleged hostility to labor.

Increased wages for "white collar" workers and labor groups now earning slightly above the minimum is an objective of the NRA labor advisory board. Labor leaders indicated an appeal is planned for these groups, which have been least benefited by codes.

While the drive for higher pay for common labor wherever possible will be continued, the labor men and NIRB economists agree that increased purchasing power may be more quickly provided for products of lagging specialty industries by boosting wages.

FEDERAL BUREAU TO STUDY FAMILY LIVING EXPENSES

Washington.—The bureau of labor statistics announces it will undertake a survey on family expenses in Memphis, Tenn., Columbus, O., and New Orleans.

The survey will be started as a part of a nation-wide investigation of family costs to be made under the direction of Miss Faith M. Williams, chief of the cost of living division of the statistics bureau.

The information obtained is expected to be of aid in development of President Roosevelt's "economic security" program.

LAUNDRY WORKERS ORGANIZE

Stockton, Cal. — After years of struggle and in the face of many reported threats, the National Towel & Laundry company has stepped out from the ranks of "open shoppers" here and is now a 100 per cent union laundry. Organized labor of the community generally is now getting behind the union laundry and its union workers with practical cooperation.

"RAILROADING" OF UNION MAN TO ASYLUM AS INSANE STARTS PENNSYLVANIA INVESTIGATION

Harrisburg, Pa.—Pennsylvania is having an official investigation to learn how many men active in trade unions have been committed to an asylum in the last two years on charges of insanity.

The case of George Issoski, freed from an asylum on the intervention of Gov. Pinchot, started the inquiry. Issoski, who was doing organization work for the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, was arrested Sept. 11, charged with being drunk and disorderly. His wife, who has seven children, was sent for to come to the jail.

"I go to the jail quick," said Mrs. Issoski, while nursing one of the 8-months-old twins. "The lady doctor told me my man was crazy. I knew he wasn't. I wouldn't sign the papers. She told me then I needn't bother the relief agency for anything more. But still I wouldn't sign. Now for month I take care of my seven children myself."

Governor Goes Into Action.

When Mrs. Issoski persisted in her refusal, the "lady doctor," Dr. Margaret I. Cornelius, Dr. M. M. Mackall, jail physician of Beaver county, and an attorney named J. Knox Stone, were constituted a commission to inquire into the insanitay charge. They found Issoski insane, and he was sent to the asylum. The authorities there could see no insanity about him; Dr. Earl D. Bond, the foremost mental specialist in the state, pronounced Issoski sane; and Gov. Pinchot went into action.

"If lunacy commissions of Pennsylvania are being used to railroad persons active in labor organizations into lunatic asylums," said the governor, "the sooner that fact is known, the better.

"I have seen many affidavits by steel workers charging that the Jones & Laughlin Steel company has engaged in a deliberate program of terrorization and intimidation to prevent its employers from joining the union.

Promises to Punish Guilty.

"If the suspicion of a frame-up is justified, I propose to use every power of my office to bring to jutice the men who were guilty of such an outrage."

A number of things about the case are decidedly "fishy." Issoski's companions at the time of his arrest say that he had drunk only one glass of beer. The chief of police of West Aliquippa, where the arrest was made, said that he saw no sign that Issoski was insane. The "squire" who issued the papers in the case says that he cannot find them, and does not remember the case; and Gov. Pinchot says that "so far as the record shows, the commission which examined Issoski took no testimony and heard no witnesses."

The department of public welfare is investigating the situation.

S. F. City Employes May Beat Wage Cut

Even Chamber of Commerce Joins With Labor in Fighting Charter Amendment.

San Francisco, Cal.—The defeat of "Amendment No. 11" to the city charter, which would reduce and standardize salaries of city employes, after meeting with early favor in many quarters, is now believed to be doomed to defeat.

Leading business, professional, civic and labor organizations, including the chamber of commerce, Downtown association, Labor council, Building Trades council, Central Council of Civic Clubs and Civic League of Improvement Clubs and associations are urging a "no" vote on the amendment.

LUMBERJACKS STRIKE.

Toronto.—Again this fall there are numerous strikes of lumberjacks in northern Ontario. They have been marked by great bitterness, and bloody clashes with strikebreakers and company police. Peter Henan, minister of mines and forests, returning from Algoma, says he induced the companies in that district to concede twenty-three out of the twenty-five demands made by striking pulpwood cutters, but the strikers refused to return to work until the demands of strikers in the Cochrane and Iroquois Falls districts were granted. Mr Henan will return to the strike area as soon as he deems further intervention likely to do any good.

RED CROSS GREAT FRAUD, MERCURY WRITER CHARGES

John L. Spivak Declares 'Relief" Organization Is Lackey of Big Business, Serving Especially Morgan Interests and Is Essentially a War Machine, Preparing for Next War.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The vast sums contributed annually to the American Red Cross are obtained under false pretenses, John L. Spivak, well known journalist and author, charges in the American Mercury.

The Red Cross is essentially a war machine preparing for the next war and is a "racket for big business," Spivak declares in a detailed article which presents facts, figures and statements of Red Cross Officials.

"The Red Cross has collected money from workers to buy food, and then used it to discriminate between strikers and non-strikers," Spivak asserts, adding that it is under Morgan-Mellon banking domination and that "Where Morgan-Mellon interests are concerned the starvation of striking miners is not an 'act of God,' though the congressional charter of the Red Cross says nothing about giving relief only when hunger is caused by 'acts of God.'" Demands Congressional Inquiry.

Pointing out that every city, town and hamlet in the United States will witness the annual Red Cross drive for membership and contributions this month, Spivak goes on to say:

"Out of the millions of generous Americans who will contribute about $10,000,000, not one in a thousand will know that the money is going into a first-class war machine, which is chiefly interested in preparing for the next war and only incidentally in 'relief work.'

"When I finished my study of Red Cross activities and what it does with the millions of dollars the American people give it annually, I was left with the inescapable conclusion that the congress of the United States, under whose charter this organization operates, would do well to inquire into these matters. . . . I can present enough evidence to strip the Red Cross of the saintly cloak which it has donned, show it for what it really is, and leave the rest for an official investigating body to probe to the bottom."

Sensational Charges.

In the course of showing the Red Cross for what he believes it really is, Spivak makes twenty sensational charges against the organization. The charges include:

1. The Red Cross is essentially a war machine.

2. It is largely dominated by a military and banking group, the banking group being J. P. Morgan & Co.-controlled.

3. Large sums of money collected from the American people by the Red Cross are invested in Morgan-controlled businesses.

4. Of the three and one-half millions of dollars collected from school children and workers last year for relief work two and one-half millions were spent on salaries, traveling expenses, maintenance of the war machine, etc., as against one million dollars for relief.

5. Despite its publicized "internationalism" and "humanitarianism," Judge John Barton Payne, head of the Red Cross, states that the organization is to be used first for the government and secondly for humanity.

6. Even in relief, in a disaster area, the Red Cross draws distinctions between the poor and well-to-do, the instructions being to distribute relief "according to the pre-disaster living standards" of the recipient.

Of special interest to labor, is Spivak's discussion of the "Red Cross as strike-breaker." The writer charges that the Red Cross functions as a "class organization" in strikes, unemployment and disasters, using money given by the American people for the benefit of business rather than the workers. He quotes official instructions to members and chapters of the Red Cross as follows:

"There are situations, other than natural disasters referred to in the congressional charter, such as strikes, business depressions, failure of crops and other forms of unemployment and economic maladjustment, which may cause widespread suffering. These situations are not 'national calamities' as contemplated by its charter for which responsibility is imposed upon the Red Cross.

Chapters "May" Act.

"It is not the policy of the Red Cross to duplicate the work or to do what falls within the responsibilities of local charitable agencies, and it has adhered to a policy of abstaining from national relief in unemployment distress; but where there is suffering and want from any cause, and the fundamental needs are not being met, chapters may participate in community action in extending relief."

"These two paragraphs, reduced to simpler terms," Spivak declares, "inform Red Cross chapters that they are not to give relief in strikes and unemployment, but in the event the strikers are starving the responsibility is passed to the local chapter, provided the local community is willing to help starving strikers and unemployed. Since the responsibility is thus passed to local chapters, let us examine who normally make up a local chapter.

Business Dominates Chapters.

"A Red Cross chapter is usually made up of members of the local chamber of commerce, business men, wholesalers and retailers, their wives, and a few persons in social service work who depend for their own income on this same class of people. . . . Chambers of commerce, bankers and employers do not usually break their necks to aid strikers no matter how great their need. Their interests are not the interests of the strikers, so it is not to be expected that they will exert themselves to give relief in cases of hunger resulting from a strike.

"This class controls the distribution of food and thus has an important weapon in its hands. If it can judiciously distribute food to certain elements and withhold food from others it can break a strike. This is what we find happened in many cases."

Strikers Denied Food.

Spivak cites cases in which the Red Cross either refused food to strikers or where finally forced to make a gesture at relief of suffering, doled it out in inadequate amounts. Notable among these cases were the strike of Kentucky miners in 1931 and strike of Pennsylvania miners about the same time.

The Mercury writer gives a list of financial interests which control banks in which the Red Cross deposits its funds. These banks, he shows, are all under strong Morgan influence.

Red Cross a "Racket?"

In ending his article, Spicak renews his demand for congressional investigation of the Red Cross and says:

"It looks very much like the Red Cross, the saintly 'Great Mother,' is a racket for big business. And it looks, all in all, that the millions of workers who contribute these millions of dollars under the impression that they are helping to relieve the hunger of fellow-countrymen, are being kidded.

"Certainly the congress of the United States should get to the root of the Red Cross financial dealings and its methods of distributing relief. With millions of our people starving it is time 'The Great Mother's' skirts were cleared. The congress of the United States is responsible for this organization, and the congress should find out what the bankers are doing with its and the people's money."

Federal Workers Announce Drive For Higher Pay

Criticize Delay Until July in Restoring Salary Out and Declare Justice Calls for Substantial Pay Increases.

Washington, Nov. 8. Announcement by President Roosevelt that the next federal budget would provide for restoration on July 1, 1935, of the 5 per cent pay cut was criticized by organized federal workers, who declared they would press for salary increases all along the line.

Disappointment was expressed by spokesmen of the federal workers because the president's announcement failed to assure restoration of the pay cut on Jan. 1, when the next six-month pay adjustment period under the economy act falls due.

The president said he expected the price level to rise sufficiently before July 1 to justify full restoration of pay to federal workers. He indicated he did not believe the increases would be evident soon enough to justify restoring the pay cut by Jan. 1.

Living Cost Index Hit.

Following the White House announcement, made at a press conference, E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Federal Employes, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, criticized the labor department formula for arriving at the living cost index, which is the determining factor in restoration of federal workers' pay.

"I think labor department statisticians will admit that it is not a fair method," Babcock said. "A reliable picture of prices today will show that full restoration is more than warranted.

"As these prices advance, it amounts to a further pay cut for federal employes, who have to pay that much more out of their pockets for everyday expenses. Only a substantial salary increase will help remedy that injustice."

President Babcock said his organization will work for new pay increases. He said workers not only will ask for 15 per cent increases in all grades, but where this raise falls between existing grades, the salary would be lifted to the next highest established level, so as not to upset unduly the present system of classification.

Commenting on President Roosevelt's announcement, the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks said in a special bulletin:

"Hope of restoration of the remaining 5 per cent wage reduction on Jan. 1 received a severe setback when the president is quoted as having informed a press conference that there was no possibility of bringing salaries up to their normal standards on Jan. 1 through showing of cost of living figures. This statement was said to have been made prior to the receipt of any advance figures from the bureau of labor statistics.

"The president did confirm reports current in Washington for several days that the budget bureau at his direction had instructed the different department heads to include sums sufficient for restoration of the remaining 5 per cent deduction in the estimates for the next fiscal year. This information means that government workers must await for relief until July 1. It is graphic confirmation of the position of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks and of its affiliated organizations as to the injustice and inefficiency of using so-called comparative costs of commodities as a measuring stick for wages. It will be remembered that the American Federation of Labor conventions at Washington and San Francisco (recently adjourned) issued emphatic declarations against this system of setting wages."

LABOR WINS RIGHT TO ORGANIZE IN CLEVELAND A. & P. DISPUTE

Stores, Announced as 'Permanently" Closed, Reopened When Both Sides Accept Agreement Proposed by NLRB.

Washington.—Acceptance by both sides of an agreement proposed by the national labor relations board ended the controversy between Cleveland labor and the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company and resulted in the opening of the A. & P. stores in Cleveland. In accepting the agreement, the A. & P. made a complete backdown on its previously announced intention to withdraw "permanently" from the Ohio city.

Labor won recognition of the right to organize by the agreement, which provides that the A. & P. management, long notoriously anti-union, will "in no manner discriminate against the employes for union activity." The management further agrees to "send a statement of all its employes in Cleveland, in a form to be approved by the national labor relations board, assuring them that the company has no objection to their affiliating with any union and will in no manner discriminate against them for joining a union, or any other union activity."

Other provisions of the agreement provided for calling off the strike against the A. & P. stores, the prompt reopening of the stores, affirmation by the company of its willingness to meet union committees for the purpose of collective bargaining and reinstatement of all employes to their former positions, without discrimination. Coercion or intimidation by the unions to compel employes to join a union is forbidden and provision is made for arbitration of all differences between workers and management.

In announcing acceptance of the agreement, the national labor relations board said:

"We believe the terms of the settlement are fair to both parties. Collective bargaining, which is one of the means relied upon both by the administration and congress to promote recovery, is definitely incorporated in the agreement as a policy of the A. & P. stores. The agreement also provides machinery for making the agreement effective."

The unions ratifying the agreement were meat Cutters' Union No. 427, Bakers' Union No. 19, Warehousemen's union, Managers' and Clerks' Union No. 712, District 54 of the International Association of Machinists, Stationary Engineers' Union No. 689, Firemen's Union No. 52.

Acceptance by labor and the A. & P. of the peace plan proposed by the national labor relations board resulted in speedy reopening of the 330 A. & P. stores in the Cleveland area. Reopening of the stores sent 2,200 employes back to work.

AGREEMENTS MADE WITH COLONIAL AND TENNESSEE STOVE CO.

Organized Labor Benefits From Settlement of Local Disturbances.

Bakery Management and Union Representatives Express Gratification at Resumption of Friendly Relations—Stove Works Scheduled to Resume Operations Friday Morning.

Organized labor in Chattanooga was the beneficiary this week of two settlements of labor controversies, one involving several hundred molders and stove mounters at the Tennessee Stove Works, and the other adding an indefinite number of members to the local unions of Bakery Salesmen and Bakery and Confectionery Workers.

The "misunderstanding" between organized labor and the Colonial management covered a period of more than a year, or since the Bakers and Salesmen first formed an organization in Chattanooga. Colonial spokesmen have indicated that the unfortunate situation was based on a misconstruction of the bakery's attitude toward the unions, and the contract, signed Tuesday, makes secure, it is felt, a harmonious relationship between the two parties in future.

The agreement, signed by Hugh P. Wasson for the company and representatives of the two locals involved and Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, provides, among other things, that "a bona-fide, good-faith effort shall be made by both parties to compose all past differences and to fully co-operate with each other in the future," and that "adequate and proper publicity shall be given through The Labor World and generally."

It provides for organization of both salesmen and bakers, and the company agrees to deal with the duly-elected officers of the unions or their agents in any matters respecting working conditions, and guarantees free access to the plant at all reasonable times to the workers' representatives. It is also agreed that "the company will assist the unions in the collection of dues and assessments by holding a meeting with such delinquent members and urging the payment of dues, and encouraging said employes to keep in good standing."

The contract runs for one year, and thereafter until such time as either party gives thirty days' notice of a desire to change. It contains a number of provisions which insure against disturbance of any character, and guarantees freest and friendliest co-operation between management and employes. It is also provided that "said company intends to strictly adhere to the provisions of Section 7-A of the national recovery act and Section 2 of what is known as the Norris-LaGuardia act."

Mr. Wasson Friday morning gave the following statement to The Labor World:

"We are all, of course, highly pleased that the misunderstanding has been cleared up. It has always been our desire to maintain friendly relations with organized labor, and to provide for our employes the best conditions possible. Under the agreement which we have entered into, we feel that there will never again be such unpleasantness as has been the case recently, and the friendly manner under which the terms were negotiated stands to substantiate this hope. We are glad that our true attitude is now understood and that the unfortunate controversy is ended."

Officials of Central Body and of the local unions involved expressed gratification that the unfortunate controversy had been amicably settled, and predicted that the harmonious relationship provided for in the agreement will prove of much benefit to the company and its employes.

STOVE COMPANY RESUMES OPERATIONS.

Tennessee Stove Works was scheduled to resume operations Friday morning, following conferences with union representatives and the management on Wednesday. Walkout of molders and mounters at that plant was marked by a period of bitterness and strife which continued for more than a month, and it appeared that each side to the controversy was satisfied with the terms of settlement. Molders employed by the company are members of Local 53, while the stove mounters have formed an entirely new local union, which is No. 102, and which bids fair to constitute a valuable unit of the great family of local trades unions.

MINIMUM WAGE SET IN CANADA

Quebec.—The government of the Province of Quebec has issued an order establishing minimum wages for women employed in retail shops. The minimum for experienced workers is $12.50 in Montreal and $11 in Quebec; $10 in cities of 10,000 to 25,000 and $9 in municipalities having 5,000 to 10,000 inhabitants. The maximum working period is 54 hours per week. The minimum wage board may issue permits for handicapped workers.

CALLS ON VOTERS TO FAVOR PLAN

Chairman McDaniels Submits Facts Regarding Nation's Greatest Project.

(The following article is submitted by E. E. McDaniels, chairman of a special TVA publicity committee on this matter which was appointed from Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, and which includes one member of each of the fifty-five local unions affiliated with that body.)

Soon we will have the opportunity to cast our vote for Tennessee Valley Authority power. I think this should be a partnership between the city of Chattanooga and Hamilton county. This would give all Hamilton countians an opportunity to vote on the issue.

I have watched with much interest the activities of some of our civic organizations. It seems that our people are slow to grasp the vast opportunities offered by the Tennessee Valley Authority. I agree that the profits our people would receive are almost unbelievable when you consider the fact that your light and power bills will be cut 50% and in some cases up to 60%. Then there are other profits to be taken into consideration—higher wages for skilled mechanics and common laborers. This alone is sufficient to cause progressive thinking voters to not only vote for a jointly owned light and power plant, but should spur them on to be an individual active booster, because we realize that we must not go to sleep on the job.

As you probably have noticed in the past, the opposition has been busy making preparation to try and hold the privately owned power and light. Should they be successful, then it would mean that we will continue to pay unreasonable light and power bills. Mr. Business Man, you should take special notice that you would receive double benefits, considering the fact that your electric rates being reduced, and the other most important fact for you to consider, the higher wages paid the employes would naturally increase your volume of business.

If you own any amount of Tennessee Electric Power company stock, this should not in any way keep you from being in favor of a municipal county-owned light and power company, because it is not the policy of the Tennessee Valley Authority to rob anyone of that which is just, and I am sure that they would buy in all stock and pay a reasonable amount for it.

The manufacturing industry in Chattanooga has received large orders for the manufacture of refrigerators and hot water heaters. This will prove to you that not only the electrical industry would benefit by this change, but all manufacturing plants and all business houses. In fact, it would eventually reach all individuals of our county. Of course, we realize that some people are narrowminded and will oppose anything that the Tennessee Valley Authority proposes to carry out in the Tennessee valley. They would do this simply because they belong to a different political party. They should lay aside their prejudice and fall in line, as this is strictly a nonpartisan project. We must bear in mind that this project was made possible through President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who,

Meatcutters Plan Open Meeting For Bosses and Workers

Local 600 Will "Celebrate" Remarkable Progress With Social-Business Gathering.

Local 600, Meatcutters, reorganized only recently after a period of inactivity, is making remarkable strides, according to spokesmen for the local, and now boasts of a membership of some 225.

In celebration of the progress made, an open meeting has been called for Tuesday night, Nov. 20, at Roosevelt hall, to which all local employers and workers in the industry are cordially invited. Refreshments will be served, and it is expected that a record crowd will be in attendance.

Fred Becker, publicity secretary of the local, this week sent the following report to The Labor World:

"Local 600 is still going strong. We have now seventy-two markets signed up and more that have been holding out are now giving every indication of signing in the near future. Fifteen new members will be taken in at our next meeting, bringing our membership up to about 225.

"Next Tuesday night we are holding a business and social meeting to which all the shop owners and employes in Chattanooga are invited. Out of this meeting we hope to obtain a better understanding between the bosses and their workmen and to bring the meat business up to a higher plane by eliminating several very bad conditions that have hindered the advancement of the business in Chattanooga.

"The meeting will be held at Roosevelt hall at Seventh and Market, at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 20.

"The response to our invitation leads us to expect a record crowd and we hope that all the bosses, employes and our entire membership will be present.

"We wish to extend our deepest sympathy to Brother Frank Webster in the recent loss of his mother."

Retails Clerks To Meet Tuesday Night

Newly organized local of Retail Clerks will meet Tuesday night at Roosevelt hall, it was announced Friday morning, for the purpose of initiating new members and taking such other steps that are necessary to perfection of the organization.

A special organizer has been appointed by the international, and it is said a very gratifying membership has already been enrolled. Any grocery, dry goods or other clerks handling merchandise are eligible, and any such are invited to attend the session, it was announced.

Cuthbert Quits As Organizer

T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, who has been acting as special organizer for the United Textile Workers of America, this week announced that he has surrendered his comission to headquarters because of the press of other matters connected with the labor movement.

Mr. Cuthbert has done yeoman service for the U. T. W., and has received highest commendation from international officers and representatives of the A. F. of L. for his activities.

A new organizer to replace Mr. Cuthbert will in all probability be named within the next few days.

NAMSED ASSISTANT COUNSEL.

MORE ABOUT WHAT'S WRONG WITH SCHOOLS

Teachers Ask Additional Pertinent Questions.

HOLD CHATTANOOGA STANDARDS ARE LOW

Salary Schedule, Qualifications Not Equal to Other Cities.

(The following is the second of a series of articles prepared under auspices of the Chattanooga-Hamilton County Federation of Teachers, on "What's Wrong With Our Schools?" Labor World readers are urged to carefully study each of the series and place themselves in position to assist in the campaign to build the local school system to a point in line with other cities in the nation and particularly in the south. Should the reader have missed last week's article, a few extra copies of that issue are still available, and may be had by applying to The Labor World office.)

What is a good school? Is it a beautiful building with modern physical equipment, a few books other than textbooks, a map or two, and a group of poorly trained and poorly paid teachers in it? Is a community really being economical by employing teachers with little educational background, supplying them with little educational equipment, giving them absolutely no encouragement financially to ever improve their meager training, and paying them the salary of unskilled labor? Verily, in the words of the Master, "Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?"

Charles A. Beard, an outstanding leader in American thought, says: "If American democracy is to fulfill its high mission, then those who train its youth must be among the wisest, most fearless, and most highly trained men and women this broad land can furnish." Does Chattanooga agree with Dr. Beard when, according to a recent research bulletin issued by the University of Chattanooga, more than 50 per cent of the teachers are recruited from students making grades averaging around C? (The average salaries of the Chattanooga teachers are: Elementary, $900; junior high, $1,035; senior high, $1,260. The average salaries for other cities from 30,000 to 100,000 population ranges: Elementary teachers, $1,526; junior high, $1,761; senior high, $1,994.)

Are Chattanooga's youths so highly endowed mentally and socially that they can overcome such obstacles and successfully compete with a coming generation where emphasis has been more wisely placed?

Is Chattanooga so poverty-stricken that she cannot support her schools, even to the point of crippling her youth? We do not think so! The teachers are making an effort to wake up the community to the critical situation confronting the schools today.

FINED FOR CALLING WORKERS "SCABS"

New Haven, Conn.—Holding that the use of the word "scab" in addressing workers is a breach of the peace, Judge Larash, of the West Haven town court, fined Leonard J. Greene $10 and costs. The state charged Greene used the word in addressing employes of the American Mills company.

NEXT CONVENTION LABOR PARENT BODY MAY COME TO SOUTH

Many Advantages of This City Pointed Out to Officials.

Gathering Would Bring Thousands of Delegates and Visitors From Throughout United States and Canada for Two Weeks' Stay — Publicity Feature Stressed.

Chattanooga, 1935!

Such is the slogan of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and its fifty-five affiliated craft unions in a campaign inaugurated Monday night by Central Body to have the executive council of the American Federation of Labor choose this city for its annual gathering in 1935.

Already first steps have been taken, and it is believed the huge gathering can be secured provided civic organizations and the citizenship generally show a disposition to co-operate.

San Francisco convention of labor's national body last month left in the hands of its executive council the choice of next year's meeting place, and it was learned locally that certain members of the council favored the southeast as the meeting place.

That this city has many advantages over any other in this locality is well known, and it is believed the "selling" of these advantages to the labor officials will require only a strong determination. Communications have already been sent to members of the council from Central Body and officers of various local unions, setting out the claims of Chattanooga, and these will be followed by such other steps as are possible.

The Federation convention meets for two weeks in October, and would bring to Chattanooga thousands of delegates and visitors from all sections of the United States and Canada. It was recalled this week that practically every important daily newspaper in the United States sends representatives who remain in the city for practically one month, and send many columns of publicity to their respective papers.

That Chattanooga is ideally situated for the convention, and is in every way qualified to entertain a session of such magnitude is well known locally as well as in other localities. Its central location, its wonderful autumn climate, its unsurpassed scenic and historical interest, its ample hotel facilities, its great memorial auditorium, centrally located and accommodating some 6,000 persons, all will be brought to the attention of the labor officials, as well as the fact that it is the center of the greatest organizing activity, perhaps, in the country, which has been particularly successful in this immediate territory.

The local Chamber of Commerce, the hotels and various civic and fraternal organizations will be asked to join in the campaign to secure the big meeting, and labor officials locally are confident, as stated, that with proper co-operation the convention may be "landed."

Balloon tires for wheelbarrows are reported to have met with considerable success, being especially popular among contractors using them on roofing jobs, or in soft or muddy ground. They have also proved of value in parks and cemeteries and around golf links. Goodrich, maker of the tires, has just announced single tube wheelbarrow tires similar to bicycle tires, which are easier to apply and repair.

Jobs for 2,600,000 Unemployed

In a criticism of the American Federation of Labor's demand for the 30-hour week to relieve unemployment, the trade journal "Business Week" admits that at least 2,650,000 jobless would be provided with work by the application of the shorter hours proposal.

According to private statistics collected by "Business Week," employes in the manufacturing industries are working 34.4 hours per week. Therefore, on the basis of 6.6 millions employed, the 30-hour week would add 750,000 unemployed to the payrolls. The statistics of "Business Week" for 11 other industries, where large numbers work more than 40 hours, show that the 30-hour week would give employment to 1,900,000, making a total of 2,650,000 unemployed to whom the 30-hour week would give DIRECT employment.

But the total number of jobless put to work would be much larger than this figure, which does not take into consideration the purchasing power of the wages paid to the re-employed workers. If the entire 2,650,000 whom "Business Week" admits would be re-employed were taken from relief rolls the net increase in commodity and service purchases would be the difference between the purchasing power of the wages paid and the amounts received from relief funds, which would undoubtedly total many millions of dollars. These millions spent for the good things of life would enable employers to provide work for hundreds of thousands in addition to those directly employed by means of the hours cut.

The main criticism of "Business Week" is that the A. F. of L. plan is not a complete remedy for unemployment—that it will not put all of the ten million unemployed to work. The A. F. of L. does not contend that the 30-hour week will create jobs for all of the jobless. But when the conservative estimate of the conservative "Business Week" declares that it would take 2,650,000 from the unemployed army, and with them and their dependents remove about 10,600,000 persons from relief rolls, the plan is certainly worth deep consideration by those who own and control industry and by the government, which is pledged to restore prosperity.

Legalized Bargaining Agreements

The decision by the National Labor Relations Board in the Houde Engineering corporation case that, when the majority of the employes of a plant vote for a certain agency to represent them in collective bargaining negotiations with employers, that agency should act for all of the employes, brought a chorus of protests from most of the industrial autocrats in the United States.

The principle of majority rule has been accepted in our political government from its inception. Nevertheless, extending the rule to the field of industrial relations was at once interpreted by anti-labor "yellow-dog" contract executives and managers of industry as destroying the very fundamentals of their fascist "liberty."

It is, therefore, interesting to note that this principle is, in effect, recognized in the Province of Quebec, Canada, in a recent act of parliament designed to make collective trade agreements enforceable as statute law.

The act declares that when any organization of employes or employers has become party to a trade agreement the minister of labor may be petitioned to request the lieutenant-governor in council to issue an order certifying that the agreement is effective as law. Hearings for and against the proposal are held by the minister of labor, who makes his recommendation to the lieutenant-governor.

> If the minister of labor makes an affirmative recommendation an order in council is published which makes the rate of wages and hours specified in the agreement legally binding for all persons in the industry, employers and employes, including those who were not parties to the agreement.

This collective agreement, legalized by the decree of the lieutenant-governor in council, supersedes all individual contracts in the affected areas, unless such contracts provide better wages and hours for the employes. But even this exemption is not binding if the legal agreement outlaws individual contracts.

The state does not take over the enforcement of the collective agreements. That is left to the parties directly concerned, who are required to form a joint committee to assure the supervision and enforcement of the pact. The minister of labor is authorized to add to the joint committee not more than two delegates recommended by employes or employers who are not parties to the agreement.

The theory underlying the act is that a trade agreement represents the views of the majority of employers and employes in the industry.

In carrying out this act a recent order in council gave juridical extension to the agreement between the organized building trades of Montreal and the Montreal Builders' Exchange, Inc. Under the order the wages and hours in the entire building industry in Montreal became uniformly those fixed by the agreement.

> The significant thing is that this law is not criticised by Canadian employers' organizations as destroying their fundamental rights in the determination of industrial relations. Nor is it denounced as establishing a dictatorship of organized labor.

It might not be a bad plan for the anti-labor reactionaries who dominate the chamber of commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers, and the subversive barons who control the steel and automobile industries, to take a trip to the Province of Quebec and see how the legalized majority rule in collective bargaining works out in action.

Communist Lies About Organized Labor

Misrepresentation and falsehood are the main weapons used by communist propagandists in attacking bona fide trade unions and their executives. This well-known fact is clearly illustrated by an editorial in the "Daily Worker," the official organ of the communist party of the United States and the mouthpiece of the Communist International with headquarters in Moscow, assailing William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

In commenting on Mr. Green's suggestion that as a measure of unemployment relief the owners of industry increase output 30 per cent and apply the 30-hour week, the "Daily Worker" says: "Will this shorter workweek mean a cut in weekly wages, . . . Green is silent on this aspect of the case."

The fact is that Mr. Green and the American Federation of Labor advocate the 30-hour week without reduction on weekly earnings.

In its report favoring the 30-hour week the Committee on Shorter Work Day of the 1934 convention of the A. F. of L. recommended that "such reduction in labor hours should carry with it no reduction in weekly pay." In supporting this report and urging its adoption by the convention, Mr. Green said:

> "We couple with our demand for the six-hour day and the five-day week a proposal that there shall be no reduction in wages to the working man who may become the beneficiary of that reform. We cannot offer a remedy and with it a supplemental proposal that would at once destroy the efficacy of the remedy itself. We cannot propose a shorter work day and a shorter work week with reduced earnings, because that would destroy the buying power, and we must develop buying power to the point where we can find a market for the goods which industry produces."

At the conclusion of Mr. Green's speech the convention unanimously adopted the report of the committee.

Both the American Federation of Labor and Mr. Green have long advocated the 30-hour week without reduction in weekly earnings. To say that either the A. F. of L. or Mr. Green is "silent" on this question indicates the extent to which communists will go in their policy of wanton mendacity relative to the position of bona fide labor officials on questions of deep interest to all working men and women.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Everyone has read how Samuel Insull, dethroned utility emperor, paid himself salaries in 1929 of $481,000 for his various corporations. Everyone knows that this amount was increased to $485,767 in 1931, the second year of the depression. But few people outside the Insull range know a circumstance which makes these outrageous payments ten times more outrageous than before.

At the very time that he was paying himself these absurd sums, stocks in the companies from which these salaries were drawn were being fairly rammed down the throats of Insull's employes! Practically every man with more than existence wage was dragooned into subscribing for stock in proportion to his income; and the payments taken out of his pay envelope.

The worker felt that he had to subscribe or lose his job; and these compulsory payments from modest or meager earnings supplied part of the fantastic "compensation" which Mr. Insull paid himself for driving a naturally prosperous industry into bankruptcy.

Walter M. Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union congress, has been telling American audiences that the time was approaching when the labor party would again be called upon to take over the reins of government. Results of recent municipal elections in England, Wales and Scotland indicate that he may know whereof he speaks.

A sweeping labor party triumph was scored in London and provincial towns and cities and was followed up a few days later by an impressive victory in the Scottish municipal balloting. Everywhere in Scotland the laborites made marked inroads against conservative party power. Glasgow, Motherwell and other cities were carried.

In England and Wales, the labor party gained more than 700 seats and in London will control fifteen boroughs out of twenty-eight for the next three years. The vote was hailed by labor party leaders as evidence the party has shaken off the "sock in the nose" received in 1931. The vote was declared to show a strong trend toward the labor party and was even heralded as forecasting victory in the next general election.

British labor, through the labor party, has twice been the British government. If the results of the municipal elections reflect popular sentiment, labor may for a third time win control of the government and that within a year or two.

No evidence that justifies a policy of discrimination against married women teachers as a class has yet been established, is the conclusion of Dr. David Wilbur Peters, after a careful study of the subject. Any blanket rule which arbitrarily eleminates any group of individuals as a class levies a high tariff on training and talent, in his opinion.

In reaching these conclusions, Dr. Peters studied the records of 1,320 married women teachers and the same number of single ones with comparable backgrounds, and teaching approximately the same types of work. When the ratings of the two groups were examined, the differences found were too small to be significant. Another type of comparison, including such items as years in the system, number of positions held, days of absence per year, credits for different types of advanced study, again revealed slight average differences.

Are the molochs of money riding into higher seats of power?

You take your look around and you say yes or you say no—and right now anybody can get all the answers he wants both ways. It is best to stay on watch and let no fact escape notice. Sometimes tiny facts fit into a picture and have big meaning. That's the way of the world.

There are large structures so put together that a nail no bigger than a match is the key to everything—take out that nail and, plunk, goes the whole works. Life is like that, as they say.

It is nice to see things cheerfully. It is more comfortable that way. Everybody hopes conditions will turn for the better. Everybody hopes there will be more jobs.

But today, as winter creeps along, with its need for warmer clothes, more food and tighter shelter, unemployment is higher than it was a year ago and more families are "on relief." What is so cheerful about that?

The United Textile Workers' great strike wasn't won just because the workers were right.

> It was won because a half million of them stood together and stuck together until the United government listened and understood.

Wherever you go these days, whether to employers or to government, there is respectful attention—if you come with real strength. The best thing workers can do today is to organize in unions—real unions and not fake unions. With that, the best thing they can do is to arm themselves with facts. First, an army; then an army that knows where it wants to go and why. That's the force that can't be stopped. Get that kind of force.

All significant spokesmen of industry have changed their tone of voice within two weeks, in speaking of the Roosevelt administration and its program. They still evince nervous sensations in talking about future taxation as determined by government spending.

Might it be that the president's references to English methods have attracted attention to English taxation methods and rates?

If we have been having a strike of capital, perhaps the strikers begin to perceive the choice between paying the tax bill out of proceeds of only a little business, or doing some real business meanwhile, and producing something wherewith to pay the inevitable tax bill. No one is going to worry a whole lot about migrating money. Other countries, with deficits to pay, have furnished patterns for a whole catalogue of taxing methods which have not been tried in this land of regimented taxpayers.

The best analysis that can be made indicates that no great help in reviving the capital goods industries can be expected from the old standbys of these industries—rails, structural steel and heavy machinery.

Steel mills are equipped to turn out many times the probable demand for rails. Structural steel goes mainly into office buildings and hotels, both of which are largely overbuilt. Heavy machinery, still perfectly up-to-date, is standing unused or partly used in a thousand factories. Why order more?

On the other hand, it is easy to see a decided increase in demand for lighter forms of durable goods. There are tens of millions of homes without electric refrigeration; yet it is what every family wants, and the experience of the TVA shows how demand is stimulated by lower prices of both refrigerators and current.

Air condition has been over-advertised; but probably there are millions of homes and offices where it could be installed to advantage. Better heating facilities are needed in countless quarters.

For that matter, estimates which no one contradicts are that hardly more than one-third of our population is housed in modern dwellings. To take up that slack would keep most of the durable goods industries busy for an indefinite time. The feeling is growing in Washington that a perfect understanding of the durable goods situation is one of the things behind the administration's persistence in the matter of housing.

Desperate measures have been taken. More may be taken—probably will be taken. Like men on the verge of high cliffs, folks stand around and ask if they'll meet the situation — if they'll work? Who knows?

As time goes men seem less sure of what they thought was their understanding of things. Fewer are today sure they know everything than a year ago. Life also is like that.

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

EXTILE WORKERS OFFER EMPLOYERS CO-OPERATION IN PROMOTING BUSINESS

tter Is Sent to Textile Institute, Expressing Willingness to Aid Expansion of the Industry.

ew York, Nov. 15.—Textile work- stand ready to co-operate fully in moting the best interests of the e textile industry, even to the t of helping in some practical ner to create more sales.

his was indicated definitely in a r sent to George A. Sloan, chair- of the Cotton Textile institute, Francis J. Gorman, vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America.

Await Adjustments.

In a letter to Sloan outlining the novel plan, Gorman suggested that when wage readjustments have been made, employers organization representatives and union representatives should begin conferences looking toward improvement of the textile industry.

Gorman declared the textile union has a real contribution to make in the desire to promote the welfare of the industry to a point where it may be "fairly," soundly and genuinely" prosperous.

The suggestion, he added, was "entirely aside from and in addition to our long-standing proposal for the co-operation in the field of industrial relations."

Making his proposal, which he said would soon go to the other divisions of the recently embattled industry, the labor leader wrote:

Would Expand Market.

"A part of the purposes of the conference which I have in mind would be to create joint employer-union machinery for the expansion and extension of the textile market. Such a program would be in furtherance of the interests of the workers and employers alike.

"The union has a definite contribution to make in the development of marketing possibilities and the expansion of consuming power. But, of course, the union cannot contribute its efforts except in co-operation with the organized employers."

Telephone Users Consider Quality and Dependability of Service as Paramount

Telephone service is such an intimate, personal service that anything adversely affecting it at once becomes a subject of individual interest to the millions of users. Because this service has such an important part in your every day social and business life, its quality and dependability are matters of serious concern to you. Service inferior to the high standard to which you are accustomed would not be acceptable, even at a lower price.

Recognizing this fact, the Bell System has always so shaped its policy as to insure the best and most dependable service that science and careful, farsighted management could produce, at the lowest possible cost consistent with financial safety.

Due to this constructive policy, the telephone business has never earned speculative profits.

In the best years of the Southern Bell Telephone Company's history, and during a time when other businesses were earning large profits on soaring prices, the cost of telephone service was kept at a level where the return on the investment was never more than 7%. In 1930, when the depression was first felt, these earnings declined rapidly, and in 1933 they shrank to about 4% on the investment.

It is obvious that further reductions of such already inadequate earnings would seriously endanger the financial soundness of the business, and be reflected in the quality and dependability of the service.

ELECTION RESULTS HELD BIG VICTORY FOR LABOR

Union-Indorsed Candidates Swept to Office in Great Numbers in Congressional and State Balloting—Senators Opposed by Organized Workers Fall by Wayside.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Candidates opposed by labor were beaten right and left in the Nov. 6 elections, while labor-indorsed candidates were elected by scores to congress.

As the result of the election of candidates favorable to labor's aims and aspirations, it is believed here that the outlook is bright for a 30-hour week bill and other labor legislation in the next congress session.

Of twenty-seven senators indorsed by labor, all except four were elected. About the same proportion holds good for representatives.

Particular gratification was expressed at American Federation of Labor headquarters over the election of Senators La Follette, of Wisconsin; Wheeler, of Montana; Ashurst, of Arizona; Walsh, of Massachusetts; Shipstead, of Minnesota; Frazier, of North Dakota. Pleasure was also expressed over the election of P. G. Gerry to replace Senator Herbert, of Rhode Island, and the election of Joseph C. O'Mahoney to the senate from Wyoming.

Results of state elections also pleased labor. Victories of Gov. Floyd B. Olson, farmer-labor party candidate in Minnesota, the La Follette third party in Wisconsin, and of Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, as lieutenant-governor in Pennsylvania, were singled out for special mention among trade unionists. As presiding officer of the state senate, Kennedy is expected to exercise an important influence on labor legislation in Pennsylvania.

Senators Fess, of Ohio; Reed, of Pennsylvania; Kean, of New Jersey; Hatfield, of West Virginia, were among candidates opposed by the A. F. of L. who were beaten. Fess is succeeded by Vic Donahey, who as governor of Ohio demonstrated his friendliness to organized labor on several occasions.

Here and there a congressional candidate favored by labor was defeated, losing because of the tremendous democratic sweep.

But setbacks were few and far between and on the whole labor is vastly pleased with the results of the election.

NRA Decides to Ease Production Curb Now Affecting All Industry

Hope to Create More Employment, Though Some Fear Machines May Produce More and Labor Receive Little Benefit.

Washington.—The national recovery administration has indicated, following discussion of the matter at numerous conferences of the new NRA board, that restriction of industrial output will be dropped as an NRA policy.

While this is said to be an effort to increase employment, while easing regulation of industry, some have expressed the fear that the proposed increased production will likely be accomplished chiefly by machinery, now restricted, with relatively little actual benefit to wage-earners.

Production control, while almost unanimously deprecated by administration advisers, has crept into many of the NRA codes. It has taken these three forms:

1. Machine-hour provisions, whereby manufacturers are bound not to work their equipment more than so many hours a week.
2. Restriction of the construction of new plant equipment.
3. Prohibition of sale below cost of production.

The board has not yet decided what to do about the production controls embodied in existing codes, but it was said that no further steps in this direction would be taken.

Only within the last few days has the board begun to consider policy procedure, necessarily deferred by the exigencies of routine detail with which the board had to familiarize itself.

The formation, as yet vague, of the policy against restriction of production is one of the first important conclusions reached.

Will Draft New Rail Pension Measure, President Green Says

Washington.—Following a decision in the District of Columbia, holding as unconstitutional the railroad pension bill passed by the last congress, it was indicated by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that a new bill will be framed if the U. S. supreme court upholds the lower court's decision, made this week.

"We regret that such a decision was rendered, and if it is upheld by the United States supreme court we will have to frame a new law for the coming congress to overcome the constitutional objections," he said.

The question of constitutionality of the present pension act will probably be carried to the supreme court, according to present indications.

Although the department of justice has not as yet decided whether to appeal, it is expected the case will be carried to the court of appeals and ultimately to the supreme court.

Labor Representative Appointed

The NRA has appointed John J. Eagan, general organizer for the A. F. of L., as labor representative on the code authority for the hatters' fur cutting industry. He succeeds the Rev. M. A. Wehby.

LABOR AGREEMENT APPROVED FOR CHICAGO ELECTRICIANS

Washington, Nov. 1.—A labor agreement between employers and employes of the electrical contracting division of the construction industry in Cook county, Illinois, embracing the city of Chicago, has been approved by executive order. The agreement affects approximately 7,500 workers—foremen, journeymen and apprentices.

"It is reasonable to predict that the establishing of uniform rates of pay, uniform hours of work and improved conditions of employment would be beneficial to the industry as well as to the employes and consumers," a report from the national industrial recovery board pointed out.

The construction industry's code provided for regional compacts on wages, hours and other conditions of employment to be reached by collective bargaining. The agreement was considered at a public hearing conducted at Chicago, Ill., Aug. 17, 1934. As revised after the hearing and bearing executive approval, provisions include:

Minimum wage for Class "A" journeymen of $1.50 per hour; $1 an hour for Class "B" journeymen, and $1.06¼ an hour on modernization or rehabilitation work;

Overtime rates are 1 1-3 times the regular rates on shut-down work except on holidays; 1¼ to 2 times the regular rate on operating maintenance work; 1½ and 2 times the regular rate for modernization and rehabilitation work; 2 times the regular rate on other work except as heretofore provided.

Five-day, 40-hour week, maximum 8-hour day, with regular hours between 8 and 5 p.m. Exceptions are provided under conditions involving protection of life and property, maintenance, etc.

Legion Delegate Interrupts Union President's Speech

Miami, Fla.—H. C. Fremming, president of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers, represented President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, at the American Legion convention here. Fremming brought the "profound regrets" of President Green at his inability to attend. While he was speaking, a tense situation was caused by the shouted interruption of an unnamed delegate.

Fremming was discussing unemployment, which he said would continue "until we reduce hours—not for leisure, but to increase employment."

Unemployment, he said, is the result of "greed, avarice and poor economy."

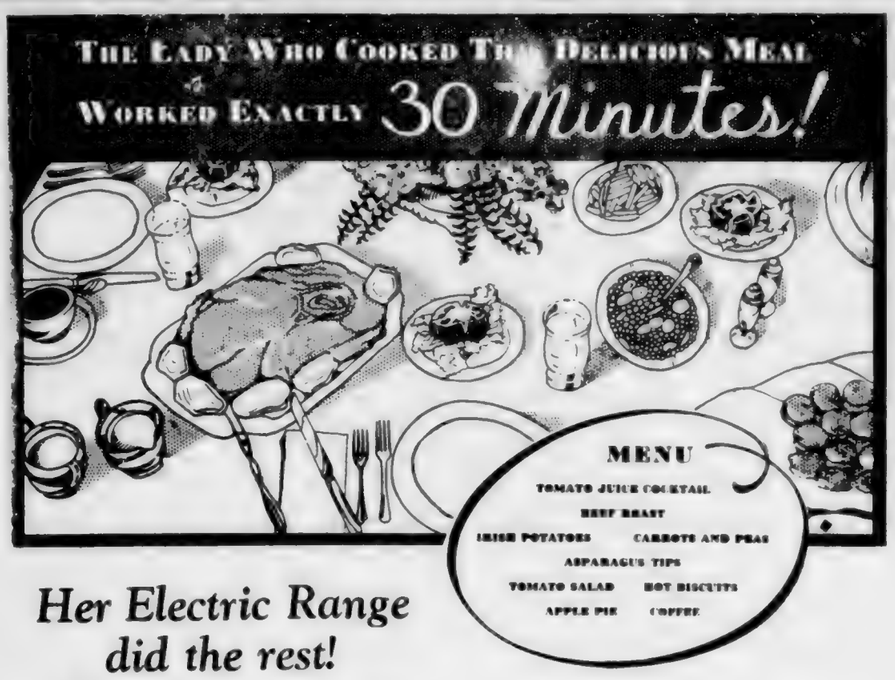
At that point the loud shout roared out from the gallery.

"What is this?—the American Legion or organized labor?" the delegate demanded to know.

Fremming paused. Commander Hayes strode to the rostrum. He rang the bell and advised the delegate that he was decidedly out of order and that Fremming had been invited to speak.

The delegate saluted the commander, closing the incident.

Praise men and flatter women and you will have many good friends.



Her Electric Range did the rest!

Unbelievable? Not if you know modern Electric Cookery.

With automatic time and temperature controls there's no need to spend any time in the kitchen—except to prepare the food for cooking. Place it in the oven and leave for an afternoon of bridge . . . reading . . . driving . . . whatever you wish. Your Electric Range will cook foods far more accurately and perfectly than if you stood there watching, tasting and testing.

You'll save money, too, for Reduced Electric Rates have brought the cost of cooking to a new low. It will really amaze you. Just ask one of your neighbors, who cooks electrically, or stop in at any of our offices and let us figure from your electric bills the savings that will apply in your own case under the new rates.

A. & P. To Be Asked Extension Of Cleveland Agreement to All Stores

Ohio Workers Return to Jobs; Butler Company and Other "Chains" Are Being Organized.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 15.—Over 2,000 employes of the 300 stores of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company have returned to their jobs here, following settlement of labor difficulties, effected by an agreement drawn by the national labor relations board and accepted by the company and seven crafts affected.

High officials of the company, who promptly agreed to the settlement, after long-drawn-out efforts with local executives had failed and resulted in temporary closing of the local stores, have been commended for their present attitude toward employes, while the workers themselves returned to work with vim and enthusiasm.

Columbus, O. — Michael Schuld, president of the Meat Cutters' and Butcher Workmen in Ohio, one of the crafts affected in the recent A. & P. strike at Cleveland, has announced that his organization will ask officials of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company to extend the Cleveland agreement to all of the company's stores.

The A. & P. has approximately 15,500 stores throughout the country, with nearly 90,000 employes.

New York.—Chain grocery store and meat market employes, long under the domination of the several powerful companies controlling this business, are apparently determined to throw off the yoke of fear and hesitancy and proceed with effective organization.

A concerted drive is reported as under way to improve the lot of these workers, through their own voluntary organization into bonafide labor unions, with such assistance of experienced labor organizers as they may desire.

Employes of the James Butler Grocery company, operators of 665 stores, are expected to present demands soon for recognition of their organization, together with revision of wage scales and working rules, in keeping with union conditions.

HOME BUILDING REVIVAL FORECAST ON BIG SCALE

New York City—A great national revival of home building to meet an estimated shortage of 500,000 family dwellings units was forecast by executives of the producers' council, affiliated with the American Institute of Architects in a co-operative effort to promote and speed housing developments.

Diversion of federal appropriations from public works to private construction was advocated by J. C. Bebb, president of the council, as a means of accelerating heavy building. He said that experts expected the building revival to reach boom proportions in less than three years.

"Every one, from the president down, is now apparently ready to admit that recovery can not be said to be under way until private building construction is revived in a large way," Bebb said.

"The only way to revive it is to remove the present state of uncertainty as to the future and provide means for financing projects that are ready to go forward as soon as funds are available.

"The construction industry is apparently very definitely of the opinion that any such appropriation by congress should be devoted to encouraging private construction."

Bebb argued that governmental assistance for private building, other than small-unit housing, would make available for the construction industry large credit resources now idle in banks.

Thomas S. Holden, vice-president of the F. W. Dodge corporation, said there was a shortage of at least 500,000 family units, houses or apartments, and that another 2,500,000 units needed enlargement to eliminate overcrowding.

WORKERS MUST GUESS AMOUNT OF EARNINGS

Jonesville, S. C.—Workers in the cotton mill of Jonesville depend upon faith, hope and trust, and possibly luck as well, to get their pay. Each week the worker is handed an envelope with his name and number on it—nothing more. He opens it and counts the change. He is not given a statement either as to the hours he has worked or how much he has earned. If there is a mistake, he never knows it. At this time practically all of the workers in this mill are receiving a weekly wage of $9, which is three-fourths of the minimum wage specified for unskilled workers only in the cotton textile code. But this sum is the wage of both skilled and unskilled workers here.

ASHEVILLE AFTER 1935 CONVENTION

Asheville, N. C.—"Asheville, 1935!" That's the slogan adopted by the Central Labor union here, in opening an intensive drive to bring the next convention of the American Federation of Labor to this beautiful and progressive southern city. Civic and commercial organizations, hotels and others, are reported as backing up the labor unions in the "big push." The A. F. of L. executive council will select a city for the 55th annual convention, to be held in October, 1935.

HALIFAX TAXI MEN ORGANIZE.

Halifax, N. S.—For the first time, a unit of taxi drivers has been organized in Halifax for affiliation with the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs. About fifty-five men joined the new local at the first meeting. Active in organizing the local was Fred Ramsay, president of the Halifax District Trades and Labor council, and president of the Halifax local of the Street Railwaymen's union, and for the past thirty years a motorman and conductor on electric railways.

REPRESENTATIVE IS NAMED.

Washington.—The national industrial recovery board has appointed for an undetermined period John J. Eagan, general organizer for the American Federation of Labor for Connecticut, as labor representative on the code authority for the hatters' fur cutting industry. He succeeds the Rev. M. A. Wehby.

Cement Industry Employes Are Making Substantial Gains

A. F. of L. Survey Shows Increase in Employment and in Wages, as Workers Extend Organization.

Washington, Nov. 15.—A review of operations of the cement industry, conducted by the research department of the A. F. of L., covering the first seven months of 1934, as compared with 1933, shows that production increased 24.6 per cent and average prices increased 12.2 per cent. Average shipments this year increased 17.9 per cent and stocks on hand increased only approximately 3 per cent.

Production and shipments run about one-third of the 1927-28-29 level, but stocks on hand are slightly higher than 1927, while the whole composite price in July, 1934, was slightly above the average for 1929 and only slightly below the 1927 and 1928 figures.

Wages and Hours.

Comparing hours, wages and employment, it is found that employment has increased 25 per cent over last year, total payrolls have increased nearly 50 per cent and average hourly rates have increased approximately one-third. The increase in employment is nearly the same as the increase in production. Average weekly wages have increased slightly more than cement prices.

There has been a reduction in average hours worked per week of 5 per cent, but the general figures for the industry show that hourly rates have been increased enough to more than offset this reduction in weekly hours.

Reports from Cement Workers' Federal Unions Nos. 19435, 19310 and 19527 are considered, with the conclusion: "Everything that can be done by our unions this year toward establishing a sound relationship with employers will serve as a foundation on which to make further progress next year and also should help materially in safeguarding the interests of all union members during any seasonal curtailment of production."

It is understood that further organization of workers in the cement industry is progressing and it is possible that an international charter may be issued to these workers by the A. F. of L. Executive Council, under authority of the fifty-fourth annual convention of the federation recently concluded in San Francisco.

COMMITTEE TO STUDY PRISON COMPETITION WITH PRODUCTS OF COTTON GARMENT INDUSTRY

Washington, Nov. 15.—The national industrial recovery board has announced the appointment of Judge Joseph N. Ulman, of Baltimore; Frank Tannenbaum, of Washington, and W. Jett Lauck, of Fredericksburg, Va., to make the two studies contemplated in President Roosevelt's executive order of Oct. 12, regarding competition between products of the cotton garment industry and products of sheltered workshops, and between products of the industry and those of prison labor. The committee is also directed to "study the operation of the prison labor compact especially as to the enforcement of the standards of competition with private industry established therein." The committee's report must be submitted on or before Dec. 1.

Ulman will serve as chairman of the committee. He is associate justice of the supreme bench of Baltimore, and has been prominent in connection with prison problems in Maryland for many years. At present he is chairman of the prison labor committee of the American Prison association.

Tannenbaum is an author and economist widely known for his investigations and books on social and economic problems. Lauck, an economist and statistician on many government and private boards and commissions, was one of the three members named to study the 36-hour week amendment to the cotton industry code.

MORE ABOUT TVA APPEAL

in my opinion, is one of the greatest presidents in the history of our nation. Some will say that the Tennessee Valley Authority has not carried out its program to any great extent. If you will bear in mind the many obstacles that they have run up against, I believe that you will agree with me that they have accomplished very much.

Some of our citizens do not understand how this expenditure would be repaid. I wish to call your attention to statements that have appeared in public press that a 10 per cent charge above operating expenses would be charged on all bills, and in this way the project would automatically pay for itself over a period of time.

One of the greatest achievements of the new deal is that it has educated the working men and women of our nation, and particularly of the south, along the lines of their respective employment. Due to this, of course, the workers have as never before familiarized themselves with their line of production, and these working men and women in the southern sections have been taught to think for themselves. The day of the autocratic employer is rapidly coming to an end. Our public officeholders and ambitious politicians will do well to take notice of such changes that have been and will continue taking place until such time as our workers have brought about better wages and better living and housing conditions.

Just here I want to say to those seeking public office in our next city election, that the majority of the people, who are the working class, are demanding that those who aspire to public office take a definite stand in favor of the Tennessee Valley Authority and its power projects.

I hope that every voter in Hamilton county noticed the recent reports coming from Memphis, Tenn., where the voters, just a few days ago, expressed themselves to the tune of 17 to 1 in favor of a city-owned and operated light and power company. Then, if our surrounding cities, which are numerous, are taking advantage of these vast opportunities, surely Chattanooga, being the hub of the Tennessee Valley Authority, will go to the front lines and when the opportunity presents itself, we will cast our ballots in favor of the Tennessee Valley plan.

Baltimore Teachers Announce New Union

Baltimore.—A large group of teachers here have formed a branch of the American Federation of Teachers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, according to announcement of Kenneth Douty, president of the Baltimore branch. Miss Sadye Hendler has been named secretary-treasurer.

It is understood that organization was effected largely through the efforts of Miss Borchardt, of Washington, an official of the A. F. of L. The slogan of the union is: "Democracy in education and education for democracy."

THEATERS ASK COURT TO STOP UNION PICKETS

Rialto, State Claim Business Damaged.

ARTISTS' STRIKE GETS PUBLICITY

Workers Hold Sixty Hours, Paltry Pay Cause of Movie Walkout.

Local 226, Painters, Decorators and Signwriters, is made defendant in an injunction sought by the management of Rialto and State movie houses, and representatives of that organization have been cited to appear before Chancellor Foust Tuesday morning to show cause why they should not be prohibited from engaging in activities such as are alleged in the complaint to have been carried on for the past several weeks, following organization of poster artists employed by the houses, who were discharged when they became affiliated with the union.

The bill seeking injunction charges that business of complainants has been seriously injured by picketing and other activities of the union, and asks that same be ordered stopped.

Officials of Local 226 said Thursday, however, that they believed there is little chance of the theater management securing the injunction, pointing out that no unlawful acts have been committed, and scouting some of the charges as ridiculous.

Latest labor troubles with the two theaters originated some weeks ago when display card artists employed at the Tivoli, Rialto and State organized and demanded shorter hours and a higher wage scale. It was said that these artists worked from forty-eight to sixty and even seventy hours a week at a paltry wage. Local management, it was said, announced that the Tivoli was owned by a different group of stockholders, and agreed to the scale at that house, but declared its intention of closing the "art shops" in the other two theaters. This was considered by the unionists as a subterfuge, and a strike was called, spokesmen pointing out that signwriters have been employed in the two theaters practically since their opening as movie houses.

A circular issued by the local, and to which the management is said to have taken umbrage, contains the following:

"Can you read?

"A committee of union officials called on Mr. Rogers, and this is his statement, to which we have sworn witnesses:

"'We don't need signs at the Rialto and State theaters like we do at the Tivoli. The class of people that go to the Rialto and State theaters do not appreciate art and do not read signs.'"

It is said that the bill filed in chancery court contends that organized labor is not in sympathy with the strikers, holding that the theaters still employ union operators and stage hands. In reply to this, union spokesmen pointed out that the crafts mentioned are under agreement with the theaters, and should they join in a sympathetic strike, would possibly lose their local charter.

Local 226 has maintained active and unbroken membership in Chattanooga Trades and Labor council for nearly a half-century, and has rendered unselfish service to the cause of all local trades unionists.

"We appreciate the co-operation which has been given us by trades unionists of other crafts, and the sympathetic interest shown by the public," a union official told The Labor World this week. "We believe that sixty hours a week is too long for any craftsman to work, and that $15 is not enough for a week's work. We are confident that citizens of Chattanooga, of whatever group, will agree with us on that point, and will continue the fine support which they have given us."

WALKOUT AT CHAMPION MILL UNAVOIDABLE

Workers Say Discriminations Piled Up.

GENERAL WAGE CUT AMONG IRRITANTS

Possibility Strikes May Occur in Other Mills Is Admitted.

Employes of the Champion Hosiery mills, last to prevail upon their employers to sign the agreement which all other local mill owners signed to end the recent general strike, again walked out Wednesday afternoon when they became convinced, according to leaders, that the company did not intend to live up to the agreement made when the strike ended some few weeks ago.

It was declared that, rather than improving conditions, they became worse after the workers returned to their jobs, and petty discriminations multiplied. When these matters were called to the attention of the management, it was said, promises were made that they would be corrected, but without result.

Leaders in the union movement, spokesmen declared, have been made the "goats." One woman who took an active part in the strike, it was pointed out, and who had been assured through the committee that she would be re-employed, has never yet been hired, and a "straw boss" merely shakes his head when she applies for her old position. Another leader, a woman who had been employed by the concern for the past nine years, was discharged for a petty infraction of which every worker in the mill had continuously been guilty, it was explained.

It was further declared that when the workers returned, a general wage cut was placed into effect in the mill.

An idea of what Champion employes have had to contend with is offered in a "Statement of Earnings and Deductions" presented by one worker. This "statement" contains the information that the worker earned $12.54 in one week, but deducted for "bad work" is $4.65, which left $7.89 for the week's earnings. This item of "bad work," it was said, is worked out by the office force, and the worker is never allowed to examine his or her product to determine which is "bad." However, in order, perhaps, to show how "big-hearted" the company is, the following items are also included in the statement referred to: "Minimum, $9.60; subsidy, $1.71; gross pay, $9.60."

Lengthy conferences during Wednesday night failed to bring an understanding, and the mill was still closed Thursday.

The Champion is the mill which the morning Times "moved to Georgia" during the recent general strike, but the workers failed to become excited over the hoary propaganda. It was recalled Thursday, also, that officials of the mill announced during the strike that truck loads of machines en route to Georgia had been stopped below the Tennessee line by armed parties, and their drivers forced to return to this city. Investigation of Georgia officials, however, failed to find any evidence to support the fantastic charge, and the publicity campaign was suddenly ended so far as this particular feature was concerned.

The mill is said to be again closed down entirely, and pickets are "on the job" in the vicinity of the disturbance.

The possibility of other mills being involved again in strikes was admitted by workers this week, who charged that in several local plants, although a thorough understanding was reached, and signed, providing against discriminations, "straw bosses" are being allowed to continue their petty tyranny in some cases to an extent greater than before the recent walkout.

"Imported" Representatives

Labor haters have from time immemorial inveighed against a system whereby representatives of international unions are called into local situations where strikes or lockouts make their presence desirable in the opinion of the workers. "Outside agitators," "imported organizers" and such have become stock phrases particularly for daily newspapers which almost invariably take sides against the workers when industrial strife comes.

Which leads up to the following recollections:

Some few weeks ago a strike occurred at the Crane Enamelware plant in this city. After many weeks of effort on the part of local workers to reach an agreement with the management, a high company official was "imported" from Chicago, and an agreement was shortly made by him with the strikers.

A short strike occurred at the local plant of Wilson & Co. The same frantic efforts were made to settle with the management, without avail until a head office man was "imported." Peace was almost immediately signed.

Labor troubles were recently threatened at the Signal Mountain Portland Cement Company. A deadlock set in—and a company official from another city was "imported." Peace, quickly.

A five-weeks' walkout occurred at the Hedges-Walsh-Weidner company, and all efforts of local workers to compose the differences with the management came to naught. The "big man" came down from the north, and an agreement was shortly signed.

The American Bakery company's local plant was closed nine weeks by a walkout. No progress whatever was made toward a settlement until Atlanta officials of the company stepped into Chattanooga and conferred with the contending local parties. Strike settled.

An unfortunate misunderstanding recently arose involving labor and the Colonial bakery. It seemed the longer this lasted the further apart were the contenders. An attorney from Kansas City represented the company and a settlement was quickly reached.

In practically every one of the strikes or threatened strikes locally within the past few months government representatives have been "imported," and in most cases they have been successful.

The above is not by way of criticism of any local management, but tends, we hold, to prove that in industry, as well as in labor, officials are ofttimes in better position, through perhaps a wider experience, to weigh the facts of a situation, even though such officials happen to reside or have their headquarters in Kalamazoo or Timbuctoo.

Paste this in your hat, and next time some public-spirited citizen refers to "imported" labor representatives or "outsiders" interfering with "our" business, show it to him.

Meatcutters' Social Session Is Successful

Following report of the social and get-together session of Local 600, Meatcutters, and a group of their employers, held last Tuesday night, is furnished by the local's "press agent:"

"The business and social meeting of Local 600, last Tuesday night, to which all meat dealers were invited, was a huge success. There were about 350 in attendance, which included almost our entire membership.

"Several plans were to be brought up to eliminate some of the bad features that are holding back the advancement of the meat business in Chattanooga, but about all that was done was the consuming of a huge pile of sandwiches and some gallons of coffee.

"Good talks were made by Organizer Landis and H. G. B. King. Brother Landis spoke on "Labor and the NRA." Chairman Jones called on some of the meat dealers to speak. Messrs. J. H. Meier, F. R. Rodgers, R. W. Morris, Eugene Stolz, Cline and Storey responded with short talks.

"While the refreshments wre being served a general gabfest was held.

"Local 600 wishes to thank the meat dealers who attended and to say that if all the meat dealers in Chattanooga would co-operate as these men do the business would soon be out of the depression.

"Here is hoping that a meat dealers' association will soon be formed and that they will see fit to co-operate with Local 600 in setting a higher standard of business relations as well as of hours and pay.

"The next regular meeting of the local will be held Tuesday, Dec. 4. All members are requested to attend this meeting as some very important business will be transacted."

Cement Workers Make Progress

T. L. Sullivan, "correspondent" to The Labor World for Local No. 18269, reports this week that an unusually interesting session of the union was held Monday night, with a large number of members present. Henry Marshal, V. O. Cunningham, Roy Rufus and Fred Standifer were appointed delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council.

"While we have not yet gained a closed shop," Mr. Sullivan said, "we are making fine progress, and are glad to see other workers organizing to secure better conditions."

SAYS TEACHER SEEKING ONLY 'SQUARE DEAL'

Merit and Training Not Recognized.

SALARY SCHEDULE SEEN AS BIG NEED

Individual Helpless to Remedy Many Inequities in System.

Following is the third in a series of articles on "What's Wrong With Our Schools," prepared for The Labor World under auspices of the Chattanooga and Hamilton County Federation of Teachers:

SCHOOL TEACHING'S LITTLE IRONIES

That there are many good teachers in our school system no one will deny. That the community appreciates them is another question.

For years ambitious teachers, eager for more knowledge and inspiration, have attended late afternoon and evening classes at the University of Chattanooga. They have spent their summers and their savings in summer schools to become better trained. They have striven with their talents and energies, in class and out, to direct the youth of the community. They are the hardworking dependable members of every faculty. They have, like the tortoise, toiled on while their more playful colleagues have danced and frolicked and spent their time and energies in other ways. These earnest teachers have often received the ridicule of their frivolous companions, but they have labored for youth and for principle. For their services they have been hailed from pulpit and platform as among the noblest of mankind, the hope of civilization, the light in the darkness. Eulogies and thanks have been heaped upon them.

An old axiom, however, says that actions speak louder than words. If it is believed that the community appreciates these teachers, consult the recent research bulletin of the University of Chattanooga, a free copy of which may be obtained from the office there. In the appendix is a list showing the years of training, the years of experience and the salaries of the teachers of Chattanooga and Hamilton county. Almost without exception at the head of each salary group is a person of little training and much experience. No attempt is made here to belittle experience, which makes for greater efficiency, certainly, but in the words of one city teacher, "Why do they still lack training if they have been teaching so long? Why have they not used some of their salary improving themselves?" Another interesting angle of this survey reveals that many teachers with only a few years of experience and little training have been rewarded with salaries higher than have teachers with degrees and years of experience.

Why do these things exist? Do the people of Chattanooga prefer poor scholarship and poor training in the teaching force? Do they think it wise to have flat "raises" and flat "cuts?" To paraphrase Senator Borah, do they think that teachers can eat praise? Are they short-sighted enough to believe the persons who patronize private schools and who would reduce school expenditures, when they cry that, since we have many poorly trained teachers, all our teachers are overpaid?

To the last question, let it be remembered that very few of our highest paid teachers with the poorest preparation are paid according to standards set by other cities. In Chattanooga merit is not recognized or appreciated. If a deserving teacher dares to question why it should be so, she is insulted by being told that if she does not like her position, there are plenty more who will take her place.

Yes, that is true! There are plenty more who will take her place at a still smaller salary, thus saving the community money—but at the expense of whom? Do the children of this community deserve this? In this age of social thinking and social planning can Chattanooga find no place for the adequate support of its teachers and the education of its youth?

We need an adequate salary scale!

UNITED VOTE OFFERS PROOF UNION WANTED

"Ice Cream" Organization Gets a Setback.

FREE EXPRESSION ALLOWED WORKERS

Government Official Supervises Balloting of Hosiery Mill Employes.

Another group of Chattanooga workers have signified beyond shadow of doubt that, free from coercion and intimidation, they will choose the American Federation of Labor and its affiliates as the agency through which their own duly-elected officers will bargain with employers concerning wages and working conditions.

Employes of the United Hosiery mills, East Chattanooga, on Monday expressed their preference under supervision of John L. Conner, of Washington, representative of the textile relations board, and the vote stood 511 to 139. The vote was taken in accordance with an agreement made with the company which terminated the recent strike, which provided for the balloting within sixty days. Under the terms of the signed agreement, the United company is now pledged to deal exclusively with representatives chosen by their employes who are members of Branch 53, American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

Trades unionists recalled this week that the United was one of the large local mills where workers were said by the daily papers to have been "pulled out" by "flying squadrons," and the papers wept crocodile tears over the dear workers' sad plight, leaving the inference that no union organization was wanted. However, it was noted at the "polling place" Monday that no "flying squadrons" were present, nor yet even one whittling stick or baseball bat upon which to base a demand by the daily press for intervention of the United States army, or navy, or somebody, to save the good name of the city and protect the dear worker in his rights.

It was also recalled that in no single instance, where opportunity was afforded, have workers in this territory failed to register by vast majorities their preference for a real organization to represent them, rather than an "ice cream" affair promoted and operated by and for employers. In at least one such case employes of a large local company voted 100 per cent to affiliate with the American Federation.

The vote Monday was personally supervised by Mr. Conner, and representatives of the union and of the company officiated.

The ballot contained the following:

"I desire to be represented for purposes of collective bargaining with the United Hosiery Mills company by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers," and "I desire to be represented for purposes of collective bargaining with the United Hosiery Mills company by some person or persons or agent other than the American Federation of Hosiery Workers."

Officials of Branch 53 took no part in the election, the United workers being left absolutely free to express their choice without persuasion of any character from the organization's heads.

Development of a new process which creates a cotton-like texture out of wood pulp has been announced at Rome. Italian experts are reported to believe the discovery will not only make Italy virtually independent of United States cotton but will reduce the price of cotton goods or cotton-like goods to one-third their present figures.

Running Away From Trade Unions

The regional labor board for New York, New Jersey and Connecticut has made an interpretation of Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery Act which merits attention.

The question before the board was: Is it legal for a company arbitrarily to scrap a union contract, move to a cheap labor area, and refuse to employ its old employes because they insist upon collective bargaining?

The matter arose in the case of two Brooklyn fur-dressing concerns which had contracts with fur-dressers' unions. The contracts prescribed that the employers should not abrogate them without due notice. In their desire to chisel wages the firms repudiated the contracts without formal notice, moved their plants to South Norwalk, Conn., and Farmingdale, Long Island, where they believed there was an abundance of cheap unorganized labor, and refused to employ their old employes in the new locations because those employes "wanted to bargain on the terms and conditions of employment through union representatives."

The regional labor board held this refusal constituted a violation of Section 7-A of the Recovery Act, which declares that "no employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment . . . to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing." The decision added:

"The board cannot ignore the social and economic consequences of this act of migration to a territory where the workers—not only in this industry—are largely unorganized. By removing the plant to South Norwalk some ninety-seven workers are added to the ranks of the unemployed in New York City, to be supported by public or private relief. . . . Termination of an agreement as to wages, hours, and other conditions of work does not terminate the employment of individuals working under such an agreement."

Basing its action on this ruling, the board ordered the concerns to reinstate in their old positions all workers who applied for such reinstatement.

The general application of this rule would make it very difficult for wage-chiseling firms to escape the higher living standards of union labor by moving to localities where the workers are not organized and consequently compelled to accept low wages and living conditions recognized to be far below the minimum requirements for health and comfort.

Insofar as production costs are influenced by wages and hours at the high levels fixed by organized labor, it would tend to prevent the cheap labor owners of industry from relocating their plants in low wage areas. It would also accustom consumers to pay for the commodities they require prices based on high wages and decent living standards, which are the basis of real prosperity throughout the United States.

Propagandists—some anti-union outfits—contends that there may be firms who are unable to continue in business unless they move to cheap labor localities. The patriotic reply to this argument is that such concerns should go out of business, and the sooner the better. The American people as a whole do not want commodities which are cheap because they are produced by cheap labor.

The Laird's Minstrel

Ivy L. Lee, known to organized labor as one of its bitterest enemies, but to the oil trust in the United States and the dye trust in Germany as a very present help in time of trouble, is dead at the age of 57 years.

In mediaeval Scotland, every self-respecting laird had his own private minstrel, to sing the laird's prowess and virtues. As the minstrel told it, it was the laird who really whipped the enemy; the clansmen just came in to gather up the spoil. It was the laird who made the clan respected and feared to the remotest glen. If the minstrel did his work properly, if he earned the sardonic compliment of Bruce:

"Well has thou framed, old man, thy strains
To praise the hand that pays thy pains;"

he had something to eat, a place to sleep, an important position at the gatherings, and sometimes a drink from a flagon of usquebaugh which the laird had sampled first.

Ivy Lee was minstrel to the Laird of Standard Oil, John D. Rockefeller, Sr. Ivy was a clever minstrel. He praised the hand that paid his pains with more than common skill. He took up the job when the Rockefeller-controlled Colorado Fuel and Iron company was still stinking with the smoke and blood of the Ludow massacre; probably the most ghastly butchery that corporation gunmen have staged in America.

He set out, under these unpleasant circumstances, to "sell Rockefeller to the American people as a Santa Claus, not as an ogre;" and to an astounding degree, he succeeded. He actually staged a scene in which Mother Jones, champion and idol of the miners, shook hands with John D. Rockefeller.

When that could happen, anything could happen. Lee's oily adroitness—the pun is unavoidable—has made hosts of Americans almost reverse their opinions of Rockefeller. They see only the University of Chicago, the Rockefeller Foundation, the reservoirs of money poured out—and, as a rule, wisely poured out—in charitable projects. They think these express the real nature of the man, and not his earnest desire for spiritual fire insurance. They forget his ruthlessness, his cruelty, in gathering the gold which he is belatedly scattering.

This is to a considerable extent the work of Ivy Lee. It earns him high rank among the ignoble company of sycophants. He has other titles to such fame. He began publicity work with the Pennsylvania railroad, one of the hardest-boiled, anti-union lines of the country. He spread out, as the old-time minstrel could not do; and within a few months before his death, he was taking a $25,000 yearly fee from the German dye trust, and pleasantly interviewing Hitler.

Yet he will be remembered as the Laird Rockefeller's minstrel. He whitewashed the slaughter of American miners before he struck hands with the butchers of German Jews.

The World and the Courts Both Move

Thirty years ago, dissenting from a verdict of the United States supreme court which declared unconstitutional the New York law limiting the hours of work in bakeries, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes indulged himself in a bit of sacracsm.

"The Fourteenth amendment," he said, "does not enact Mr. Herbert Spence's 'Social Statics.'" But in substance and effect, that is about what a majority of the court held the constitution did. They held that the "liberty" guaranteed to the citizen by this amendment included the liberty to work as long hours as the boss desired.

The other day, Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, upholding the New York law fixing minimum prices of milk, also went back to this part of the constitution.

"The Fourteenth amendment," said Cardozo, "does not protect a business against the hazards of competition." And the court was unanimous in supporting this view.

Those two references to the Fourteenth amendment, thirty years apart, mark a revolution in legal and judicial habits of mind.

Justice Peckham, speaking for the court, treated the New York law on bakeries as an impertinence. "This interference of the legislatures with the ordinary trades and occupations of the people seems to be increasing," he complained; and delivered himself of this gem of wisdom:

"Clean and wholesome bread does not depend on whether the baker works but 10 hours a day, or only 60 hours a week." Four justices dissented; but Peckham had his way.

A few days ago, Justice Cardozo, speaking for a unanimous court, said that the milk price law was not an "interference," but a justified piece of experiment. The world do move.

Mixing His Test Tubes

W. B. Bell, president of the Chemical Alliance, told a gathering of his fellow craftsmen that national planning "can never succeed in a democracy." It would "destroy private enterprise," he declared, and he ridiculed the claim that wealth in this country is concentrated in too few hands, or that the workers do not get a sufficient share.

Mr. Bell may be a good chemist. But when he enters the field of economics and sociology, he reminds one of the caustic criticism which Harvey, discoverer of the circulation of the blood, made on the writings of the pretentious Lord Bacon.

"The lord chancellor," said Harvey, "writes on science like—like a lord chancellor."

Mr. Bell speaks of the social problems of today like—like a chemist. This comparison is made with some hesitation, for assuredly there are few chemists who are so little aware of the world in which they live. His social test tubes are badly mixed.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Charles G. Dawes has vouched for the high moral character of Samuel Insull and Samuel's brokers. But who has vouched for the high moral character of Charles G. Dawes?

A good many years ago, some Chicago politicians wanted to start a bank. They had to show a certain financial backing in order to get a state license. Dawes, head of another Chicago bank, loaned them securities which they showed as their own, and got their license. Dawes took back his securities, Lorimer opened his bank, which duly went broke, but Dawes loaned no securities to help out the depositors.

Two years ago, Charles G. Dawes was head of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, whose chief work at that time was to bolster up shaky banks. The Dawes bank in Chicago was then decidedly shaky. Dawes resigned from the RFC with a grand gesture—and immediately thereafter borrowed $90,000,000 from the RFC, a government institution, which he had dominated for months, and the largest single loan it has ever made. A large share of the money hasn't been paid back yet.

Dawes may vouch for Insull; but who is vouching for Dawes?

From now on there will be great clamor throughout the country and particularly in Washington, over what is to be done to "keep body and soul together" among the idle millions this winter. We shall hear the words "dole," "insurance," "relief," "work" and all of their synonyms through columns of newspaper space, over hours of radio time and through endless speeches and sermons. There will be plenty of talk—talk without end, most of it to very little point and without much thought.

This winter will probably bring us to the supreme effort to revive prosperity. If it can't be revived by the coming of spring the outlook will not be bright for much of anything.

The coming congress will have within its ranks a great number of money hunters—men who will use Washington as a platform from which to talk for and vote for money in all kinds of ways. Most of these will get the cold and icy stares from the White House and many of their bills will get the veto if they ever get through to enactment.

But there will be a big program of what is called social legislation and out of it there ought to come a great deal of change in the economic picture. Whether benefits will be permanent remains to be seen.

We have yet to find out whether the various forms of insurance—unemployment, sickness and old age—can put enough leverage under the maladjustments to take the wrinkles out permanently.

We don't know yet whether it will provide a new heart or merely lift a face. But we shall find out in due time, for something like that program will be adopted this winter.

There is a great deal of reason to suppose that before there is permanent and proper cure some way will have to be found to actually stop the over-exploitation of the wage-earners of America—and pensions seem to need reinforcements if that job is to be done.

How curious and interesting it is that during this past year, while employment has remained about stationary, the dividends of a great group of corporations have climbed to amazing heights, until a golden stream has poured forth to stockholders.

NRA codes, even where they have produced shorter hours and some raise in total wage payments, have not modified the dividend flow. Indeed, they have done mighty little to increase the wage flow.

Sad as it is to say, there seems to have been more guarantee of dividends in the codes than of wages.

As President Green said not long ago, the codes have done all they can for employment and wages, unless they are changed. As they stand today, the codes have reached the limit of their power to right the wrongs in the economic order.

If there is to be more employment growing out of codes, then the codes will have to be changed.

Since code changes must meet the approval of employers, we can look for no really drastic changes.

Thus the coming winter is destined to bring what really will be a climax in the administration effort to overhaul the old ship and make it seaworthy. Out of all the murk there arises this practical surety: If moderate measures do not work, then extremes will have their way. It is a time to keep informed—a time to know what is going on.

DETROIT BUTCHERS STRIKE

Detroit, Mich.—A strike of members of Meatcutters and Butcher Workmen's Local Union No. 632, here, temporarily closed about 100 shops belonging to members of the Kosher Butchers' association. Later, employers got together and opened about twenty-five shops, manned entirely by owners. Seventy-five shops were closed up tight.

Officials of the union announced they were prepared to "fight to the last ditch," the morale of the men being very good. Only minor adjustments in wages and working conditions were asked.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Telephone Users Consider Quality and Dependability of Service as Paramount

Telephone service is such an intimate, personal service that anything adversely affecting it at once becomes a subject of individual interest to the millions of users. Because this service has such an important part in your every day social and business life, its quality and dependability are matters of serious concern to you. Service inferior to the high standard to which you are accustomed would not be acceptable, even at a lower price.

Recognizing this fact, the Bell System has always so shaped its policy as to insure the best and most dependable service that science and careful, farsighted management could produce, at the lowest possible cost consistent with financial safety.

Due to this constructive policy, the telephone business has never earned speculative profits.

In the best years of the Southern Bell Telephone Company's history, and during a time when other businesses were earning large profits on soaring prices, the cost of telephone service was kept at a level where the return on the investment was never more than 7%. In 1930, when the depression was first felt, these earnings declined rapidly, and in 1933 they shrank to about 4% on the investment.

It is obvious that further reductions of such already inadequate earnings would seriously endanger the financial soundness of the business, and be reflected in the quality and dependability of the service.

BUYING POWER RAISES HELD VITAL TO BUSINESS GAINS

Production Cannot Continue Increase Now Reported Beginning Unless There Is Steady Upturn in Ability of Masses to Buy, American Federation of Labor Warns in Monthly Business Survey.

Washington, Nov. 22.—Production and unemployment cannot go on increasing unless a steady increase in workers' buying power creates a growing market for goods, the American Federation of Labor declares in its monthly survey of business. The survey notes upturns in several lines of production and says that business sentiment has apparently turned toward optimism.

Citing an increase in bank deposits, gains in department store sales, higher buying power of workers and farmers and other favorable factors, the survey says that the business world is in a better position to go ahead than at this time last year.

"In case private initiative is still unable to lift business out of the depression, however," the survey adds, "the president's aides are working on a nation-wide plan to increase production with the help of federal guarantees and put men and women back to work in industry."

"In September, we had 10,951,000 without work in industry. Business has devised no plan to give these men and women their normal jobs in productive work."

Buying Power Lags.

Answering the question, has workers' buying power been rising fast enough to justify a large production increase, the survey says:

"Not yet, but given a period of rising business activity and the proper controls, it should be possible to bring back the balance of consuming power.

"Thus far the rapid increase of prices has canceled all gains in the average worker's income. . . . If there had been no rise in living costs, the total increase in workers' monthly 'real' income would have been $727,000,000, instead of $430,000,000—69 per cent greater.

Output Increase Necessary.

"Part of the recent price increase was due to necessary readjustment in prices which had fallen to very low levels in the deflation (farmers' prices particularly); part was price profiteering, and part arose from efforts of employers to pay the cost of wage increases by raising prices.

"Since much progress has already been made in readjusting prices, the administration is now emphasizing the fact that we must prevent further rises in living costs as well as increase workers' incomes.

"How can this be done? Wage increases can be paid for by increasing production and reducing unit operating costs, instead of increasing prices. One of the chief reasons for high unit costs of manufacture today is the low level of production at which our plants are now running, particularly in the heavy industries, and the large amount of idle plant capacity which must be supported.

Balance Must Be Kept.

"If we are looking forward now to a period of rising production, with vast general increases in industrial income which this implies, we must remember that unless we distribute industrial income where it will buy the products of our mines, farms, factories and service industries, unless we keep a balance between producing and consuming power we shall pave the way for another depression."

SINCLAIR DECLARES FERA HAS ADOPTED EPIC PLAN

Los Angeles.—The federal emergency relief administration has adopted his Epic program completely in formulating a plan for the unemployed to make goods for their own use, Upton Sinclair said here. Sinclair foresaw in the federal plan the possibility of his proposals becoming effective in forty-eight states instead of only in California, as he proposed in his campaign for the governorship.

"It is not only comparable to the Epic plan, it is the Epic plan complete," he said. "The whole Epic plan is simply 'production for use.' That is what the relief administration has worked out in its program as just reported."

RENEWAL OF WAGE AGREEMENTS STRONGLY URGED AS BASIS FOR PROGRESS IN BUILDING INDUSTRY

Construction Planning and Adjustment Board Appeals to Employers and Workers to Re-Establish Foundation for Progress and Good Will by Signing Pay and Hour Pacts.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The National Construction Planning and Adjustment board, the construction industry's bi-partisan board, by unanimous action of employer and employe members, has urged the industry to move toward restoring wage stability by renewing expired wages and hours agreements where they have existed, Board Chairman Sullivan W. Jones announced.

Wage stability has been secured in the past in most large communities through agreements between organized groups of contractors and local and national labor organizations. In competitive bidding, these agreements had the effect, at least, of taking speculation out of the highly important element of labor cost.

Many of these agreements have been allowed to expire. In their absence and pending the establishment of area agreements, provided for under the construction industry code, there is no stable wage base even for the groups of employers and employes who have been responsible for industry leadership and upon whose shoulders has rested the burden of promoting industry cooperation and well-being.

"Uncertainty and discontent, due to the absence of a wage base, are destroying the traditional foundation of stability and good-will upon which the future of the industry must be built," Jones said.

"The planning and adjustment board appeals to the industry to check the irreparable damage being done. The board appeals to those groups of contractors and to those labor organizations who have worked together in the past under agreements, to renew those agreements or negotiate new ones. By so doing, not only will they re-establish stability in the supporting core of the industry, but also will expedite area agreements by furnishing the base from which to move forward."

Labor members of the board are: M. J. McDonough, president, Building Trades department, A. F. of L., Washington, D. C.; John J. Hynes, general president, Sheet Metal Workers' International Association, Washington, D. C.; William L. Hutcheson, president, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Indianapolis, Ind.; M. J. Colleran, president, Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers' International Association, New York City; John Coefield, president, United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steam Fitters, Washington, D. C.; Harry C. Bates, Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union, Washington, D. C.; L. P. Lindelof, president, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, Lafayette, Ind.; D. W. Tracy, president, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Washington, D. C.; P. J. Morrin, president, International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, St. Louis, Mo., and J. V. Moreschi, president, International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' union, Quincy, Mass.

Epic Vote Held Unrest Symptom

George Creel Urges California Democrats to Heed Big Sinclair Vote by Adopting Progressive Program to Rally Liberal Opinion.

San Francisco.—Declaring that Upton Sinclair's "Epic" vote in the recent election is "plainly symptomatic of bitter dissatisfaction with existing conditions, George Creel warned that unless forceful leadership is developed at once "California's unhappy and bewildered thousands will mill again and may stampede."

Creel appealed to the democratic party in California to "take the lead in formulating a progressive program, and thus provide a rallying point for liberal opinions." His appeal was made in a letter to Francis Carr, democratic leader in Redding.

Sinclair, former socialist and author of the "End-Poverty-in-California" campaign, defeated Creel in the primary election and then lost to Frank F. Merriam, republican, in the race for governor. Sinclair polled about 850,000 votes.

"The EPIC vote was plainly symtomatic of bitter dissatisfaction with existing conditions and must be heeded," Creel told Carr in terming the election "a Sinclair defeat and not a Merriam victory."

"EPIC's proposals, whatever else may be thought of them, were concrete," Creel's letter continued.

Set Wage Rates For Oil Field Workers

Washington.—Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, the oil administrator, has ordered establishment of minimum wages for skilled occupation in derrick and rig building occupations in four oil-producing states. For Oklahoma and Kansas the rate was fixed at $1.25 an hour, and $1.50 an hour for crew foremen. For Texas and New Mexico, the skilled rate was fixed at $1.50 an hour, with crew foremen to receive a minimum of $1.75 an hour.

The planning and co-ordination committee of the oil industry had recommended rates 25 cents an hour lower. However, the petroleum labor policy board, after hearings, disapproved this recommendation, and in turn recommended to Oil Administrator Ickes the higher rates, which were approved.

Green Challenges Business to Obey NRA Labor Rules

Employers Must Comply With Law, or Labor Will Continue Skeptical of Co-operation Offer, He Declares.

Washington, Nov. 22.—President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, has challenged business and industrial leaders to pledge compliance with labor provisions of the recovery act in their new program of co-operation with the government in recovery efforts.

Until this is done, Green said, labor cannot be blamed "if it is skeptical as to the real degree of co-operation" which business interests will give to the new deal.

Declaring that the offer of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to co-operate with the government to hasten national recovery represents an "about face" on the part of the organization, as it has heretofore assumed a "critical attitude approximating opposition to the government's national recovery policy," Green went on to say:

"The primary purpose of the national recovery act was to develop a co-partnership relationship between the government, industry and labor. In every step taken in the furtherance of the national recovery program, labor has co-operated to the fullest extent and to the greatest degree. Unfortunately, business interests, as represented by the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers, have refused to recognize the partnership of labor in the national recovery program.

Have Fought Section 7-A.

"These interests have refused to agree to accord labor representation upon code authorities; have opposed the application of Section 7-A of the industrial recovery act, which provides for collective bargaining and which is embodied in every industrial code of fair practice. Business interests, as represented by the United States Chamber of Commerce, have discharged and discriminated against thousands of workers because they exercised their right under Section 7-A to join a labor union.

"In addition, the National Association of Manufacturers publicly declared its refusal to abide by the decisions of the national labor relations board and called upon all members of the association to refuse to comply with the decisions of the national labor relations board providing for majority representation. The steel manufacturers have threatened to institute court proceedings in an effort to prevent the application of the decisions of the national labor relations board.

Chamber Must Obey Law.

"While announcing publicly the purpose of the chamber of commerce to co-operate with the government in the effort to accelerate national recovery, it denounces labor as unreasonable in its attitude and unfair in its demands. Before labor can accept the offer of the chamber of commerce to co-operate with the government in the promotion of economic recovery as sincere and genuine, it must publicly announce its willingness to comply with Section 7-A of the national recovery act as embodied in industrial codes of fair practice, and its willingness to abide by the decisions of duly constituted authorities, set up by act of congress for the purpose of promoting industrial peace, as represented by the national labor relations board, the national steel labor relations board and other boards of a similar character.

"Section 7-A and these boards are a part of the instrumentalities created by act of congress and established by the administration for the purpose of promoting economic recovery and labor and industry co-operation. There can be no co-operation on the part of any group until they are willing to recognize the governmental instrumentalities through which co-operation can be extended.

Industry Is Challenged.

"Labor accepts its full responsibility under the provisions of the national recovery act. It will co-operate fully in code-making processes, will recognize its obligations to the fullest extent, will conform to the requirements of Section 7-A of the national recovery act, and will accept the decisions of the national labor relations board providing for majority representation in collective bargaining processes.

"We challenge the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers to meet this character of co-operation and to publicly announce their willingness to do so.

"Unless the chamber of commerce meets this challenge, we must regard its utterances as the voice of Jacob and the hand of Esau."

URGE EQUALITY FOR WOMEN.

Washington.—Miss Bettie Gram Swing, an outstanding feminist leader, has joined the staff of the inter-American commission of women, which seeks ratification and adherence of the women's equality treaties signed at Montevideo at the last Pan-American conference.

Establish "Division Of Labor Standards"

Washington.—A new division of labor standards has been established as a bureau of the department of labor, according to an announcement by Secretary Perkins.

Verne A. Zimmer has been named as director and Miss Clare M. Beyer as assistant director.

The division is said to be intended to aid "interested parties and organizations to secure improvements in the working and living conditions of wage-earners."

Man—Is your wife fond of listening in?

What Does The Union Do?

Who raises the wages? The union.

Who shortens your hours? The union.

Who protects you from grinding bosses? The union.

Who fights for sanitary workshops? The union.

Who gets behind every piece of legislation? The union.

Who takes the children out of the workshops? The union.

Who demands equal pay for the sexes and who reduces hours for women? The union.

Who continually forces employers to protect workers' lives? The union.

Who has forced the establishment of factory inspection? The union.

Who has started the long list of social advances now being accepted everywhere? The union.

The Unions do things. Every hour of the day they advance inch by inch and step by step. They have beaten down opposition. They have compelled judges, clergymen, economists and educators to revise their views of our cause and movement.

The Union is the best investment a worker can make. They are here to stay and their usefulness will expand only as fast as our non-union fellows join with us.

There is lo limit to what we can do by united action.

Join with us in this great humanizing, educational movement that has proven its worth and stands today the only force between workers and degradation.

No other movement on earth can compare with organized labor in the practical, direct benefits to the toilers.

Let unionists proclaim the faith that is in them, and let them spread the gospel of trades unionism to their unorganized craftsmen.

Grit your teeth and organile, for you will enjoy only those benefits that you take.

SEES BRIGHTER HOPE FOR LABOR LEGISLATION

Aymon Optimistic on Eve Lawmakers' Session.

PROGRAM IN LINE WITH FEDERAL PLANS

Major Projects to Be Placed Before Tennessee Solons at Coming Meet.

Prospects for progress in labor's program for remedial legislation to which the masses are entitled was declared this week to be brighter than for many years, despite the hounding by "special interests," who biennially raise huge funds to prevent interference with "their business."

Paul J. Aymon, well-known local trades unionist, who was elected legislative representative of the Tennessee Federation of Labor at the May convention of that body, submitted a brief outline of the program, and expressed optimism as to the possibilities for success at the coming session of the state lawmakers.

"The new deal program nationally has made people conscious of the fact that changes are needed in our laws," Mr. Aymon said, "and the activities of reactionaries who would block all progress, particularly along the lines of social legislation, are handicapped by a nation-wide spirit which calls for justice for the masses and condemns selfishness of the few. Although social legislation has been retarded in past years principally by our brethren from the rural districts, the progressive wave has spread into all corners of the state and the nation, and opponents of progress are scheduled to be taken for a ride' in the matter of legislation protecting the helpless and assuring safe and sanitary working conditions for those who toil in the mill, mine, workshop and factory.

"Our program this year embodies all features proposed by the United States labor department. At the Memphis meeting in May report of the Federation's delegate to a conference in Washington called by the secretary of labor and attended by representatives from forty-three states was adopted in full. This report included the program of the federal department for uniform social and labor legislation, and was in many respects identical with the proposals which we have offered before the Tennessee legislature in the past."

The program as outlined by Mr. Aymon will be supplemented by proposals offered by various craft organizations covering matters of interest particularly to their trades. Such proposals, locally, will be handled first by the legislative committee of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, which will in turn take them up with Mr. Aymon and the local delegation. The state program is as follows:

National Program.

1. State adoption of NIRA.
2. Legislation limiting injunctions in labor disputes.
3. State old age pensions.
4. Unemployment insurance.
5. Minimum wage law.
6. Child labor amendment to federal constitution of the United States.
7. TVA enabling act.
8. Providing better housing facilities.

State labor laws as follows should be strengthened:

Workmen's compensation and factory inspection law.

Hours of women and minors.

Abolition of industrial home work.

Favoring increases in appropriation bill to increase state employes.

New Bills That Should Be Enacted.

Exemption in garnishment law raised from $40.00 to $75.00 per month.

Law taxing property that is owned by religious and educational institutions that is placed in competition with privately owned property.

Opposing all laws that have for their purpose sales and consumers' tax.

Amend small loan law.

Abolition of convict-made goods

President Pleads For Approval Child Labor Amendment

Mr. Roosevelt Asks State Legislatures to Ratify N. R. A. Principle.

Child labor, temporarily outlawed by the NRA, should be prohibited permanently through a constitutional amendment, President Roosevelt wrote to Courtenay Dinwiddie, general secretary of the national child labor committee. The letter said:

One of the accomplishments under the national recovery act which has given me the greatest gratification is the outlawing of child labor. It shows how simply a long desired reform which no individual or state could accomplish alone, may be brought about when people work together. It is my desire that the advances attained through the NRA be made permanent. In the child labor field the obvious method of maintaining the present gains is through ratification of the child labor amendment. I hope this may be achieved.

Twenty states have ratified the amendment and sixteen more are needed to give it the required three-fourths approval. Mr. Dinwiddie expressed the opinion that the president's letter would strongly influence state legislatures toward ratification this winter.

The question of ratification will come before the Tennessee legislature at the approaching session, and the position taken by the lawmakers individually will be a matter of great interest to all progressive citizens of this state. Opponents of the president's recovery program, however, as well as those reactionary by nature, may be expected to broadcast their usual propaganda, and the outcome of the Tennessee vote is problematical.

"The president has been insistent that the child labor gains of the NRA be preserved," a letter from Mr. Dinwiddie to The Labor World this week points out, "but this is the first time he has pointed to the method for achieving this."

Green Urges Anti-Injunction Legislation

State Action Asked to Supplement Norris - LaGuardia Act.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, has issued an appeal to all officers and members of state federations of labor for special efforts during the winter months in connection with anti-injunction legislation.

The letter, received by The Labor World this week, is as follows:

To the Officers and Members of State Federations of Labor:

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

I am writing to urge that you make special efforts, during the coming winter, to secure the enactment of state labor anti-injunction legislation. The Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act, passed by the congress of the United States, should be supplemented immediately through the enactment of similar legislation in the different states. In my opinion the time is opportune. The recent election should be interpreted as evidence of a developing liberal sentiment in favor of the enactment of remedial legislation of this kind as well as of social justice legislation. There ought to be a favorable response to the proposal of state federations of labor that state anti-injunction labor legislation be enacted into law this coming winter.

The committee on labor injunctions, of which Dr. Alexander Fleisher, Room 1002, 100 Fifth avenue, New York City, is secretary, is specializing in the preparation and enactment into law of state labor anti-injunction legislation approved and sponsored by the American Federation of Labor. This committee will render assistance at hearings before legislative committees and at meetings of the members of state legislatures. This committee is co-operating with the American Federation of Labor in the enactment of state labor anti-injunction laws. I commend them to you as worthy of your confidence and as experts available and equipped to render expert service.

WM. GREEN,
President, American Federation of Labor.

"Company" and Independent Unions Compared by A. F. of L.

The American Federation of Labor has issued a nine-point comparison between "company unions," organized and promoted under auspices of mill managements, and independent unions organized by workers themselves for collective dealing with employes. The nine-point comparison says:

THE COMPANY UNION	THE A. F. OF L. UNION
1. Is formed by the company to prevent organization in a real union.	1. Is formed by the employes themselves to secure better working conditions.
2. Is favored by employers because they know there is nothing to fear from such unions.	2. Is opposed by employers because they know that such unions will secure better working conditions for their workers.
3. Can be destroyed by the employer at any time, since he runs it.	3. Can never be destroyed so long as it is actively supported by all union members.
4. Is paid for by the employer and controlled by the employer.	4. Is paid for by the union members and controlled by the union members.
5. Charges no dues and makes no contribution to general improvement in working conditions.	5. Charges dues which help directly to build nation-wide organization and to bring about labor laws to protect workers.
6. Does not secure higher wages or better working conditions.	6. Does secure higher wages and better working conditions, as is clearly shown by the history of the American Federation of Labor.
7. Is not a true agency for collective bargaining since employe representatives under company union plans are required to follow the instructions of the management.	7. Is a true collective bargaining agency which negotiates with the management as directed by the union members upon questions of wages, hours and working conditions.
8. Is not able to bargain in the true sense of Section 7 (a), because when the company bargains with the company union it does not bargain with the workers but with itself.	8. Is chosen by the workers under section 7(a) to represent them in collective bargaining.
9. Is limited to one shop, plant, or establishment, while employers themselves are so organized on a nation-wide basis in trade associations that individual groups of employes are powerless.	9. Is affiliated with and supported by the American Federation of Labor, which is a nation-wide organization, giving protection to all workers against organized employers.

Mayors Advocate Huge New Program Of Public Works

Ask for Large Undertaking, With Payment of Prevailing Wage Scales.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—The United States conference of mayors, in session here, encouraged by an intimation from Administrator Hopkins, of the federal emergency relief administration, that "direct relief as such" may be abandoned soon, urged congress to establish a giant public works program.

The mayors directed to President Roosevelt and congress a resolution calling for a "large-scale undertaking of public works" and the slashing of red tape to facilitate borrowing for unemployment relief projects.

The plan, embodying a proposal of Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, for virtual abolition of interest rates of municipal public works borrowings under a new government agency, definitely divided the responsibility of relief into two classifications:

1. Relief of the unemployed "under an established system of public works supervised by the federal government."
2. Responsibility for relief of "unemployables" by cities and states.

The mayors' resolution asked that prevailing wage rates be provided in the new public works set-up and lent support to the proposal for unemployment insurance.

Another resolution of the conference asked that the national resources board organize a survey of city problems in the "same manner that great relief has been given agriculture."

Robert Cuthbert Visits "Folks"

Robert Cuthbert, of Nashville, sire of T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Central Body, with his daughter, Miss Catherine Cuthbert, came over Thursday to be with the family of T. R. for Thanksgiving. The visitors will spend Friday and Saturday seeing the sights of a big city.

Mr. Cuthbert Senior has been for many years an active worker in the Nashville Central Body, and has many friends throughout the state.

Mine Workers Give Deserved Promotion To Ben Williams

Popular Coal Digger Transferred After Long Service to District 19.

BEN WILLIAMS

Ben Williams, representative of the United Mine Workers of America, who has for the greater part of the past ten years been assigned to District 19, comprising the territory in Eastern Kentucky and Tennessee, passed through Chattanooga last week on his way to Kansas City, Mo., where he will make his headquarters as director of the miners' activities in that state.

Mr. Williams' transfer to the Missouri territory (District 25) comes as a deserved promotion, and his many friends in the Chattanooga territory, while regretting the fact he will leave this district, will be glad to learn that his splendid work here has been recognized by the national officers.

During his years of service here Mr. Williams earned the respect and confidence of employer and employe alike, and The Labor World predicts and wishes for him a most successful career in his new field.

AKRON RUBBER WORKERS EXTENDING ORGANIZATION

Akron, O.—Following a "special dispensation" granted by the American Federation of Labor, through President William Green, the three major Rubber Workers' unions here started a membership drive to last sixty days, which is expected to extend the influence and power of regular labor unions in this important industry to an even greater extent than the remarkable campaign of last year.

Although "company unions" have been clearly fostered, Coleman C. Claherty, of the Rubber Workers, is confident of favorable results. The national labor relations board has been requested to order and to supervise a representation election among local Firestone and Goodrich employes.

Neighbor Cities Back Chattanooga For A. F. L. Meet

Nashville, Memphis and Huntsville Approve Convention for This City.

Memphis, Nashville, and Huntsville, Alabama, are the first neighboring cities to report formal action in approving the claims of Chattanooga for the 1935 convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The San Francisco meeting of the A. F. of L. left in the hands of the executive council the choice of the next convention city, and Chattanooga trades unionists immediately began a campaign to convince the labor officials that this city is the logical spot for the meeting.

It is believed that the council approves holding the next meeting in the south, and the Chattanooga boosters believe this city is the logical point, having every advantage over the contestants for the honor of entertaining the hosts of American labor.

Memphis reports that the Central Body of that city has taken the matter up, and Secretary Barnum has written President William Green urging that Chattanooga be selected.

Nashville Trades and Labor council has taken similar action.

From Huntsville, Ala., comes the following comment of A. E. Courtenay, secretary of the Central Body there:

"It has been a long time since the A. F. of L. has held its convention in the south. We therefore join Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in their request that the meeting be held there."

Other cities in this community are expected to act in support of the local workers, and it is believed the labor officials will seriously consider the advantages of this city for the 1935 gathering.

Says Congress Will Pass Job Insurance Legislation

Washington, Nov. 27.—Legislation establishing some form of unemployment insurance will be passed by the Seventy-fourth congress, Representative James M. Mead predicted.

Mead said unemployment insurance was the one big problem which stands out above all others in the matter of social reform.

"A federal law giving the states supervision and permitting the establishment of a reserve fund seems popular with members of the house," Mead continued. "We have all learned the lesson of preparedness from this depression. The fund should be established and built up in times of plenty to care for unemployed when hard times come to plague this nation."

Chancellor Takes Theater Dispute Under Advisement

Effort of Rialto and State to Prevent Picketing Not Yet Successful.

Efforts of the management of Rialto and State moving picture houses to prevent picketing of these houses by poster artists and other members of Local 226, Painters, Decorators and Signwriters, has not as yet been successful, Chancellor Foust having taken the application for an injunction under advisement following a hearing on the matter Tuesday of this week.

The theater management alleged, among other things, that it had merely decided the sign shops in these houses were not needed when artists employed there joined the union, and therefore the shops were closed. It was further claimed, it is said, that the organized labor movement is not in sympathy with the artists in their efforts to secure increased wages and shorter hours.

In reply to this charge, Secretary C. F. Weidner exhibited a letter from Secretary T. R. Cuthbert, of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, containing the following: "The labor movement is in sympathy with your local, and in accord with your attempt to prevent discrimination against the poster artists who have been trying to better their condition. We hope that a successful conclusion of this controversy will be attained by your local union, and we assure you that any cooperation that can be given you will be gladly forthcoming."

Application for the injunction is said to have followed issuance of a circular by the union, which said, among other things:

"Can you read?

"A committee of union officials called on Mr. Rogers (local manager), and this is his statement, to which we have sworn witnesses:

"'We don't need signs at the Rialto and State theaters like we do at the Tivoli. The class of people that go to the Rialto and State theaters do not appreciate art and do not read signs.'"

At press time pickets were still patrolling the sidewalks in the vicinity of the two movie houses.

It was not known when the opinion of the chancellor might be expected.

Andrews Company Establishes New Local Industry

Manufacture of Toys, Games Promising Department for Chattanooga Concern.

Manufacture of toys, games and amusements for children, recently instituted as a feature by the O. B. Andrews company, one of Chattanooga's largest industries, bids fair to become a leader among concerns of this kind in the United States. The department, although opened for business but a short time ago, now receives orders from all parts of the United States, a representative of the company told The Labor World, and the large variety of "numbers" on display at the plant has been visited by hundreds of youngsters and their parents.

Part of the plant on Rossville avenue has been set aside as a new showroom, where an effective and fascinating display of all those amusements so dear to the heart of childhood, as well as numberless new and distinctive recreational toys, are shown. They vary in size from the smallest game to an entrancing log-cabin built for a children's playhouse, which will accommodate several youngsters at a time. This display room, attractively arranged, is a veritable fairyland for the children.

Local citizens are here offered the double opportunity of patronizing a progressive local concern, and of securing the newest and finest of Santa Claus' stock at economical prices.

ACCORD SEEN AS REQUISITE TO TEACHING

Exploitation by Officials Injures System.

FAIR DEALING BEST AS RESULT-GETTER

Fifty Dollars Per Month No Incentive for Putting Forth Best Efforts.

Below is the fourth in a series of articles written for The Labor World by a representative of the Chattanooga and Hamilton County Federation of Teachers. This paper, having heretofore expressed the hope that our readers will study with profit these interesting and enlightening sidelights on the problem of the local teacher, reiterates that desire, and recommends the whole series be preserved for future reference.

"It is not fine buildings, elaborate curricula, or expensive equipment that makes good schools, important though these are. It is rather the fine quality of a child's experiences under the sympathetic and intelligent direction of an inspiring teacher."

So writes a professor of education who should know what he is talking about; and to quote further:

"Teaching has long since moved out of the days when the three R's were the only consideration. In fact, the chief function of the schools beyond the fourth grade is to develop a child's solution of problems now confronting American citizens. Consequently, the emotional, artistic, scientific and cultural aims of education have placed a task at the feet of the schools which only highly trained teachers may handle. Good intentions and meager training are not sufficient."

The people of this community should know from human experience, if from no other way, that anything worth while is worth paying for; and also the converse, so to speak, that one gets what he pays for and nothing else. One cannot get something for nothing. If good teachers are necessary, as thinkers everywhere are saying; if schools are to equip the future generation to meet the difficult situations confronting the world, then communities must provide adequate salaries.

The boast that a certain superintendent of another southern city makes—that he can get all the teachers with master's degree that he wants for $50 a month—is still unconvincing.

It is only where there is a feeling of justice, sincerity and accord between teachers and officials that a school system can be sure that it is getting the best possible results from its teachers.

Exploitation awakens no keen desire in any breast to give of one's greatest ability in any enterprise, and it is only exploitation to ask those who have spent years in preparation to work for the wages of unskilled laborers.

May the citizens of this community honor and respect its teachers. May they pay teachers salaries commensurate with a teacher's standard of living and which will provide for further study. In return let the citizens demand of the teachers training and efficiency, but let this city cease demanding or expecting something for nothing.

Rayon is now being produced experimentally from slash pine at the Georgia state engineering experiment station at Georgia Tech. Research workers are studying the possibilities of its commercial production, which would be of great value to farmers who have land with suitable pine. LABOR QUERIES

Q.—How many states have ratified the child labor amendment? How many more ratifications are required to make the amendment part of the constitution?

A.—Twenty have ratified. Sixteen more ratifications are necessary.

Q.—What is the first historical mention of the use of protective devices for the lungs of workers in dusty occupations?

A.—Plainly the Elder, Roman author, is perhaps the first to make such mention. He wrote: "Those employed in the works preparing vermillion cover their faces with a bladder skin, that they may not inhale the pernicious powder, yet they can see through the skin."

Kept Taking Cardui Until She Got Rid of the Severe Pains

When Mrs. Ida Hege, of Edinburg, Ind., was in a painful, rundown condition, she took Cardui, with the results she describes below: "I had just been what one might say dragging around, feeling miserable and all out of sorts. I remembered how Cardui helped my aunt. I sent for six bottles of Cardui and when I had taken them, I was much better and stronger. I did not suffer so much pain. I continued taking Cardui until I had taken nine bottles. I do not have the severe pains." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Let's Be "Union Label Conscious"

The one emblem that most truly represents the fruit of ceaseless toil and all effort for the betterment of mankind, from alpha to omega, from the days of serfdom to the present advanced state of wage earners, as represented by the American Federation of Labor, is the Union Label.

The Union Label, Shop Card or Button, of each respective craft, affords the only positive assurance that the goods purchased were (1) made by capable workers fairly compensated for their work, (2) not made by child labor and (3) not produced by "sweatshop" methods.

When you demand union-made goods and union services, you (1) help yourself, (2) help your fellow-man and (3) help the advancement of civilization to higher standards and accomplishment.

These simple truths must be plain to all who toil; their origin a part of the struggle of all wage-earners and their worth apparent. Absolutely nothing has happened to detract from the meaning or the value of the Union Label.

Let us, therefore, become more "Union Label conscious;" let us support, individually and collectively, with whatever buying power we may possess, Union-Made goods and Union services; let's support "our own."

Won't you become now and remain always a consistent supporter of this great emblem of progress? Won't you urge upon your family and upon your friends, the advisability of always demanding the Union Label? Won't you help make America "Union Label conscious," for your own sake, for humanity's sake?

The Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, with the earnest co-operation of local organizations throughout the country, is conducting a well-defined and greatly needed campaign in behalf of Union-Made goods and Union services. Won't you join in the spirit of the occasion and aid in practical results by helping to make all people "Union Label conscious?"

Whatever the need in a commodity, there is a Union-Made product; whatever the need for service, there is a Union service.

Poverty, Not Improvidence

Speaking in favor of old age pensions to the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce the other day, P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., laid the need of such pensions to the frailties of human nature.

"There are an abundance of well established insurance companies," said Mr. Litchfield, "which will assist almost anyone in providing against the wants of declining years. As a matter of theory, every induvidual should accumulate a fund for his old age. But theory runs into fact . . . there is a large percentage of the public which is given to procrastination when it comes to setting up reserves to meet the inevitable."

Someone should tell Mr. Litchfield that it makes little difference whether the public is improvident or not. A decided majority of the public has no chance to provide for its declining years. Wages of enormous bodies of workers are too low to leave any margin against the future; and there are still ten millions of persons who would like to be workers who have no wages at all.

Mr. Litchfield has progressed beyond some of his clan, else he would not favor old age pensions on any account. But the real argument for these pensions is not the "improvidence" of the workers; but their low pay—and the frequency and duration of the periods in which they have no pay.

High Cost of Relief for Charles G. Dawes

When people complain of the high cost of relief—and it is high—ask them about the high cost of relieving Charles G. Dawes.

The federal government put up $90,000,000 to relieve Mr. Dawes and his bank in Chicago. The federal government, from May 23, 1933, to October 31, 1934, put up $85,238,448 for general relief purposes in the whole state of Illinois.

The circumstances of the Dawes loan are peculiar. Mr. Dawes was the first chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. He explained that he could not hold this position permanently, but that he would give the RFC a start, and then go back to his bank. The country, in inspired statements, was asked to congratulate itself on having such a public servant.

Mr. Dawes stayed until he got the RFC started on the road which he wanted it to go. Then he resigned, and went back to his bank. Then, in fact almost immediately, he returned to the RFC and secured a loan of $90,000,000 for his own embarrassed bank. He walked out as a private citizen, and came back as the biggest single borrower from the institution which he had "started."

Actually, while Dawes got a loan of $90,000,000, with great magnanimity and forbearance, he only drew out $80,000,000 of it in cash. Also, while it was called a loan, $60,000,000 of it hasn't been paid. And RFC, under present management, is suing in the federal courts for an instalment.

Relief for Dawes, $80,000,000 advanced, $90,000,000 pledged.

Relief for all the rest of Illinois for 16 months, $85,238,448.

Speaking about high costs . . .

Increased Purchasing Power of Labor

Congress declared that one of the underlying purposes of the National Industrial Recovery Act was to aid in lifting us out of the depression by increasing the wages of working men and women, and thus increase the purchasing power of the masses. There is a tendency in anti-labor quarters to insist that higher wages alone will accomplish this purpose. This is only true provided the cost of living remains static.

The workers' cost of living is made up of the commodities and services which business and professional men own and sell for a profit. These commodities and services run all the way from salt, sugar and flour to rent, doctors' and dentists' bills, electricity and transportation.

It is apparent that increased money wages do not increase the workers' purchasing power if those who own these essential commodities raise the prices of them sufficiently to chisel away the advantages of higher pay. Under such conditions larger wages do not raise the living standards of those who have jobs, nor provide work for any of our unemployed millions. Because of these negations, higher wages when accompanied by proportional price boosts contribute nothing toward ending the depression and bringing about recovery.

Inasmuch as our unemployed army remains static at between ten and eleven millions, it is more than ever clear that the only remedy for the depression, the only measure which will appreciably stimulate recovery, is a tremendous increase in the real purchasing power of the masses expressed in tremendously larger amounts of commodities and services which wages will buy.

This is why the American Federation of Labor's unemployment relief plan calls for the shorter work week, without decrease in the weekly earnings for those whose hours of labor are thus reduced, full-time employment for the millions of idle at the same weekly earnings, and increases in weekly earnings much in excess of the price boosts put over by those who own and control our manufacturing and retail industries and the service industries.

To sum up, the American Federation of Labor persistently reiterates that the large commodity price increases visioned by President Roosevelt and his advisers as elemental for recovery will be relatively valueless for this purpose unless the real wages of our millions of workers—wages expressed in purchasing power—are increased more rapidly than prices are raised.

The necessity of continually higher wages to cope and more than cope with higher living costs is one of the major reasons why the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated unions stress the importance of all workers enrolling in bona fide unions. Acting individually or in small groups, the workers are unable to protect themselves against price advances. The stronger the unions are, the more effective they will be as labor's protector against the economic servitude which many business leaders seem determined to apply to our industrial order.

The Right to Work

By Edwin Markham

Author of "The Man With the Hoe," "Lincoln, the Man of the People," Etc.

Out on the roads they have gathered, a hundred thousand men,
To ask for a hold on life as sure as the wolf's hold in his den.
Their need lies close to the quick of life as the earth lies close to the stone;
It is as meat to the slender rib, as marrow to the bone.

They ask but the leave to labor, for a taste of life's delight,
For a little sale to savor their bread, for houses watertight.
They ask but the right to labor, and to live by the strength of their hands,
They who have bodies like knotted oaks and patience like the sea sands.

And the right of a man to labor, and his right to labor in joy,
Not all your laws can strangle that right nor the gates of Hell destroy;
For it came with the making of man and kneaded into his bones,
And it will stand at the last of things on the dust of crumbled thrones.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

It is almost possible to see the glycerine tears in the eyes of the dear old United States Chamber of Commerce as it walks up to the White House doors, hat in hand, to offer its co-operation. And, likewise, the National Association of Manufacturers.

How kind and gentle these dear old folks seem to be all at once.

Ah yes, what big eyes you have, grandma! You old scalawag.

Now to get right down to brass tacks, either the United States Chamber of Commerce has no intention of co-operating with the new deal, or else it has reason to believe the new deal has lost its punch and isn't any longer dangerous to vested interests. You can read the stars and take your choice.

There are some who hold the new deal has lost its punch, but there also is plenty of evidence that it hasn't.

Those who are close enough to the president to walk in and talk things over as members of the family say that the president's speech to the social workers didn't mean what the papers say it meant and that he hasn't restricted the social legislation program at all.

Well, it won't take long to find out what's what and for those who doubt, there is the lesson to utility magnates given by the president on his trip to the Tennessee valley.

In all the debate and doubting, there need be no debate and no doubt about the United States Chamber of Commerce. It probably has decided that it had better do something that looks like co-operating, but it hasn't changed its beliefs, nor is it likely to do so right away. It's pretty surely the same old crowd.

Meanwhile, Christmas comes on rapidly and there are going to be plenty of fat stockings among the Wall streeters. That won't help the ten millions of unemployed, but what does Wall Street care about that?

The dividend business has been getting much better and there have been a number of records broken. This makes Wall Streeters happy and helps to indicate that there probably is a grin behind the chamber of commerce gesture toward the White House.

There are those who suspect that perhaps the chamber's gesture is in fulfillment of the ancient maxim which says, "If you can't beat 'em, jine 'em." The theory is that if you jine 'em and get on the inside you can still work some damage, which is another way of saying sabotage.

No doubt there will be a guard up against that.

Meanwhile, big business is making no enviable record for itself. It had made no progress toward ending unemployment and it has no decent suggestion to offer. It plods along as it always did, taking the profits when they come, making silly excuses when they don't come, doing nothing to indicate that it knows any economics or has any broad national policy.

Christmas keeps coming along and there will be plenty of fat stockings among those who get dividends.

But it will not be a good idea to forget about those ten million who are unemployed and for whom there are no jobs.

Plans that may produce jobs at some vague and distant time will hardly serve to change their present frame of mind or meet their present needs.

They aren't on a yachting cruise, where time of arrival makes no difference. And they aren't chambers of commerce which can dally with public issues and lead public officials up blind alleys. They are up against the real thing, now, today, this hour.

FARMERS DOWN AGAIN.

Washington.—Lo, the poor farmer! He's getting his bumps along with wage-earners. According to the U. S. department of agriculture, latest figures available from the bureau of agriculture economics show a decline of 3 points in the farm price index, along with a decline of 3 points in purchasing power. Based on 100 for the five-year period, 1909-1914, the present farmers' purchasing power figure is only 79.

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

NRA ASKED TO BAR AT ONCE BLUE EAGLE ON PRISON GOODS

Cotton Garment Authority Declares It Will Quit Unless Competition of Convict-Made Products Is Stopped.

New York, Nov. 27.—The cotton garment code authority has asked the NRA to withdraw immediately from prison authorities the right to use the Blue Eagle label on convict-made products and has notified President Roosevelt that if such action is not taken, it would "feel itself forced to relinquish the solemn responsibility placed upon it for the enforcement of the code."

R. B. Paddock, executive director of the code, wrote the president, enclosing a resolution passed at a recent code authority meeting on motion of Thomas A. Rickert, president of the United Garment Workers of America and vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, who is a member of the code authority.

"Unless some immediate, definite and vigorous action be taken by NRA, through executive order or otherwise, to stem the increasing tide of competition from products made by convicts, the effectuation of the code of fair competition for this industry will be impossible," the resolution said.

It is charged that the prison compact authority, instead of aiding in the elimination of unfair competition between prison products and the cotton garment industry, "has improperly assumed its function to be the protection of prison interests, which assumption is in direct conflict with the purpose and theory of the emergency prison compact set up under the act."

The use of the Blue Eagle on products made by convicts was declared "a desecration of the Blue Eagle itself, a misuse of that insignia deceiving to the consuming public and calculated to encourage rather than stop the sale of prison products."

The resolution asserted that the authority to use the Blue Eagle on certain prison products was "granted without the knowledge or consent of this industry or labor," and that it should be immediately withdrawn.

The resolution further said that "the result of these and other circumstances, despite the best efforts of this industry, has been to permit and to encourage the sale of goods made by convicts in unfair competition with the products of this industry made under the code and in compliance with the wage and hours provisions set up by the national industrial recovery administration.

FEDERAL INVESTIGATION OF A. T. & T. IS ORDERED

Washington, Nov. 22.—An investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, together with associated Bell companies and all subsidiaries, has been ordered by the federal communications commission.

Such an investigation was demanded by the American Federation of Labor at its Washington convention in 1933. A resolution asking an investigation, introduced by delegates from the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, was approved by unanimous vote.

Public hearings will begin "some time after Jan. 1, 1935," the commission said.

The investigation will go into the entire corporate history and financial structure of the A. T. & T. company. Examination also will include equipment manufacturing subsidiaries and all related companies affecting the communications industry.

"The examination will include the financial arrangements between the American Telephone and Telegraph company and its subsidiaries, and the agreements, financial and otherwise, of the various subsidiaries with each other," the commission's order said.

License and service contracts between the parent American Telephone and Telegraph company and the various associated Bell companies also will be the subject of a general inquiry, as will contracts between the parent company and the Western Electric company.

The commission said the initial investigation will include only the American Telephone and Telegraph company and its associated or related companies or organizations.

The hearings will be adjourned on completion of testimony by witnesses for the telephone company, and at some later date witnesses will be heard from the independent telephone companies falling under the jurisdiction of the communications act.

"This inquiry will be directed at the financial structures, services, agreements and contracts of the independent telephone companies engaged in interstate commerce," the commission said.

Union President Holds Shoe Code Cuts Workers' Pay

Mara Tells NRA Labor Advisory Board Manufacturers Now Get the Dough, While Toilers Get the Dole.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Shoe workers are worse off under the shoe manufacturing code than they were prior to its adoption, John J. Mara, president of the Boot and Shoe Worbers' union, declared in advocating reopening of the code before the NRA labor advisory board.

Sidney Hillman, member of the board and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, backed up Mara's charge and characterized the code as "an unconscionable one."

Mara assailed the shoe code in strong terms and caused a sensation by asserting that under the code, "the manufacturers get the dough and the workers get the dole."

Asks Code Changes.

President Mara implored the labor advisory board, if it wishes the shoe workers to have any further respect for the NRA, to force the reopening of the code and the insertion therein of maximum weekly hours to average not more than thirty-three per week and minimum wages of not less than $18 per week for unskilled workers, $30 for semi-skilled workers and not less than $40 for skilled workers. He urged the absolute deletion of the present unfair advantage given to manufacturers who are located or who locate in small towns and who, under the code, pay wages of 5 cents an hour less than is paid in larger communities.

STEEL COMPANY HEARING.

Washington.—Hearing of the labor case against the Jones & Laughlin Steel company, postponed because attorneys were engaged in fighting the government's case against the Weirton Steel company, in Wilmington, was resumed here Friday, Nov. 16, before the National Steel Labor Relations board.

Jones and Laughlin are charged with interfering with organization of employees and with evasion of employes' collective bargaining rights.

Smedley Butler Assails War As "Biggest Racket"

Former U. S. Marine Head Flays Arms Profiteers and Urges That Those Who Are to Die Decide War Declarations.

New York City, Nov. 27.—Bitter denunciation of war, which he called the "greatest international racket" and the "greatest money-making scheme for insiders," featured an address by Maj.-Gen. Smedley D. Butler, former commander of the United States marines, at the Congregation B'nai Jeshurun here.

"The churches pepped up the boys in 1917," Butler declared. "The next time the people who believe in God cannot preach to the soldiers that war is a Holy Crusade. It's not. It's the greatest curse of the civilized world, the greatest international racket."

"For thirty-three years and four months I was an active agent in the greatest debt-collecting agency in the world, the U. S. marine corps," he continued.

Cites Huge War Wastes.

"In France I couldn't find one American soldier out of 1,650,000 who knew what we were fighting for. Do you want to know why? Not to end war or make the world safe for democracy. We went to war because the allies owed us more money than the Germans.

"The war never brought this country anything. A few insiders made the profits. The International Nickel company earned 1,800 per cent profit.

"The government bought $20,000,000 worth of mosquito nets. And there wasn't a mosquito in France.

"Thirty-five million pairs of shoes, for only 4,000,000 men when every pair of shoes would last a year.

"One billion dollars worth of airplanes that wouldn't get off the ground."

Arms Parleys "Bunk."

"Arms conferences are a lot of bunk. A lot of admirals and generals sit around and talk. What difference does it make if any decide to scrap 8-inch guns and use 6-inch guns? There's only one way to disarm. That's disarm."

Urging that none "should shoulder a rifle outside the United States," the general gave his idea of the best means of keeping the country out of war, saying:

"Amend the constitution and change the method of declaring war. Take the power away from congress. Let only those who are going to do the dying do the voting. The story would be different. I beg of you not to espouse a cause of any kind that might force us to war outside the United States. Let's be sure our homes are in danger before we fight.

"It's up to us. It takes courage. You may be ostracized. But that's nothing. Nobody speaks to me now."

LABOR BOARD "CRACKS DOWN" ON TWO RUNAWAY EMPLOYERS

Brooklyn Corporations Ordered to Take Back Workers in Ruling Which Holds Bosses Operating Under Union Contracts Cannot Break Them by Fleeing to Another City.

New York City, Nov. 2.—The regional labor board for New York, New Jersey and connecticut has ruled that employers operating under collective bargaining agreements who move to other cities to escape obligations under the agreements are guilty of violation of Section 7-A of the recovery act.

The board ordered two Brooklyn "runaway" employers to take with them workers who wish to go to the new location and to negotiate with them collectively.

Mrs. Elinore M. Herrick, director of the labor board, announced the ruling in the case of the Globe-Gabbe corporation and the Shuster-Gaio corporation, both of which are under the fur dressers and dyeing code. She said that failure of the concerns to comply with the board's order would result in their being cited before the national labor relations board for "appropriate action."

The Globe-Gabbe corporation, Mrs. Herrick charged, operated under a collective agreement to which thirty-eight firms in the fur dressing and dyeing industry were parties and under which the Floor Fur Workers' union, Local 3, and the Fur Dressers' union, Local 2, took a "very substantial cut in wages." The corporation refused to be bound by the agreement and moved its plant in June to South Norwalk, Conn. The union offered to move the Brooklyn workers to South Norwalk, but the management announced it didn't want them and was going to take the men it pleased.

Further investigation, Mrs. Herrick said, revealed that the concern intended to eliminate a number of workers, to reduce the payroll and to do away with the union.

Section 7-A Violated.

"The firm, by its refusal to employ its Brooklyn workers in South Norwalk subsequent to the demand of these workers that they continue to bargain through the union representatives, has in effect made non-membership in the union a condition of employment, thereby violating Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act," the regional board ruled.

"The board takes the position that termination of an agreement as to wages, hours and other conditions of work does not terminate the employment of individuals working under such agreement."

The ruling in the case of the Suhster-Gaio corporation, presenting a similar set of facts, was along the same lines. This firm moved its plant to Farmingdale, L. I., depriving seventy-three workers of employment.

Canadian Inquiry Brings Increases In Chain Stores' Miserable Wages

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—While the heiress to the Woolworth millions, Barbara Hutton, was giving a $9,750 champagne party to her prince in Paris, a royal commission was investigating working conditions in the 5 and 10 cent stores in Canada.

The Woolworth head office, "surprised to find low wage cases," has made a "substantial raise" in wages paid in stores in Canada since the present investigation began. But even with the "substantial raise" many salesgirls get $5 to $6.50 per week, varying from 46 to 56½ hours. Salesgirls' weekly averages range from $8.17 in New Brunswick to $12.86 in British Columbia.

Since 1929 Woolworth stores in Canada have paid the parent company in New York net profits of $11,193.062, after generous contributions to salaries of New York executives.

Amazement was expressed when an auditor reported that 75 per cent of the female employes of the metropolitan sotres averaged only $4.30 per week. They worked part time, averaging 24 hours a week. Of this part-time system, the auditor said:

"By this system these stores are able to reduce costs of operation tremendously, but it does a great injustice to the employes. To hold their chance of a few hours' work these people have to be ready for a call at any time, and are thus precluded from taking another job."

Of the metropolitan employes on full time, about one-third received from $6 to $10 per week.

In the S. S. Kresge company's stores, hours of work range from 44 to 75 a week, the auditor said. Earnings of female employes range from $5.50 to $15 a week, with an average of $10.75. Girls on part time are paid 15 to 19 cents an hour.

Dominion Stores, Ltd., with 513 branches, has also raised wages of some employes since the inquiry opened. In Ontario, its women grocery clerks receive higher wages and work less hours than male clerks, an effect of enforcement of the minimum wage for women. In Toronto, 194 men grocery clerks received an average of $10.69 for a week of 61 hours, while 110 women grocery clerks received an average of $10.75 for a week of 48 hours.

Chain stores in Canada have suffered relatively little damage from the depression, said Auditor F. P. Higgins. Six of the large chain organizations made greater gross and net profits and paid higher dividends in 1933 than in 1929. This financial betterment was achieved in the face of a slight decrease in sales. The growth of the chains has been rapid, the majority having begun operations in Canada since 1926.

The Dominion Stores, Ltd., founded in 1919 with an investment of $20,000, has expanded till its capital last year was reported at $4,195,000. In ten years its net profits amounted to $4,195,825. It has undivided profits of $1,077,276 counted in its capital. Its net profits have ranged from 23.9 to 8.08 per cent on its capital. Approximately 78 per cent of the stock of the Dominion Stores is held in the United States.

How the Kresge company stores have made hay out of the depression is shown as follows:

Percentage of Gross Profits	To Costs	To Sales
1929	46.3 %	31.64%
1931	51.16%	33.84%
1932	50.04%	33.35%
1933	57.15%	36.37%

Another chain system had net earnings last year equivalent to 23.7 per cent on its capital, as compared with 18.9 per cent in 1929.

NRA CASES TO BE PROSECUTED BY DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Washington, Nov. 12.—It is understood in official circles here that prosecution of cases against NRA violators will immediately take on more definite form and be prosecuted vigorously, under the direct charge of a special assistant attorney-general.

Apparently carrying out this policy, announcement is made of the appointment of G. Stanleigh Arnold, prominent San Francisco lawer, as assistant to Atty.-Gen. Cummings, to handle NRA prosecutions.

This is expected to co-ordinate the work heretofore handled by the national recovery administration, the compliance division, the national labor relations board and the justice department.

BOSTON BUTCHERS STRIKE

Boston, Mass. — Fifteen hundred union meat cutters and butcher workmen on strike here, asking slight changes in wages and hours, which were refused by employers, have effectively closed at least 60 large shops. A complete tie-up is threatened unless reasonable demands of the workers are met by employers.

What Does The Union Do?

Who raises the wages? The union.

Who shortens your hours? The union.

Who protects you from grinding bosses? The union.

Who fights for sanitary workshops? The union.

Who gets behind every piece of legislation? The union.

Who takes the children out of the workshops? The union.

Who demands equal pay for the sexes and who reduces hours for women? The union.

Who continually forces employers to protect workers' lives? The union.

Who has forced the establishment of factory inspection? The union.

Who has started the long list of social advances now being accepted everywhere? The union.

The Unions do things. Every hour of the day they advance inch by inch and step by step. They have beaten down opposition. They have compelled judges, clergymen, economists and educators to revise their views of our cause and movement.

The Union is the best investment a worker can make. They are here to stay and their usefulness will expand only as fast as our non-union fellows join with us.

There is lo limit to what we can do by united action.

Join with us in this great humanizing, educational movement that has proven its worth and stands today the only force between workers and degradation.

No other movement on earth can compare with organized labor in the practical, direct benefits to the toilers.

Let unionists proclaim the faith that is in them, and let them spread the gospel of trades unionism to their unorganized craftsmen.

Grit your teeth and organile, for you will enjoy only those benefits that you take.

RUMP DISSECTS NEWEST SCHEME TO 'BEAT' LABOR

mployes Forced to Pay Company Rent, Taxes.

RIDGEPORT WOOS, WINS BROWNING

fers Workers Plan to Pay for Plant Said to Be Owned by Mayor.

By JOHN H. CRUMP

ews comes to us of an idea, supedly originated by "prominent ens" of Bridgeport, Ala., which, llowed to pass unheeded by la- will establish a precedent for erous variations which are sure ollow. At least, if the idea did originate with those prominent ens, it has their approval, for are raising a fund to build an dea to a mill involved in the me.

s an inducement to industry the of Bridgeport has purchased the erty of a defunct hosiery mill, to have been owned by the r of Bridgeport, and has ten- the use of the building rent and free to the Browning Hosiery of Chattanooga for a period of years. To repay the city for the nse incurred in the deal the city collect 5 per cent of the em- monthly wages. The Brown- outfit accepted the offer, glad of pportunity to secure cheaper la- which labor will pay the rent and .

rst, and most important to Chatpgans, is the fact that the ning Hosiery mill moves away Chattanooga to a smaller town, g thereby the difference in the scale of wages of Chattanooga Bridgeport. If nothing is done to urage such moves, there is the bility of a general exodus of and factories from large towns all towns which will hold out nt and tax-free plum. Probthe most effective way to dis- such moves is the signed con- with employes, secured by col- bargaining. The national rela- board has ruled that a company has a signed contract with its yes must live up to that con- even though the company moves one place to another. Thus, if al hosiery workers' union had a contract with the Brown- mill regarding wages, hours her conditions of employment, ill would have to pay the same in Bridgeport that it pays would have to take along as of its local employes as desire and would have to continue to only union workers.

ond, we find a very dangerous the plan of the city of Bridge- collect 5 per cent of the em- wages to pay for the building used by the Browning mill. greedy corporation wouldn't at the chance to have its em- furnish it with a building to its mill? Such plan if taken courts would probably be illegal, for it is nothing more very high income tax placed mall group of poorly paid peod does not give them any as- of continued employment. If pped at the beginning such ight evolve into a general 5 t tax on all workers, and the people would soon find them- paying about 95 per cent of all ial expenses.

will the new dealers have to out this phase of the Bridge- lan? The codes supposedly tee the workers a certain ut under the Bridgeport plan rkers get 5 per cent under the ge and the mill benefits to tent through the guise of free d no taxes. Is that living up code of fair competition?

the seed of such plan is it would grow and grow unactual wage of the worker has duced to the level of fifty or ears ago, through taxes favoremployer.

we find the unfairness of the tax-free idea and the possihigher taxes on the citizen. n gives the Browning mill an ge over other established mills tories which are paying their share of the tax burden. The possibility of higher taxes lies in concessions which might have to be given to other mills and factories under threat of moving to a community which will give them the same consideration Bridgeport is giving the Browning mill.

Compare the Bridgeport plan with the union plan. Under the Bridgeport plan the worker indirectly returns to his employer 5 per cent of his wages, for which he gets nothing, except the privilege of working for low wages with no assurance of continued employment. Under the union plan the worker pays union dues amounting to a dollar or two a month and gets in return a signed contract between his employer and his union, guaranteeing employment at fair wages for the duration of the contract, and no discrimination between him and his fellow employe. He gets higher wages than the non-union worker. He reaps protective, social, fraternal and benevolent benefits from membership in his union. By belonging to a union he has a larger voice in the affairs of his community than he would as an individual.

All legislation affecting the welfare of the working people and most of the educational legislation of the country has originated in union meetings. That fact alone should convince the worker of the necessity of belonging to a union.

Protest Alleged Plan to Misuse "Sweet Charity"

Declare "Sewing Circle" at Davenport Attempting to Recoup Strike Losses.

Officers and members of Branch 53, Hosiery Workers, declared this week the so-called company "union" known to legitimate union members at the Davenport Hosiery mill as the "sewing circle," is attempting to slip a fast one over on the Southside Y. M. C. A., and, under the guise of "sweet charity," to secure a free room in which to present a performance of some character for the building up of a treasury for the company organization.

Learning that the "sewing circle," active in combating the progress of the union during the recent strike, is planning a "Davenport Dixie Jubilee" on Dec. 14 and 15, to be given at the "Y", members of the real union investigated, The Labor World was told, and were informed by officials of the institution that the facilities of the "Y" had been granted the circle on representation that proceeds of the affair would be given to charity.

Some members of Local 53, the story goes, thereupon recalled a letter which certain members who had formerly belonged to the "sewing circle" received, and a purported copy of this letter, signed by one Bennett as "president," was given to The Labor World with a request for publication. This letter, dated Oct. 19, follows, in part:

During the course of the strike the club assumed an indebtedness in the neighborhood of $275, and in order not to work a hardship on the club members plans are being made to promote another Davenport Jubilee Minstrel Show to clear this debt, as well as to finance the athletic events of the winter season. We can't help but feel that such a show will leave us out in front in finance as well as starting a fund to further our social activities. In the event each club member bought a ticket and sold only two more, each at the price of 25 cents, it would net our club a total of $300, more than enough to clear this indebtedness, and, combined with pledges from the membership, we should be able to continue our plans without the aid of loans. . .

We've started the ball rolling now, and with your co-operation we assure the membership of the Workers' Adjustment club an organization that is live, loyal and responsive to any plan that will prove of mutual benefit to employe and employer alike . . .

Officials of the "Y", it was said, promised an investigation of the affair.

It was hardly thought probable the Davenport management would publicly agree its employes are objects of charity.

It was recalled Friday morning that the Davenport company organization rented a suite of offices in a downtown office building during the strike, and used some valuable newspaper advertising space in order to combat the union.

UNREST AMONG LOCAL HOSIERY, TEXTILE WORKERS INCREASES AS PETTY DISCRIMINATIONS GO ON

Activities of Richmond Attorney Aggravate Soddy Strike Situation—More Pay Cuts Threatened as Christmas Contribution of Institution Whose Officers Were Indicted as Violators of Federal Law—Champion Strike Again Settled and Workers Will Return Monday.

Unrest among hosiery workers in the Chattanooga district, as well as among cotton textile workers, is declared to be increasing as it becomes more and more apparent that employers who signed agreements ending the recent strike have no intention of carrying out the terms of the pact, and, in fact, have seemed at times to hold a set purpose to increase their opposition to requirements laid down by the National Recovery Act and to foster and encourage petty and major discriminations such as were responsible in the main for the walkout.

The above is the opinion expressed by hosiery workers' representatives, and which has heretofore been stated by spokesmen for the textile employes.

A cheering development, however, came this week in a supposed settlement of the Champion Hosiery mill strike, which occurred after what employes described as repeated violations of the agreement signed when they formerly returned to work. This adjustment was made through the efforts of John L. Connor, who has been in the city for some weeks endeavoring to compose this and other disturbances. The agreement, if lived up to, is declared to be satisfactory to the workers, and it was announced the Champion will resume operations Monday morning.

Soddy branch of the Richmond company, however, is still closed after workers there walked out some time ago, efforts of Mr. Connor having so far failed to secure an adjustment. Workers from the Soddy mill told a representative of The Labor World this week it appeared the company was determined to battle to the last ditch in its effort to prevent employes taking advantage of the federal laws to secure their rights.

It was pointed out that Claude Gann, one of the strikers, as defendant in a damage suit for $500 brought by the company, was ordered by Squire Bee Bayless to pay $5.20 for the alleged offense of stopping a truck headed for the Soddy mill. This verdict, it was said, has been appealed.

However, not satisfied with this, the company's attorney is now said to be searching for someone else to sue for the same offense. John Chambliss, representing the Richmond outfit, was among those officials of the Richmond mill indicted for alleged violation of federal laws.

It was also recalled that an official of this same company stated some time ago his opposition to certain federal laws, and expressed the intention of doing only what he was forced to do in the premises.

Richmond workers also stated company officials had recently given notice of further pay cuts to take effect Dec. 26. It was stated, however, that these cuts would not go below the code minimums set by federal law.

It was also reported that a proposal by Mr. Connor that the Soddy workers return to their jobs pending the decision of a federal board was unanimously declined by the strikers on the grounds that previous actions of the mill officials had not been such as to inspire confidence that they would carry out any decision made by such board.

Secretary-treasurer—Ellis Goodloe.

Delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council are announced as "Billy" Bundschu, Herbert Pless, Earl Van Arsdale and George "Wottaman" Rogers.

Mr. Goodloe said Thursday the musicians are enjoying considerable improvement in conditions, and prospects are bright for even better times to come.

Shoe Repairers In Open Meeting

T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, reported Friday morning an unusually interesting open meeting of Local 620, Shoe Repairers, Thursday evening, with a splendid attendance and much interest and enthusiasm manifested.

Mr. Cuthbert said the local union has decided to hold similar open sessions on the first Thursday night of each month, when any who are directly interested in the trade may attend and participate in the discussions.

It was reported, he said, that plans are on foot for an organization among the proprietors, and a meeting has been called for an early date to launch such a body.

The local is progressing splendidly, apparently having successfully ironed out a number of difficulties encountered when it was first chartered, and is now functioning smoothly and effectively for the benefit of its members.

Federation Warns Against Newest Radical Movement

Alleged Communist Organization Planning Invasion of A. F. of L. Unions.

Warning against the activities of agents for the "National Congress for Unemployment and Social Insurance," a communistic organization, so far as such activities might lead to the impression the movement is connected with or sponsored by the American Federation of Labor, has been issued by President William Green, and a communication addressed to presidents of national and international unions, state federations and city central bodies sets out the fact that the Daily Worker, communist organ, is ballyhooing, through local unions, a proposed meeting to be held in Washington in January.

Mr. Green's letter, received in Chattanooga Friday, follows:

Be on guard against an attempt to create the impression that the American Federation of Labor is in any way connected with the "National Congress for Unemployment and Social Insurance." That congress, with headquarters in New York city, at 709 Broadway, has scheduled a meeting to be held in the Washington auditorium, January 5-7, 1935, inclusive.

The Daily Worker, communist organ, reports that arrangements have been made to visit all locals of the American Federation of Labor to get endorsements to the congress call and election of delegates.

The "National Congress for Unemployment and Social Insurance" is in no way connected with or representative of the American Federation of Labor.

The American Federation of Labor has declared its own policy for unemployment insurance and has been participating in the development of an economic security program for the administration. A program for action on unemployment insurance soon will be sent you for guidance in securing state legislation. The local unions, the central labor unions and the state federations of labor affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, should be warned against believing that in giving their support to the "National Congress for Unemployment and Social Insurance" they are endorsing and supporting the program of the American Federation of Labor.

I ask that the central labor unions make this letter a matter of official record at their next meetings, with the purpose in view of acquainting the delegates and representatives of affiliated local unions of the above.

Oil Refiners Offer Help to Strikers

"It takes a lot of 'insides' to stand out these cold nights on the picket lines," said J. E. Hamill, treasurer of the Oil Refiners, this week, "and our members are glad to have been in position to help out the hosiery strikers at Soddy and the Champion mills.

"I have visited both these places," Mr. Hamill continued, "and our members are behind the victims and ready to help them in any way possible.

"Our own affairs are rolling along nicely. Our committees are being received by the management, and such grievances as we have are being adjusted—not always in our favor, but in a satisfactory manner generally.

"By the way, Brother Ed Heider, our secretary, again failed to appear at our regular meeting Monday night, and we are wondering how long that 'singing for the new preacher' excuse will get him by."

Champion Workers Appreciate Aid

Former strikers at the Champion mill this week asked The Labor World to express their appreciation to the public and to various organizations which gave assistance to them in the recent strike. A committee consisting of Lizzie Hall, Nora Hyde, Jack Hagler and Clyde Sedman was named to express the thanks of the workers, particularly to employes of the Davenport Hosiery mills, Southern Railway shops and Hedges-Walsh-Weidner company.

ESSENTIALS ARE IMPOSSIBLE ON TEACHERS' PAY

CLASSED WITH COMMON LABOR

Following is the fifth in a series of articles written for The Labor World by a representative of the Chattanooga and Hamilton County Teachers' federation, under the general title of "What's Wrong With Our Schools:"

A SALARY SCALE IS NEEDED.

The minimum salary for teachers in this community is $720 a year. There were sixteen elementary, ten junior high and three high school teachers receiving that salary last year. There were twenty teachers in the next highest group which received $765. Ninety-five teachers received $810. One hundred and two received $855. Sixty-six received $900, which was the median salary for elementary teachers.

Recognized authorities state that the minimum teacher's salary should include at least four essentials: First, a reasonable subsistence; second, reasonable provision for professional growth; third, reasonable periodic increases for increasing efficiency arising from experience; and fourth, reasonable provision for retirement and old age.

That it would take a magic wallet to stretch $720 past the first essential leaves us not surprised that Chattanooga has a conspicuous absence of the second essential. Some teachers have no college training at all, while many others have taken no kind of college work in sixteen or more years.

The following statement, from the research bulletin of the University of Chattanooga, should shock complacent public school patrons out of their satisfaction with the existing circumstances, if they have any hopes of the public schools fitting the future generation to cope with the situation which will confront them:

"The evidence is strong that many city teachers are not only markedly deficient in the amount of their total academic training, but also that in the work they do attempt they fail to secure the general cultural training which is highly desirable in a teaching staff. The city, more than the county, has become the refuge of a minority who are making little or no effort to improve their stock of cultural assets."

The Chattanooga and Hamilton County Teachers' association has a scale, compiled after much research, with a minimum salary of $800, which is far below what it should be. Yet it is a scale which takes into account training and efficiency which comes from length of service. That this has not been done before in this community is apparent when one realizes that to put this scale into effect will almost double the city eatchers' payroll and will increase the county teachers' payroll about one-third.

It should be a matter of shame to every thoughtful citizen that our schools are honeycombed with the evils which attend lack of an adequate salary scale for teachers. Such a condition should enlist the co-operation of humanitarian leaders, who do not patronize public schools. It should fire public school patrons with the determination to see that the situation is remedied.

ELEVATOR OPERATORS STRIKE.

New York.—A strike of elevator operators in the garment center here, which may spread extensively, has shown members of the real estate board and others who have persistently refused to grant them necessary minimum standards in wages and hours, that the men are really organized and capable of putting up a stiff fight. The elevator workers seek establishment of an 8-hour day, with a minimum weekly wage of $25. Attempted importation of strike-breakers has caused sporadic confusion at times, but it is believed the Building Service Employes' union is strong enough to win out.

What Next!

Plans to introduce streamlined Diesel-powered freight trains with a speed of 80 miles an hour on the German railroad system were recently announced. The trains will probably consist of cars similar to the "Zeppelin on Wheels," otherwise known as the Flying Hamburger, which will be reserved for the transport of express goods. Twenty trains on the order of the Flying Hamburger are planned.

New York.—The threatened strike of 54,000 members of building crafts here is believed to have been avoided by an agreement reached between Electrical Workers' No. 13 and the Electrical Contractors' association. Maladministration By Utilities Executives

The Federal Trade Commission does not stand alone in charging the executives of many public utility companies with maladministration verging on criminality. Financial writers, usually the first to concoct alibis for the utility magnates, now admit that officials of public utility holding companies have far overstepped the limits of honesty in conducting the affairs of these business excrescences. In an analysis of utility stocks and bonds as investments, Charles F. Speare, well known commentator on corporation matters, places responsibility for the wholesale declines in market prices of these securities directly on the "scandals of the power and light business, unearthed since the depression began," which have centered in the public utility holding companies, adding:

"There is a growing body of public opinion that they have no place in the economic system of this country and that a considerable portion of the high cost of power and light is due to the tax which they make on the operating units. It is argued that all services performed by one company for the other should be at cost. The custom formerly was general among holding companies to saddle their producing units with charges so high that they were compelled to exact rates from the public inconsistent with a return on their investment if operated independently."

Turning to the millions of dollars worth of stocks and bonds which these holding companies, with the assistance of bankers, have unloaded on people of small means, Mr. Speare says:

"Flagrant acts of overcapitalization and involved financial structures of certain public utility groups, dominated by speculative managements, who have scattered their almost worthless securities over the country, have done much to arouse the antagonism of investors. Their complaints are reflected in rate reductions and reports such as that of the New York power authority."

The report of the New York Power authority declared, after a careful investigation, that, on the basis of actual costs, including a 6 per cent return to capital, the average charge for delivering electricity to homes and farms in New York state should not be in excess of 3½ cents a kilowatt hour for the use of 50 kilowatts instead of the average 6 cents which the consumers are now paying.

Mr. Speare asserts that the public utility company was the device developed by the financial racketeers in utility securities "for doing the things in the industry which should have been left undone and from which it has received a black eye." He concludes that the holding company is breaking down and that the best investments in utilities are those which are largely operating companies.

It is understood in official circles in Washington that one of the results of the revelations made by the federal trade commission will be the enactment by the congress which convenes in January of laws which will subject the utility companies to a long-deserved federal control, thus ending the evils which have compelled patriotic citizens to regard them as subversive institutions animated by purposes antagonistic to the higher principles of true Americanism.

"Technicality" in Mooney Case

An illuminating light on the reasons which animated the California courts to railroad Thomas J. Mooney to life imprisonment, and keep him jailed even after indisputable facts showed that the authorities relied upon perjured testimony to convict him, is revealed in the open letter which Raymond Moley, editor of "Today," wrote to Governor Merriam, urging him to pardon Mooney before the supreme court of the United States reviews the case. Mr. Moley said:

"I am quite familiar with the reasons that lie beneath the vast technicalities which, up to this time, have kept Mooney a prisoner. These reasons were reduced to the barest terms by a lawyer—and a distinguished one—in California, who, on one occasion told me that even through the trial of Mooney for the bombings of July 22, 1916, might have a miscarriage of justice, the real fact was that Mooney was a menace to the peace and order of the state—a bad man—and that it was the part of wisdom to keep such a man out of mischief."

The American Federation of Labor held from the beginning that the conviction of Mooney was based upon testimony so flimsy been confirmed by two federal commissions—one appointed by it should have had no standing in a court of law. This view has President Wilson and one by President Hoover—which found the trial was so tainted by perjury that his conviction was a disgrace to all traditions of American jurisprudence.

Despite this accumulated evidence tending to sustain Mooney's innocence, governor after governor of California has refused to pardon him. They evidently took the view of the "distinguished" lawyer cited by Mr. Moley that, because he was a "bad" man from the viewpoint of California big business, he should be kept in jail for life, although by all canons of decency and justice his conviction and sentence were nothing less than a judicial lynching.

Mr. Moley would perform a creditable service by making public the name of the "distinguished" California lawyer who held that because certain interests dislike the views and actions of a citizen it is therefore the function of the courts to give him a life term in prison on perjured testimony.

Clean Up the Auto Industry

President Roosevelt has instructed the research and planning division of the NRA to make a study of the automobile industry, and determine what steps can be taken to lessen seasonal fluctuations in employment and give every auto worker the benefits of a regular and dependable yearly wage. Leon Henderson, of the NIRB, will have charge of this inquiry, under express instructions that he shall collaborate with the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

This is good news, even though considerably overdue. Labor conditions in the auto industry have been a disgrace for years. With a high nominal hourly wage—high, that is, from the viewpoint of a sweatshop proprietor—automobile employment is so unstable that the yearly wages are cruelly small.

The president himself speaks of a case in which a man was paid $10 a day—and worked 65 days in the year, and said he had been advised that average earnings in the auto industry were less than $900 a year.

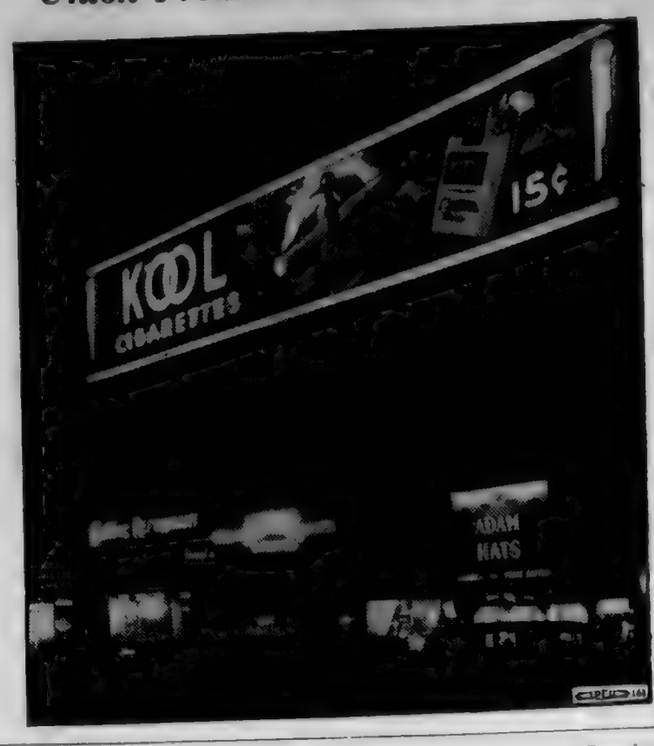
The inquiry, if pushed properly, will uncover worse cases than the one reported to the president. It will show that for year after year employment in auto factories has varied 50 per cent within the twelve months—and sometimes even more. It will show that the worker is required to bear, not only the cost of seasonal fluctuations, but the cost of the uncertainty of supply as well. A shortage of almost any article may "hold up the line," and when that happens, the men bear the cost, not the management.

But of more importance yet, in the long run, is the infernal speed-up system which has developed in the industry. Workers are paced by the moving belt which carries the parts which men must put together; and the belt is made to move at a rate just short of the utmost that human nature can bear.

In some cases, even this limit is passed. There are letters from auto workers showing that on a certain machine, the pace is so terrible that frequently ten different operators try that machine within a month.

The automobile industry is long overdue for a cleaning which only absolute liberty for labor to organize in that industry can procure. A late start is better than none; but it demands a vigorous follow-up.

Union Product Crashes Broadway



An 18-foot union-made cigarette is today one of the biggest things on Broadway, famous New York street of sights and dramatics.

The Brown & Williamson Tobacco corporation's famous penguin, whose bill, approaching that of the pelican, probably holds more cigarettes than his bellican, looms up as one of the most impressive of all the big electric signs on the famous thoroughfare.

The Kool cigarette which the well-known bird carries under his wing is 18 feet in length, with a glow on the lighted end that is visible from any point from which the sign itself can be seen. So impressive is the sign that Printers' Ink took notice of its arrival, with the following comment:

"Newest arrival among Broadway's spectaculars is the half block long outdoor display which is doing an advertising job for the Brown & Williamson Tobacco corporation. It brings to the Great White Way the now well-known trade character of the penguin—under its wing an 18-foot replica of a Kool cigarette.

"The penguin is carved of stone and at night winks its eye knowingly to the passing throngs. The cigarette has a red illumination effect for the tip, from which rises an effect of cooling smoke. In the background are iceburgs.

"Overhead reflectors flash on and off, giving a moonlight effect on a stretch of rippling water which is made up of approximately 1,000 blue bulbs."

Unemployment Greater Than Last Year; Less Effort by Industry Is Blamed

Washington, Dec. 8 — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, issued the following statement on unemployment:

"We are entering the winter of 1934 with 550,000 more out of work than we had at this time last year. The American Federation of Labor estimate shows 10,671,000 without work in industry in October, 1934, as compared to 10,122,000 in October, 1933.

"Business activity in October this year was 2.6 per cent below last year and this accounts partly for the increase in unemployment. Partly, however, it is due to the fact that the effort to increase employment in industry is not so general as it was at this time last year.

"The serious implications of this increase in unemployment cannot be overemphasized. Relief need this winter is already higher than it was last year. Reports from urban areas show that in October, 1934, the number on relief rolls was 30 per cent greater than in October, 1933. In August, the latest month for which we have complete figures for relief in the country as a whole, there were 900,000 more cases or nearly 3,000,000 more persons on relief rolls than in August last year, an increase of 20 per cent. The total financial obligation for relief had increased from $61,470,000 to $149,426,000, or more than doubled. This means that, in addition to the increase in unemployment, those who have been unemployed for a long time have exhausted their resources; those who once had savings are now wholly dependent on relief. Food prices have increased and the cost of relief is greater; also relief in some cases is more adequate.

"Unquestionably our relief problem this winter is the most serious this nation has ever faced. Trade union unemployment figures show a greater increase in unemployment from October to November this year than last year and part time work in November (first half) is higher than ever before in the history of our figures. In building, water transportation, theaters and all the manufacturing groups, there are more on part-time than last year. Thus many of those who have jobs are finding their incomes lower than last year.

"Government emergency work was provided in October as follows: 508,000 on PWA, 362,000 on CCC. In addition an average of 1,392,000 had work each week on the ERA work program."

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION URGES SUPPORT FOR LABOR PRESS

The International Typographical union, at the recent Chicago convention, called upon organized labor to rally to the support of local labor newspapers now serving the labor movement so faithfully and well in many local communities throughout the country.

Following this, a special article appeared in "The Typographical Journal," official publication of the International Typographical union, which should prove of wide interest. It says in part:

> Not every community has a labor paper, and many that have do not lend full support to the publication. The fault may sometimes be with the paper in that sufficient energy is not demonstrated by the editor or manager to make the publication representative of the cause it is supposed to espouse. More often, however, lack of interest on the part of members of organized labor is the main reason for the failure of both the paper and those it should represent to attain a place in the sun. But when a labor paper evinces a serious attempt to creditably represent organized labor it is the duty of all union men and women to lend wholehearted support. Only through bona fide labor papers may organized labor and principles it represents receive the publicity earned by a long and courageous fight for public recognition. The daily press, whatever its stand regarding organized labor in its own plant, caters to a general class of readers. A labor paper appeals but to one section of the mass and in turn has a right to look to that section for encouragement and support.
> Never was the necessity greater for co-ordination between the labor press and labor. Get behind your local labor paper, if you are so fortunate as to have one in your community, and help yourself and your organization by aiding those who aid you in an editorial and news way.

"CHISELING" CLIMBS TO NEW HEIGHTS IN GEORGIA MILLS

Newman, Ga., Nov. 27.—"Chiseling" practices of mill owners in Georgia mill towns are climbing to new levels since the textile workers' strike, with the assistance given to the mills then by Gov. Eugene Talmadge through the use of state troops. Mill managements are exerting their efforts to terrorize and intimidate the workers, and put them in fear of belonging to a union.

Some of the mill owners openly boast that they control the state government, and that Talmadge will respond to any request made upon him.

Payrolls Are Padded.

Mill payrolls are vastly padded. Some of the mills keep two distinct payrolls covering the same week's work. The actual payroll may show some workers engaged continuously at looms for sixteen hours, and paid a sum less than the minimum for unskilled workers.

Another payroll, often containing names of persons who are not actually employed in the mills, is kept, and indicating much higher wage payments than the actual payments made to the workers.

These dual payrolls are useful in two ways. They can be turned over to federal investigators for inspection, and unless inquiry is made among the workers, the fraud is not detected.

Again they can be used for the payment of corporation taxes to the federal government. The fictitious payroll will show a very much higher outlay for wages than the real payroll, which enables the mills to reduce the volume of taxes paid to the federal treasury, and thus defraud the federal government of some of its revenues.

"Stretch-Out" Is Used.

The employers generally refuse to meet a union committee. They refuse to meet any committee until its members have signed "yellow dog" contracts which to practical purposes remove the vantage of free action.

The mills are gradually reducing their working forces by extending the "stretch-out" practice. President Roosevelt's goal of getting more people back to work is not only ignored in Georgia, but the mill owners openly boast of defiance of the federal boards and agencies inquiring into the wrongs of the mill workers.

Soap Workers Gain Recognition As "Company Union" Is Trounced

Los Angeles, Cal.—Another victory can be scored for bona-fide unions against the infamous "company union."

In the case of the Soap and Edible Oil Workers' Union against the Proctor & Gamble Manufacturing company, of Long Beach, the Los Angeles regional labor board has ruled that the bonafide union, rather than an "employes' conference committee," is the sole collective bargaining representative for employes of the firm.

Appeal Filed.

The company has announced an appeal to the national labor relations board, as usual in such cases, although all labor officials agree that this can mean nothing more than confirmation of the regional board's decision.

The company was charged with intimidating and coercing employes in an election held May 24, 1934, discharging three employes for union activities and failing to abide by the certification of the election by the labor board.

Labor Is Elated.

The regional labor board also ordered the reinstatement of George T. Hinds, holding that he had been unjustly discharged for union activities.

According to Mr. Joseph M. Casey, representing the American Federation of Labor in San Francisco, who has been in close touch with the situation throughout, the entire labor movement of southern California is greatly elated over this decisive victory.

From New York comes word that Proctor & Gamble has declared an extra dividend on their common stock, payable Dec. 15, aside from the regular quarterly dividend due in January.

Southern Industrial Council Assailed as Foe of Fair Play

New Orleans, Nov. 27.—The Centrad Trades and Labor council has passed a resolution requesting the American Federation of Labor to bring to the attention of congress a "sinister movement," sponsored by a group of "reactionary manufacturers," which it charged would "foster unfair competition, diminish purchasing power, and increase unemployment." The resolution followed a speech by Holt Ross, southern representative of the A. F. of L., attacking John E. Edgerton, of Lebanon, Tenn., president of the Southern States Industrial council, who addressed a meeting of Louisiana industrialists in New Orleans.

Ross described Edgerton and William D. Anderson, Macon, Ga., textile manufacturer, a director in the industrial council, as the "gold dust twins of the reactionary element of the United States."

The resolution asserted that the Southern States Industrial council is "spreading propaganda through the south to retain wage differentials and to abolish the NRA." Ross asserted that southern employers' organizations were urging retention of the wage differential on the basis of "lower costs of living, tradition and a differential in labor efficiency."

To Renew Fight for Election Of President by Popular Vote

Washington.—Senator George W. Norris, whose reforms in government already include abolition of "lame duck" congresses and acceptance by his state of a one-house legislature, is going to renew his fight to do away with the electoral college system of electing American presidents.

He says he will press in congress for acceptance of his plan for electing presidents by popular vote. The proposal was defeated at the last session.

A switch of two votes from the previous count would be sufficient to obtain senate approval.

"I expect to reintroduce my proposed amendment in the form we voted on before," Norris said. "I'm going to try again to have it written into the constitution.

"With the electoral college abolished, the country will be able to vote for individuals instead of party choices. It will give us a chance to elect more popular presidents."

LABOR MAN NAMED.

Washington.—The national recovery administration has announced appointment of Louis Krouse, New York, as a labor representative on the burlesque theatrical industry's code authority. Krouse, a member of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Operators of the United States and Canada, will act when questions affecting theatrical stage employes and motion picture machine operators are before the code authority.

PAPER CONVERTED.

New Orleans.—The Square Deal, R. C. Sutton, editor, which has fought organized labor in all forms, advocating the "open shop," is now appearing with the union label. On the first page, Sutton said in regard to the change: "I believe that the labor man should get his fair share of the wealth of the country and for that reason hereafter the union label will appear on the Square Deal and all my printing."

Postal Opposes Merger at Cost Of Wage Earners

Hearing to Open Dec. 3 on Consolidation Proposal — President Powers to Appear for Telegraphers.

Washington, Dec. 8.—On Dec. 3 the federal communication commission will open hearings on the advisability of consolidation of the telegraphs. In addition to whatever other issues may develop, two great companies will come before the commission with opposing labor positions.

President Frank Powers will represent the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of North America.

Western Union's position remains to be disclosed in detail, but it is a foregone conclusion that any consolidation proposition which it may put forward will be based upon its traditional disregard of the rights of the workers and its hostility to union organization.

Postal Observes 7-A.

On the other hand, the Postal Telegraph company long since has turned its back upon old-time policies. In the formal "notice of intention to appear" at the forthcoming hearings, Postal, through councel, made the following declarations to the commission:

> "Postal Telegraph and its affiliated companies, which come here without any program or plan of consolidation, state categorically they will not propose or be a party to any plan of merger or consolidation which will not in their belief result in improving the conditions of labor in the telegraph, cable and radio business and enhancing the security of the employment of such labor."

Early last summer Postal officials met with officials of the Commercial Telegraphers and the Electrical Workers and agreed with the unions to abide faithfully by Section 7-A of the recovery act, in spirit as well as in regard to the letter of the law. Telegraph history was made in that meeting and in that agreement. "One telegraph company at least is willing to turn its back on the traditional anti-union policy of the industry," said President Powers at that time.

Friendly Position Evidenced.

Its declaration in the "notice of intention to appear" is evidence of the company's determination to adhere to the friendly policy laid down in its agreement with the two unions. Unofficially it is reported that Postal will refuse to countenance any consolidation plan, unless, first of all, provision is made to prevent the discharge of a single employe.

At the time Postal agreed to abide fully by Section 7-A, which guarantees the right to organize, President Powers said of the Western Union:

"The Western Union, on the contrary, refuses to recognize that an employe has even the meager protection given in Section 7-A." As a result of the conflicting attitudes, the Commercial Telegraphers regard Postal as entitled to labor's friendship.

JUDGE WHO SOCKED UNIONS COMES TO UTILITIES' RESCUE IN TVA POWER CASE DECISION

The issue of the right of the people to develop water power, and sell it to themselves as electric current without paying tribute to private utilities, was brought to the fore the other day when Federal Judge William I. Grubb, of Alabama, held that the power plans of the TVA are unconstitutional, and that the whole TVA act may be ruled invalid.

Fourteen holders of preferred stock in the Alabama Power company brought suit before Judge Grubb, asking an injunction to keep the company from selling some of its properties to the TVA. The TVA moved to dismiss the case, and Judge Grubb refused, in words which leave no doubt of his hostility to this most popular phase of the new deal. Judge Grubb admitted that the federal government, acting through the TVA, has a right to improve navigation, prevent floods, and to develop and sell the power "incidental" to these actions. But of the general plan of developing and selling power, he said:

"A plan for the development of the Tennessee river valley, as a social experiment, is in no sense related to the improvement of navigation, . . . and the production and sale of electric power would not be incidental."

Ruling Pleases Utilities.

In other words, while the United States government may dredge rivers and dam floods, it may not develop power on its own streams except as a picayune "incident" to the things which Judge Grubb graciously permits it to do.

The decision was received with hilarious joy by the power interests directly involved, who immediately filed an amended bill, as the revised plea for an injunction is called. This amended bill probably is unique in the history of federal courts. It criticizes President Roosevelt for his Birmingham speech a week before, in which he praised the work of the TVA, and forecast similar developments in other states. It denounced Dr. Lilenthal, head of the TVA, for his plain speaking on the actions of the power interests, and roasts Secretary of the Interior Ickes for giving the stockholders of power companies some pugnant advice on the matter of "dummy lawsuits."

Finish Fight in Prospect.

It is not often, surely, that even utility companies roast the White House and the cabinet when presenting their own case.

Judge Grubb will hold another hearing within a few days; and if he holds to his present views, the TVA and the government will carry the case to the U. S. supreme court, if necessary. They do not believe it will be necessary. In their view, Judge Grubb gave away his case when he admitted the right of the TVA to develop and sell power as an "incident." But the matter will be fought to a finish.

An incident that occurred seven years ago should help labor to look into Judge Grubb's mind. The Journeymen Stone Cutters' association had printed a little pamphlet, telling who were their friends in the stone industry. They said not a word about non-union firms; but simply gave a list of union firms.

Issued Drastic Injunction.

Judge Grubb, on Oct. 24, 1927, sitting in the U. S. district court of the southern district of New York, issued an injunction forbidding the stonecutters—

> "From publishing, circulating, selling or giving away any further copies of a pamphlet entitled 'A List of Union Firms in the Stone Industry,' or any like pamphlet or list."

Many courts have forbidden union men to name their enemies, even without describing them; but Judge Grubb is believed to be the first jurist to forbid union men to name their friends.

Bitter NRA Foe Shown Hounding Striking Workers

South Carolina Operators Admit Discrimination Against Employes Who Joined Union and Quit Work in September.

Washington, Dec. 8.—"Chiseling" practices of South Carolina mill operators, including discrimination against and eviction and persecution of mill employes for union membership, were developed in their smallest detail in a hearing before the national textile labor relations board on charges brought against the Lydia and Clinton cotton mills, of Clinton, S. C. Twenty-four employes of the two mills are "locked out" for their part in defying W. J. and C. M. Bailey, brothers and owners of the two mills, and going on strike in September.

The board reserved decision to study the testimony.

W. J. Bailey appeared as the sole witness for himself, and on direct testimony denied discrimination. On cross-examination he was compelled to admit there could be no other explanation than rank discrimination for his acts toward employes he has refused to put back to work since the strike.

Bailey Bitter NRA Foe.

Both Bailey and his brother, C. M. Bailey, have been among the bitterest opponents of the NRA, with its Section 7-A. The bitterness of C. M. Bailey's fight on the act and its intent brought illness to him many months ago, and he went to a sanitarium.

A. L. Harrison, president of the local union at the Lydia mill, told of being turned back at the mill gates by the mill superintendent "because you've got yourself messed up with the union."

Harrison has a wife and eight children, and had been a night watchman for eighteen months at the mill.

No strike Violence.

It was developed that during the strike there was no violence at the mills, or unlawful acts by the employes. Bailey when questioned as to why the "locked-out" employes had not been put back to work, said he is investigating to find out if they made any speeches during the strike.

"Speeches about what?" he was asked.

"Well, just speeches," he indicated.

Bailey admitted that before the NRA he was paying his 600 employes an average wage of $4.50 a week apiece. He said at that time he gave these employes a wage increase of 10 per cent, or an average of 45 cents, but, on cross-examination, admitted that at the same time he increased his charges of house rent on the head of families among his employes by 50 cents a week, and thus got back from them 5 cents more than the wage increase he gave to them.

Paul E. Dean and T. J. Brown, two "locked-out" employes, told of being barred at the mill gates from reentering the mill, and of receiving warnings from friends not to go on the mill property again. The friends said that Bailey had schemed to have them arrested on trespass charges if they entered on the mill property again, and to cite that fact before the board in Washington as a reason for not re-employing them.

Further testimony brought out how Bailey had dismissed several persons last March when he first learned that a union was in process of formation among the employes, and had sought by every possible means to ferret out the names of those who had joined an organization.

C. C. Bowick, a mill employe, said that on the morning after the strike, he returned to go to work and was met at the gate by deputy sheriffs and state police and told that, on orders of the superintendent, he could not enter the mill. When he inquired as to the reason, he said he was told he "was messed up with the union."

Later, Bowick said, he was told he "might as well move," and he would never be employed in the Bailey mill again. Shortly after that Bailey had him evicted from his company-owned dwelling.

Bailey complained that one of his grievances against his "locked-out" employes is that during the strike he had the electric current turned off from the mill workers' house except during the night hours, and that somebody—he didn't know who—entered the mill and turned on the current, so that it could be had during the day hours as well.

Both Bailey and his attorney, Ralph Wilson, insisted that the "locked-out" workers are not discriminated against because they belong to the United Textile Workers of America, but at the same time, could not offer any other positive reason for not permitting them to return to work.

The mill workers described the two Bailey mills as having working conditions among the worst in the south, with a condition of paternal supervision and espionage on the workers that verges on peonage and serfdom, and keeps the employes in a continuous condition of terrorism and fear of sudden loss of their jobs.

Firestone Seems Ready to Fight Labor Board Rule

Washington, Dec. 8.—Copies of a circular letter sent to employes by the head of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company indicate that the big Akron company is planning to defy a recent order of the national labor relations board for a collective bargaining election at the company's plant. A similar election was ordered at the plant of another big Akron rubber firm, the B. F. Goodrich company.

Following the labor board's ruling in favor of an election, J. A. Thomas, president of the company, sent a circular letter to employes, advising that the policy would be "to deal with any individual employe or any group of employes or whomever they may choose to represent them."

"We want to assure every employe now that regardless of any effort or coercion of any outside organization wo will stand by the Firestone employes conference plan and the legal and constitutional rights of our employes who have adopted it, until and unless a court of last resort should hold otherwise," he said.

This was interpreted in Washington as meaning that the company would either carry the case to the supreme court or await action on some other case by that tribunal.

The first step in arranging for the election will be for the Cleveland regional board to ask the Firestone company for a payroll, to be used as an election list. In case of refusal the labor board has authority under Congressional Resolution No. 44 to subpoena papers and documents for such an election.

Defiance by the company of a subpoena would mean that the board would take action in the courts to compel production of the payroll.

In his letter to employes Thomas said he regretted that the national labor relations board "has seen fit to order an election at Firestone without, in our opinion, giving due regard to the evidence submitted by us which showed clearly that it was unnecessary and not in the public interest to have such an election."

Thomas asserted that the results of the election under the company union plan showed that 84 per cent of the employes participated in selecting their committees to represent them in negotiations with the company for the ensuing year.

The outcome of the election was presented to the national labor board, he added, "and there is not one particle of evidence in the records that there was any coercion on the part of the management in that election."

CENTRAL BODY TO CO-OPERATE WITH TEACHERS

Proposed Salary Schedule Is Approved.

ASKS OFFICIALS TO ACT IMMEDIATELY

Approval of Resolution Gives Backing of Fifty-Two Craft Unions.

(Proposed salary schedule of Local 246 will be found on the last page of this issue.)

Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council and its fifty-two affiliated local unions will stand solidly behind the school teachers of Chattanooga and Hamilton county in their efforts to place in effect a salary schedule which will have some semblance of fairness and justice to the profession locally.

A resolution unanimously adopted at Monday night's meeting of Central Body calls upon the constituted authorities to take, without delay, such steps as are necessary to place the schedule as adopted in operation. The resolution follows:

Whereas, the Chattanooga and Hamilton County Teachers' association, Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, is at this time engaged in a campaign to secure the adoption of a salary schedule in Chattanooga and Hamilton county; and,

Whereas, the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council is firmly convinced that the present rate of pay for teachers in both the city and county is a disgrace to our community and should be raised without delay; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, That we heartily indorse the salary schedule as prepared by the Teachers' Federation affiliated with this body and hereby call upon the constituted authorities to hasten without delay to adopt such steps as are necessary to place said schedule in operation.

Commenting on the report of the schedule committee of the teachers, a member of the federation told The Labor World:

"The Chattanooga-Hamilton County teachers' association offers a proposed salary schedule. It is based on months of research and study. Salary schedules of many cities of the size of Chattanooga were examined. Literature dealing with the effectiveness of salary schedules was studied. Living conditions in Chattanooga and other communities were compared. The revenue of the community was taken into consideration. Finally a salary schedule, very low in comparison with cities comparable to Chattanooga, was devised. Even this will call for increased appropriations for schools. The hope is that the adoption of a low salary scale will prove so effective that the public will come to see its value and eventually will demand a higher one. The high schedule, proposed now, will not have the effect of discouraging the taxpayer from desiring to have a schedule installed, it was feared. This salary schedule has based differences in salary on training and length of service, as do the best schedules of the country. While recognizing that special aptitude and fitness do exist among teachers, the school authorities state that experience has shown that the personal equation enters into the question too much to insure fairness in any such attempt at grading teachers.

"The salary schedule as proposed is intended to supply the incentive for teachers to increase their professional training and to continue their studies by rewarding any increase in their training with a higher base of pay for greater training. The pay in the lower groups, while very low, is in proportion to the pay for the higher groups and is above what teachers are now receiving in most cases. It should be noted that the schedule will not lower the salary of any teacher. No salary schedule would ever be perfectly satisfactory to all teachers, probably. This salary schedule is no exception in that respect. Nevertheless, the teachers as a whole generously offer this schedule, hoping that it will benefit the schools, first, in establishing a standard of salaries in place of a seemingly hit or miss policy; second, in giving each teacher a definite salary to expect; third, in eliminating the idea that there is any feeling of favoritism or injustice on the part of the department of education, and fourth, in encouraging teachers to make the greatest effort in adequately equipping themselves professionally."

Alabamans Will Furnish "Power" In Every Form

Correspondent Calls Bridgeport "Stockholders' Paradise."

(If the correspondent who signed his or her name "Reader" in a letter to The Labor World this week will identify himself or herself and present facts regarding the matter complained of, this paper will give due consideration to the case and give such publicity as the matter may merit.—Editor.)

Cheaper "Power"?

Editor Labor World:

In the last issue of the Labor World there was an article that leaves a very unpleasant taste in the mouths of all union people—"Browning Hosiery Mills Move to Bridgeport, Ala."

I have known some Alabamans are off just a little bit, but to pull a stunt like they have is beyond my comprehension. What have they to gain? A few people seem to think that it is the proper thing for the citizens of a small town to come to the aid of a concern that is about to go on the rocks. I quote from the Chattanoga Times: "Browning Hosiery mills plan to move to Alabama for the purpose of obtaining cheap power." They did not mention the kind of power they intend to obtain cheap, but any fair-minded person can see that they will have every form of "power" in their hands. A popular song has it that "stars fell on Alabama," but this will be one star that will fail to shine on Alabama, in the eyes of people that try to earn a decent living. If an industry is not capable of taking care of itself, it is far better off out of business, and out of the community, so that the fair-minded business can operate and pay expenses and a fair wage scale and earn a decent profit. Industry is stagnant with just such companies as the Browning Hosiery mills, and the sooner the public wakes up to the fact that industry of this type is not entitled to the support of our good citizens the better off we will be.

Bridgeport! Free taxes! Free rent! And the 5 per cent free labor! Ah, a stockholders' paradise.

J. E. HAMILL.

Thanks, Brother!

Editor The Labor World:

I received your copy of the Labor World Monday and want to say here that I thank you very much for sending it.

It is a very fine paper, and I enjoyed every word of it. I even read all of the ads in it.

I am interested in the labor movement and want to help get other people to get into contact with what's going on in the labor world. I showed the Labor World to several of my friends and they said that it was a good paper for the labor people.

Would like to see some Huntsville news of local unions in the Labor World, so other folks could see what's going on in other local unions.

T. Pope Shepherd's Outburst

Mr. T. Pope Shepherd, attorney for the Tennessee Power company and a local politician of sorts, appeared before the Chattanooga Real Estate Exchange this week and delivered himself of a political speech which has caused some comment and an exchange of fire between Shepherd and the commissioner of fire and police.

With the political aspects of Mr. Shepherd's outburst organized labor is unfamiliar and not immediately interested, but the power company's lawyer, after the manner of his kind, trampled ruthlessly upon the good name of Chattanooga workers in order to make what he probably regarded as an effective argument concerning alleged disposition of local sock mills to remove to other localities, removal of a small local mill to Bridgeport, Alabama, furnishing the foundation for the "bogey man" alarm. This mill was said to have gone to the Alabama city because it might obtain cheaper power there.

"Plants are leaving and talking about leaving because this town is reeking with the radical spirit, which is not curbed, and they are not being protected by the forces of law and order," the speaker is quoted as saying.

He generously interpreted Section 7-A for the enlightenment of the public, and stated that "the agitators grabbed it and used it as an opening wedge" * * * "and started a movement to unionize the country and pretended the act permitted them to go into a plant and force it to employ only union men. * * * I would like to see the crooked, selfish and weak office holder, the demagogue and agitator tied together and put in a sack and sunk in the middle of the ocean."

Mr. Shepherd decries, apparently with all the force his talents command, alleged "lawlessness" during the textile strike (when, incidentally, the only disturbance was a fist fight or two, although some 10,000 workers were out), but in the same breath advocates drowning certain citizens of whom he does not approve. It is also recalled that as chairman of the local NRA compliance board the power company attorney, his vanity possibly hurt by failure of a local firm to comply with his rulings, publicly suggested the tactics employed by a St. Louis mob which wrecked a dissenter's place of business might be applied locally. In this connection it may be pertinent to suggest to the attorney that the old custom of summarily dispatching folks who disagree with his type has been effectively and definitely discarded, and even a common working man is now entitled under the law to form and express his own oponions.

It is held as surprising in some quarters that Mr. Shepherd's attack on law-enforcement officers of Chattanooga and Hamilton county did not cover more territory and take in the entire state, as it is still fresh in the minds of local citizens that the people of Tennessee, in their folly, possibly, only recently declined to grasp the opportunity to place a kinsman of the attorney in the governor's chair.

It is suggested also that Mr. Shepherd may be somewhat nettled because no member of organized labor was sentenced to jail during the theater strike last summer, when the power company attorney also represented the theater management. Possibly he would find surcease from his wounded feelings in the state of Georgia, where the great Talmadge might appoint him as a colonel, or something, in his army, and Mr. Shepherd might be privileged to witness the slaughter of workers striking against a system of starvation pay and un-American working conditions which a great president is seeking to correct.

With one statement made by Mr. Shepherd, however, we all can heartily agree: "Voters should not be controlled by hysteria or demagogues." We believe the time for such has passed, and that the outburst of the attorney therefore was utterly futile.

At a recent meeting Local No. 77 was honored with a visit from our international president, Mr. Frank J. Feeney, and international vice-president, P. A. McDonald. President Feeney gave the local some of the accomplishments of the elevator constructors at the convention of the Elevator Manufacturers and Elevator Constructors held at Atlantic City, N. J., October of this year. Fifteen elevator manufacturers and seventy-eight delegates of the elevator constructors were present. The elevator manufacturers presented a two-year agreement which was accepted by both parties.

President Feeney has represented the elevator men for thirty-four years. He brought out the fact that the elevator men are organized 98% throughout the United States and have not had a strike since 1909. Also the elevator men pay the smallest per capita tax of any of the building trades. The elevator men and elevator manufacturers have met yearly since 1909 in convention to present working agreements acceptable to each and which have always been acceptable to both.

Hee, Haw!

Following are some excerpts from a speech by a guest of the Chattanoogn Real Estate Exchange, evidently suffering from "Shepherditis," as quoted by the Chattanooga Times:

"Plants are leaving and talking about leaving because this town is teeming with the radical spirit, which is not curbed and they are not being protected by the forces of law and order.

"That (Section 7-A) is not a complicated section and should never have been misunderstood. When it was put into the law of the country the agitators grabbed it and used it as an opening wedge. No one is allowed to require an employe to join nor is any one allowed to interfere with an employe if he does or does not join a union. An employer is required to deal with his men in collective bargaining and they may select their representatives or an organized union to represent them, but the law doesn't require men to join under any circumstances. The law prohibits discrimination against union and non-union men and with that law the professional agitators started a movement to unionize the country and pretended the act permitted them to go into a plant and force it to employ only union men. This is a positive, direct violation of the law. The policy is to be in accordance with the NRA. Every man has a right to do as he pleases, but a movement to unionize all plants began attack on the law in both the NRA and the Norris act.

"If a man wants to work or wants to quit he can do so by himself or with the crowd, but no man has the right to say to his neighbor 'You cannot work because I do not want to work.' No man has the right to take a club or otherwise intimidate men to force a crowd out of work and we have laws to cover that situation.

"Threats and intimidation are just as much a violation of the law as cracking a man over the head with a stick. So it is without being too critical we find that lawlessness was permitted to run wild during the recent strike here. Officials sat back and absented themselves from the points of trouble, while armed men went to the mills refusing to allow officials of the plants to go in. That is lawlessness and somebody is failing to do his duty.

"Give us law enforcement and we will not have any more trouble. We can see where the trouble is and let's remedy it. I would like to see men elected to office with courage, determination and unselfishness. I would like to see the crooked, selfish and weak officeholder, the demagogue and agitator tied together and put in a sack and sunk in the middle of the ocean."

Unions to Boycott Election Plan Of Auto Labor Board

"Proportionate Representation" Feature of Proposal Assailed by A. F. of L. Organizer Dill As Illegal and Impractical.

Detroit, Dec. 13.—The United Automobile Federal Labor unions, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, will refuse to participate in any elections announced by the automobile labor board, Francis J. Dillon, A. F. of L. organizer, said here.

"The election plan as announced by the automobile labor board completely fails to establish the rights of automobile workers to a free choice of the organization by which they wish to be represented in collective bargaining," Dillon asserted.

Organizer Dillon directed his protest primarily at the "proportionate representation" feature of the plan. This he assailed as "illegal" and of such a nature that the A. F. of L. "is beaten even if it wins."

Dillon declared that "majority rule constitutes the only practical and logical way of selecting the workers' representatives for bona fide collective bargaining," and that "this principle has been approved by the national labor relations board."

He said that the issue was: "Shall the American Federation of Labor constitute the bargaining agency for the workers in the automobile industry, or shall company-controlled and dominated unions act in the capacity?" He accused the labor board of "backing away from the issue after deliberating for eight months."

"Unfair" Signs Changed to Read "Labor Dispute"

Court Holds Pickets Cannot Advertise Theaters "Unfair to Labor."

Granting an injunction asked by the Rialto and State theaters against Local 226, Painters, and various members, Chancellor Foust last Saturday held that the unionists could not use signs reading "Unfair to Organized Labor," which had been carried for several weeks by members of the organization picketing the Market street movie houses.

The court said, however, that if sign shops of the two theaters, closed when the employes organized, were reopened the rule would not apply. Further, he held, the unionists have a right to inform their friends of the strike and seek their moral support.

Complying with the order, the pickets' signs were changed to read "Labor Dispute On Between Rialto and State Theaters and Local 226, We Will Appreciate Your Continued Co-operation," and the pickets are still patroling the vicinity of the theaters carrying these signs.

The dispute with the two theaters occurred several weeks ago when employes of the "art shops" which had been operated by both houses struck following futile efforts to secure what they considered a decent wage scale and fair working hours.

Immediate cause for application for the injunction was said to have been the issuance of a circular by the union which declared:

"Can you read?

"A committee of union officials called on Mr. Rogers (local manager), and this is his statement, to which we have sworn witnesses:

"'We don't need signs at the Rialto and State theaters like we do at the Tivoli. The class of people that go to the Rialto and State theaters do not appreciate art and do not read signs.'"

Machinists, 56, Names Officers

Officers for the year 1935 were named this week by Lodge 56, Machinists, and it was announced that installation in January may be made in joint session with members of Lodge 1450, railroad branch, which also elects this month. Next regular session of Lodge 56, scheduled for Dec. 25, has been postponed, it is announced, and the lodge will not meet again until the regular January session.

The new officers are as follows:

President—E. W. Beddows.
Vice-President—C. R. Schnee.
Financial Secretary—W. D. Sivley.
Recording Secretary—G. W. Axley.
Treasurer—W. L. Wergin.
Conductor—W. E. White.
Sentinel—G. W. Bradley.
Business Agent—W. R. Barney.
Trustees—Charles Stuz, William Millsaps and Joe Hardin.

I. A. Jacobs Named By Barbers' Local

I. A. Jacobs, veteran member of Local 415, Journeymen Barbers, was named president of that organization at the December meeting, succeeding George W. Perry, who declined to run for re-election. Other members of the official family of Local 415 were named as follows:

Vice-President—J. S. Boyd.
Secretary-Treasurer—G. W. Helms.
Recording Secretary—D. C. Janey.
Finance Committee—James Ball, Joe Burton and Tom Briggs.

LABOR WORLD WILL RECEIVE DONATIONS FOR SODDY STRIKERS

Following plans made at Central Body Monday night for solicitation of contributions for Christmas cheer for the victims of Richmond at Soddy, where the branch hosiery mill of the local concern is closed by strike, and at the suggestion of Lodge 56, Machinists, The Labor World will receive such contributions, which will be sent the families of the strikers through Secretary Cuthbert, of Central Body.

Checks may be mailed to this office, or cash or provisions sent or brought. Those wishing to contribute are reminded that a short time only remains in which to insure a happy season for these victims of industrial autocracy.

RUMORED PEACE WITH M'DONALD IS NOT CORRECT

Central Body Officials Deny Reports.

RECALL ARROGANCE OF HOME STORE CZAR

Said Wages Should Be Cut 50 Per Cent.—Doesn't Like Unions.

Above is pictured Mrs. Louise Petty, who has for the past three weeks done most effective work as a picket patrolling the vicinity of a so-called "Home Store" at 116 West Main street. Mrs. Petty is unusually popular in the territory where she is "working," numbering her friends by the score. She is said to have met all petty discourtesies by members of the McDonald outfit with a smile, and to have received splendid encouragement from all other sources. Mrs. Petty is a sister of Erskine Mabee, of the Painters, and of Harry Mabee, of the Bakers.

Emphatic denial of rumors current this week that Roy McDonald and his so-called "Home Stores" have made peace with Chattanooga workers was issued Thursday by officials of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council.

"The report," a representative of Central Body told The Labor World, "probably came from the fact that some of McDonald's stores have not been regularly picketed during the past week or ten days. Return to work of a great many former textile strikers made a realignment of the picket forces necessary, and this has presented a problem which requires time to solve. Pickets remain on duty at several of the chain store units, however, and a complete organization will be effected in due time.

"Textile workers will not soon forget the experience of Mr. W. A. Armour, manager of an East Lake Home Store, who it was charged was summarily fired for contributing a pound of coffee to striking workers, although Mr. Armour paid for the commodity from his own pocket.

"As for other trades unionists, McDonald's arrogant attitude is entirely too well known to need very much amplification. His distribution of an advertising sheet printed by non-union employes and his statements to committees regarding labor are still fresh in the minds of working people, and it would take a great stretch of the imagination to figure how McDonald could ever be considered a friend of Chattanoogn workers.

"There is absolutely no justification for reports that he has made peace with labor, and we ask the continued co-operation of the public, which has in the past been such a heartening feature of our dispute with the grocer, baker, dairyman, printer, pub-

Q.—Does the federal government publish figures on union wage rates?

A.—Yes. The Bureau of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor, first began in 1912 to collect information on wage rates and hours of labor in time work trades, as agreed to by organized workers and their employers, and has collected, compiled and published such figures since then, up to and including the year 1933.

Q.—Is the labor press mentioned in the constitution of the American Federation of Labor?

A.—The constitution (Art. II, Sec. 5) declares that one of the objects of the A. F. of L. is "to aid and encourage the labor press of America."

This would probably be a better world if everybody would do without everything. For instance, if a lady gets herself a new hat and is happy, all the rest are unhappy because they don't have it or something better. And that's not good for the soul.

Lady Says She Took CARDUI for Cramps; Was Soon Relieved

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. The Same Old Stuff

One hundred men from the two largest business groups, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers, are meeting at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, to "produce a constructive program to accelerate recovery from our existing economic condition."

On the principle that the drunkard knows most about booze, the one hundred gentlemen of wealth ought to succeed. They and their kind ran this country without let or hindrance for a dozen years. They ran it into the ditch, and for the five years since that happened, they have not offered one helpful effort to get it out. If knowing and trying all the wrong things to do would guide people to the right things, the conference of billions at White Sulphur Springs should bring wondrous results.

It should, but it won't. The drunkard doesn't understand booze; he only wants to swill it. The financier doesn't understand the distribution of wealth; he only wants to hog it. People do the same wrong things over and over—especially when it is other people who suffer for those wrongs; and the millionaires assembled at the Springs will mouth the same old stuff in the same old phrases as before.

The Bourbons of France forgot nothing, and learned nothing. The plutocrats are our Bourbons.

Cannot Even Do Right by Mistake

The National Associationo f Manufacturers has published a program for the restoration of prosperity. Here are some of the most important items in that program:

A federal sales tax on all manufactuers, levied at the point of origin, and the proceeds divided with the states.

Abandon all forms of government competition, which, as examples, threaten industry, thwart private initiative and retard recovery.

Protect men in their right to work.

Prohibit sympathetic or geieral strikes or lockouts, blacklists and boycotts.

Do not deprive individuals or minorities of the right to bargain for themselves.

There is much more to it; but these are fair samples; and a more perfect program of reaction and ruin never was offered, not even by the N.A.M.

A general sales tax is the surest and safest device for relieving wealth from taxation, and putting burdens on poverty. It is a direct tax on living expenditures. The man who must spend his entire income to maintain his family must pay taxes on all of it. The rich man, who pays only a fraction of his income on living expenses, sees three-quarters or nine-tenths of his profits go wholly untaxed.

Just how prosperity would be helped by abolishing the TVA, which has already reduced electric light rates in this country by many millions a year, no one has explained. On the labor clauses, when NAM says that men must be protected in their right to work, it means that employers must be allowed to enlist private armies to crush strikes; and the "right" of individuals to "bargain" with great corporations is only a "right" to take whatever starvation wage the boss chooses to pay.

"It is not that you should do wrong by design," said the famous letter writer, Junius, to a near-statesman of his time. "The miracle is that you should never do right by mistake." The National Association of Manufacturers repeats that miracle, year in and year out.

Nation Needs Senator Cutting

Final returns in the long undetermined Nex Mexican senatorial election showed Bronson Cutting apparently elected, though his opponent is contesting the result and is striving to bring about a recount. Reactionary elements opposed to Senator Cutting are undoubtedly aiding him in this move.

Senator Cutting's record richly entitled him to a return to the Senate. It was a record strongly approved by labor, which holds that to keep him out of the Senate would be a blow for progress and the New Deal. His victory was a victory for the progressive voters of New Mexico, just as Senator La Follette's was in Wisconsin. Elected as a republican, Senator Cutting has been an independent during his term. Naturally he has been an outlaw in the view of old line politicians of both parties. But a majority of the voters of his state have supported him regardless of party labels and the nation is the gainer for it.

Battling Unemployment Insurance

According to an Associated Press dispatch from New York City, a group of corporation executives, whipped into action by President Roosevelt's declaration that unemployment insurance would be given a prominent place in his program of social insurance legislation, is mobilizing the officials of big business to draw up an unemployment insurance "based on sound business principles" for presentation to Congress as soon as the President's recommendation is submitted.

The dispatch says that big business executives are fearful that "jockeying" in congressional committees and on the floor of the Senate and House of Representatives "might produce a measure detrimental to business interests." Therefore, thy are going to save the day for social progress and the jobless by persuading Congress to write a law favored by business executives for the benefit of business.

They are the same men who have taken the lead in so thoroughly sabotaging, in the interest of profits, the President's reemployment program under the National Industrial Recovery Act, that for month after month the number of jobless has increased until it now stands at nearly eleven million.

According to the views of these overlords of employment opportunities, one would conclude that the object of unemployment insurance is to benefit business instead of the jobless. Of course, the reverse is true.

> The duty of congress is to enact a liberal unemployment insurance measure that will live up to its title and become the basis for affording adequate relief for the jobless during specific periods of unemployment, regardless of its effect on business. Organized labor will use all of its influence to see that such legislation is enacted.

When such a law is passed, it will be the job of business executives to adjust their businesses to the terms of the law. If they cannot do it, they can certainly get out of business and give more efficient managers an opportunity to forge ahead under principles that promote social progress and justice.

With this great object in view, relying upon the business executives who are responsible for the unemployed army to prepare "sound" measures on unemployment insurance, would be about as sane as to call a conference of the bank officials who managed our banks into nationwide bankruptcy to develop a "sound" banking system.

Once More—Our Decrepit Housing

A survey just made shows that in the lower East Side of New York, where the ground is priced as if it were carpeted with $10 bills, 35 per cent of the area is covered by buildings valued at $5,000 or less. Nearly all are obsolete; all ought to be torn down to make room for decent housing in place of slums. To add to the difficulties always encountered in slum clearance in this country, this land and the 2,870 buildings which occupy it are scattered among much better improved and managed property.

This report is just the latest of scores of surveys which show the all but unfillable need of housing. Sober estimates are that not more than one-third of our population are rightly houses, and that another third are lodged under conditions which are a distinct menace to their own health and the public welfare. The new interest in this basic problem is encouraging, but it will not be fully valued until it shows forth in building jobs.

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

Christmas approaches, coming fast, as it always does at this time of year. Christmas means many things to many people, nothing to many others.

To the mothers of large families, evicted from company owned textile mill houses in Georgia and other southern states it means one more day of struggle, perhaps with reflections upon certain gross inequities.

Have you, dear reader, ever seen a company owned mill house in a textile village? Chic Sale builds better than most mill companies build, and Chic builds only for part-time occupancy.

Christmas may mean a good feast, plenty of presents and an easy conscience to the owner of the mill, but if there can be an easy conscience within a maker of eviction orders then there might as well be none at all.

One good thing has come to the wage earners during these past months. Their movement has been strengthened and their labor press has grown much stronger.

The labor press is immensely stronger and better. There are some in the movement who still fail to recognize the great value of the labor press, but it is one of the most potent arms of the movement.

The first thing wanted when a conflict starts is the printed word—a newspaper. Nothing takes its place. And no other medium takes the message to the rank and file and to the nonunionist regularly throughout the year half as efficiently or a tenth as cheaply.

The labor press is better and stronger, thank you. Let that good work continue.

This is no review of the year. This is but a bit of a chat as the great holiday draws near.

Almost all big food companies can rejoice because their dividends have been fat, though plenty of Americans have had insufficient food. That does not concern directors, of course. It concerns the victims, however. Utility corporations, too, have had a good year and they are lining up to defeat extension of the TVA idea. That field is too good to give up without a struggle.

Santa Claus will have a big load to carry to certain kinds of people. To ten millions of unemployed and to twice that many who are underpaid he can go only to give a hand empty of everything except perhaps a friendly grip.

America can observe Christmas honestly only in spots. By next year . . . what?

Now to turn away from such speculations to something that is surefire. This is the age of organized effort. Some times even those things for which there is no good reason win out because there is force in the background. He who comes to be heard as the head of an army gets heard. He who comes all by himself is all too often pushed aside.

These things being as they are, the cause which is sound had better come with all possible force in the background.

Do you read in the stars the lesson concealed thus? It is this: Organize! Get strength, enormous strength, back of a sound cause. Then you'll be heard—how you'll be heard!

A wife determined to cure her husband of his bad ways and, with the aid of a sheet and an electric torch, transformed herself into a very fair imitation of a ghost. Then she went to her husband who was seated by the radio and shook him.

Husband—Whas that?

His Wife (in a sepulchral tone)—Satan.

Husband—Shake handsh, old horsh. I married your sister.

Newspaper Guild Quits Hearing On Code Amendments

Editorial Workers Withdraw in Protest Against NLRB Reopening of Case of Former Call Bulletin Employe.

Washington, Dec. 13.—In protest against reopening of the case of Dean S. Jennings, former San Francisco Call-Bulletin editorial employe, by the National Labor Relations board, representatives of the American Newspaper Guild withdrew from an NRA hearing on amendments to the newspaper code, fixing maximum working hours and minimum wages for editorial workers.

The labor board found that the Call-Bulletin had violated Section 7-A of the Recovery act and ordered the paper to reinstate Jennings, who charged he was forced to resign his job because of opposition to his activities in the newspaper guild.

Guild representatives at the code hearing charged that NRA had been "terrified" by the newspaper publishers.

Heywood Broun, guild president, obtained recognition when NRA division administrator Jack Tait opened the hearing. Broun withdrew his own appearance and that of all other guild representatives.

"We had come here," he said, "prepared to show you that on the average an American newspaper man must work for twenty years before he achieves a salary of $40 a week, and the fictitious quality of the publishers' proposals which, when translated into dollars, mean no contribution to re-employment or additional purchasing power."

The amendments before the hearing would establish under the code a work week ranging from 40 hours in cities over 50,000 population to 48 hours in cities and towns of fewer than 25,000. Additional hours may be worked in emergencies if compensated by off time. The wage amendment specifies minimums ranging from $25 per week for news workers in any city over 750,000 population to $12 per week in any city or town of less than 25,000.

"We are withdrawing now," Broun continued, "because of the extraordinary action of NRA in forcing reopening of the Jennings case. On Monday, the guild had won.

"On Tuesday we learned the case had been reopened. At whose request? Not at the request of the guild or Mr. Hearst, the two interested parties, but the the request of the acting general counsel for the NRA."

"When and if NRA purges itself," Broun continued, "we will return. We charge definitely that on this occasion and several former ones, NRA has allowed itself to be terrified by the publishers.

"We are going back to the picket line in Newark, where guild members called a strike on the Newark, New Jersey, Ledger."

Mills Named Labor Advisor.

Washington.—Clyde M. Mills, for five years president of Typographical Union No. 101 and recently elected vice-president of the Central Labor union here, has been named as labor advisor for Division 7 of the NRA, which handles all labor complaints coming under the Graphic Arts code. He resigned his union office to take up the new job Dec. 8.

Textile Labor Board Confirms Union's Claim of Discrimination

First Decision of Its Kind Holds Mill Owners Discriminated Against Former Strikers; Gorman Issues Statement on Situation

Washington, Dec. 13.—The claim of the United Textile Workers of America that textile mill owners have been discriminating against former strikers was confirmed in the first decision on a case of this character issued by the National Textile Labor Relations board here.

The board has held upon the record now before it that the Indianapolis Bleaching company has violated Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery act and Section 8 of the cotton textile code.

Francis J. Gorman, first vice president of the United Textile Workers of America, issued a statement in which he referred to the decision in refuting the contention of George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, who recently declared the textile strike "a failure" and "painted a rosy picture" for the industry.

Conditions in the cotton textile industry are miserable, inexcusable and precariously near intolerable," Mr. Gorman said. "What I want to make clear above all is that the union wants peace, offers real co-operation, repeats it again, but that it knows how to fight, and is perfectly willing to fight when peaceful means fail. If we were not strong believers in peace and co-operation we should be forced to say that there exists in the industry today ample cause for another national strike and one that would be settled on the battlefield where fought and in no other place."

Dairy Strike Predicted.

Mount Vernon, N. Y.—Thomas F. Murphy, secretary-treasurer of Westchester Local No. 338, Milk Wagon Drivers and Dairy Employes, predicts that a nation-wide strike in the dairy industry will very probably occur by the first of January, unless an NRA code covering dairy employes becomes effective by that time. He added: "Officials at Washington are astounded by the non-co-operation of the milk dealers."

Chiselers' Chamber Ballyhoos "Cheap Labor of South"

Industry Invited to Come Into This Section and Exploit Workers.

Washington, Dec. 13.—The Chamber of Commerce of Charlotte, N. C., has joined other southern interests in heralding to the country that the south has a great supply of "cheap labor," awaiting exploitation by such industrial interests in other parts of the country as care to come in and take advantage of these people.

In calling on the rest of the country to come into the south and exploit its "poor whites," the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce says:

"Conditions in this district tend toward steady employment, and stabilized wage earnings, because the majority of the workers are of native stock, and the problem of irresponsible, transient labor is not met with in any appreciable degree. Thus labor turnover is less and better production averages are maintained.

Labor Cheap; Wages Low.

"The manufacturer has a large present and potential supply of factory workers of both sexes to draw upon, and the type is of a high-class, native-born, Anglo-Saxon worker, intelligent and quick to learn.

"The supply of workers available for industry is large and regular in both sexes. Industrial workers are drawn particularly from surrounding rural sections, over a wide area. An adequate supply of skilled, semi-skilled and trained factory workers is well maintained by the regularity of employment.

"U. S. census figures show that the male and female population of Charlotte is almost evenly divided, and the percentage of female workers employed here, in jobs requiring accuracy and care, is higher than in most industrial centers.

Exploit Women Workers.

"This is not said as a reflection on the male factory workers, but is mentioned to show the availability of, and possible resulting economy in the use of, female workers in this district.

"Wage rates, including starting rates, vary somewhat throughout the entire Charlotte district, depending on factory location and the kind and class of workers desired. It is not feasible in this pamphlet to quote exact wage or starting rates, but general wage schedules are available to anyone interested and entitled to this information.

"In general, it may be said that wage rates are lower in this section than in northern industrial centers, due to lower living costs, better working conditions and steadier employment."

This circular is typical of the advertising of chambers of commerce in the south, urging industrialists in the rest of the country to come into this area and exploit the "cheap labor" to the limit—in low wages and in other practices typical of the south.

New York Court Upholds Legality Of "Closed Shop" Agreement Under Section 7-A of Recovery Act

New York, Dec. 13.—The Doll and Toy Workers' union has won a clean-cut victory in its suit against Ralph A. Freundlich, Inc.

Justice William H. Black, of the supreme court, has rendered a decision fully upholding the legality of a "closed shop" agreement entered into under Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery Act. Rendering the decision Dec. 1, Justice Black gave the union and the manufacturing concern a week in which to settle their differences; under threat that if this is not done the court will see to it that the provisions of Section 7-A is strictly observed.

Controversy between the union and the company extended over a year; then an agreement was reached last February establishing a closed shop. A dispute later arose, which was taken to the Regional Labor Board; the decision favoring the union. Other disputes arose and the company contended that Section 7-A prohibited the closed shop principle. The company later purchased a factory at Clinton, Mass., to which only a part of the New York employees moved. The union contended that the company was simply fleeing to another state to avoid its obligations under the closed shop agreement and sued to restrain the company, winning a temporary restraining order.

At the hearing for a permanent injunction, Ralph Freundlich, president of the company, agreed to employ union members both in New York and Massachusetts. As a result of that agreement, Justice Black gave the litigants a week in which to compose their differences. In doing so, the court definitely laid down the principle upon which they must try to reach an agreement and definitely sustained the legality of the "closed shop" agreement under Section 7-A of the NRA.

Decision Is Important.

The Doll and Toy Workrs' union's attorneys in the case were assisted by an A. F. of L. attorney. Hearing of the case required about a month.

Importance is attached to the case because it is believed the decision of Justice Black may have a direct bearing upon the final legal establishment of the principle of the "closed shop" agreement under existing laws.

Justice Black said, "If 7-A is sustained, better relations between employer and employe may go forward."

HOSIERY WORKERS BATTLE LOCAL ANTI-UNION DRIVES

Philadelphia.—A drive to push legislation that will halt the illegal anti-union activities of local authorities is being launched by the Eastern Pennsylvania District council of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

This step was decided upon at a meeting of the district council held in the federation office here with delegates in attendance from the following branches: Quakertown, Langhorne, Lansdale, Norristown, Spring City and Philadelphia.

This move which the district council is making was decided upon after hearing reports on the Lansdale and Allentown situations, where local authorities by one means or another are attempting to suppress all union activities. It was pointed out that two boroughs in Lehigh county are planning to pass resolutions similar to those adopted by the Lansdale Borough council, which would virtually make a strike impossible. In Allentown, the mayor and his police force were assuming the right to prevent picketing at two plants.

In view of the fact that the incoming legislature in Pennsylvania will be democratic and committed to a program designed to make the state safe for trade unionists, council members decided to mobilize its full strength in an effort to enact laws that will forbid subsidiary governing bodies from violating constitutional rights.

The campaign which the hosiery workers will conduct will be carried on through the state federation of labor and in conjunction with all other organized groups in the area where the hosiery workers have branches.

Officers of the district council instructed Representative Walter Bramley and Research Director John W. Edelman, of the federation, to frame necessary recommendations for legislative action and to work out plans for pushing the drive before the legislature convenes.

If money is really the root of evil a lot of us wicked ones don't go very deep into the soil.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

A. F. OF L. OFFICERS URGE SUPPORT FOR UNION LABEL TRADES DEPARTMENT

Washington, Dec. 13.—Pres. William Green and Secretary Frank Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, have addressed a special communication to all affiliated organizations, in support of the current label campaign being conducted by the Union Label Trades department, which is under the direction of Secretary-Treasurer I. M. Ornburn.

The letter, which is of special importance to all members of organized labor, is as follows:

The union label and the union shop card typify the best that has been obtained in wages and humane conditions of employment through collective bargaining. They are symbolic of decent working standards, sanitary conditions of employment and freedom of the workers to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing. In supporting the union label and the union shop card, therefore, organized labor and all their friends are making contributions toward the development of organized effort, solidarity and improved standards of living. We can help ourselves and help the organized labor movement by extending loyal, devoted and active support to the union label and the union shop card. Let us keep these faces steadily in mind and, keeping them in mind, make an intensive drive in every city, town and hamlet throughout the nation in an individual and organized effort to popularize the union label and the union shop card.

"If every member of organized labor and every worker's friend would when making purchases demand goods bearing the union label and would patronize only those merchants who display the shop card, the cause of organized labor would be most wonderfully advanced. I appeal to the officers and members of organized labor to keep this fact steadily in mind.

May I urge the greatest degree of cooperation on the part of national unions, stat federations of labor, city central bodies, and local unions in the purchase of union made goods and in the extension of patronage to merchants displaying the union shop card? The American Federation of Labor is cooperating wholeheartedly with the Union Label Trades department in the support of the union label and the union shop card. The power lies within our own hands. We can achieve success if we will only try.

I appeal to the workers and their friends everywhere to join heartily in this most worthy cause to patronize the union label and the union shop card and to demonstrate the discriminating attitude of organized labor and its friends in the purchase of union made goods.

New Building Trades Department Formed Under A. F. of L. Direction

Washington, Dec. 8.—In accordance with the direction of the San Francisco convention of the American Federation of Labor, seven unions met at A. F. of L. headquarters here and formed a new Building Trades Department. The old Building Trades Department, headed by M. J. McDonough, is as a consequence no longer recognized by the A. F. of L.

The convention was called by President William Green, of the A. F. of L., who presided. Following organization on the first day, a committee was appointed to confer with the old Building Trades Department in an endeavor to arrange a settlement of the difficulties which arose when the department refused at San Francisco to seat delegates from the Carpenters, Bricklayers and Electrical Workers' unions. No agreement was reached and organization of the new department, with election of officers, was completed on the third day.

The officers elected were: J. W. Williams, of the Carpenters, president; Herbert Rivers, Teamsters, secretary-treasurer; John Possehl, Operating Engineers, first vice-president; Richard J. Gray, Bricklayers, second vice-president; Dan W. Tracy, Electrical Workers, third vice-president; William McCarthy, Marble Workers, fourth vice-president; Tom L. Hughes, Teamsters, fifth vice-president; Joseph V. Moreschi, Hod Carriers, sixth vice-president. President Williams, a veteran trades unionist, is from St. Louis, Mo. He is vice-president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

The new officers will serve until the next regular convention of the department and will also serve the unexpired terms this year of the officers of the former Building Trades Department.

Unions represented at the special convention were: Carpenters, Stationary Engineers, Marble Polishers, Teamsters, Bricklayers, Electrical Workers and Hod Carriers. Unions which remained affiliated with the unrecognized Building Trades Department and refused to attend the special convention were: Asbestos Workers, Boilermakers, Iron Workers, Elevator Constructors, Granite Cutters, Lathers, Sheet Metal Workers, Painters, Plasterers, Plumbers, Roofers and Stone Masons.

SAN FRANCISCO DAILY HERALD VIOLATOR OF SECTION 7-A

Washington, Dec. 8.—The national labor relations board has ordered the San Francisco Call-Bulletin to submit written proof that it has offered to reinstate Dean S. Jennings, discharged editorial office worker. Otherwise, the board ruled, the case will be "transferred to the enforcement agencies for appropriate action."

The board found that the Call-Bulletin had "interfered" with the self-organization of its employes in violation of Section 7-A of the recovery act in that the agreed date for Jennings' vacation was changed in order to embarrass him in his plan to attend as a delegate to the national convention of the American Newspaper Guild held at St. Paul, Minn., whereby he was forced to resign his job, an action which alarmed other employes and led to their wholesale resignation from the Guild."

MAYORS PREDICT TROUBLE UNLESS JOBLESS GET WORK

Washington, Dec. 13. — Trouble looms in American industrial centers this winter unless the government supports a big public works program for unemployment relief, representatives of the American conference of mayors told Secretary Ickes here.

"The relief load will jump from 18,000,000 to 23,000,000 persons unless the administration supplies money to put millions of men to work," Paul Bettors, Chicago, secretary of the mayors' conference, said.

"Unless the government stimulates employment," he said, "there will be trouble in America's industrial centers this winter."

Mayors Dan Hoan, Milwaukee; T. Semmes Walmsley, New Orleans, and Henry Worley, Columbus, O., informed Ickes that the mayors' conference, in its recent meeting in Chicago, had pledged its unanimous support to the government's public works program.

"But," said Mayor Hoan, "if the administration does not recommend continuance of public works, American mayors will go direct to congress."

After conferring with Secretary Ickes, the mayors met with Administrator Hopkins, where they declared themselves in "hearty accord" with the proposed low-cost housing and slum clearance program.

"The only thing standing in the way of a public works and low-cost housing program," Hoan said, "is the fact that prices of building materials are far too high. We are going to ask the administration or congress to do something about lowering them."

UTILITY UNIONS SCARCE.

New York.—A survey of 697 public utility companies, conducted by one of organized labor's star opponents, the National Industrial Conference Board, shows that these concerns, many of them fostering "company unions," have been right successful in maintaining their working organizations on a non-union basis. The concerns covered in the survey employed 578,912 workers, or 49% of all employees of the industry. Of this number, only 12% dealt with their employers through organized labor unions. Another survey told a different story, however. Of 760,000 railroad workers covered in a survey made by the same board, approximately 75% bargained with their employers through organized labor unions.

"Company" and Independent Unions Compared by A. F. of L.

The American Federation of Labor has issued a nine-point comparison between "company unions," organized and promoted under auspices of mill managements, and independent unions organized by workers themselves for collective dealing with employes. The nine-point comparison says:

THE COMPANY UNION	THE A. F. OF L. UNION
1. Is formed by the company to prevent organization in a real union.	1. Is formed by the employes themselves to secure better working conditions.
2. Is favored by employers because they know there is nothing to fear from such unions.	2. Is opposed by employers because they know that such unions will secure better working conditions for their workers.
3. Can be destroyed by the employer at any time, since he runs it.	3. Can never be destroyed so long as it is actively supported by all union members.
4. Is paid for by the employer and controlled by the employer.	4. Is paid for by the union members and controlled by the union members.
5. Charges no dues and makes no contribution to general improvement in working conditions.	5. Charges dues which help directly to build nation-wide organization and to bring about labor laws to protect workers.
6. Does not secure higher wages or better working conditions.	6. Does secure higher wages and better working conditions, as is clearly shown by the history of the American Federation of Labor.
7. Is not a true agency for collective bargaining since employe representatives under company union plans are required to follow the instructions of the management.	7. Is a true collective bargaining agency which negotiates with the management as directed by the union members upon questions of wages, hours and working conditions.
8. Is not able to bargain in the true sense of Section 7 (a), because when the company bargains with the company union it does not bargain with the workers but with itself.	8. Is chosen by the workers under section 7(a) to represent them in collective bargaining.
9. Is limited to one shop, plant, or establishment, while employers themselves are so organized on a nation-wide basis in trade associations that individual groups of employes are powerless.	9. Is affiliated with and supported by the American Federation of Labor, which is a nation-wide organization, giving protection to all workers against organized employers.

MORE ABOUT ELEVATOR BOYS

President Feeney also advised that a number of our locals lost a great deal of money through bank failures during that time recently. However, on the other hand, the Philadelphia, Pa., local lent to their unemployed members some $178,000 during the unfortunate period our country has gone through, so that they would not have to depend upon any form of relief or charity. President Feeney was very optimistic over the future prospects of the elevator men.

Local No. 77 is very fortunate in having signed contracts with the two elevator companies in Chattanooga, namely, the Smith Elevator company, a local manufacturer, and the Otis Elevator company, who have offices in all principal cities throughout the United States. These companies have always been fair and worked in harmony with our men.

FACTORY OUTPUT UP 15%.

New York.—According to a recent statement issued by Dun and Bradstreet, Inc., production schedules for November run from 15% to 20% in what is termed the "secondary industrial division" over the same month last year. While the consumer goods division and the capital goods division did not progress much during the past summer, they are now showing signs of sound improvement, according to the report.

lisher, restaurateur, druggist, tire dealer, individualist, etc., etc., etc."

Officials of Central Body also recalled that McDonald, grand high mogul of the "Home Stores" and their various affiliates, informed a committee which called upon him many months ago that he is an "individualist," that various wealthy corporations have tried to compete with him and failed, that any man who works for him will come to work at such time as the boss sees fit, and will quit when the boss tells him to. Also, that no matter in what capacity he is employed, if the "big man" desires that he sweep the floors, keep the books or whatever, he will do just that.

President Hoover, he averred, made a grave mistake in 1928 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders that wages would be maintained. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer, baker, dairyman, printer, publisher, tire dealer, restaurateur, druggist, etc., maintained, we would be out of the depression, and we will never emerge, he added, until wages are reduced 50 per cent.

It was recalled also that McDonald has had considerable trouble with various building trades unions, and when he established his throw-sheet, which he announced as a stepping stone to the daily newspaper field, he employed an operator from another section, although several were unemployed in this city.

McDonald's throw-sheet, however, was not received very enthusiastically by local business houses, and quickly developed into an advertising sheet for his stores alone.

Central Body officers asked The Labor World to state positively that no indications of an agreement with McDonald have been seen, and that, in fact, such is hardly within the range of possibility in view of the arrogant attitude and warped philosophy of the merchant prince.

CLERKS' PAY DROPS.

Washington.—The annual pay envelope for the workers employed in retail stores totals $326 less now than in 1929, according to a statement of the census bureau. THE SHOCKING STORY OF INCOME TAX RETURNS

Washington, Dec. 13.—The preliminary report of the internal revenue bureau for 1933 is a startling document; in some respects, a shocking document. In a year marked by great and sincere efforts to mitigate and lessen poverty, the rich grew richer and the poor, collectively, grew poorer; and the figures of income taxes prove it.

In 1932, twenty men had net incomes of $1,000,000 or more, each, and a total net income of $35,239,556. It is worth repeating that this is net profit; what was left after all expenses were paid, all imaginable items charged off, and all lawyers who make a rich living by showing rich men how to evade taxes had received their pay.

In 1933, forty-six men had net incomes of $1,000,000 or more, each; and a total net income of $81,558,981.

But in 1932, 3,420,995 persons reported net income of less than $5,000, each; while in 1933 there were 3,339,602 such incomes. No less than 81,393 persons had dropped below the income reporting level in that year which was supposed to be starting a fairer regime for all.

This contrast runs all through the returns. All incomes above $25,000 were greater, both in number and in volume of money, in 1933 than in 1932; and all incomes below that level were smaller, both in number and in volume of money.

Incomes above $25,000 gained a total of $127,684,001 in 1933 over the same group of incomes in 1932.

Incomes under $25,000 lost a total of $532,480,222 in 1933 from the same group of incomes in 1932.

By these figures, the rich got richer in 1933, and the poor and even many of the very well-to-do got poorer. But there is a still more terrible contrast than that.

In 1933, with the federal government striving to help the needy as never before, forty-six men had net profits of $81,559,000; while ten million unemployed had nothing.

The national income cannot long be distributed in that fashion without disaster. This is a matter of experience. In 1929, 513 super-rich men, with their net profits for the year, could have bought the wheat and cotton crops of the whole United States next year at farm prices; or thirty-eight super-richest men could have paid the wages of 428,000 cotton mill workers for the same year, and still had million dollars a year, each, to play with.

THAT KIND OF CONCENTRATION OF WEALTH BROUGHT THE DEPRESSION. NOW, WE SEEM TO BE TRAVELING THE SAME TRAIL AGAIN.

The best way to find a pin on the floor in your home is to walk around the room in your stocking feet.

TIMES REPORTER HAS ANOTHER PIPE DREAM; EDITOR TAKES WHIFF

Christmas Libations May Have Begun Early Under Gilded Dome.

Writer Sees Fearful Calamities Facing City as a Result of Workers' Determination to Stop Oppressions by Selfish, Arrogant, Law-Breaking Employers—Held Points Out Inaccuracies in Morning Paper's "News" Story Concerning Textile Situation.

Continuing what apparently is a campaign designed to break the morale of organized workers of Chattanooga, particularly in the local textile mills, the morning Times last week sent a reporter out to get some "news" concerning the removal of mills from Chattanooga to other communities. The reporter labored and brought forth a fantastic array of "figures" and "estimates," purporting to have been furnished by "what is considered a competent, reliable authority."

A casual reader, or one who is not familiar with the situation, might have been led to believe Chattanooga workers were driving all business from the city through their determination to force selfish employers to live up to the law of the land which gives them the right to bargain collectively. Included in the mass of misinformation presented unblushingly by the morning paper is the statement that "This situation has been aggravated by the selection of this city as headquarters for the direction of certain future labor activities in the south." Which, incidentally, is about as accurate as the other "figures" and "estimates" quoted on the authority of "Prominent Citizen," "Old Subscriber," or whoever it was that spoofed the news writer. The only reasonable assumption of the identity of the Times reporter's informant, if any, is that his headquarters is on Broad street.

Allegation that Chattanooga has been named some sort of organization headquarters, labor officials pointed out, probably arises from the fact that a gang of arrogant, selfish and law-breaking industrialists have goaded their employes to such an extent that the spontaneous wave for organization in self-protection has resulted in thousands of Chattanooga workers being enrolled in the ranks of American Federation of Labor unions during the past few months.

The Times editorial writer, of course, followed up the "news" story with a typical Times editorial, in which he took occasion to advise labor "leaders" as to their conduct, their qualifications and their obligations to society. It was noted, however, that in closing this paternalistic sermon, the Times writer explained not what must be done if "the community is to avoid getting the reputation of being a place where law and order are not maintained." Trades unionists recalled that only a short time ago the morning oracle charged that in fact Chattanooga had already gained that reputation.

Fred G. Held, representative of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, this week submitted a statement for the readers of The Labor World, pointing out some of the inaccuracies and inconsistencies in the latest outburst of the Times, as follows:

"After reading statements in the daily press the last few days I feel as though it is incumbent upon me to attempt to refute some of the malicious misrepresentations that are being presented to the public in reference to the moving of hosiery mills from Chattanooga. It would be amusing if it were not so tragic to the workers involved, who have lost their jobs as a result of these removals.

"In the first place, Mr. Pope Shepherd comes out with a statement that these mills moved due to lack of law enforcement by the police officials and the 'lawlessness' of the strikers. No doubt, what Mr. Shepherd means by law enforcement is that the police should have clubbed the heads of the strikers and used all kinds of inhuman brutality upon them to force them back into the mills, but because the police department did not see fit, or see any reason to do such a thing, the police and the authorities did not do their duty. Mr. Shepherd does not mention that the hosiry and other textile mill owners were violating the laws of the land by different methods and that the strike was brought about, due to these methods, in an attempt to force these lawbreakers to live up to the law. Of course, it all depends upon who breaks the law, in the minds of such persons as Mr. Shepherd.

"If persons of the type of Mr. Shepherd would spend some of their time in investigating the reason why the workers here in Chattanooga organized and the cause of the strike, instead of making such foolish speeches at luncheons and dinners, they might change their opinions somewhat and be able to do humanity some real service. Mr. Shepherd either does not know of some of the terrible conditions under which these workers must endure, or else he does not care. I do not claim that their conditions are any worse than in some surrounding small communities, where perhaps they may even be worse, but that does not offer any reason why the workers here have no right to organize into legitimate labor unions and attempt to rectify some of the abuses under which they have worked for years.

"We never hear these so-called public-spirited citizens criticize the mill owners, that perhaps they may have been at fault in bringing about the strike situation or that they could have prevented the strike by agreeing to live up to the law. They also do not mention the real reason why they are moving, so that they can get cheaper labor, and because due to the workers organizing they must live up to the laws of the land. These are the real reasons why both the Miller-Smith and Browning mills moved from Chattanooga.

"The textile mill owners always profess to have no objections to their employes organizing, but actions indicate plainer than words what their real attitude is. Certainly they have no objections as long as only a few join a labor union, but when the union becomes strong in numbers and becomes effective, then they show their true colors.

"In an article appearing in a local paper recently, purporting to be a true picture of what Chattanooga has lost through the removal of mills, is another perversion of facts. Briefly, a writer claims that the city has lost

Chambers of Commerce Which Cajole Manufacturers to Move

New York City.—At the third national conference on labor standards, called by the National Consumers' League and held at the Allerton house, 30 East Fifty-seventh street, recently, Elinor Morehouse Herrick, director of the regional labor board, gave an interesting account of employers who are enticed by the campaign of chambers of commerce to moving into new communities. The following is only one of numerous "runaway" employers cases that she mentioned:

"This problem of 'runaway' employers is, of course, not new," she explained. "It was not new in 1932. Every time that regulatory legislation, state or municipal, improving standards of work is proposed, employer associations threaten removals to new territory where standards of work are as yet unguarded. Throughout the depression years state departments of labor in Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Massachusetts complained of the influx of 'fly-by-night' firms who moved from New York to escape the relatively high labor standards imposed by the New York labor laws, which are rigorously enforced by our very competent department of labor.

"Two years ago a commissioner of labor for the state of Pennsylvania told us of a chamber of commerce in a small Pennsylvania town which paid $1,000 to a new manufacturer, gave free rent, light and heat to a suitcase manufacturer to come 'to give employment to the local citizens.' The company worked in that community seven weeks without paying one cent of wages to any of the people whom it employed and then absconded, not leaving even a paper suitcase in the community."

FAIR SALARY FOR TEACHERS IS FAVORED

Senator Morgan Is for $100 Minimum.

LEGISLATORS ARE TOLD OF PROBLEMS

Local Delegation Gives Sympathetic Hearing to Joint Labor Committee.

"I favor a salary schedule for local school teachers with a minimum of not less than $100 per month," Senator Fletcher Morgan told a committee representing the Chattanooga-Hamilton County federation and Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, at a conference held in the senator's office last Saturday afternoon with the entire legislative delegation.

He was told that the teachers' organization had proposed $800 a year as a minimum salary, not because they felt that figure was by any means adequate, but they desired to be conservative. Stanton E. Smith, president of Local 246, informed Senator Morgan a salary schedule such as the latter suggested would increase the payrolls locally some 47 per cent.

"Let it come," was the reply.

The senator, as well as other members of the delegation, appeared to approve practically all proposals offered on behalf of the union teachers, who are thoroughly in accord with the program of the state board of education and are working in co-operation with that body to secure much-needed reforms in the educational system throughout Tennessee.

Prof. S. E. Smith explained to the legislators that at a general meeting of the federation Saturday morning proposed consolidation of city and county systems was indorsed, with, however, some major reservations. He stressed six points which he said the teachers felt should be included in the consolidation plan, including guarantee of a salary schedule, manner of selection of board members, retention of free textbooks, tenure and other safeguards for the system and the welfare of the teachers.

Discussing the proposed salary schedule, published in last week's issue of The Labor World, a spokesman for the federation said Thursday:

"The Chattanooga-Hamilton County Teachers' association believes that the salary schedule it is advocating will do more than anything else to increase the enthusiasm of the present teaching staff for getting further educational qualifications. So far, in this city, the largest single group has been those who have only two years of college training or less. The salaries paid these teachers are much higher in proportion to their training than those of better qualified teachers. When salaries in the lowest qualified group are relatively high and no reward is given for further training, it has seemed a poor investment financially to seek such qualifications. Why should this be? Why not inaugurate a new deal in education in this city and put the emphasis on the well-trained teacher? The new salary schedule of the teachers seeks to do that very thing by making the salaries of such teachers high enough to encourage the teachers of the lower groups to strive to attain the increased salaries of those groups.

"If the teachers' pension bill is enacted into law no more teachers without degrees will be employed. In that case all new teachers, according to the teachers' scale, will start with a salary of $1,000 and advance toward a salary more in keeping with the standards of living of a cultured group than anything that could be expected under the present scheme of things.

"Should the city of Chattanooga only restore the tenth month check, which was discontinued when the salaries were slashed to the present level, the incentive for further study, which the federation considers one of the best reasons for having such a scale, would still be lacking. Under such a plan the group of teachers with a master degree would have a median of $500 below the federation scale while some teachers would draw as much as $1,500 below the scale. The teachers with bachelor degrees

BOSSES WAGE BITTER FIGHT ON UNIONISTS

Textile Workers Targets of Reactionaries.

MILL OWNERS BALK PROGRESS

Use Every Means to Prevent Organization of Long-Suffering Workers.

That Chattanooga workers are not alone in facing bitter warfare conducted by selfish employers against the onward march of organization is indicated in reports from many sections of the south.

Sock mill barons, accustomed to rule with an iron hand in their own particular communities, are "dying hard" in their last stand against the forces of Americanism and decency as represented in the organization of the workers, and apparently are stopping at nothing in order to prevent the emancipation of their employes through such organizations.

Typical of many items in the news furnished through International Labor News Service, which furnishes for Labor World readers the latest developments in the industrial field, is a story which comes this week from Russellville, Alabama. This story, which follows, might be repeated as applying to practically every southern textile community:

Russellville, Ala., Dec. 20.—While mill bosses boast of the power and pull of Alabama mills in Washington, condition of workers in the Russellville branch connected with the union reaches into the depths of oppression and depravity. P. M. Sinclair is superintendent of the local mill, which is owned by the parent company in Birmingham, with P. A. Remmond, president; W. E. Hendrick, secretary, and L. H. Rice, general superintendent. The company operates ten mills in Alabama towns.

Recently C. L. Richardson, for the national textile labor relations board, made a presumed settlement of charges of discrimination against workers here, but since his departure, conditions have gone from bad to worse. Superintendent Sinclair and his boss weaver, Ed Bostic, are out to stamp out unionism. and, incidentally, to punish workers who have lodged complaints against this mill and its medieval management.

Louise Luna worked for eighteen months in the cloth room, until Sinclair learned she had joined the union. Then he notified her she was not "making production," and discharged her. Bostic entered the place of business of a union man in the town to personally abuse him. Overseers in the mill generally carry pistols, and abuse and curse union hands until they are compelled to quit.

Bostic discharged Sam and Cora Durant, president and secretary of the local union. Under threats of violence, they were forced to leave town. The succeeding union president and secretary were treated in the same manner.

Then Edna Manuel, with a splendid record as a worker, became secretary of the union. As she approached the mill she was threatened with mob violence by workers in league with the management to stamp out the union. When she entered the spinning room, twelve women employes attacked her, severely beat her and compelled her to go home. Under the smiles of the spinning room boss, purse of $8 was raised and distributed among the twelve women.

Several weeks ago General Superintendent Rice came to Russellville and called at the offices of the local union. He said if the local officials "would come to an understanding with him," he would "recognize the union and have it right along." The local officials refused to sell out, and since then there has been relentless persecution of every known member of the union.

Union members are nagged by officials and overseers from Sinclair down, and threats of personal violence are made daily. Southern feudalism in industries come to a high-water mark in Russellville, where mill officials, unable to buy out the local union officials, are concentrating every effort on driving them from town and breaking up organization among the workers.

HIT CHAIN STORE WAGES.

Ottawa, Canada.—The parliamentary mass buying commission, in recent hearings, has revealed many startling facts in connection with wages paid chain store employes, which is expected to result favorably for the workers. An example is cited in the case of the F. W. Woolworth company, Ltd., which, while making a profit of $1,800,000, representing 20 per cent on their investment, in 1932, reduced employes' wages 10 per cent. Average pay was found to be $10.80, with some getting as low as $7 for a full week.

"Pains Gone," Says Lady, After She Had Taken CARDUI

In describing how her health improved after she had taken Cardui, Mrs. Ralph R. Courtney, of Wytheville, Va., said: "I was run-down and suffered from pain in my side. I wanted to feel well and get rid of the pain in my side, so I sent for Cardui and began taking it. By the time I had taken three bottles of Cardui, I was feeling much better. The pains had gone. I am very glad to recommend Cardui to other young women." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. $1 a bottle, at drug stores.

The Spirit of Christmas

By Katherine Edelman

THE Spirit of Christmas has descended upon the world. In some mysterious, magic way, it has entered into your heart and mine, transforming, changing us from the everyday people of yesterday. We have become more human, more understanding, more likable. The walls of coldness, of pride and of selfishness have fallen into ruins, the barriers of misunderstanding have crumbled into ashes, before the force of this mighty Spirit. Light and love and faith have entered into our hearts, bringing with them the peace that passeth all understanding. Friends have grown more close and dear; ties of home and kindred have become a thousand times more precious. Our hearts go out to the poor and unfortunate in a great rush of sympathy and we grow eager and anxious to make their way more easy. Our homes reflect the joy in our souls; they glow with brightness and cheer and with a gracious spirit of hospitality.

THE Spirit of Christmas has filled us with a desire to serve, to give, to make others happy. We are glad and proud to sacrifice our own pleasure that others may have greater joy. We grow fearful and afraid lest one home in all our land should be forgotten; lest one little child should fail to be remembered . . . You and I, and all the rest of mankind, have been changed into messengers of joy, of peace, and of goodwill through this beautiful Spirit of Christmas that has taken possession of our hearts.

TRANSIENTS MUST WORK.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Transient workers coming to Florida this winter need not hope for any direct relief, according to Henry Bedkey, state director for transients for the FERA. According to present plans, anyone applying for relief will be assigned to some task and, if he refuses to work, he will be turned over to the authorities of the county in which he is located as a vagrant. Florida has a reputation for pushing "vagrancy" charges, as records of the convict camps attest. However, the new deal in relief may prove advantageous in this way: If a person is picked up by an officer on a vagrancy charge, he must be turned over to the transient bureau, instead of slapping him in jail as usual. If willing to work on relief projects assigned, he may have the vagrancy charge completely.

It costs no more in effort or money to secure UNION GOODS and SERVICE, if you demand and insist on them.

"FELICIA, I forgot to bring anything for your Uncle Hurry!"

Father, mother, and daughter-halfway-through-high-school were in a huddle in the pantry, with the kid brother Ripley ("Rip" for short) hovering curiously beyond the door.

"He won't care, Dad." The pretty brunette girl relieved her father of his bundles. "With his radio act going over in a big way he can buy anything he likes. I hope he remembers a wrist watch with a little diamond is nicer than a wrist watch with none."

"Whatever he gives you, Felicia, act as if it's what you want most," her mother warned. "Horrigan would rather be appreciated than anything else in the world. He knows I like pretty negligees. I let him know how I enjoy his presents."

"I was trying to land that contract with Davidson," the father explained, "and I spent most of the evening with him at the McAlpin. When I left there was barely an hour to shop. I didn't dare take a late train, knowing we still had to decorate."

"Did you get the new ornaments?" Mother was pulling at a knobby package.

"Here, don't bother that. It's this one." Father tried to take off his muffler while watching the parcels, with eight-year-old Rip calling, "Aren't you even going to say 'Hello,' Dad?"

"Sure, son! I was helping Santa with his pack, that's all."

"Santa, hmph! Did you get my bicycle?"

"We'll see! We'll see!" As he went upstairs, trailed by boyish impatience, the words floated back, "I simply forgot Hurry. There'd have been time if I'd—"

"Felicia can go to the haberdasher's right here," his wife solved the matter. "The important thing is to get the tree finished and the gifts spread under it before Hurry comes. He always admires my tree. Felicia, buy him one gift from your father and me, and one from you and your brother."

"What would Uncle Hurry like, mother?"

"M-mm. He has everything he needs, and he never mentions anything he wants. Ask the clerk to suggest something."

The silver star was aglow, the last fat Santa Claus clinging to a limb, Felicia's purchases had been hastily wrapped in golden and green tissue, when the door burst open admitting Horrigan Carter of "Hurry and Haste" radio comedy team. His arms were full of red, green, and holly-papered parcels, and behind him came the cheery chauffeur, his arms full, too.

"Drop 'em, James my lad. Now hurry to that girl of yours and make hay while the snow falls. Come for me at eleven. Here, don't you need a little extra? It's Christmas." Uncle Hurry put a bill in the man's hand and clapped the door shut.

"Felicia, what a lovely tree! You always have something original, Sophia. Henry, how's business? And," (looking around) "where's Rip?"

"Ki-i-ipley!" called Felicia, flinging open the dining room door.

In the midst of discarded outer wrappings, a red-faced small boy was struggling with tissue and ribbons.

"Aw, gee, F'lice. I wanted to tie it myself. Aw, gee! Why'd you have to go open the door? I spent all the money I earned cuttin' lawns last summer and shovelin' snow this week, an'— Aw, gee, it's a fine gift. If I could get it fixed, it would look swell."

Uncle Hurry jumped to close the door. "Go ahead, old fellow. We won't look."

"It's no use. Everybody's saw." Rip came toward them with the gift protruding from its wrappings. It was a salad bowl with a wooden mixing spoon.

"Who's it for, Ripley?" mother asked.

"Uncle Hurry!"

Felicia began to laugh. "What a gift for Uncle Hurry! Why, Rip, you give salad bowls to ladies, not men."

Rip looked disconsolate. "He said he wanted it. We were passing that shop where they sell old things and he said—you did, Uncle Hurry, you said, 'Jove what a quaint salad bowl! I'd like that.'"

"Of course I did. Next day when I went to buy it for my kitchenette they said it had been put aside for someone. It's great to get it this way!"

"I guess even Santa Claus would rather what he wanted was given to him than to buy it for himself," said Rip wisely.

CADDY lighted the fire in the fireplace. She switched on the Christmas lights for the tree. She pulled down the shades, and pushed an easy chair towards the fire. Haisy would be home any time now, cold and weary from his round of calls on sick people. This was their first Christmas eve together since they had been married.

Haisy had started out on his rounds at noon. At three he had telephoned to say he was obliged to abandon his car. The snow was too deep. He had borrowed a pair of snowshoes and a fur cap, and with bag in hand, was about to walk a road leading through the woods to a small shack where a sick woman lay waiting his ministrations. At Caddy's worried inquiries, he said it would take him a couple of hours. Then he had a three-mile walk further on the main turnpike, to a child suffering with a quinsy sore throat. After that, he would retrace his steps, get his car, and drive home.

Caddy gazed into the flames. This country practice covered miles and miles. Haisy was conscientious. He never failed to reach his patients somehow, but he was tired and worn out. And Caddy herself was often lonely. Her plans for fun, for little parties at home, usually ended in trying to get someone to fill Haisy's place. She knew it would be like this. Haisy had warned her. She was sensible and patient. Yet tonight . . . Christmas eve, and Haisy's birthday. She sighed . . . she simply couldn't bear to have anything go wrong.

The telephone rang. "That you, Caddy? I'm stuck again. The drifts are so deep I can't walk through. I'm out of the wood road all safe, and within two miles of that sick child. But none of the farmers near here has a team of horses. I really need oxen to pull me through. It's tough going."

"Oh," breathed Caddy, trying not to sound dismal.

"Caddy, I wonder," he hesitated. She could tell he was tired by the drag in his voice. "If you could possibly get Lem Salter's team of oxen and drive here for me! I simply can't ask him to do it himself. He has his daughter home for the holidays and her family. It's Christmas."

Caddy could not speak. She knew what this meant. Hours of being out in the storm. Heaven alone knew when they would get home. She glanced about the friendly, inviting room.

"Won't you, darling . . . to help me out?"

Then she remembered something her father had said to her on her wedding day:

"You will never be allowed to forget you are the wife of a country doctor But I think he's worth it . . . if you are!"

So now over the telephone she said, "All right. Stay where you are. Get warm and rested, and I'll be there by Shanghai Express!"

The tedious drive behind the oxen seemed endless. The snow sifted down inside her collar. It blinded her. She was not actually suffering, but she was pretty uncomfortable. On . . . and on . . . and on. The whirling curtains swept before her The snow drifted across the broad backs of the patient beasts. They took their own way in their own plodding time. Caddy sat on a box wrapped round with a bear rug.

On and on . . . and on. Creak — creak . . . the swaying of the beasts was like some grotesque, nightmarish rhythm She almost fell asleep.

Then out of the whiteness ahead she heard a shout. "Hey . . . bless your heart, darling!" And Haisy jumped aboard.

The child was very sick. The throat had to be lanced. Caddy forget her injured feelings. She helped capably. The mother, worn and harassed, thanked them both with tears in her eyes. And together they drank coffee beside a humble kitchen stove, and ate huge slices of thick, buttered bread. Not what Caddy had planned for Christmas eve, yet, curiously enough, it seemed better than the other. It had . . . she tried to think it out—more strength and sinew to it.

She smiled at Haisy. "This is positively the best Christmas eve I ever spent in my life!" she whispered.

Behind a large buttered slice of bread he kissed her. "You are the perfect pattern for a country doctor's wife!" he whispered back.

Father's Ingenuity

A Christmas Story

By Alice B. Palmer

'TWAS just two weeks before Christmas and there did not appear to be any material means of attaining the necessary funds for the great celebration.

"Oh dear, if John would only sell that old heirloom," thought Marty Armstrong.

Just then Betty and Jerry came charging in from high school.

"Oh, Mother, I just can't wait until Christmas. I know you are going to get that tuxedo for me. I can see it now, oh boy!" exclaimed Jerry.

"And I can see that party gown, Mother, with slippers to match," said Betty, sweetly.

"It's no use expecting anything this year, children," said mother. "Your father has made some unwise investments."

"Here comes father, now!"

"Hello, everybody, what's up? Why the frigid atmosphere?" queried father.

"Mother says there's to be no Santa Claus this year," ventured Jerry.

The next few days John Armstrong was trying to figure it all out. Perhaps he had been a little negligent in the past few years concerning his family. Now he realized that he must make amends. Christmas bells were chiming, reminding the Armstrong family that 'twas truly Christmas eve. Mother and the children were thinking of the things they were not going to get for Christmas. But Father was chuckling inwardly. In fact he could scarcely keep from bursting out laughing; but that, of course, would never do.

The silence was broken by the jingling of sleigh-bells. They hurried en masse to see what it was all about.

Were they all dreaming? There stood an old-fashioned bobsled. Out stepped Santa Claus.

"Why, Uncle Joe, what are you doing here on Christmas eve?" exclaimed Mother, all excited.

"I've come to take you and the family for a ride. So bundle up and hop in, without delay."

All stared at one another and tried to speak, but not a word was uttered. They simply obeyed their Santa Claus and within a few moments Father and all were seated cozily within the fairy-land contraption and were driven off.

The sleigh stopped with a jerk, right in front of a stucco bungalow all brilliantly lighted up with Christmas decorations.

"Why, I never knew the Thompson home was for rent. It has stood vacant so long," said Mother, with great concern.

"A friend of mine from the office just purchased it," said Father, with a convincing smile.

"We were invited over to see it in its new regalia. But you were all so out of sorts that I called up Uncle Joe and ordered the Santa Claus ruse."

They all laughed most heartily. They couldn't help it—Christmas or no Christmas! They had to give father credit for his clever ingenuity.

Out they hopped, beaming with the Christmas spirit.

Father took the lead and rang the doorbell, but no one answered.

Then he actually turned the knob as they all stepped back in protestation.

"Merry Christmas!" shouted Father.

Too surprised to speak, they looked at one another and back again at father and then—

"Don't you understand? Oh, hang it all, anyway! This is your Christmas present," said father, sinking into the closest easy chair and gasping for breath.

"What?" they all exclaimed.

Then father explained it all to them—how he had sold the old heirloom, purchased the home and furnished it.

They marveled!

"How could you? When did you? How did you know just what we liked?" All these questions were fired at father at once.

Father had done a perfect job. But that wasn't all. He led them proudly into the living room where stood the real host of the evening—the gorgeous Christmas tree. Needless to say Jerry received his "tux," Betty her gown and slippers and mother a set of silverware, a long-desired luxury.

Then descended such a shower of Christmas hugs and kisses, gratitude and joy that dear old father was practically snowed under. But he enjoyed his Christmas presents better than all the material gifts he had bestowed upon his family; and he felt that his heart was filled with enough Christmas cheer to last forever.

STORE SALES GAIN.

Some old maids are so timid they hate to look at a man with their naked eyes.

His Christmas Dress Suit

By Martha Banning Thomas

DUNCAN DEE woke, grunted and relaxed once more into a morning nap. Somewhere in his mind were two ideas. One was of complete satisfaction after an enjoyable two days in New York. The second pricked at him uncomfortably. Something he should remember, but couldn't. Oh . . . well! He sank gently back into full slumber.

At eleven o'clock, after breakfast in the house of his friends where he was staying, he became electrified. He had forgotten something. Something very important. A Christmas night dinner-dance that evening. He had been invited by Rosamond Tone, a girl he was quite mad about. How could he have forgotten? It seemed impossible. But Rosamond had telephoned him two evenings ago, exactly one minute before a hasty departure for New York. He had been delighted, charmed to take her. Then . . . that long freezing ride . . . finding a place to stay which did not cost too much, dressing, getting to a late party which was big and brisk, and went on and on until morning and breakfast. Then a few scant hours of sleep, another afternoon party outside the city . . . a sleet storm, and the sensible decision that he would not drive back in town for his evening clothes . . . but keep on going to the second informal engagement for the evening . . . a hundred and thirty miles in another direction, where he would stay all night.

So, here he was at eleven the next morning, a hundred and thirty miles from his evening clothes . . . and due in a few hours at a party forty miles in quite an opposite direction. This was the manner in which Duncan was wont to spread out his week-ends. Bedlam raged in his brain.

It wasn't the party so much; it was the girl. Rosamond Tone was more than lovely—she was loveable. She was also the daughter of old Taurus Tone, the head of the company in which Duncan held a responsible but not impressive position. And there was that guy named Frank Nester. He, too, held a responsible but not impressive position in the same place. He, too, loved Rosamond, or at least paid her conspicuous attention. Mr. Tone glared at both of them. It was old Taurus' way; and you could like it or leave it. No one wished to leave it, certainly not Duncan Dee nor that Frank Nester fellow.

At noon Duncan called up Rosamond long-distance, to assure her he had not forgotten and would be there. Immediately then he began scouring the town for dress clothes. All the people he knew were going to dances that night. They needed their own. He began to feel silly and a little sick. But he contrived in the course of three hours to collect one pair of dress-suspenders, a white tie, and proper waistcoat. Another hour yielded a dress-shirt and pair of trousers. This was sheer triumph of personality. Somebody let him have studs and a collar. He'd have to wear his ordinary black shoes and socks. He still required a coat. He could not get a coat!

Duncan went to the dinner dance. He looked exceptionally happy and well groomed. Frank Nester was there. He also looked well groomed but far from happy. Rosamond, if not unkind, had been frugal in giving dances to him.

Old Taurus was there, snorting and suspicious. Once he grabbed Duncan's elbow. "See here, young man," he growled, "that coat of yours looks darned familiar, and a little large. Could it, by any chance, be one of mine?"

"Yes, sir!" said Duncan, looking Rosamond's father straight in the eye. That was the best way with old Taurus. "My own is in New York. I collected all the other things from friends. I came anyway. And Rosamond . . ."

"I thought so!" Taurus glared at him. "Well, it appears you have courage, and that you keep your wits about you. It should help you get along. Report to me tomorrow morning. We'll talk over that . . . er opening I mentioned."

"Oh, sir . . . I'll tell Rosamond right away."

"You'll do no such thing!" Taurus roared.

But Duncan told her. Rosamond said she had already selected a sweet apartment and an egg-beater, "in case you asked me, you know."

Duncan kissed her and stated he must be very careful not to spill anything on her father's coat . . . and they kissed again.

Use Sleigh Bells for Jolly Christmas Game

HERE is a new and exciting game to play at a Christmas party. First borrow a set of sleigh bells. They are not as easy to find as in the old days. Find a string with tuneful, varying notes if you wish the game to jingle to the full measure of holiday fun.

The idea is simply this: It is possible to suggest, then control the action of a person who does not know what is in your mind, but must find out through the sound of the bells. Here is the way to do it:

Send one of the guests from the room. The remainder decide what he must do. For instance—go to a certain table, pick up a book, take it to another table and place it near the lamp. Here are four separate acts in succession.

The person outside is called back. Somebody has been chosen to be the manipulator of the bells. He must use a nice judgment in using them, ringing softly when the act approaches what is in the minds of all; ringing loudly as the perplexed player moves away. Try it. Use subtle gradations of sound to guide your experiment. Without a word being spoken he will at last be guided to do what has been secretly agreed upon. Loud ringing when he is far from his goal or going from it, soft, soft, barely audible when he is near the doing of what is required.—Martha Banning Thomas.

Christmas Bells! and Joyous Wedding Bells!

CEDARVILLE! Cee—dar—ville! With a jerk the great Christmas train came to a stop and the next moment Sylvia and Bob were filing their way through the happy, smiling Christmas passengers laden with parcels, boxes, suitcases and good will! Christmas! Christmas everywhere!

Off they hopped and hurried through the blinding snow storm to the house on the side of the hill, the old familiar homestead of Sylvia Bronson. There it stood in its snowy coat and Christmas welcome—much the same as when she had left it but a year before.

"Just think, to be married on Christmas, Bob. The grandest day in the whole year. Isn't it wonderful? Let's hurry. I can hardly wait to see Mother!"

Bob acquiesced by a tighter grip of Sylvia's arm and a genial smile of understanding.

Stamping and brushing the feathery flakes from them, they opened the door and were almost smothered with greetings and shouts of "Merry Christmas" from the whole family.

What a sight! Christmas bells! Wedding bells!

The tree itself was one glittering mass of lights and miniature bells—bells of gold and bells of silver. Even beneath its branches stood a huge bell-shaped container simply loaded down with Christmas gifts—wedding gifts—all for this one night of nights!—Alice B. Palmer.

Grace—Yes, but it would be a still alarm.

Good King Wenceslas

Good King Wenceslas, immortalized in the well-known carol, was really a Bohemian prince who died in A. D. 935. His name should properly be spelt "Wenceslaus." He was famous for his great kindness to the poor and needy. When, in September, A. D. 935, he was killed by his brother, Boleslav, the people of the country were heartbroken. He is still regarded as their patron saint.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

"Dat gen'l'man Mistah Santa Claus," said Uncle Eben, "is sho' popular. Nobody else could carry around so much valuables wif'out sooner or later bein' hijacked."

When Christ Was a Child

It is good to be children sometimes, and never better than at Christmas, when its mighty founder was a child himself.

Little Christmas Trees

They haven't yet invented the collapsible Christmas tree for the little flat, but the cedars and spruces grow more lilliputian.

Edith—Oh, she doesn't know yet.

Pauline—Pemberton and I are engaged.

Elizabeth—You don't mean it!

Pauline—No, but he thinks I do.

Christmas Presents to Suit Individual Tastes

BERTHA NEVINS and her best friend, Mary Parks, were discussing Christmas. "It's absurd, Mary," Bertha was saying, "for two grown women to spend quite a lot of money, as we do each year, for foolish presents."

"But, Bertha, we have no families, and it wouldn't seem like Christmas at all—"

"Oh, we'll exchange gifts, of course, darling. Only I think since we have been good friends for so long, we should be perfectly frank about what we want."

"You have something in mind," Mary smiled, and as Bertha agreed—"Well," she continued— "so have I. Something I've wanted for ever so long."

"What?" asked Bertha.

"Guess. It is to put in my living room, near the window. The main part is small, and the outside needn't be large—"

"What is it made of?"

"Wood, usually, and metal. Metal wires, anyway. And it will be company for me—"

"To have sweet melody floating on the air. Am I right? And the color doesn't matter so long as it has a clear tone?"

"Why, yes, but how did you guess so quickly?"

"Because I wanted exactly the same thing for just ages. I'll give you one and you give me one!"

But what Christmas brought to Bertha was a radio, while Mary got a cage and canary.—Helen Gaisford.

Christmas Is Ireland's Greatest of All Feasts

IN NO country is Christmas looked forward to with greater anticipation than in Ireland. For centuries the coming of the Christ Child has been hailed with unbounded joy by the people of the Emerald Isle.

Many stories associated with Christmas are repeated year after year around Irish firesides. An old legend tells that sometimes on Christmas eve Mary and the Christ Child wander abroad seeking shelter. Fearful lest they might seek in vain, as they did in Bethlehem long ago, a lighted candle is placed in every window to guide them to a place of refuge. These are left burning through the night, gleaming into the darkness, guiding any wanderer that might be abroad; for the legend also tells that the "Mother and Child" may come in almost any guise.

All the world remembers Ireland at Christmas, for her children are scattered in every land. A steady stream of gifts and good wishes come pouring into her gates. Families divided by stretching seas are reunited in spirit, as the bridge of time and space is broken by the old happy greeting, "A Merry Christmas and a Bright New Year."—Katherine Edelman.

THE EARLY BIRD

"Mabel's afraid I wasn't going to give anything to her."

"How do you know?"

"She sent her Christmas gift to me last week."

Mistletoe a Parasite

The mistletoe, traditional Christmas decoration much more in favor in earlier days, when the ardent swains were not so forward and the maidens were more reserved, is found most abundantly in the tropics, although it is widely distributed throughout the world. The mistletoe is a parasite, living on the sap of the trees around which it entwines itself. On the Atlantic seaboard of the United States the mistletoe is found as far North as the Jersey coast, but is more abundant farther South.

Living Christmas Trees

Longer life for Christmas trees is advocated by the United States forest service, in a note suggesting that a living tree with roots properly balled and packed in a box may be used indoors and later set out to beautify the grounds.

Naples was the center of the Italian Christmas industry during the Fifteenth century and had whole bands of artists, "figurari" as they were called, who did nothing but make dolls for Christmas.

"DO YOU ever win anything in those contests you are always entering?" Muriel Wilson queried of her sister Agnes, who was home for the holidays, as they sat on the bed doing up last minute family gifts Christmas eve.

"Not yet," Agnes laughed. "But by the law of averages I should win sometimes."

"Soon, I'd say," Muriel said grimly. "You've been entering contests of one kind and another ever since we were infants and mother entered you in a prettiest baby contest."

"That's where I began my losing. If I'd won then I'd probably have kept on winning like these people we read about who live on what they make from contests."

"Phooey!" Muriel scoffed. "What makes you do it, anyway?"

"Just my love of adventure. I'm really a born gambler—in a discreet way, of course. That's why I write for my living, just to see if my brain children will find a place or come back home to me."

"Was it your love of adventure, or gambling spirit, or whatever you call it, that made you turn down Harold Ryan three years ago when he came home from college with his cousin Fred to spend the holidays? Now, why did you do that, Agnes? He was everything anyone would want in a husband—looks, family, money, and aren't we always told that marriage is the great adventure?"

"Maybe it is an adventure but what sort of a gamble is it to marry a man who already has everything. No. I preferred to gamble with my own career."

"And now that you've made a success where is the gamble in it?" Muriel carefully stuck a sprig of holly in the knot of her red tissue ribbon.

When Agnes replied it was in a more serious manner:

"Since you ask me so pointedly, Muriel dear, I think, perhaps, if Harold lost his money during the depression, as so many did, and if he were to present himself now as a man winning his way through his own efforts, I might trust myself to adventure along with him. But, I fancy, it is too late. He's probably found some less adventurous soul ere this."

"Most likely," Muriel answered, as she rose to answer the door bell which had been persistently ringing. "Guess we're home alone." She hurried down the stairs.

Five minutes later she was back, trying vainly to refrain from any show of excitement:

"Some one on business for you, Agnes. He's the persistent kind, insisted he had to see you right now."

"Oh, well, all right. I'll go down and get it over with." Agnes took off her smock and departed.

Muriel heard Agnes' surprised ejaculation, but it was some time before she was summoned to join the two in the living room below.

"Muriel is just dying to congratulate me," Agnes gayly greeted her younger sister. "Behold, sister mine, I've actually won in a contest. You see, Harold is managing editor now of the paper that was running this particular contest. When the judges were sort of stuck as to which of three people had won second prize they referred the matter to him and, recognizing your honorable sister's name among the three, he immediately decided in her favor and came, in person, to deliver it."

"But I thought it was for another reason I was to congratulate you," Muriel did not try to conceal her disappointment.

"There is," Harold answered promptly. "I let Agnes speak first. But the reason I had for bringing Agnes the prize in person was to see if I could win this prize person."

Just then the door of the room adjoining was thrown open and another overcoated young man appeared. This time it was Agnes' turn to show astonishment:

"Of all things, Fred Ryan! Have you been there all the time?"

"Sure thing. I came with Harold, a sort of moral support. You see, Muriel and I have our wedding all planned. Let's make it a double one!"

To which bright idea they all joyfully agreed, hugging one another and shouting "Merry Christmas!"

TEACHERS END STRIKE.

Scranton, Pa.—A brief strike of sixty-six teachers, employed to instruct the over 2,500 pupils in the Jessup borough schools, ended when definite assurance that back salaries extending over eight months would be paid. Over $27,000 was due the teachers in overdue salaries.

"WELL, if there isn't Jean Ellory!" Jean had been an old sweetheart of Salina's and she had not seen him for years; but she would know him in a million, for she had always loved him. He was busy cutting fancy figures on the ice. She stood watching him, her heart skipping beats as she did so.

The ice had been especially prepared for the Christmas holidays and Salina, in her pretty white wool sports outfit was gliding along, swan-like, still watching Jean Ellory out of the corner of her eye.

He must have felt the strong contact of her thought for suddenly he looked in her direction, but she quickly turned the other way. Then he skated more fiercely than ever, cutting a huge letter "S." She skated about pretending not to notice, but when he started off toward the far end of the lagoon she glided over to where he had cut the figures. There was the old-fashioned letter "S" and another and still another. There were "S's" all over. How she wondered if they represented the regular ice-cutter's "S" or if she really dared hope that they might by any chance stand for "Salina."

The snow was becoming heavier and more cumbersome and she noticed that most of the skaters had already left for home and celebrations.

All the way homeward she was thinking about Jean Ellory and stopping at intervals to trace his name in the snow. She must have written it a dozen times or more. The gifts she had been expecting for Christmas suddenly appeared insignificant and useless in comparison to the one vital gift—the love of Jean.

Only with a mighty struggle was Salina endeavoring to join in the Christmas celebrations, for her heart was nearly breaking.

"What is the matter, Salina?" questioned mother, as Salina almost choked with the lump in her throat.

"Nothing, Mother dear, only the Christmas spirit," answered Salina, bravely.

At this very moment Jean was hurrying home whistling merrily, his skates swinging over his shoulders. Suddenly he stopped short at seeing his own name displayed all over the snow, here, there and everywhere. "What on earth could that mean?" It was beautifully lettered and in a girl's handwriting!

Jean, stooping, carefully noted the letters in their every detail. He was determined to learn who the girl could be, who had so thought of him on Christmas eve that she had scrolled his name all over the snow.

Jean, quickening his pace, reached home, luckily before the celebrations had begun and skipped up the staircase two steps at a time to his own room. Most excitedly he dug through his belongings in search of a box of old valentines from school days. It was missing! Where could it be?

"Mother, have you seen my valentines?" shouted Jean.

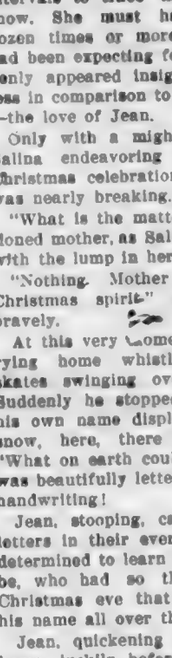
"What on earth do you want with valentines on Christmas, Jean?"

"They are decorating the walls of my room and have been, for some time, my dear brother!" taunted Clara-Bell.

The next moment Jean was tearing down the valentines regardless of his sister's protestations and began frantically examining their contents, still leaving mother and sister stupefied.

"Here it is! I knew it! This is the one!"

Crushed in the hand of Jean was a small red, lace-trimmed heart with the words, "To Jean, from Salina." 'Twas an exact duplicate of the letters in the snow. Now he knew! Dear old Salina! His childhood sweetheart!



The doorbell at Salina's rang with a loud peal right in the midst of the Christmas celebration.

"Who could be calling on Christmas eve?" they all wondered.

"You had better go, Salina," said Mother, sweetly.

Salina went, brushing aside a tear, as she did so.

She opened the door, as if in a dream scene. She had apparently lost all sense of reality for the moment.

"Salina!" said Jean.

"Jean, dear," replied Salina. The "dear" just slipping out from her heart before she knew it.

"My name in the snow," said Jean.

"The letter 'S,'" whispered Salina.

"Merry Christmas!" shouted the whole family.

Santa All the Year Is Found to Be Good Idea

SANTA CLAUS comes in July as well as December to those who need him in Columbia, Mo. Last Christmas a dollar given anonymously by "a group of children" was used by the Welfare society there to start a fund for year-round needs, instead of gorging people with too many baskets of goodies one day out of 365.

These are some of the things the fund has paid for: glasses to replace those broken by a boy whose mother washes to keep him in school; means of getting a crippled girl to and from school; shoes for the old horse used by the society when there is hauling to be done; the cane a grandfather needed to help him get about; fares of a trachoma patient and a tubercular child who were sent to hospitals; soap and a razor for a young man who wanted to clean up so he could try for a job.

Regular donations to the society may be spent only for food, fuel, clothing and shelter; these all-the-year gifts, though badly needed, would have been impossible but for the dollar from the children "to use any way you want" that gave welfare workers the idea of the Santa Claus fund.—Frances Grinstead.

Christmas in Christ's Land Is Without Snow

LITTLE Christian children who live in Jerusalem or who are traveling there with their parents will not have a snowy Christmas. Snow almost never falls in Palestine, for the temperature is seldom below 38 degrees. When it does snow, the flakes melt as soon as they touch the ground.

Most of the people in the country where the infant Jesus was born do not celebrate Christmas, however! For only a few of them are Christians; most are Moslems or Jews. There are some Christmas trees in Christian homes, and gifts are exchanged among those who observe Christ's birthday. But there are no street decorations and no late shopping problems. The post offices have no big signs urging "Mail your packages early!"

Yet there is probably no place in the world more appropriate to visit at Christmas. The Holy Sepulchre is in the old part of the city, and at Bethlehem, six miles south, is a great church that has replaced the humble inn where Christ was born. Inside is a large flat stone on which the infant Jesus is supposed to have been laid, reminding us how Christianity grew from one humble life.—Frances Grinstead.

AT CHRISTMAS TIME

"Henry, what were you conversing with the ashman about?"

"Why, Helen, I was trying to coax him to smoke those cigars you gave me for a Christmas present."

"Call him back, Henry."

"Ah, you would like to see him take the cigars?"

"No, I want him to take some perfume to his wife—you know, dear, the perfume you selected for my Christmas gift."

The Need of Santa Claus

"If there were no God it would be necessary to invent him," said a well-known writer. There is no Santa Claus in our grown-up world, but we have found we needed him as one of the most beloved characters in the world of childhood, which is peopled with legends of the child's own making. The enchanting belief in Santa and his reindeer, his paunch and his pack filled with toys will never hurt a child. The cynical grown-ups, who have too completely lost their belief in him and his kind, need your help.

Demand for Christmas Toys

Children are still running true to form in their requests to Santa Claus. The girls still want dolls, play furniture and toy household appliances and the boys want cowboy suits and mechanical toys year after year.

Children Like to Buy

Children take pride in being able to buy their own gifts for members of the family and for friends. Often mothers find their ingenuity put to a severe test to find ideas enough to go round in the necessarily limited price range.

Poinsettias

Poinsettias require a temperature that does not fall below 65 degrees Fahrenheit. While the plants are blooming, the soil should be kept quite moist.

PRISON INDUSTRIES BOARD.

Washington.—The Federal Prison Industries, Inc., has just been created by executive order of President Roosevelt. It is stated that the board, as the new unit is termed, will have power to determine the extent of industrial operations and, so far as practicable, diversify prison industrial operations. It is hoped to eventually arrive at the point where no single private industry shall be forced to bear an undue burden of competition with the products of prison workshops. Organized labor has fought for this result for many years. The board of directors for the new organization is composed of the following: Sanford Bates, Thomas A. Rickert, John B. Miller, Dr. M. L. Brittain and Sam A. Lewisohn.

"Lone Wolf's" Tracks in the Christmas Snow

THERE he stood—"The Lone Wolf!" halfway down the hillside midst a snow-covered landscape, the moon and stars disclosing his tracks and shadowy figure upon the glistening sheet of ice-coated snow. He gazed hungrily toward a small group of houses huddled together at the foot of the hill, a faint light gleaming from their windows.

As Mary Louise was absorbed in turkey-dressing, cranberries, recipe books and Christmas spices, her thoughts wandered to this beautiful picture—"The Lone Wolf." For many years she had longed to possess it, but her husband did not approve, so she had done without it.

Mary Louise brushed away a tear as she thought of the coveted picture and then promptly forgot all about it in her loving efforts to make her family happy on Christmas.

When all was in readiness and the tree beautifully trimmed, Mary Louise called in the family for the Christmas celebration. How the children danced and tore about the toy-strewn living room! How dear old John absorbed himself in his brand-new smoking outfit!

Was Mary Louise to receive nothing?

Turning, she saw John tacking up the most adorable bit of tapestry he had ever seen—"The Lone Wolf"! Just the thing for that great empty wall space! "Merry Christmas, Mary," said John, as they all stood gazing upon "The Lone Wolf" with his tracks in the snow.—Alice B. Palmer.

Christmas Radio Skit That "Went Over" Big

"WHY don't you try a radio skit for XYZ?" Dick Hassel had written his mother, Grace.

Grace tried it and was as much surprised as anyone when it was accepted, to be broadcast at seven o'clock, Christmas eve.

Mrs. Hassel had been greatly disappointed when Dick, for lack of finances, had to give up studying for the ministry and had gone to work in the big city. Recently he had written that he had a new job, a surprise, that he would tell Mother Grace and Father Jim about at Christmas.

Because Grace had always pictured Dick as the popular young minister, she featured the idea in her play, with the beautiful organist as his sweetheart.

Christmas eve Jim tuned in on XYZ. Promptly at seven came the theme song; then, to their amazement, a voice strangely familiar:

"This is station XYZ."

Then another voice: "Our play this evening, 'The New Minister,' is written by our announcer's mother, Mrs. Grace Hassel. Our popular announcer, Dick Hassel, will take the part of the minister."

"Of all things!" Grace exclaimed. "The young scamp!"

"No wonder your skit went over so fast," Jim grinned.

"Now, listen! We're missing it," Grace happily admonished as the young minister's voice announced that the audience would join in singing "Joy to the World."—Florence Harris Wells.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

THE carol was originally a joyous dance, a sign of liberation from the religious austerity of the Puritan era. Percy Dearmar, writing in "The Oxford Book of Carols," says: "The carol, by forsaking the timeless contemplative melodies of the church, began the era of modern music, which throughout has been based on the dance."

Cheese Rind for Birds

In a recent discussion of the best way of feeding birds in the garden, one experimenter put forward the rind of a Stilton cheese as the supreme Christmas fare! Birds of many sorts, especially the robin, are greedily fond of it. They have a desire for fat and the cheese provides this in association with other virtues. If we feed birds for the sake of watching them as well as comforting them, the rind, if preserved in more or less unbroken form, has the advantage that it cannot be carried away and attracts five or six species of bird if no more.—London Spectator.

a workers' payroll of $16,000 a week, basing the claim on the assumption that the average wage of the textile worker is $16 per week. If this writer would only gather some facts before writing such a thing it would prevent a lot of misinformation getting before the public. As for 1,000 workers losing their jobs due to the strike and removal of plants, the Watkins Hosiery mill was closed a long time before the strike here in Chattanooga was even spoken of and the company did not employ 100 workers. The Miller-Smith seamless department was practically down for three months before the strike and had made plans to move elsewhere so as to get cheaper labor. Here we find less than a hundred workers losing their jobs. The Browning mill did employ about one hundred and fifty.

"The Champion mill, according to the author, established a new mill in Marietta, Ga., and employed about 200 there, while the truth is the mill at Marietta was there years ago, according to my information, and still employs the same force here as they did before the strike.

"None of these mills has worked full time as long as I have been in Chattanooga, which has been about eighteen months. At any rate, figuring all of these numbers together I cannot get even 500 workers all told that are affected. As for the payroll, not by any stretch of the imagination can I get a $16,000 payroll together when I have looked at many pay envelopes of these workers, which due to low wages and short time only amounted to a few dollars per week.

"For the information of the author, the minimum wage of a textile worker is $12 per week for forty hours and not $14 per week as he contends, and the employer also is allowed 5 per cent of his employes on a substandard basis, which means $9.60 for a 40-hour week, and he takes undue advantage of this clause. Again I must bring out the fact that due to a shortage of work many of these hosiery workers, even while they are supposed to be employed, must apply for relief from the T. E. R. A. so that they can subsist.

"It is regrettable that space does not allow me to mention many more specific cases of law wages and other abuses under which the textile worker must work. But there certainly must be very good reasons why the hosiery workers responded in such great numbers in joining a hosiery workers' union when the first real opportunity presented itself.

"Any unbiased person knows the real reason why these hosiery employers want to move into a small community such as Etowah, Bridgeport and many other of like character, where the town is controlled by one or two persons where the employer of a worker can chisel to his heart's content without fear or molestation upon the part of the worker, due to lack of organization.

"Any honest employer does not have to fear a labor organization among his employes, because it has been shown and proven that the honest employer and the labor union can work together harmoniously and still prosper. It is to the interest of a labor union that the members thereof shall have steady work and, therefore, they are always willing to co-operate with the employer toward that end so that both may prosper.

On certain of the items, however, more information was asked, and it is probable other meetings will be held at an early date in order to thoroughly familiarize the lawmakers with details of the various proposals.

President C. R. Simmons, of Local 594, has issued an invitation to all white local truck drivers to attend an open meeting Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at Roosevelt hall, to discuss operation of the NRA and the desirability of forming a general organization of these workers.

"All white truck drivers, whether they work for themselves or for somebody else, are asked to attend," Mr. Simmons told The Labor World. "We have assurance that several good speakers will be present to assist in an advisory capacity, and we hope to have Roosevelt hall filled for the meeting."

SOCIALISTS SEEKING CLOSER CO-OPERATION WITH ORGANIZED LABOR

Boston.—An immediate program of action to further the growing friendly co-operation between the organized labor movement and the socialist party has been adopted by the socialist national executive committee, meeting here. The program includes:

A vigorous campaign for the 30-hour week.

A campaign to enroll all workers into genuine labor unions, and to destroy company unions.

A campaign for adequate unemployment insurance legislation.

A survey of the prospects for independent political action on the part of labor and farm organizations in the near future.

In addition to the above steps, the national executive committee rejected a proposal for joint action with the communist party on the grounds that the disruptive policy of the communists in the labor movement made impossible their inclusion in a program of co-operation with the organized labor movement.

New York.—Veering neither to the right nor to the left, but keeping a "middle of the road" course, on the part of the administration, was indicated in an important address by Donald R. The failure of private business to meet all of its responsibilities was the cause of the government's present intervention with industry, he said.

NEW WALKOUT AT RICHMOND IS SANCTIONED

Vote of Workers Approved by Parent Body.

REFUSE ANOTHER SLASH IN WAGES

Officials of Hosiery Workers Hope for Adjustment at Conference Monday.

Official sanction, which carries with it support of the international union, was received this week for the strike called by employes of the Richmond Hosiery mills, at Rossville, whose entire board of directors was indicted some months ago in federal court for alleged violation of United States laws.

Vote to strike against another reduction in pay was said to have been unanimous when 525 union members at the mill met last Saturday afternoon at Roosevelt hall. The mill was opened Wednesday, when a few employes were engaged in taking inventory.

Advices from union headquarters Thursday stated that Vice-President McKeown, of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, and Frank Ward, special representative, will be in Chattanooga Monday to endeavor to compose the differences. A conference with mill officials is scheduled for that day.

Striking workers told The Labor World Thursday that, although Mr. Fowler, of Cartersville, chairman of the Richmond board, had assured their representatives at least ten days' notice would be given before another pay cut was placed in effect, the workers had scarcely more than one hour's notice before the Christmas holidays, when a printed ballot was placed in their envelopes for presenting before they left the mill on Friday, Dec. 21.

Workers who received no more than the code were previously told, it was said, that their pay would not be affected, and the wage slash, announced as amounting to 10 per cent., is declared to have been placed on a relatively small percentage of employes, reducing their pay vastly more than 10 per cent. figured on the total number of employes.

The "ballot" placed in the pay envelopes is said to have come as a complete surprise to the workers, who were expected to express their reaction immediately, and were not given time to consider the matter.

At the meeting Saturday morning, however, it was said the pay slash and its effects were thoroughly considered, after which the vote was 100 per cent. for a strike.

Soddy unit of the Richmond concern has been closed for several weeks by a strike of the workers.

It was said that the Richmond employes were petitioned by workers in every hosiery mill in the territory to decline to accept the cut, it being recognized that such action, if unopposed, would undoubtedly result in another general wage slash for hosiery mill employes. Moral and financial support, it is declared, has been offered by employes of other hosiery mills, and the strikers, of course, will have the undivided backing of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in their efforts to prevent further lowering of their living standards.

Boston.—The Rev. Francis J. Haas, labor representative on the general NRA board, in an address here, asserted that, when minimum wages are being set, "not less than $2,500 a year" should be considered as the amount required to maintain a family in reasonable comfort. Rev. Haas also made this significant statement: "Section 7-A—the collective bargaining clause in the recovery act—had been allowed to operate freely during the past year, it would have had the certain effect of increasing purchasing power."

Calls Readers Of The Labor World Mental Cripples

But Company's Union Strike Debts Wait While Charity Is Served.

Officials of the Davenport Hosiery mills do not have a very high regard for The Labor World or its readers, if what is regarded as a semi-official letter furnished this paper this week is authentic.

Local trades unionists are thoroughly familiar with the attitude of the Davenport officials during the recent strike, and with the company's so-called "union," which was believed to have been organized and placed in charge of a young man named Bennett, in order to forestall the inevitable progress of a real 100 per cent. workers organization, formed for the purpose of improving conditions of the workers themselves, and striving to gain recognition guaranteed under the laws of the United States government. This "association," "club," "circle," or whatever it was named, was quite active during the recent unpleasantness in an effort to convince the public that Davenport employes wanted nothing to do with "outside agitators," etc. However, the plant remained closed until the strike was ended officially.

Recently, Labor World readers will remember, this paper was furnished with what was purported to be a letter addressed to the mill workers and signed by the young man Bennett, in which it was explained to the members of the company's "circle" that the "club" had incurred an indebtedness during the strike of some $275, and "in order not to work a hardship on the members," if they would sell a certain number of tickets to a sort of minstrel performance, the indebtedness might be cleared up and the "athletic" and "social" events of the winter financed.

Members of Local 53, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, however, had heard the company's "association" had asked and secured the promise of free rental for the proposed "performance" at the Southside Y. M. C. A., under the guise of "sweet charity," and representations were made to officials of the "Y," who were asked to investigate the "charitable" proposal.

For some reason or other the big show was moved to the Memorial auditorium later, where regular rental was paid, and it was announced the proceeds had been given to the News-Salvation basket fund.

Members of Local 53 this week professed a lack of knowledge as to how the strike deficit will be covered and the winter "sports" of the company's union financed, in view of developments.

An interesting sidelight on the more or less amusing situation, however, occurred this week, when members of Local 53 furnished The Labor World with another letter supposed to be signed by the company's "club" representative, which contained the following paragraph:

> " * * * Regardless of false propaganda relayed by The Labor World to its sympathizing members (with whom we sympathize), the show goes on for the sake of sweet charity. Sensible, thinking Chattanoogans and loyal employes of the Davenport Hosiery mills have long recognized this paper as a medium for circulating misconstrued truth to its membership of mental cripples."

On behalf of all its weak-minded readers, The Labor World extends greetings of the season to the Davenport officials, including the "chief engineer" of the company's club, and congratulates them on their free-will offering to "sweet charity" on Christmas day.

PERKINS GETS WISH; FOUND GUILTY; FINED

Harrisburg, Pa.—Fred C. Perkins, the New York battery manufacturer who so blatantly defied the NRA, has apparently got his wish. He had admittedly violated the wage and hour provisions of the NRA code covering his industry and defied the government to proceed against him, being quoted as saying "I wish they would" and he'd "show them."

Following a trial here, Perkins was found guilty on ten counts. Federal Judge Albert L. Watson fined him a total of $1,500.

Local Unions Elect Old-Timers And 'Youngsters' as Officials

Plumbers' Chiefs

O. E. COOK
President.

E. S. STACY
Financial Secretary.

T. B. WALKER
Vice-President.

Marked preference for the "old-timers" is seen in the result of local union elections as "first returns" come into this office. A liberal sprinkling of the younger element, however, is noted also, which is believed to be calculated to strike a balance between the two.

Railway Carmen, Plumbers and Steamfitters, Iron Molders and Electrical Workers elections were reported this week, the latter not being regular annual affair, but a switching necessitated by the resignation of President Butler.

O. E. Cook, named president of Local 43, Plumbers and Steamfitters, may hardly be considered among the newcomers, his election as chief executive of the local being the ninth time he has been so honored. Aside from this service, he has filled, at various times, every office within the gift of his fellow members, and was a delegate to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council six years. He also represented Local 43 in the international conventions at Toledo in 1917 and at Atlantic City in 1928. Mr. Cook joined the local June 17, 1908, and has been a continuous member since.

T. B. "Barney" Walker, named vice-president, may also be listed among the "old-timers," his election to the office being for the sixth consecutive term. Vice-president seems to be the long suit of Mr. Walker, he having served other locals in the same capacity for ten years before coming to Chattanooga and affiliating with Local 43 on Nov. 9, 1910. Vice-president of Local 43 is not an empty honor, it is explained, the office carrying with it the position of chairman of the executive board.

For secretary-treasurer the Plumbers and Steamfitters again selected E. S. Stacy, who already has four years in that office to his credit. Mr. Stacy joined the local on Nov. 26, 1910, and during his continuous membership since that time has served in every office except president, nomination for which he has several times declined. He also was delegate to Central Body several years.

John Phillips, new recording secretary, was elected for his first term in office, although he has been an active member of Local 43 for the past five years.

Other offices filled at the election were:

Executive Board—T. B. Walker, chairman; S. McD. Wheals, S. H. Martin, H. D. Malone and H. H. Kelly.

Finance Board—J. T. Cotter, A. McD. Wheals, S. H. Martin.

Delegates to Central Body and committees will be named at next regular meeting of Local 43, which will be held the first Friday in January.

WARREN BRYAN AGAIN HEADS RAIL CARMEN.

Warren Bryan, veteran official of Lodge 211, Railway Carmen, was again chosen to head that organization at the annual election of officers last week. Familiar names are seen throughout the list submitted to The Labor World, which follows:

Warren Bryan, president; B. H. Roy, vice-president; W. W. Kirkpatrick, recording secretary; C. C. McDowell, financial secretary; J. A. Swing, treasurer; J. H. Wood, guide; Bert Hicks, warden; Charles Nelson, sentinel; C. B. Hall, chaplain. Trustees—G. C. Smith, J. H. Wood, C. B. Hall. Local Protective Board—H. C. Patterson, chairman; E. H. Gattis, L. E. Smith. Delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council—J. W. Fuller, W. W. Kirkpatrick, J. H. Wood.

MOLDERS NAME JOHN MILLER.

At the annual election of Molders' Local No. 53 the following officers were named for the ensuing year:

John Miller, President; C. D. Tittle, vice-president; William Blaylock, financial secretary; T. T. Buchanon, treasurer; R. L. St. John, recording secretary; Carl Deshea, inductor; Morse Lea and Batchelor Clark, doorkeepers; trustees, S. B. Farmer, Alex Rogular, Ernest Stewart.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS MAKE CHANGES.

Changes in the official personnel of Local 175, Electrical Workers, made by the executive board when President A. E. Butler was forced to resign his office because of press of other matters, were ratified by last regular session of the local, as follows:

E. E. McDaniels, who has been serving as financial secretary, was elevated to the presidency to succeed Mr. Butler, and W. L. Cooper was chosen to succeed Mr. McDaniels.

Choice of the board, it was said, was unanimously approved.

Prominent Men Local Visitors

Among prominent southerners who were registered at local hotels Friday were John Peel, of Greenville, S. C., and John Edgerton, of Lebanon, Tenn. These two gentlemen, however, were stopping at different hotels, and are said to have been in Chattanooga on different missions.

Wiedemann's Beer On Local Market

Old-time beer-drinkers will welcome announcement, made in our advertising columns today, that the famous old Wiedemann's beer has been placed on the Chattanooga market, and may now be had at local dealers.

The Wiedemann brewery is one of the oldest in the nation, and although the product has been sold in other sections for some months, it will be new to local imbibers since the advent of "three-two."

Death Angel Visits Homes Of Labor Men

Tom Crow, J. T. McPherson Called—Weesner Loses Mother.

The Christmas season was marred in at least three homes of local trade unionists by the sudden call of the Death Angel, and two valiant organized labor boosters were taken, while another was bereft of his mother.

Early Sunday morning Tom V. Crow, who had become well known throughout this section for his valuable activities in behalf of the labor movement, was suddenly stricken at his home in Dalton, and passed away immediately. Mr. Crow was known as the "father" of the movement in Dalton, and to his able, conscientious efforts and advice is attributed the fact that the neighbor city is practically 100 per cent. organized. He was a charter member and business agent of Local 1893, U. T. W. Becoming a member of organized labor only recently, Mr. Crow rapidly gained hosts of friends by his frank and manly statement of his convictions, and his talents were immediately recognized by trade union executives, which resulted in his being named a general organizer for the American Federation of Labor and the United Textile Workers.

Mr. Crow had been in the best of health, and his demise, attributed to acute indigestion, was a great shock to scores of friends throughout the territory. He is survived by his wife and seven children, the oldest of whom is 12. He was 45 years old.

Funeral services, conducted from the Strains undertaking parlors in Dalton Tuesday, were attended by numbers of friends from Chattanooga, LaFayette, Dalton, Chickamauga, Rome and Atlanta.

Passing of Mr. Crow leaves a recognized gap in the ranks of Dalton trades unionists which will be hard to fill, and his service to the cause will be an inspiration to many to complete the great task which he so faithfully and conscientiously began.

J. T. McPHERSON PNEUMONIA VICTIM.

J. T. McPherson, 52, superintendent of the parcel post delivery at the postoffice, passed away Wednesday afternoon at his home, following only a few days' illness of pneumonia.

Mr. McPherson, who had been in the service since 1909, was well known locally as a delegate from the local Letter Carriers' union to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, his service including some time as president of the Carriers' local and also as a member of the executive board of Central Body. He was a staunch believer in organized labor, and his genial disposition endeared him to scores of his fellow workers both at the postoffice and generally.

He is survived by his wife, mother, two daughters, two sisters and one brother. Funeral services were held Friday afternoon at a local undertaking establishment, with the Revs. James L. Fowle, French Wampler and Marcus Triplett officiating.

CLIFFORD WEESNER LOSES MOTHER.

Many local friends of Clifford Weesner, veteran member of Lodge 1450, Machinists, will sympathize with him and other surviving relatives in the loss of Mr. Weesner's mother, Mrs. Mary C. Weesner, who passed away at her home, 1306 Bailey avenue, last Friday morning, at the age of 65.

Funeral services for Mrs. Weesner were held Monday afternoon at the J. Avery Bryan company, conducted by the Rev. James L. Fowle.

OFFER SYMPATHY TO A BROTHER.

Members of Local 549, Bakery Salesmen, have adopted the following resolution of sympathy for a brother member, Fred Smith, who was bereft of his mother recently:

> Whereas, information having reached this body, at regular meeting Dec. 11, 1934, that death had removed from this life the mother of our brother, Fred Smith, of the Colonial Baking Baking company; be it therefore Federation Analyzes Proposed Salary Scale.

COMPARISON SHOWS MANY INEQUITIES

Explains Why Schoolmarms Are Warned Not to Discuss Salaries.

(Written for The Labor World by a representative of the Chattanooga-Hamilton County Teachers' Federation.)

A storekeeper, at certain times, takes an inventory of all the stock on hand. He does this in order to know what he has and so that he may secure more goods to fill future demands of customers.

"Taking stock" is an excellent practice. Persons may take stock of their own characteristics and abilities. Cities take stock of their financial conditions and even school systems take stock. The report of the Tennessee educational commission was just such an example. The report of the University of Chattanooga on the teaching staffs of Chattanooga and Hamilton county was another example. But as the inventory of the storekeeper would be of little value without the subsequent purchase of goods, so the report of the Tennessee educational commission and the report of the University of Chattanooga would be of no value without the subsequent effort to correct and improve existing conditions. The state report will be handled by the coming state legislature. In the meantime Chattanooga citizens should study their specific problems with the idea of understanding and improving them.

Some facts, brought oue in the recent report, have been arranged in a table below. In the first column are numbers ranging consecutively from 1 to 15, representing the number of years a teacher may have been employed in the Chattanooga city school system. The table is divided into four groups, representing the training of teachers now employed. The first group consists of teachers with a master's degree, or five years or more of college work. The second group represents teachers with an A. B. degree, or four years of college training. The third group consists of teachers who have had three years of college training; and the last group consists of teachers who have had two years or less of college training.

Each group is divided into two parts; the first, marked "Federation Scales," means that the salaries in this list are those worked out, after careful research, by a committee of the teachers' federation as equitable salaries for teachers of like training in this community at the present time. The second part, marked "Present Salaries," means that these are the salaries that various teachers of like training were actually receiving last year. (No general correction has been made in salaries this year.)

According to the best authorities on salary scales, all teachers with the same amount of training and experience should receive the same salary. (One-half value is given to experience gained without school systems other than Chattanooga or Hamilton county.) As Chattanooga has no salary scale, it will be noticed that in almost every instance a wide variety of salaries exists where there should be only one. Is there any wonder that teachers are told not to discuss their salaries?

It will be noticed also that a wide difference appears between the salaries now paid and those advocated in the scientifically devised scale which the federation has offered.

Nick-a-Jack Workers To Meet January 5

The Labor World is asked to announce that next regular session of the Nick-a-Jack branch of Local 53, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, will meet on Saturday, Jan. 5, at Roosevelt hall, at 10 a.m. The local meets each first and third Saturday, and the fact that there are five Saturdays in December occasions the three-weeks interval at this time.

Sales Tax Unfair to Workers

The American Federation of Labor has persistently held that the sales tax, federal, state, or municipal, is in reality nothing but a scheme to exempt the well-to-do from taxation and saddle the cost of government on those who are least able to pay.

The administration of the sales tax in Illinois confirms labor's contention. The law which became effective July 1, 1933, provided that the proceeds for the first six months should be devoted to unemployment relief. At the expiration of that period the proceeds were used to pay the expenses of the state government, which formerly had been met by taxes against the owners of real and personal property.

The sales tax now provides the state with $36,000,000 annually, with the result that no taxes are levied on real and personal property, which has an assessed valuation of five and one-half billion dollars.

> Practically all of this $36,000,000 is collected from the masses of the people of Illinois, most of whom are wage-earners and persons with similar low income, while the well-to-do and rich, who are abundantly able to pay, contribute relatively nothing toward paying the expenses of the state government, whose activities are largely consecrated to protecting the interests of the very property owners who by the sales tax have secured tax exemption for their property.

Adequate organization in bona fide trade unions of the workers in every state, and the mobilization of that organized power at the ballot box to elect legislators opposed to the sales tax, would prevent this iniquity from being saddled on those whose living standards are altogether too low to permit further decrease by this notorious form of indirect taxation.

Explain Two Billion Dollar Loss

According to a recent statement by G. Munro Hubbard, president of the advertising firm of Doremus & Co., before the Advertising Club of Boston, the bankers of the United States should launch a widespread publicity campaign to explain the nature of the banking business. He said:

> "If you want the lawmakers of the country to refrain from suicidal banking legislation, you can do nothing more effective than to make millions of voters understand what a banker is and what he is not."

Mr. Hubbard added that the "average man has not the faintest glimmering" of the bankers' place, function and limitations in our economic order.

Reports of United States treasury officials state that millions of persons who deposited their savings with the bankers for safekeeping, with very low interest rates, or no interest at all, as a guarantee of that safety, have suffered a loss of around two billion dollars through the inefficiency, crookedness and downright dishonesty of thousands of these custodians of the people's thrift.

This figure represents only lost bank deposits, not including many billions lost in worthless "securities."

These victimized citizens long ago made up their minds that the major function of bankers, up to the first session of congress under Roosevelt, was to borrow billions of dollars from depositors without proper security for repayment, loan the borrowed funds to bank directors and other business men on questionable collateral or no collateral at all, and, then, when business conditions or stock market conditions suffered a reverse, go into bankruptcy with the depositors suffering the major loss.

In case the bankers adopt Mr. Hubbard's suggestion, among the first things which should be explained, and justified, are the practices by which they swindled depositors out of these two billion dollars—a crime so enormous that the recent congress of the United States enacted a federal law guaranteeing the safety of bank deposits up to a maximum which protects practically all of the savings which the masses place in these institutions.

Buy Union Label Goods!

New Year buying offers a big opportunity for every trade unionist to help himself, his fellow-workers and the nation by buying union-made goods and union services.

Goods bearing the union label give definite assurance that they are produced under good conditions, at fair wages. By insisting on union label goods and union services, trade unionists and members of their families strengthen the entire labor movement, which in turn strengthens the particular union in which they are most interested.

Purchase of union-made goods and services helps purchasing power, as it means the employment of more wage-earners at union wage standards. This of course helps the entire nation, as does any increase in purchasing power.

So, look for the union lavel, shop card or button not only at this holiday season but at every time throughout the year.

Here is the method of evading the minimum wage provision of the code practiced by St. Paul's Cotton company, of St. Paul's, N. C. This company compelled its employes to sign a contract for the purchase of company stock and authorizing the application of one-third of the regular pay of the employes on this purchase. There is no pretense that the stock is or ever will be good for anything.

A pay envelope for a week for one employe recently amounted to a total of $1.70, and the pay envelope (on file in the office of United Textile Workers) shows a rubber stamp mark "stock subscription," indicating a deduction of 52 cents to apply on this account. Another pay envelope amounted to $13.65, and the "stock subscription" deduction amounted to $4.55, leaving a net cash balance of $9.10 paid to the worker.

Just another reason why southern textile workers are talking about another general strike.

Department Stores' "Stretch-Out"

Department stores have developed their own form of stretch-out. They call it part-time employment. Clerks are put on for work only during rush hours and paid in proportion. The U. S. summary of the retail census for 1933 shows that 730,327 part-time workers were employed in 1933, an increase of 28.3 per cent over 1929, while full-time employes decreased 29.5 per cent.

"The average annual earnings of part-time employes are 34.2 per cent of the average annual earnings of full-time employes," says the report.

This cut to one-third in weekly payroll is an important factor in profits, but labor points out that it is not increasing the purchasing power of those on whom the department stores depend for their volume of sales.

Wage Theft by Employers

Wage restitutions under NRA now amount to more than $2,500,000 and restitutions, arranged by NRA field offices, are averaging about $75,000 a week. In California two NRA field offices arranged for $63,000 in wage restitutions in the month of November. These restitutions represent the difference between what the workers received and what they should have been paid according to the codes under which their employers operate. In other words, these restitutions represent plain robbery of the workers by the employers. This fact should not be forgotten. It is an additional argument for strong unions, which are an effective guarantee of code enforcement.

No wonder the reactionaries and their newspaper mouthpieces are stabbing the President in the back!

Searchlight on the Auto Industry

Testimony of automobile workers before the president's commission in Detroit recently destroyed any lingering chance that the public could be made to believe that the auto industry is the "worker's paradise." Those with experience likened it to an entirely different place.

Auto workers, they said, are speeded up to the extreme limit of physical endurance, even of the young. Their pay is scanty, and made uncertain by a "bonus system" which the men cannot understand. Employment varies from month to month, even from week to week. And over all, there is the shadow of a spy system which Metternich might have envied.

Speed-up in the Ford plant is so severe, witnesses testified, that men frequently spend an hour of their own time in the plant before time to begin, laying out their materials.

Another witness told how, in 1930, ten men in the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel company turned out 100 wire wheels per hour. The next year, the men were speeded up until they had made it 150 wheels an hour. In 1933, six men and four girls turned out 156 wheels an hour. The wheel that cost the company 46 cents in 1930 costs 17 cents now.

None of the witnesses professed to understand the "group bonus" method of fixing pay in many plants. They said that no one could understand it, except, perhaps, company lawyers with charts of wage payments before them. But all agreed that this scheme of payment was used to enforce and intensify the speed-up.

"The bonus system was designed to take men off the pay-rolls," said one witness. "If the men in the gang increased their speed, one of them lost his job."

"Espionage is so plain that it needs no telling," said a witness. "The so-called service men are only spies and stool-pigeons." Another showed how this works. "You rarely find Ford men speaking to each other," he testified. "The service men come along and say 'move' and the men move."

Such a system of driving and spying would be damnable, even if well paid. It is not well paid. It never paid the wages that were advertised; and every witness before the commission told how his wages had dropped from year to year.

Only a strong, militant union, backed by all the influences and power which the federal government can lend, will suffice to make the auto industry human again. Speed the day.

Yule-tide Family Reunions by Telephone

Families and friends become scattered with the years and we miss their smiling faces and cheery voices — more especially at Christmas time. Probably you are wishing now that you could visit them this Christmas. Why not? Are they too far away? You can't get away? Or is it that it costs too much? Then why not surprise them this holiday season with a telephone visit instead? You can reach them anywhere by telephone. Distance doesn't matter.

A voice visit by telephone, you will find, has the personal charm of a face-to-face visit, is convenient and costs little wherever you call. For example, by using Station-to-Station service you can talk with folks fifty miles away for about 35c, and a hundred miles for around 55c, and greater or less distances at correspondingly low cost.

If you can't go in person, go by telephone.

ONNERY URGES PASSAGE OF 30-HOUR WEEK BILL

ew oYrk City, Dec. 27.—Passage the 30-hour-week bill, with in- ased wages for the reduced hours, advocated by Representative liam P. Connery, Jr., of Massa- setts, sponsor of the bill at the session of congress and chairman the house labor committee, in a sage to the convention of the silk rayon industry here.

onnery assured the convention the advocates of labor legislation the committee were "interested narily in putting legislation on statute books which will give employers their just due, while at the same time giving to the workers a fair share of the products of their labor in the form of decent wages and decent living conditions."

Connery said he believed the increased cost to business of the bill would be offset by the increased purchasing power of the 10,000,000 unemployed who, he estimated, would be absorbed as a result of the bill.

He also predicted passage of old-age pension and unemployment insurance bills at the next session of congress.

RA APPROVES REDUCTION IN MEAT STORES' HOURS

Vashington, Dec. 27.—The national ustrial recovery board has ap- ed an order permitting the mem- of the Butchers Board of Trade San Francisco to reduce the oper- g hours of their retail meat stores m 63 to 54 hours per week for a od of 120 days. The order of ex- tion was signed by Division Ad- istrator Armin W. Riley.

he exemption was approved both the employers, and members of chers' Union, Local 115, of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America. Both sides maintained the change would not have an ill effect on employment.

The retail food and grocery trade code specifies that no store may reduce its operating hours to less than sixty-three a week, unless it was open less than that number before June 16, 1933. The exemption granted the San Francisco meat mahkets is from that provision.

BUILDING EMPLOYMENT SHOWS ENCOURAGING UPWARD TREND

A. F. of L. Reports Work Held Steady in November for First Time Since 1928; Housing Act Believed Helpful.

Washington.—Overcoming the customary seasonal declines, employment in the building trades held steady in November, according to reports from local unions to the American Federation of Labor. It was the first November since the federation started collective reports in 1928 that there was no decrease in employment in the industry. Between August and the end of October, there was an increase of 40,000 men at work in the building industry in the country as a whole.

In all trades, the number of union men employed dropped 1 per cent. In the building trades, however, where even in the boom years of 1928 and 1929 there were decreases affecting 3 and 1 per cent of the membership, respectively, from the preceding month of October, there was no change.

"Unquestionably this gain, for it really is a gain," said President William Green in commenting on the figures, "reflects the efforts of the federal housing administration to break the deadlock in the building industry.

"For that matter the record of employment in the building trades show that since August, when the federal housing administration actually got under way, the trend has been upward, September showing an increase in building trade employment affecting 2 per cent of the membership and in October 2 per cent more found work.

"In 1928, the year before the collapse of the boom, the decline in employment in these trades in November from October affected 3 per cent of the membership; in 1929, 1 per cent lost their jobs; in 1930, 4 per cent; in 1931, 1 per cent; in 1932, 2 per cent, and last year, 1 per cent.

"Stated a little differently, there were 673,435 building tradesmen working in August in the country as a whole, 685,983 in September and 713,172 in October.

"This is not to say that the proportion of unemployment in the building trades is not even now most appalling—56 per cent, and 24 per cent working only part time—using trade union reports as a basis, compared with 25 per cent unemployed in all trades, 28 per cent in the metal trades, 16 per cent in the printing trades and 18 per cent in all other trades.

"It is, I believe, most significant that in the few months the national housing act has been in effect, the downward trend of building has been checked and apparently reversed.

"Now, with the second title of the act providing for loans on new building as contrasted with the improvement and repair loans, really an emergency measure, first put into effect, we are hopeful of better things in the months immediately ahead.

"If we can only break down the unreasonable and out-dated prejudice against construction in the winter, the showing will be vastly better."

SERVICE JOBS ROSE.

Washington.—According to a report issued by the census bureau, employment in service establishments, including such as places of amusement, hotels, restaurants, etc., showed marked improvement during 1933. The survey was the first ever conducted for the service trades. It shows that the average number of employes rose from a minimum of 615,158 in January to a maximum of 690,416 in September.

OIL COMPANY INDICTED FOR LABOR VIOLATIONS

Philadelphia, Pa.—The indictment of the Gulf Refining company on seventy-two counts of violating the labor provisions of the oil code was hailed by the oil administration as one of the progressive major steps in the constant campaign for enforcing the code against all violators.

George W. Stocking, chairman of the petroleum labor policy board, informally advised Oil Administrator Harold L. Ickes of the indictment. Chairman Stocking asserted that the federal grand jury, by its action, sustained the administrator's contention that the company resorted to illegal practices to break a strike last summer at its Girard Point, Pa., plant.

The indictment was returned by the grand jury at Philadelphia. The jury agreed in effect with the board's findings that in breaking the strike, the company made employes work as long as 48 consecutive hours. The board's inquiry also disclosed that many long-time employes of the company were discharged when they struck.

Prosecution was recommended to the department of justice by Administrator Ickes when the board reported its findings to him.

Black-Draught Brings Refreshing Relief of Constipation Troubles

Constipation produces many disagreeable sensations, several of which are mentioned by Mr. T. E. Smith, of Boonville, Ind., who writes: "I have used Thedford's Black-Draught many years when needed for biliousness and other minor ills when a laxative was needed. I have a tight feeling in my chest when I get bilious. I get dizzy and feel very tired, just don't feel like doing my work. After taking Black-Draught, I feel much better. This is why I continue to use it when needed." . . . Thedford's Black-Draught is a good, purely vegetable laxative, obtainable for 25¢ a package.

HUMPHREYS RAPS CRITICS OF NRA—POINTS TO BENEFITS

State Director National Emergency Council Refers Reactionaries to Vote of the Masses at Recent Election—"House of Have" Rants in Vain as Patriotic Americans Continue Program.

"Let the critics of NRA read again the verdict written by the common sense of the masses of the people in the recent election," says Hugh Humphreys, state director of the National Emergency council, in a release received by The Labor World last week. "License to unscrupulous controllers of economic power to exploit labor and consumers and to devour competitors" has been checked, Mr. Humphreys declares.

And now, of course, the state director is in bad with the House of Have and its newspaper mouthpieces. Mr. Humphreys' statement follows:

"Merchants have enjoyed the best buying season in years. Crowded stores and smiling throngs on the street testify to the fact of the effectiveness of the recovery program, particularly the NRA.

"It is well to look at the causes that brought about this improvement. It did not just happen. Those who see Uncle Sam as the embodiment of the ideal Santa Claus, giving out more money to produce more employment, work on the theory, I presume, that it is easier to produce an egg without a hen than to produce a hen without an egg.

"Wise economists and courageous leaders of the administration planned and put into effect the NRA on the basis that it is not necessary to be a socialist to feel a sense of moral responsibility. It is not necessary to be a communist to accept community obligations. I believe in private rights of property, as you do; I believe in private enterprise, as you do; and yet you may feel as I do, that there is a profound responsibility upon those who together own all the private properties and conduct all the private enterprises of the nation, to make sure that every willing worker in the nation has an opportunity to support himself and his dependents by self-respecting labor.

"Under our political, economic system there has been such wholesale default in the duties of private rights and enterprises that millions of men have walked the streets for years seeking in vain for work, living by private charity and public doles. So it became necessary to establish more orderly methods of production and distribution and employment under new and lasting safeguards that will provide against the recurrence of such a disgrace to our civilization, and such distress to practically every individual.

"The rise of large organizations engaged in mass production and distribution, the development of new competitions between industries, the increasing specialization of individuals and plant operations have made it more essential that new mechanisms of industrial co-operation be created and made more effective.

"Let the critics of NRA read again the verdict written by the common sense of the masses of the people in the recent election. The masses will be patient, tolerant and co-operative in trying new measures, openly planned for the common good and honestly carried forward in order to provide for them a new freedom and security.

"The lesson is clearly written that the political freedom and security of the American people rests upon their economic freedom and security. Consequently license to unscrupulous controllers of economic power to exploit labor and consumers and to devour competitors was restrained.

"Can it be suggested by sane men who have the reasons of our economic disaster that we could achieve an economic recovery by restoring, without substantial change, the reckless system of irresponsible waste of natural, financial and human resources?

"The NRA codes protecting the hours and wages of toiling humanity, and the fair trading of men, should be permanently incorporated into the business structure of the country, if the present upturn is to continue."

RUBBER WORKERS AWAIT COURT DECISION IN OHIO

Akron, O.—Rubber workers in the Firestone and Goodrich plants here are marking time, confidently expecting that elections for selection of representatives for collective bargaining will soon proceed.

Meantime, due to the action entered in the U. S. circuit court by the companies, the national labor relations board, which had ordered the elections to be held Nov. 7, has withdrawn the order, pending hearing of the case.

It is stated that the U. S. department of justice has been asked by the labor board to defend the court action on behalf of the government.

UNION MEN GET PREFERENCE.

Editor The Labor World:

I understand the railroad union boys were the only ones entitled to the increase in pay just recently allotted them. Why shouldn't they get preference? They were the ones who fought for it and were responsible for its action and ready settlement. Naturally that is going to bring about an increase in membership among the different classes of railroad trainmen. Of course their interest will largely be on account of the increase. Nevertheless, it will help them and the organizations, too, providing they realize what it means to be a union man from now on and don't pull out the first time some little opposition comes up.

We, the members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, are putting forth a special effort to organize this section and give the fellows a chance to get jobs and pay they wouldn't get otherwise, because the time is coming when the leading firms of any nature will require card men only to do their respective work, especially in the building trades.

Let's get together and see just how strong we can make this section in the way of organizing them. If the government has offered its support, why shouldn't we appreciate it enough to do all we can toward making this a better world to live in for the working men and women. There are a couple of young ladies not so far from here who say they don't intend to marry a man unless he is a union man. There's a tip for some of you young sprouts.

Let us look around and see if there is something we can do to help, but don't buy any groceries at the Home Stores because that would make you go backwards.

Together we stand, divided we fail. Thanks.

ROBT. W. McKENZIE,
I. B. E. W.

Here is how Cardui helped an Alabama lady. . . . "I suffered from pains in my back and sides," writes Mrs. A. G. Gray, of Cusseta, Ala. "I was so thin and weak, I read of Cardui and decided to take it. I noticed at once it was helping me. I kept taking Cardui until I had finished five bottles. I gained. My health was much better. Principle That Needs Emphasis

When the new basic wage rates were fixed by the NRA for the bituminous coal industry, Alabama operators protested heatedly that they could not pay the wages provided by the order. Their protests won them a modification of the order and they kept the pay differentials which they claimed were necessary to enable them to stay in business. However, the NRA set forth a principle that is significant as expressing NRA policy on southern differentials. The following paragraph from the president's statement supplementing Gen. Johnson's ruling gives the principle:

"On the question of southern wage differentials the recovery act (Section 7-C) recognizes differentials according to locality. It is not the purpose of the administration, by sudden or explosive change, to impair southern industry by refusing to recognize traditional differentials. On the other hand no region has any right, by depressing its labor, wages and hours, to invade with its cheaper product an area of higher wages and hours and thus to impose its lower standards on an area of higher standards."

The principle that no region has a right to force lower standards on regions of higher standards is one that needs constant emphasis. The president and the national recovery administration have done well to again bring it prominently to the attention of the nation.

Railroad Pay Victory

In the face of strong opposition inspired by Wall Street, railroad labor stuck steadfastly to its guns in the wage negotiations with the managements and won a victory. Instead of the further wage reduction insisted on by the managements and their Wall Street allies, the railroad workers are to get a gradual restoration of the 10 per cent pay reduction they took in 1932, until they are back to the old levels next year. They will get a 2½ per cent return on July 1, another 2½ per cent on Jan. 1 and the remaining 5 per cent on April 1.

The railroad workers are to be heartily congratulated on their success. It is a victory for restoration of purchasing power and should be a strong stmulus to recovery.

The railroad workers have been hard hit by unemployment and part-time employment, but thanks to their solidarity and powerful organization, they have suffered less during the depression than many other classes of workers.

Good in Theory, But—

Whether minorities of workers shall be represented on code industrial relations boards is a red hot issue. It may easily turn out to be the back-to-the-wall issue of the whole labor relations picture under NRA.

The president has been for minority representation. The unions say it's like proportional representation—fine in theory, impossible in practice. One union president says he will call his men o" any boards on which company union men are seated. "Either we do all representing if we are in a majority, or else we do none," he said. "If we get a minority vote we shall claim no representation; we will not join in any split delegation."

RATIFICATION OF CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT ASKED

Albany, N. Y., May 10.—The New York State Federation of Labor, the New York Women's Trade Union league, the Young Women's Christian association, New York League of Women Voters and a number of other organizations filed a brief with the senate judiciary committee strongly advocating approval by the state legislature of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution.

Citing objections to the amendment raised recently by Elihu Root, Nicholas Murray Butler and others, the brief ridiculed comparisons between the proposed new amendment and the Eighteenth amendment.

"The Eighteenth amendment attempted absolutely to prohibit the use of beverages which a substantial portion of the population felt to be desirable and harmless," the brief declares. "Of necessity there would spring up a huge underworld business whose business would be to supply this desire.

"With this situation must be contrasted the proposed child labor amendment. There is no widespread and insistent demand for the products of child labor. Even the opponents of this amendment concede child employment to be undesirable. No criminal enterprise could fill this demand, even were it present."

The brief included a list of more than 200 persons who pledged support to ratification of the amendment. They included government officials, business men, bankers, college presidents, ministers, welfare workers and spokesmen for organized labor.

Labor and Consumers Are Given Code Authority Representation

Washington, May 10.—Labor and the consumers will at least get a screened view of the administration of the codes of fair competition, according to the announcement of Recovery Administrator Johnson that he would name "advisers" from these two groups to the government members of the code authorities. The advisers will be selected from lists of names submitted by the NRA labor and consumers' advisory boards.

This decision represented a compromise reached by the general to the demand of labor and consumer advisory boards that he appoint at least one labor and one consumer representative to each code authority. There are labor members now on the coal code authority, the men's and women's garment authorities and several others.

Washington Bakers Win Higher Wages

Washington, May 10.—Washington union bakers won nearly everything they asked for after a 36-hour strike for higher wages.

An agreement for pay of bakers, apprentices and helpers reached at a conference of union officials and representatives of the employers provides that bakers shall receive $1.02 an hour for day work and $1.22 for night work. The union has asked for $1.05 and $1.25. The old scale was 90 cents and $1.08.

Helpers, who were getting 45 and 55 cents for day and night work, respectively, won their battle for a 10-cent increase in each class. Bakers' apprentitces also received increases averaging about $3 weekly.

The victory of the Washington bakers came as word was received that the 36-hour week had been won by bakers in Terre Haute, Ind., the entire Pacific coast and other sections. Gaining of the 36-hour week is significant in relation to the bakers' code, not yet signed. Employers are asking for a 40 and 48-hour week under the code. The union bakers ask 36 hours. In view of the shorter week won by the union bakers in many places, the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union sees an additional reason why the code should set the week at 36 hours.

PHILADELPHIA JUDGE JAILS 18 JOBLESS AS "VAGRANTS"

Philadelphia, Pa.—Charged with being chronic vagrants and panhandlers, twenty men who were rounded up overnight by police of the Twelfth and Pine Streets station were sentenced to three months each in the house of correction by Magistrate Medway. Two of the defendants were later released when they promised to leave the city.

All of the defendants were drifters from other sections of the country, according to detectives, who had repeatedly arrested many of the men.

All were arrested as the result of a drive made along Market, Chestnut and Walnut streets.

SOUTHERN WEAVERS STRIKE.

Spartanburg, S. C.—Pending the settlement of a strike of weavers, the mill of the Highland Park Manufacturing company at Rock Hill, which employs 300 workers, is shut down.

The strike was brought about by a number of weavers and loom fixers who complained against a change in the type of cloth manufactured which, they claim, brought about an increased loom load. While operations other than weaving were not affected by the initial walkout, the remainder of the mill was forced to shut down while negotiations for settlement are pending.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

In NRA circles they still talk about company unions. And about the funny right of minority representation, which seems designed to let the company unions come in and park at the conference table.

Somebody ought to take the White House this message: In all the code hearings not a single company union has appeared to fight for a single solitary right for any worker. That ought to help some in understanding company unions. Carry it further. They talk about the rights of the unorganized and about the views of the unorganized. Nobody has ever appeared at any code hearing to talk for the unorganized.

A lot of folks never think how funny it is to talk about speaking for the unorganized. The unorganized cannot express any views, because they are unorganized.

The company union cannot speak for workers because it is dominated by the employers.

Otherwise learned men go on prattling about company unions and the unorganized, just as if these somehow had a right to be counted in the labor picture. Of course big business is spending a ton of money to keep the company union in the picture and make it look like something respectable, instead of the rat outfit that it is. They want a company union that will have the look of freedom, but that will answer to the same old wire-pulling, that will take orders as always. That's a hard job.

What employers fail to see, or else do see and are preparing for, is the fact that their tactics may force the biggest labor dispute the nation ever saw.

It's far from idle talk that the nation may be compelled to go through a tremendous conflict before the company union issue is settled.

The Alabama coal owner who threatened secession wasn't the only one of his kind. There are plenty of employers who are willing at this hour to stake everything on a gigantic conflict, hoping as they hoped in 1920, to win and destroy unions for a decade or more.

In those days strikebreakers were paid handsomely—sometimes $2 a day over the rate demanded by strikers—plus expenses. Bosses have always been willing to pay high to keep men in bondage. Bosses have done mighty little for freedom.

Today organized labor is sweeping ahead like a prairie fire. Many unions are growing faster than discipline can be built. Unions have to have discipline. Plenty of folks don't think so, but a union has a lot in common with an army. It has to stand under fire and it has to hold its lines. It is no novelty to see 20,000 men sweep into the union movement almost overnight. Usually they expect miracles and they want action quick. They don't see the long road back, they don't know the tactics of an industrial struggle, they don't know the tricks and the resources of the boss.

But America is going to have unionism, just the same. That or employer-made anarchy, and no halfway business.

Unionism is the only agency through which there can be industrial democracy, or democratic practice in industry. Company union bunk is just that much dirt in clear water.

Newspapers which took Dr. Wirt seriously and aided in ballyhooing his foolish charges of "revolution," were handed a wallop they richly deserved by labor's economic conference held recently in Chicago. The conference, representative of 635 local unions and councils, said of the newspapers and their performance in connection with Dr. Wirt:

"What people have ever witnessed a more astounding spectacle than that of reputable newspapers, in great numbers, political groups, led by men of national standing, and great commercial and business leaders, whose names have become familiar to all, hiding behind the figure of a public school superintendent in a steel town whose tenure of office depends upon the good will of the steel trust, and through his frightened lips uttering ridiculous charges of 'revolution' and 'dictatorship,' for which not a single individual amongst them has as yet ventured to take personal responsibility.

"A national sensation, heralded by streamers across the front pages of practically every newspaper in the country, was nothing more than the tale of a cad who betrayed the home of a friend by misrepresenting the casual after-dinner talk engaged in by a few obscure persons who happen to be government employes and whose utterances would have been of no consequences, even if everything that Dr. Wirt had said about their statements had been true."

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

BIG LABOR CONFERENCE URGES UNITED BACKING OF NEW DEAL

Chicago Meeting Flays Opponents of Recovery Program as Insincere and Selfish and Calls on Workers of Nation to Take Immediate Action to Support the President.

Chicago, May 10.—A stirring call to the American people to rally to the support of the Roosevelt recovery program and to rebuke enemies of the new deal was issued by labor's economic conference, held here at a call of the American-Illinois-Chicago Federation of Labor following action at a regular meeting of the Chicago federation.

The conference, held in the Ashland Boulevard auditorium, was attended by 2,500 officially accredited delegates representing 635 local unions and councils affiliated with American Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods. Oscar F. Nelson, vice-president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, presided in the absence of President John Fitzpatrick, who was confined to his home by illness.

President R. G. Soderstrom, of the Illinois Federation of Labor, was an outstanding figure among the speakers who addressed the conference.

Trust Press Assailed.

In opening the conference Chairman Nelson announced that Secretary-Treasurer Victor A. Olander, of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, who was in Washington, D. C., had assisted the Chicago labor officials in the preparation of material for action by the meeting.

A general statement adopted by the conference charged that un-American and unpatriotic "kept trust press and magazines" are using every device at their command to destroy President Roosevelt, the new deal and all who advocate a permanent new deal, and declared that the time is "now at hand for organized and unorganized labor to take immediate action in the exposing of the nefarious schemes of the traitors to our country and to our beloved president, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Business, the statement charges, has taken a selfish attitude in the development of the codes. The statement goes on to say that business elements in the industrial and commercial world accepted the codes for themselves, "clearly actuated by the single motive of self-interest, and having thus attained a greater degree of organization, and therefore more power to co-operate with each other than they had ever had before, they now seek to prevent the president and the national recovery administration from extending the principles of self-organization and co-operative effort for mutual aid and protection to the working people. Instead of favoring the application of the recovery act in a manner designated to accomplish 'the greatest good of the greatest number' as proclaimed by the president, they seek to restrict its benefits to a favored few. They would deny to others what they have attained for themselves."

The statement declares that the business interests are attempting to undermine the confidence of the people in the recovery program by a nation-wide propaganda against the so-called "Brain Trust." It is charged that having used the recovery program to enhance their own interests, the business interests now seek to prevent its extension to others.

"They are particularly vehement in their efforts to prevent the working people of the United States from obtaining the same degree of organization which the business interests have achieved. In the name of liberty, constitutionalism and fundamental Americanism, they are deliberately and consciously, indeed, it may be said maliciously, seeking to maintain, for what they conceive to be their own benefit, a condition of inequality as between the legal rights and economic opportunities of those who own and manage commerce and industry, as against the great masses of the people who perform the labor, without out which owners and managers are helpless.

"Under such circumstances, the people of America would be disloyal to themselves and to the finest traditions of their race if they failed to rise in indignation against the campaign of misrepresentation and its promoters, and if they neglected to marshal themselves in support of the leader whom they have commissioned to find the way out of the economic morass into which the nation had floundered. We are certain that the organized working people of America will not be found wanting in this respect, and we believe they can and will inspire the unorganized to join their ranks in support of the new deal in its true and full sense."

The conference went on record as heartily supporting the Wagner labor disputes bill, the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance bill, the Connery 30-hour week bill, a state NRA bill and a number of bills of interest to railroad labor. The conference asked for re-establishment of the civil works administration and extension of the public works administration. Launching of a big housing program in Chicago and financial relief for the public schools was also asked.

PHOENIX MEAT CO. BECOMES 100 PER CENT UNION SHOP

Phoenix, Ariz.—The City Meat company here signed a union shop agreement with George Hobart, international representative of Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, and thus became the first 100 per cent wholesale meat company in this city. Several other dealers have union members working in their plants, but the City Meat company enjoys the record of being the only one to date where every employe carries a union card.

BIG WAGE INCREASE SECURED.

Washington.—Five hundred union bakers here won a big wage increase as the result of a 36-hour strike. A conference of union officials and representatives of the Employing Bakers' association reached an agreement by which bakers receive $1.02 an hour for day work and $1.22 for night work. The union had demanded $1.05 and $1.25, previously rejecting offers of $1 and $1.20 from the employers. The old rate was 90 cents for day work and $1.08 for night work.

tion we are receiving from other unions, a number of them have adopted resolutions automatically fining any of their members who enter any of the Home Stores. We realize, of course, that a fine is not necessary to keep a union member from entering a place which is unfair.

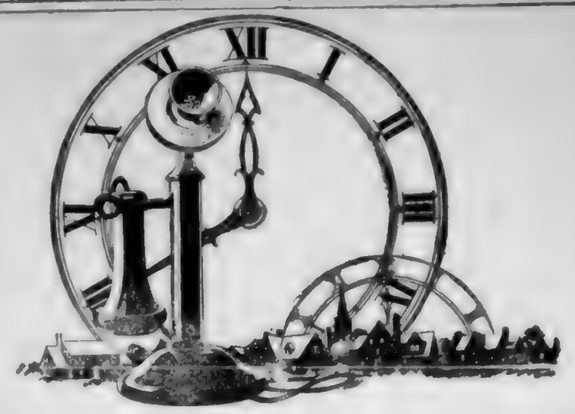
"We have also received expressions of co-operation from many individuals not connected with any union who say they don't want their yards cluttered up with his throw-sheet.

"The committee wishes to thank all who are aiding in our fight against McDonald's medievalistic policies."

Report from Joe Seibold, Plasterer secretary indicates that prices of groceries have taken a sharp upturn in the Home Stores. His local union has decided to place a "sales tax" on any of its members who wish to trade with McDonald. The tax will amount to $10.00 for each offense. Mr. Seibold stated that although the plasterers were in one accord with the printers in their fight, and that he did not believe plasterer members would ever be seen in a Home Store, the $10.00 fine was ordered in case some forgetful member had a lapse of memory.

RADIATOR WORKERS LAND 10 PER CENT PAY BOOST

Waterbury, Conn.—Union employes of the American Radiator company here won a 10 per cent wage increase. The plant, which had been shut down since last September, reopened with one shift instead of two.



Mothers Look Forward to this Hour...

"It's the hour when sons or daughters or old friends call them from some distant place by telephone. How happily they look forward to this time.

Thousands of families are doing this, not only on special occasions like Mothers' Day, but regularly each week . . . enjoying a short, inexpensive voice visit by telephone with members of the family in other cities. Because your voice is you over the telephone, such visits are as satisfactory as though you were together in the same room.

Visiting loved ones at regular intervals by long distance telephone is a delightful way to keep family ties alive at small cost.

Industrial Safety by Law

The imperative necessity of strict laws requiring employers to provide their employes with safe machinery and equipment to work with is stressed by the current report of the California department of industrial relations to the governor's council. The report says:

> "Two freight elevators in a garage were operating without protection at the entrance landing. Three times the employer had been cited to appear before the district attorney's office and each time promised to remedy the unsafe conditions, also that he would not permit them to occur again. Upon the employer's failure to do any of these things, it was decided to seek a supreme court injunction prohibiting him from operating these elevators in an unsafe condition.
> "The employer must have sensed our intention to stop this unsafe condition, because before the injunction could be issued he put a gang of men to work all night and put his elevators in good condition."

The action of the industrial relations department in finally compelling the employer to make the elevator safe is commendable, but the fact that he was cited three times to appear before the authorities for violation of the state safety law indicates an uncalled-for delay in compelling compliance with the law. It would seem that the first refusal of an employer to provide for safety of his employes as required by law should automatically result in the immediate application of the statute to him. Any delay compels the workers to run the danger of injuries in operating the unsafe machinery or equipment.

Workers should promptly report to the proper authorities unsafe working conditions. Otherwise, unscrupulous employers, cunning in their devices to get away with safety law violations, are likely to be the means of imposing serious injuries on their workers.

Tools of "Big Business?"

Organized labor has always had the utmost confidence in President Roosevelt. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, states that labor still looks to the president with faith and confidence.

But there are many who believe that "big business" has succeeded in working in several willing tools to key positions in the administration. It is contended that the activities of these conscienceless individuals in high positions the government are not only wrecking many of the reasonable hopes and aspirations of labor, but are actually denying in some instances all semblance of right and justice to wage-earners.

John L. Lewis, testifying before a senate subcommittee, denounced Donald R. Richberg as "reprehensible and dishonorable." President Green and other responsible labor officials have likewise challenged his sincerity in no uncertain terms.

S. Clay Williams, of the national industrial recovery board, was severely criticized and his fitness questioned in a resolution passed by the 54th annual convention of the A. F. of L.

Leo Wolman, chairman of the automobile labor board, has been soundly denounced by many responsible officials of organized labor.

A complete recital of the reactionary attitude and subversive actions of these three individuals could not possibly be contained in the space available in this publication, nor is it necessary, since much of this attitude and many of these actions are now well known.

Suffice it to say that, so long as reactionary individuals, believed to be willing tools of "big business," are permitted to hold responsible key positions in the administration and to sway actions inimical to the public welfare, there can be no industrial peace—and peace is essential to sound progress.

Senate Subcommittee Favors 30-Hour Week Bill by 4 to 1

Washington.—The subcommittee of the U. S. senate committee on the judiciary, headed by Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) which has been conducting hearings on the Black 30-hour work week bill, favors the bill by the wide margin of 4 to 1.

A poll of the five members of the subcommittee showed the following result: For the 30-hour bill, Senators Neely, McCarran, Norris and Hatch; against, Senator Austin (R., Vermont).

The bill was to be reported to the senate committee on the judiciary Feb. 25, where it is expected to be approved and reported to the senate. Final adoption of this extremely important measure is freely predicted, although organized labor is still aware that the fight must be continued unrelentingly until the 30-hour work week actually becomes the law of the land.

OHIO ACCIDENTS INCREASE.

Columbus, O.—The tremendous toll in dead and mutilated workers which those who own and operate industry levy in accidents, most of which are preventable, is strikingly illustrated by the increase in claims filed with the industrial commission of Ohio for December, 1934, made public by Thomas P. Kearns, superintendent of the division of safety and hygiene. Demanding compensation for fatal and non-fatal injuries and occupational diseases, the claims for the month reached 12,835, or 1,040 more than in November, and 2,349 more than in December, 1933.

Seventy-six workers were killed during the month. Workers handling objects received 2,410 injuries; machinery was responsible for 2,202 injuries and two deaths; falls of persons imposed 1,336 injuries and seven deaths, and stepping upon or striking against objects caused 1,190 injuries and one death.

FAVORS DEALING WITH UNIONS.

New York.—Adam Wilkinson, representing employers in New England, and R. B. Wolf, representing employers in the northwest, in addresses before the twentieth annual meeting of the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry here, declared that it was preferable to consider labor conditions by the medium of collective bargaining than to run the risk of having labor disputes injected into politics. Declaring that the new deal had won the imagination of labor, Mr. Wilkinson said:

"It is far better for us in the industry to conduct negotiations with responsible heads of the labor groups than to refuse and have the entire question become a political one." He added that Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act "may prove to be not an unmixed blessing."

Union Head Asks Protection For American Paper Industry

Washington.—American publishers are seeking newsprint in Scandinavia to offset possible increases in price by Canadian producers, John P. Burke, president of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, said at a hearing on a proposed reciprocal tariff agreement with Finland.

He asked the government to refrain from any action in negotiations with Finland which would prevent application of protective measures for domestic producers, such as enforcement of anti-dumping laws.

STUDENTS, TEACHERS STRIKE.

Havana, Cuba.—University students here went on strike to influence the government to grant their demands, which include removal of military jurisdiction over Cuba, immediate release of political prisoners, demilitarization of the police, guarantee of personal rights, suppression of urgency courts created for trying so-called "terrorists," and larger appropriations for schools. Teachers at Regla, near here, who declared a 48-hour strike to enforce their demand for greater school funds, were joined by the teachers in twenty schools in Havana.

Doctor (to rich patient)—You're all run down. You'd better lay off golf for a while and get a good rest at the office.

GUFFEY COAL BILL URGED AS BENEFIT TO CONSUMERS

Washington.—Henry Warrum, general counsel of the United Mine Workers, told a senate interstate commerce subcommittee that the Guffey coal bill would protect consumers despite probable wage increases.

Warrum quoted government reports to show the valuable Pittsburgh coal seam would be exhausted in 100 years and said that on this basis the conservation features of the Guffey bill demanded its passage.

Guffey's bill would make the bituminous coal industry a public utility and divide the country into twenty-four production districts. Each district would receive a yearly production quota.

DEBT! OVER 21 MILLION DOLLARS IN DEBT ALREADY — and the staggering sum of $8,000,000 more is asked for.

That is what Messrs. Wilhoite, Chamlee and Clark of the "League for Political Power" are asking the citizens of Chattanooga to pile on for a Municipal Power System—a scheme that will lose over a million dollars a year at their own figures.

Do you know that if this $8,000,000 is piled on top of what the Taxpayers already owe, you will be paying over $3,000 A DAY IN INTEREST ALONE?

Do you realize that the interest you will have to pay on this $29,000,000 total debt for just one year would build a Million-Dollar Hospital? It would easily build two new fine Schools at $500,000 each.

It is astounding when you realize that the deficit which will be incurred in just one year of Municipal experimenting with an electric power system would pay the salaries of all our city school teachers.

But instead of having the money to build new Hospitals and Schools, we will be paying it out in interest on a staggering debt.

Remember one thing — All these hundreds of thousands of dollars that are paid out for Interest are dollars that are gone and will never come back.

Yet Messrs. Wilhoite, Chamlee and Clark have the brass to get up and ask the Taxpayers of this city to sink themselves $8,000,000 deeper in debt—for an experimental electric power Scheme—a debt that threatens to bankrupt the City of Chattanooga.

WHEN GABRIEL BLOWS HIS TRUMPET, WE WILL STILL BE PAYING FOR THIS $8,000,000 EXPERIMENT.

The time has come for decisive action. There is only one way out — and that way is to

Letter of A. G. Gamble To Organized Labor

A. G. GAMBLE

"In making my appeal to you in my candidacy, I feel that it is in justice to myself that I should make my record as an employer clear to you. I have been in the construction business in Chattanooga for the past twenty years until two years ago, at which time I went into the coal mining business. Up until then I had never been able to recognize organized labor as there was not any organization with that class of work. But I always paid the highest wages in that line of work. As soon as I was in a position to recognize organized labor I asked Mr. Cooke and Mr. Aymon to send to my mine and organize my men. As I had always felt that co-operation between employes and employer was beneficial to both parties, during your recent strike I was in sympathy with the many people who was out of employment and I told Mr. Cooke that I would make a donation of $1.00 per ton on all coal sent out for relief work. Mr. Cooke and Mr. Aymon will both verify to the correctness of this statement.

"If my record merits your support I will appreciate it.

"Yours truly,
"A. G. GAMBLE."

"My electric bills? I say they're remarkably cheap"

"MY electric bills for 1934 averaged only $5.60 a month — and I am simply enthusiastic about all the real service I get every month for less than six dollars!

"We have a good-sized electric refrigerator that saves me so much time—keeps loads of food fresh for a week—and makes all the ice we ever need. For waffles we use an electric waffle-iron.

"All the washing and ironing is done on the place—and it's a full day's ironing for Georgie with a fast electric iron. Every week all the rugs upstairs and downstairs are cleaned with the electric vacuum cleaner.

"Then of course we often listen to the radio. And lights — my goodness! We're up late nearly every night with lights blazing all over the house. We like plenty of light—and we have it!

"I think the Power Company's service is excellent and cheap as can be—and rates have been getting lower and lower ever since I can remember. And—like I tell Jim—the taxes on our home are already $14.52 a month — and The Power Company is really helping to keep our taxes from going any higher!

"Yes, I most certainly do think The Power Company's rates are perfectly fair in every way—and I am so pleased with your service!"

Thirty-Hour Week Is Held Essential For Recovery and Profit System

President Fremming, of Oil Field Workers, Declares Hours Cut by Law Necessary to Provide Jobs and Purchasing Power for All Workers.

Washington.—Vigorous condemnation of our prominent industrial leaders for their continued belligerent opposition to shorter hours for the workers and a well fortified argument that shorter hours are necessary for business recovery and permanent prosperity featured a statement in favor of the federal 30-hour week law by Harvey C. Fremming, president of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America.

He charged that our captains of industry fail to hear the clarion voice which demands economic justice and security for the workers by the medium of adequate purchasing power, and declared that the 30-hour week is absolutely necessary to provide this purchasing power for our millions of jobless.

Pointing out that the industrial overlords organized in the National Association of Manufacturers, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the American Petroleum institute carry on extensive publicity regarding the necessity of maintaining intact our present system of private initiative for private profit, Mr. Fremming said that in their opposition to the 30-hour week these people are "completely pushing back the one factor which has kept and will continue to keep the profit system alive in the United States, and that one factor is purchasing power."

The purposes of the 30-hour week law, Mr. Fremming said, are:

"1. To decrease the man-day productivity.

"2. To reabsorb millions in gainful employment.

"3. To resuscitate a lost purchasing power.

"4. To take from the charity rolls many who throughout their lives have been producers.

"5. To save this nation from the despotic rule of 'dictatorship.'

"6. To permit the continuance of the profit system.

"7. To place our entire industrial society on an equal competitive basis.

"8. To decentralize wealth through the painless instrumentality of sustained purchasing power rather than the creation of a new economic order.

"9. To reassure working Americans that there is a job for every willing hand.

"10. To maintain and continue our present modern civilization.

"11. To practice in fact the doctrine laid down by holy writ—that 'labor is worthy of its hire.'

"12. To know and understand the doctrine of technological development and its relationship to increased productivity.

"13. To keep in step with natural and normal economic laws.

"Finally, to build in this nation an economic tranquillity in proportion to normal transition, leaving behind unnatural industrial traditions.

"All of which are in the interest of the maintenance of our present profit or capitalistic system, none of which can be accomplished unless jobs are made available with a commensurate purchasing power.

"The 30-hour week means in effect that a well-paid worker steadily employed is the nation's greatest asset."

Glass Workers Get Pay Increase

Toledo, O.—General wage increases averaging 9½ per cent for all unskilled and semi-skilled employes of the Libbey Glass Manufacturing company were unanimously approved by nearly 400 workers on two shifts.

The raises range from 5 to 15 per cent, are effective immediately and run for a year. They apply to about 750 workers. The larger increases will go mainly to those in the lower pay brackets.

Educational Program Is Inaugurated by Unions

Albany, N. Y.—The history, traditions and aims of organized labor are vividly and effectively presented to workers of Troy and Albany, New York's great twin industrial centers, in an educational program inaugurated by the trade unions and conducted by the Affiliated School for Workers.

Backed by the Central Labor unions and state offices of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the classes are reaching increasing numbers of members of the Amalgamated, shirtworkers, collar workers, longshoremen, paper makers, molders, machinists and other American Federation of Labor affiliates.

Most popular of the classes in both Troy and Albany are those on "History and Present Problems of the Labor Movement" and "Parliamentary Law and Spoken English." Requirements of the younger members of the movement have been met with classes in tap-dancing and organization of a dramatic group.

Teachers, all of them volunteers, have been drawn from a variety of occupations but all are experienced in working with labor groups and sympathetic with the aims of the labor movement.

WAGE CHISELERS PENALIZED.

Sacramento, Cal.—The determination of certain California employers to refuse to pay workers the wages due them, despite the plain mandate of the state labor laws, was indicated by the fact that during December, 1934, the division of labor statistics and law enforcement of the department of industrial relations received 1,914 complaints of violations of the wage laws of the state. During the month the division collected $47,557.29 in wage claims which the employers had refused to pay but which the state officials declared were legally due the employes concerned. The amount of withheld wages collected during the month was $43.04.

The persistence of pay chiseling employers to defraud workers of the pay due them is shown by the fact that in December, 1933, the division collected $47,445.54 in illegally withheld wages. The total collected for December, 1934, shows an increase of $111.75 over the December, 1933, record.

Says one father: "We were very proud when our daughter's school grades were announced and we learned that she had made 'A' in tap-dancing at college." But let the young excel in whatever they have the ability for.

Volunteer State Life Makes Marked Progress

In this issue of The Labor World appears the 32nd annual statement of the Volunteer State Life Insurance company.

Since organization of this company in 1903 it has shown steady growth, being recognized today as one of the largest insurance companies in this section of the country, and is conservatively managed, yet the management is alert and aggressive. The primary thought in the minds of the officers of this institution at all times is to thoroughly safeguard the funds which have been entrusted to it by the insuring public and this has been done in a commendable manner, as an examination of the financial statement will clearly reveal.

The assets of the Volunteer State Life, as shown by its 1934 statement, amount to $21,931,921.74. In addition to its regular policy reserve of $19,290,138.00, which figure is the legal reserve requirement, the company has set aside additional funds for the protection of policy owners in an amount of $1,491,775.74. Local policy owners are the recipients of thousands of dollars annually. In 1934 the total sum paid to all policy owners and beneficiaries amounted to $2,716,506.00. Since organization of the company in 1903 the total amount paid to policy owners and beneficiaries is in excess of $38,000,000.00.

The Volunteer State Life maintains on its payroll a large group of employes, thousands of dollars being paid to them annually, which money finds its way into all local trade channels. Taxes on its Class A home office building brings to the city and county treasury a substantial sum annually.

At the annual meeting of stockholders on Feb. 21 President Richard H. Kimball reported that during the past year marked progress had been made in every department of the company. The company's agency organization paid for 23 per cent more business in 1934 than during the preceding year. The home office agency showed a paid increase of 33 per cent over 1933. Jake Bishop is manager of the agency, having served in this capacity for almost twenty-nine years. His outstanding success in the life insurance business is known throughout the country.

The Volunteer State Life is operating in thirteen states, therefore carries the name of Chattanooga to the attention of housands of people each year.

CHILD LABOR BILL DEFEATED.

Carson City, Nev.—By refusing to reconsider its former vote refusing to ratify the child labor amendment to the federal constitution the Nevada senate killed the resolution, approved by the house of representatives, for the remainder of this legislative session. The legislature is not scheduled to meet again until 1937.

"Everybody is crazy over me," said the inmate of the first floor of the Lions View insane asylum.

Many evidences are constantly being reported of the most remarkable determination and solidarity being shown by my friends. I want you to know I am doing everything humanly possible to show my appreciation of this fine spirit, and am making every effort to see and talk to friends of ours about the race.

I ask you to be patient if I have so far failed to follow many suggestions as to contact, and to carry on in my behalf until the last vote is counted.

Indications now unquestionably point to a splendid victory and we can make this certain by constant, ceaseless solicitation among all groups of our citizenship.

School Teachers Denounce McDonald 'Home Store' Sheet

Pledge Full Co-operation. Bakery Workers Reported to Have Struck.

M'DONALD'S BAKERS HAVE SHORT STRIKE

A short-lived strike of employes of Roy McDonald's Home Store bakery was reported this week, which is said to have been ended when the grocer, baker, printer, publisher, druggist, laundryman, dairyman, tire dealer, etc., agreed to improve his treatment of employes in that department of the institution.

The story, vouched for by an unquestionable authority, recites that one night last week employes of the so-called "Home Store" bakery, having become desperate because of conditions imposed upon them by the great business executive, McDonald, rebelled, and refused to continue their work until some assurance was given them that they would be treated differently.

It is said that McDonald was then called from his bed into the picture, and after "soft-soaping" the protesting employes, the latter agreed to give the management another chance, and returned to their jobs.

Although bitter resentment has been aired from time to time by McDonald's employes, as individuals, this is the first time so far as reported when an actual stoppage of operations has occurred, and working men this week expressed the hope that the management of the various branches of the business may be compelled to live up to promises made by McDonald to employes in the baking department of the chain.

Many members of Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, have openly denounced Roy McDonald's "Home-Store" throw-sheet, according to a letter written by an officer of the local to the chairman of the Typos' committee in charge of publicity, and it is the desire of the entire membership to co-operate in every way possible.

"Lest any of our members have forgotten or become careless about the matter," the letter states, "we shall again notify them that the Home Stores are still unfair."

Latest development in the so-called Home Store situation is a report that the concern has entered the laundry business. It is said that although the new institution has started out in a modest way, attending to the needs only of "Home Store" employes, it is probable that the business will be extended later to a general solicitation of public work.

The laundry business is an addition to the various lines taken on by the grocery chain, including printing, a dairy, bakery, tire company, drugs, etc. It was not stated whether the "executive" in charge of the laundry will "own" it outright, or will be paid the code salary for such position and the title remain with the central management.

The letter from the School Teachers' official to the Typos' committee follows:

In reply to a letter from you concerning the Home Stores, let me state that we are anxious to co-operate in this matter. Many of our members have openly denounced the throw-sheet. Lest some of our members have forgotten or become careless about the matter, we shall again notify our membership that the stores are still unfair.

We thank you for calling this matter to our attention as we wish to co-operate in every way possible.

WIRT OPERATED TO UNDERMINE PUBLIC SCHOOL

Active in Foisting Gary System on People.

TEACHERS HIT PLAN OF STEEL TOWN HEAD

Insidious Campaign "High-Pressured" During Depression Period.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, May 24.—The international notoriety recently sought and obtained by Dr. William A. Wirt, superintendent of schools of Gary, Ind., should serve to direct attention to the insidious, successful manner in which he has helped to undermine the public school system of the United States during the last four depression years.

Dr. Wirt is a high pressure salesman for his "work-study-play" or platoon system for public schools. It is significant that he puts "work" first, for his system is patterned after the chain system of production so familiar in big industrial enterprises, disregarding the human element.

Dr. Wirt maintains a publicity department in behalf of his platoon system, and some very nice appearing and plausible tracts and pamphlets are turned out.

Many Cities Adopt Plan.

One of Dr. Wirt's subordinates showed me a typewritten list of cities which are said to have adopted the Gary system either wholly or in a modified form since 1930. I did not count the number of cities listed, but there appeared to be about 200 or more.

It works this way. A school board in an industrial center will get into financial difficulties. Heeding the universal cry for economy, the board, in desperation, gets in touch with the celebrated U. S. Steel corporation educator, Dr. William A. Wirt, of Gary, Ind., or else he has heard and gets in touch with the board.

Visits are made back and forth, profound conferences are held, and finally the victimized city is "sold" on the idea, and the new-fangled educational contraption is installed in the name of economy, for "cheapness" is the big selling point. It takes some time for the board to learn that it was hornswoggled in the trade.

Teachers Condemned Scheme.

Fierce battles were waged against installation of the platoon system at Chicago and Milwaukee a decade ago. Teachers' commissions from the two cities visited Detroit, Akron, Pittsburgh and New York, where platoon schools had been installed, and came back with reports bristling with condemnation of the system. These voluminous reports have been placed at my disposal by Miss Margaret Haley, president of the Chicago Teachers' Federation, who took a conspicuous part in the fight.

The superintendent of schools of Milwaukee appointed a committee to investigate the platoon system in the spring of 1924. On May 6, 1924, following a detailed 23-page report of their investigations at Pittsburgh, Akron and Detroit, Ethel M. Gardner and Clara T. Manthey, teacher members of the committee, summarized their conclusions in the following striking language:

The Platoon School.

1. Is unsound educationally, because

a. It emphasizes the teaching of subject matter rather than the teaching of children;

b. It overstimulates the children;

c. It breaks down the personal and motherly contact between children and teachers;

d. It tends to cultivate bad mental habits.

2. Is unsound from the standpoint of health and hygiene, because

a. It overstimulates children to the point of nervous exhaustion;

b. It offers greater opportunities for the spread of contagious and infectious diseases.

3. Is unsound from an economic and financial standpoint, because

a. It costs more to construct platoon schools than it does to construct regular schools;

b. It costs more to equip platoon schools than it does to equip regular schools;

c. Instruction costs are higher in platoon schools than in regular schools;

d. Supervision costs are higher in platoon schools than in regular schools.

4. Experience has shown that it does not do away with the use of barracks nor with part-time instruction.

Profit's Prayer

(Offered by Brush Smith)

Oh, Lord, give us strength to perform our daily tasks for Mr. Edgerton, that his profits may not be decreased through any weakness of our hands or eyes. May we bask in the pleasure of his smile all the days of our usefulness, and then be permitted to enjoy the contentment of the poor farm so graciously provided for worn-out employes. Amen.

President's Order Protects Workers Against Chiselers

Employers Who Victimize Employes for Charging Code Violation Are Made Subject to Fine and Imprisonment.

Washington, May 24.—Subversive employers who dismiss and otherwise victimize their employes for making complaints charging violation of NRA codes or giving evidence in code violation cases were strongly reminded of their unpatriotic position in an executive order issued by President Roosevelt making such action subject to fine and imprisonment.

The official statement by the national recovery administration announcing the issuance of the order stated:

"President Roosevelt has issued an executive order giving complete protection in their jobs to employes who make complaints or give information concerning alleged code violations on the part of their employers.

"The order decrees that no employer subject to a code shall dismiss or demote any employe for making a complaint or giving evidence with respect to code violations under penalty of a $500 fine or six months' imprisonment, or both.

"In numerous cases before the national labor board, employes have charged that their employers have demoted or otherwise penalized them for making complaints or giving testimony regarding alleged code violations."

The president's order said:

"By virtue of and pursuant to the authority vested in me under title I of the national industrial recovery act of June 16, 1933 (ch. 90, 48 Stat. 195), and in order to effectuate the purposes of said title, I hereby prescribe the following rule and regulation:

"No employer subject to a code of fair competition approved under said title shall dismiss or demote any employe for making a complaint or giving evidence with respect to an alleged violation of the provisions of any code of fair competition approved under said title.

"All persons are hereby informed that section 10 (a) of the national industrial recovery act prescribes a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500) or imprisonment not to exceed six (6) months, or both, for the violation of any rule or regulation prescribed under the authority of said section 10 (a)."

Bakers to Hold Meeting at Night

Regular meeting of Local 25, Bakery and Confectionery Workers, scheduled for Saturday afternoon at 2:30, has been postponed until 7:30 in the evening of the same day, it was announced Thursday.

The session will be one of the most important ever held by the local, officers said, and they urged all members to be present, promising "an announcement that will interest every one."

General Executive Board Member Herman Schad will be present at the meeting, and will bring a message of importance to all bakers, it was said.

WOULD OUTLAW FAKE UNIONS ON RAILROADS

Hearings Begin on Amendment to Act.

PRESIDENT SAID TO APPROVE BILL

Would Do for Rail Workers What Section 7-A Has Done for Others.

Washington, May 24.—Hearings began this week before the house committee on interstate commerce on an amendment to the railway labor act designed to effectively and absolutely outlaw company unions on railroads and to provide machinery for settlement of labor disputes. The bill, believed to have administration support and to be scheduled for passage in this session, will do for railroads what NRA with its Section 7-A has not done for other workers. It carries teeth enough to bite the heads off company unions and leave them dead forever. It should result in unionization of all roads and in the creation of a series of tribunals for settlement of industrial relations on a basis that just about removes the strike from the picture.

With railroads spending about a billion dollars a year to maintain company unions, the measure has a real importance for users of transportation, as well as for railroad workers.

The bill, introduced by Congressman Rayburn, aims to translate into terms of statute law the details of collective bargaining, somewhat as these have been worked out in the better NRA codes, as an amendment to the railway labor act. Railroad Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman explained the measure and its probable application to the practical situations which exist and will arise in the railway labor field.

The most interesting part of Eastman's testimony was in his quiet replies to the sometimes hectoring questions of certain congressmen. Congressman Wolverton, of New Jersey, was much concerned about the definition of the "common carrier," and whether it should include those engaged in the truck driving and handling business in interstate commerce, so that these men should not be shut out of the benefits of the bill, rather than be under the "temporary" protection of the codes.

Mr. Wolverton's question as to the meaning of "influence," as applied to the choice of representatives for the purposes of collective bargaining, went into the matter of welfare activities and sick benefits, and whether the goodwill generated by these among the employes would be considered as coming under this definition. After stating briefly that any benefits open to all employes alike, without reference to their connection with any company or other union, would not in his opinion be so regarded, Mr. Eastman rather surprised the congressman by reading from a decision of the supreme court, in which that very matter was dealt with, showing that the problem was not a new one at all. He also showed that while the practice was not widespread, exactly such conditions had existed in the case of the New Haven railroad, where the benefits of a sick relief organization were confined to members of the company union.

Mr. Eastman gave as his definition of a company union one which is confined to employes of the particular company, rather than one which is organized and controlled by the company. He stated that there are such unions in the railway field, as on the Union Pacific railroad; but that they are usually limited to the shop, office and maintenance-of-way employes.

Being asked whether the "layoffs" had been used to penalize members of the independent unions, Mr. Eastman stated that such cases had come to his knowledge; that he had in many instances referred them back to the officers of the company concerned, and that in some of these cases the men had been reinstated, the company officials stating that the man had been victimized by subordinates for reasons of personal prejudice or opinion, and that the company did not support such a policy.

Hearings already have been held before the senate committee.

Butler Again Named Head of Electricians

Former President Local 175 Returned to Post at Special Election.

A. E. Butler, formerly head of Local 175, Electrical Workers, was gain named to that post last week at a special election called to replace of the city. It was explained that Presificials who are temporarily out of dent Ed Carroll, Vice-President Perry Howard and Recording Secretary Robert Duncan are all employed on T. V. A. work at Norris dam, and due to the fact that these gentlemen will go so engaged indefinitely, a special election was necessary to replace them.

J. G. Stansell was named vice-president to succeed Mr. Howard, and Robert M. McKenzie was selected as successor to Mr. Duncan. Other officers of the local, who were not replaced, are: C. A. Frost, financial secretary; W. W. Williams, treasurer, and E. E. McDaniels, business agent.

Mr. McDaniels Saturday offered a list of local firms which have signed agreements with the local, and asked that this list be preserved by friends of labor for future reference. Additions or alterations, he said, will be published through The Labor World:

"DARROW VS. JOHNSON."

These two men are persons of exceptional prominence, especially in the last few days, in regards to the conditions and effect of the NRA, and their controversy seems to be causing a good many individuals to weaken their support in the NRA, when to my mind it should strengthen it. for the simple reason Clarence Darrow has never accomplished any great movement for the good of the country, but devotes his time to defending criminals and working people believe he is a master mind on the origin of man! What is he gaining by making such attacks on the NRA? Nothing, and he is going to be the worst defeated man ever before Johnson gets through with him. Johnson and the administration has the backing and support of at least 80 per cent of the American people. And should any of you be among those who stagger at Darrow's knocks just laugh and forget he is even living.

I have had the privilege of talking with several leading men, who are owners of large industries and maintain a higher degree of knowledge concerning the working conditions of today, and they all contend the NRA has helped their business and go so far as to say should the NRA quit altogether they will continue to carry it out in the future. Certainly it has helped us all and could do more if the people would back it up rather than try to find fault. Of course, it has its bad features, but what is there that doesn't.

Therefore my suggestion is to look on the bright side of the matter and see if its merits won't overcome the demerits, or rather outweight them.

Just a few words about our ball game. We were a little disappointed last Saturday due to the fact that we were late in reserving a diamond so as to be able to play, but watch out for us from now on. We intend to make a hit regardless. It always takes a little longer to get a new thing started. We hope to be in the City league before the summer has elapsed.

So long until next week.

DOCK WORKERS STRIKE.

San Francisco.—Dock workers on the Pacific coast, from 10,000 to 12,000 strong, went on strike for higher wages and shorter working day. An armored car cruised the waterfront here carrying strikebreakers in an effort to clear ships tied up in the harbor. Police on foot, in automobiles, on motorcycles and horses patrolled the waterfront.

SAYS CONGRESS SURRENDERS TO LABOR ENEMIES

Green Holds Union-Haters Blocking Measures.

FAILURE TO ACT ON WAGNER BILL CITED

Industrialists Determine What Shall or Shall Not Become Law.

Washington, May 24.—The definite charge that those responsible for the legislative program in congress have succumbed to the opposition of anti-union manufacturers' associations to the enactment of the Wagner disputes act and the other labor measures during this session of congress and will make no effort to bring them before either the house of representatives or the senate, characterized a statement by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, on the status of federal labor legislation.

"Apparently those who are in charge of the legislative program in congress have determined that the measures sponsored by labor and in which labor is deeply interested shall not pass," Mr. Green said.

"These measures indorsed by labor," he added, "include the Wagner disputes act, the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance measure, the Connery six-hour day and thirty-hour workweek bill, the La Follette ten billion dollar appropriation for public works, and the amendment to the railway labor act.

"None of these measures have been passed by either branch of congress.

"They seem to be held up by those who determine what measures shall or hsall not be acted upon by congress.

"There is no doubt in the minds of labor that these labor bills would be enacted into law if the members of congress were given an opportunity to vote upon them.

OPPOSITION SENTERED ON WAGNER BILL.

"The representatives of big business, manufacturers' associations, employers of labor, who are uncompromising in their attitude toward organized labor, centered their opposition upon the Wagner disputes act.

"Through their strong opposition to this measure they are fighting for the maintenance and protection of their own organized, financed and fostered company unions.

"It seems inconceivable that congress would yield to such opposition.

"It is a purely selfish opposition.

"It is based upon the determination of employing corporations and manufacturers' associations to control and dominate the economic life of the workers.

"It is quite obvious that congress will adjourn within the near future.

"Unless action is taken soon, the record will show that congress failed labor, in that it refused to enact a single measure sponsored by labor into law.

"Labor will study the record made and will interpret the failure of congress to pass the Wagner disputes act and the other measures sponsored by labor as a surrender on the part of congress to the enemies of labor and to the representatives of big business and vested interests."

TEXTILE WORKERS STRIKE AGAINST "STRETCH OUT"

Greenville, S. C.—The employes of the Victor-Monaghan textile plant at Walhalla, near here, walked out in protest against the intensive application of the stretch-out system.

John Peel, organizer of the United Textile Workers' union, declared that workers had been given more machines to operate in practically every department. Operatives formerly running 104 looms now have 144.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Where copies of legal decisions affecting organized labor be obtained?

A.—From the legal information bureau, American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C.

Q.—Does organized labor regard "tipping" with favor?

A.—No. Organized labor is opposed to the tipping system and believes workers should be paid basic wages sufficiently to make it unnecessary for them to take tips as part of their pay.

Q.—Who said: "We believe the proper function of courts is to expound and administer law but not to make it?"

A.—This is an extract from a declaration of the American Federation of Labor 1896 convention. The convention demanded amendments to the constitution depriving judges of the power to set aside laws enacted by congress.

What Next!

A new "air train" consisting of three gliders towed by an airplane has just been successfully tested at Moscow. The pilot took off in a high-powered plane with three gliders attached by cables 130 meters long. After soaring over Moscow, the last glider pilot disconnected his cable and volplaned to earth. The other gliders followed in succession and all landed at previously determined points. Aviation experts said the tests proved the practicability of the air train for regular mail and express.

FISHER BODY COMPANY EMPLOYES' STRIKE ENDS

Flint, Mich.—Five thousand employes of the Fisher Body corporation returned to work after a strike which forced suspension of body assembly in the Flint plant of the Buick Motor company.

Union representatives and company officials began arrangements for a meeting of arbitrators who will attempt a settlement of the wage disagreements which caused the strike May 8.

Kept Taking Cardui Until She Got Rid of the Severe Pains

When Mrs. Ida Hege, of Edinburg, Ind., was in a painful, run-down condition, she took Cardui, with the results she describes below: "I had just been what one might say dragging around, feeling miserable and all out of sorts. I remembered how Cardui helped my aunt. I sent for six bottles of Cardui and when I had taken them, I was much better and stronger. I did not suffer so much pain. I continued taking Cardui until I had taken nine bottles. I do not have the severe pains." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

An Unfortunate Situation

Sensational publicity which has accompanied the crisis in relations of the Richmond Hosiery mills and the United States government, through the National Recovery Administration, is deplorable from several angles. Federal indictments returned against very prominent and highly respected citizens in connection with alleged code violations have been the subject of comment by citizens of all walks of life for the past several days, and nation-wide publicity has attended the incident.

Mr. Justice A. W. Chamblis, of the State Supreme Court, and Mr. T. R. Preston, local banker and business leader, indicted with others as directors in the Richmond company, have both denied responsibility for the alleged code violations. However, it is common knowledge that the active management of the concern has publicly and privately defied the authorities, and a court clash to determine the government's power in the premises, it appears, was inevitable.

In the particular issue involved Labor has no interest other than that of every other citizen who endeavors to uphold the hands of his Government, particularly in its time of greatest need, but working people will join all other patriotic individuals and groups in deploring the fact that a Chattanooga business institution is in the unenviable position of defying the law of the land as expressed in the National Recovery Act, with the attendant unfavorable nation-wide publicity.

Is Depression Over?

One significant sentence in General Hugh Johnson's speech at Columbus got into the press dispatches which was not included in the releases. Quoting speakers at the Washington convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce as saying that "the emergency is over," Johnson replied: "These will be welcome tidings to * * * the hardly concealed despair that stalks everywhere throughout the nation."

When A. A. Berle, Jr., City Chamberlain of New York, said that the depression is over, Mrs. Roosevelt took occasion to disagree with him. A. F. of L. points an accusing finger at the army of the unemployed, declaring it is 10 million, in face of the declaration of the Durable Goods Committee which seemed to think it only 4.5 millions. These are hardly references to "traces left by the depression." The NRA has not reached the goal set for it by Gen. Johnson last fall, when he said he would aim to "make purchasing power equal capacity production."

Business activity is around 78; steel production at about 60; payrolls are still running proportionately much under employment indexes.

This is spring and the hopeful time of year, but no wise person lets his enthusiasm get into the habit of kidding his judgment about such a matter.

Are They Afraid to Tell the Truth?

Light begins to gleam through the dust of battle surrounding the fight over the Securities Act and the control of the stock exchanges. It has been vociferously announced that the "heavy industries" were greatly in need of money; that if they could get the money, they would be employing millions of men. No elucidation of the question of who or what industry needed this money so badly, or what it would be used for, was to be had; and nothing seems to have been said about that in all of the hearings held on the bills.

There was something about the situation that made a lot of fellows nervous about having to "go to jail" for doing something which they have been in the habit of doing. Now we begin to hear of where a part of the pressure is—in a general way.

It appears that there are some bond issues—industrials—which are coming due, and must be met somehow. There are some $800,000,000 coming due this year; and about $900,000,000 next year, according to one source of information. If these are "steel" bonds, or railway bonds, one can begin to have a basis for surmises as to what is the matter. These things were capitalized—bonded—for an earning capacity that was largely moonshine, and water, mixed with some champagne that flowed when the flotation committee met to organize the distribution of the original issue. That was "business," in those days. Perhaps it is yet.

Anyhow, in the present sober-minded state of the public who may have something to invest, to have to tell the exact truth about the probable earning capacity of the property on which these bonds or other securities are based—well, it would be just too bad for the project of refunding those securities! Perhaps some insurance companies are involved. It would not sound very good to the policyholders to tell the truth about the actual financial base of some of the securities which make up their reserves. Clearly, there is something in the wind which "must be put over."

"Kick Back" Racket Investigation

There is some delay in the adoption by the Senate of the resolution introduced by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, providing for a nation-wide investigation of the "kick back" racket imposed by contractors on Federal construction projects. But the unanimous report of the committee favoring the resolution insures action before Congress adjourns.

The "kick back" racket is the practice of evading statutory or other wage provisions by forcing the worker to pay for his job, that is, to "kick back" part of his wages to his employer.

Sometimes the employer makes the deduction direct from the pay envelope. Sometimes the worker is paid by check, which he is required to cash at the company office, where a portion of the wages is deducted.

In testimony before the Senate committee it was stated that in the capital of the nation employes on Federal building projects were compelled to pay contractors $2 every morning to go to work. One affidavit charged that a worker on the Chicago postoffice "kicked back" $472.50 in order to hold his job.

This reprehensible form of graft by low-wage contractors has been imposed on workers regardless of the Bacon-Davis prevailing wage rate law, which in many instances contractors have technically observed by paying the legal wage rate and then compelled the workers to "kick back" a portion of it.

Confronted with indisputable testimony regarding the prevalence of this abuse, the Senate Committee on Labor and Education requested authority to conduct an investigation of wages and wage-payment practices on all Federal projects. The probe will undoubtedly reveal that Government contractors all over the country have unlawfully taken hundreds of thousands of dollars from the workers as the price of the jobs which they had to have in order to provide a living for themselves and their families.

The investigation should be promptly made, and the necessary agencies of the Government mobilized to compel these grafters on the workers' wages to restore to the persons whose rights have been outraged every dollar taken by the "kick back." In addition, suitable penalties should be imposed on employers who have so atrociously violated the fundamental equities which should prevail throughout the realm of industrial relations.

Stopping Code Violations

New York State NRA authorities set a good example by making an aggressive drive against code violators recently. Investigators swept through the New York City garment district and found a number of manufacturers violating code working hour provisions. Punishment of all offenders was promised. This was a start in the direction of code compliance that might well be followed everywhere.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Frank C. Walker, executive director of the National Emergency council, says that the real estate mortgage debt of the country is nearly as large as the combined national, state, county and municipal debts. It has been a profitable field, until extra straws broke the camel's back, and foreclosures at the rate of 25,000 a month began to uncover the situation. Foreclosures have now been reduced to 20,000 a month, and the Home Owners Loan corporation has received about 1,250,000 applications, totaling $4,000,000,000.

It is proposed in the new housing bill to bring new factors of security into this field of finance, with a view to stimulating activity in residential construction. This has been reduced from a former total of approximately $3,000,000,000 annually to about 10% of that figure, or $300,000. Former aggregate of building construction was about $11,000,000,000 per annum, which has now been reduced to about $3,000,000,000.

The building industry is one of the larger industries of the nation, employing directly, in process of construction and of making and handling materials for construction approximately 5,000,000 persons. Many of these, with their families, have been on relief rolls and until there is a change for the better in building they will continue to be on relief.

This fact, together with the hardships of those whose homes are being taken from them on foreclosures, constitute a large part of the dark picture of depression. The situation has been aggravated by unsound practices connected with making loans, in use of second mortgage, charging of excessive fees and high rates in making mortgages, and use of the fictitious short-term mortgage for purpose of securing more fees for handling them.

To remedy this whole situation, striking at the root, it is proposed to inaugurate a four-fold program, including (1) modernization (with $2.00 limitation, applicable to all types of building); (2) insurance of mortgages by a mutual association for the purpose; (3) mortgage associations for the purpose of attracting investors and making capital available in the mortgage field; and (4) insurance shares and certificates of building and loan associations, so as to remove the handicap carried by these as against banks having insurance of deposits.

The German labor front, which has usurped the position of the former free trade unions, is only concerned with personal problems, according to statements made by its leaders. Its publications prove it, too, for "Arbeitertum" ("The Working World"), the official organ of the front, never breathes a word about trade union questions, social policy or anything of that kind. Pen and pencil tell only of hikes and holiday excursions, pictures of German workers in the Middle Ages, conditions in soviet Russia, pariah meetings, extravagant homage to Hitler and his men and, last but not least, war reminiscences.

The first number of April has a particularly illusinating contribution, consisting of the war pictures which appear in the anti-war literature of all countries, men hanging on the barbed wire, dirt and blood in the trenches, etc. But these pictures have not been printed in "Arbeitertum" to fill the reader with horror of the war, for underneath is the charming caption: "War is always war; those who don't believe it will die of it!" (Krieg ist nun einmal Krieg, wer's nicht glaubt, der stirbt daran!").

PUBLIC WORKS URGED FOR JOBLESS RELIEF

Unemployment Crisis Makes Imperative Large Construction Programs for All Governments.

Geneva, Switzerland. — The International Labor Office has issued an appeal to governments to institute construction of public works in order to alleviate the unemployment crisis.

In a resolution recently adopted by its governing body, the text of which has been mailed to all member governments, the labor office stated: "The persistence of the unemployment crisis is increasingly affecting the workers throughout the world."

The resolution also appeals "to all governments to institute schemes without delay or to continue without interruption the execution on their own territory, national or colonial, of schemes of public works calculated to give a fresh impetus to economic activity and to reduce the number of unemployed."

At the same time the governing body expressed the hope that the committee created by the London Economic and Monetary conference to study the question of public works and other means of alleviating unemployment "may be convened as early as possible."

In its communication to the different governments the labor office further stated that it is at the present time preparing for submission to the next session of the International Labor conference in June a report on public works which are in progress or are contemplated in the various countries.

Ickes Makes Oil Field Wage Rates Retroactive

Employes of drilling contractors who were not formally brought within the terms of the oil code until Dec. 21 will share in the retroactive benefits. A substantial payment to employes affected by the order was expected.

The minimum established March 20 by the secretary for drilling employes were: Rotary tools drillers, $1.25 an hour; helpers, 75 cents; cable tools drillers, $1; helpers, 97½ cents. Rates prior to the March order ranged as low as 67½ cents.

Textile Union Asks President's Help in Securing Shorter Hours

"Stretch-out" System Applied Under NRA Codes Throws Thousands Into Jobless Army—Cut Length of Work Week Only Means to Check Unemployment.

New York, May 24.—The intensive application of the "stretch-out" system and other speed-up practices by textile manufacturers have thrown thousands of workers into the jobless army, without hope for re-employment, declared Thomas F. McMahon, president, and James Starr, secretary-treasurer of the United Textile Workers of America, in a letter to President Roosevelt requesting his support in securing shorter hours for the textile industry.

Unemployment Increases.

"Unemployment in the textile industry is increasing by leaps and bounds," the letter said. "Code authorities are instituting forced curtailment programs and prospects for the industry during the next few months are indicative that conditions of employment will become worse. Production is outstepping consumer demand to such an extent that we feel the administration should recognige the grave danger of further delay in applying the remedy."

Workers Displaced by Thousands.

"Since the advent of the 'stretch-out system' or 'excessive machine load,' there is no such thing as permanent employment, and in all our arguments and briefs submitted to the administration, we have contended that eighty (80) machine hours were entirely too much and would not provide the necessary employment and the equivalent purchasing power.

"That is exactly what has happened. Workers are being displaced by the thousands. Many employers are trying to even up their costs by increasing the unit of production. Markets are flooded and the mills are compelled to announce curtailment periods, thereby depriving the workers of their meagre wages and throwing them back once more on the mercy of charity.

Shorter Hours Only Remedy.

"Your statement on March 5 last and Gen. Johnson's later announcement relative to shorter hours appealed to us as being a proper and sound approach to this problem.

"Although the blight of unemployment has not, to any great extent, reached into all textile communities, we would ask you to order a survey of the entire industry in order that you might learn just how serious this problem is.

"We would refer you especially to the New England states, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Reports received in our office from the south lead us to believe that it will only be a short time before hundreds of thousands of southern workers will likewise be affected.

Labor Under Code Is Jeopardized.

"There are over 1,000,000 workers in the textile industry. The cotton code was the first code approved by the administration. We recognized its advantages, appreciated its benefits, and on several occasions have tried to point out its defects, and the need for amendment.

"Our emergency committee, after serious consideration of this problem, authorized the officials to make an appeal to you, in order that we might not return to the deplorable conditions existing before the code, when unemployment threatened the very structure of our constitutional government.

"We are convinced that shorter hours will aid materially in the solution of this problem. We would ask your support in this direction."

WISCONSIN FINDS JOBS FOR 37,277 UNEMPLOYED

Madison, Wis.—During the period Jan. 2 to April 28 Wisconsin's nine state employment offices found jobs for 37,277 out of 53,617 applicants, the state industrial commission announced.

Employes were requested by fifty-four employers who previously had not used the state offices.

Applicants for jobs are classified as to their regular occupations so as to furnish employers with lists of persons best qualified for any particular work on short notice. A complete list of work opportunities in various lines provides similar service for persons who are "hunting" jobs in order that they may buy a living for themselves and their families.

In Wisconsin, as in other states, the workers are confronted with a situation described by a Chinaman who said it is a case of "no jobee, no liveo"—except on the semi-starvation rations of charity relief.

AIRCRAFT STRIKE ENDED BY BOARD

Washington.—The national labor board ruled that a strike for higher wages in the Consolidated Aircraft corporation and Curtiss Airplane Motor company, at Buffalo, N. Y., be called off because the workers' union did not comply with an arbitration agreement.

Following a hearing at which employes did not appear the board ruled to uphold a decision of the Buffalo regional labor board which provided that management and labor should submit the question of readjustment of the basic wage scale to an arbitration board.

The union, the board ruled, must indicate its acceptance of these terms not later than June 1.

Court Fines New Jersey NRA Wage Chisler $500

Clothing Concern Paid 34 Cents an Hour Less Code Scale and Added Four Hours to Maximum Work Week.

Camden, N. J.—Federal Judge John Boyd Avis found the Perfect Coat and Suit company of Camden guilty of persistent violation of wages and hours provisions of the National Coat and Suit code, fined the company $500, and ordered restitution of the amounts due the concern's employes to make up the underpayments.

The code prescribes 35 hours as the maximum work week and 81 cents an hour minimum wage. The information filed against the company by the National Coat and Suit authority cited four counts of violation of the maximum weekly hours and six counts of minimum wage violation. It was charged that the company's employes, during a certain period, worked between 39 and 40 hours a week, and that six employes were paid at the rate of 47 cents an hour. Herman Saluk, president of the company, pleaded guilty on all ten counts.

Leniency Asked for Code Violator.

The dispute was taken into court after investigation by the Coat and Suit Authority revealed violations of the code and the company refused to conform. George W. Alger, director of the authority, referred the matter to the national compliance board at Washington, which turned it over to the United States attorney, Harlan Besson, who asked the court to be lenient in view of the fact that Mr. Saluk had already paid $1,093.09 to F. Nathan Wolf, secretary of the National Coat and Suit Authority, and that the money would be distributed to the workers who were underpaid.

Boy—Wouldn't your mother be awfully angry if she saw you in that scant bathing suit?

Lass—I should say so. It's hers.

RAIL UNIONS JUSTIFIED IN FORCING PAY BOOST

Washington.—The volumes of hot air regarding the poverty of the railroads which the railway executives shot forth recently in their frantic opposition to restoring the 10 per cent pay reduction which they imposed on their employes a couple of years ago are completely exploded by the report of the bureau of railway economics, an organization maintained by the carriers themselves, showing that the operating income of Class I roads for the first three months of this year was more than three times that of the same period last year.

The figures for the first quarter of 1934 were $112,276,896, compared with $34,551,646 for the first three months of 1933.

When these figures became known here it was seen that all the talk of the railway executives about their financial inability to restore only one-quarter of the original 10 per cent on July 1 was sheer rubbish.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What NRA code led in the elimination of child labor?

A.—The cotton textile code, first to be approved, which provides that "no employer in the cotton textile industry shall employ any minor under the age of 16 years."

Q.—When did the American Federation of Labor first advocate the five-day week?

A.—In 1913, when the convention held that year said: "We heartily commend the five-day week to the thoughtful and favorable consideration of all organizations affiliated with the A. F. of L., to the end that the shortening of the week will be conducive to the physical, material, intellectual and moral welfare of the toilers."

Q.—Was the International Typographical union the first national union to admit women on equal terms with men?

A.—Yes. The I. T. U. admitted women in 1869 and the next year Augusta Lewis was a delegate to its convention.

What Next!

Mechanisms utilizing the photo-electric cell and electric sound control to aid patients who have lost the use of their limbs from paralysis or other causes were recently demonstrated at the Reconstruction hospital, New York City. The instruments were devised to help a 14-year-old boy, paralyzed from the neck down. An arrangement of two light beams and a photo-electric cell above his bed gave him the power, by interrupting one or other of the beams with his head, to turn pages of a book, switch a radio on or off or ring for a nurse.

Labor Militancy Growing

The Virginia Federation of Labor has served notice that unless employers who violate the codes and the recovery act are promptly punished, it will no longer strive to prevent strikes against such employers. Coming from the conservative state of Virginia, this is a significant declaration of labor feeling.

Labor throughout the nation is becoming "fed up" on employer evasion and violation of the codes and the recovery act. Big strikes at Toledo, Minneapolis and other points, as well as the action of Virginia labor, inldicate the workers' resentment. Strikes are now at new high and unless employers change their attitude, they will increase even more, in all probability.

The workers are justifiably angry. They have been patient for many months, and are becoming convinced that their patience has not been appreciated. Apparently some employers will not do the right thing until they are compelled to.

Labor's resentment is not confined to chiseling employers. Hostility to some of the administrative methods of the NRA and the code authorities is increasing fast and is close to the explosion point.

There is a growing feeling of bafflement and a feeling of being double-crossed. There is a growing feeling that labor is being given the "run-around" and that the point of NRA as to increased purchasing power and new employment has been too widely missed. The leaders looked for no miracles, but they did look for more labor representation than has been given and for more employment than has been created.

Wagner Points Out Danger

Senator Robert F. Wagner points out the danger from the unwillingness of business, though benefiting from present improved conditions, to further reduce hours and increase wages. "If the return to prosperity, as measured by increased industrial output and higher profits, is going to be accompanied by a desire to return to the wage philosophy of the 1920's, additional and more serious depressions are only a matter of a few years," he told the senate.

Company Union Photographed

Organized labor's claim that the company union is nothing more nor less than a scheme devised by certain employers to impose their dictatorial decrees on employes and prevent their organization in bona fide independent trade unions is reflected in cogent language in an editorial in "America," a Catholic review published in New York City.

Discussing the declaration by Senator Wagner, chairman of the national labor board, that the company union is an association controlled by the employer, with its expenses paid by the employer and its decisions usually subject to the employer's veto, and that it is not an instrument to enable the worker to bargain with his employer on the basis of equality, the editorial says:

> "Isolated from other labor groups, unable to profit by their knowledge, and forbidden to employ 'outside' counsel, the company union is but a Quaker gun used against an enemy equipped with the most powerful munitions that science can devise and money buy. Certainly, it cannot give its members the weight and authority which they need to bargain collectively with the employer. Indeed, unless the two parties can meet on an approximately equal footing, collective bargaining is a sham. In dealing with the company union, the employer usually has the agreeable task of driving a bargain with himself. That is why some of our largest, and most ruthless employers anathematize the union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and foster the company union."

The editorial concludes that the company union imperils "the rights of workers in general, and thus makes the problems of every wage-earner more difficult of solution. In any crisis, it necessarily ranks the claims of the employer above those of the worker."

The conclusion reached by the editorial in "America" is, of course, reflected by all progressive and reasoning citizens. Nevertheless, officials of some of our largest corporations, notably, those in the automobile and iron and steel industries, continue to impose this monstrosity on their employes in violation of both the letter and spirit of the labor section of the national industrial recovery act. Indeed, they seek to protect their subversive position with the cloak of patriotism. All of which reminds us that Samuel Johnson, the eminent English writer and lexicographer, once said that "patriotism is the last resort of a scoundrel."

The Mooney Case

The decision of Federal District Judge A. F. St. Sure, of San Francisco, refusing to grant Tom Mooney a writ of habeas corpus freeing him from San Quentin prison promises to place this case of fundamental injustice before the supreme court of the United States, which it should have reached years ago.

Mooney's counsel, Frank P. Walsh, of New York, and John F. Finnerty, of Washington, assisted by George T. Davis, a San Francisco lawyer, asked for the writ in a petition charging that Charles Fickert, district attorney in San Francisco at the time of the trial, suppressed evidence and used perjured testimony to secure the conviction of Mooney for complicity in connection with the bomb outrage during the preparedness parade in San Francisco in 1916, which killed several persons. Fickert's action, the petition alleged, constituted misuse of and abuse of the state of California of the recognized procedure in a trial court and violated the Fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States, which declares that a state shall not "deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law."

The shameless character of the trial was condemned by the 1917 convention of the American Federation of Labor, which declared that the majority of our citizens believed the conviction was brought about "through testimony which branded some of the witnesses as perjurers and those who endeavored to procure subornation of perjury for the purpose of securing such reward as might be given to them for their testimony." On the basis of this belief, the A. F. of L. demanded a new trial for Mooney.

The same position was later taken by Judge Griffin, the trial judge, who said that if the truth had been told to the jury and the jury had nevertheless convicted Mooney, he would have set the conviction aside as a miscarriage of justice. A similar conclusion must be drawn from the report of the Wickersham commission, which clearly showed that what the trial court accepted as evidence warranting conviction was nothing but absolute perjury.

Despite the accumulation of indisputable data during sixteen long years that Mooney was convicted by processes which are aptly described as "legal violence," the California courts have refused to give a new trial and Mooney still languishes in San Quentin prison.

The Mooney case is no longer a case limited to Mooney himself. The larger question is, Can an innocent man, sent to prison for life on what is generally admitted to be perjured testimony, be deprived of his freedom permanently by the technicalities of a state law which makes no provision for a new trial even though the injustice of the original trial is beyond question?

If Federal Judge St. Sure had granted the writ of habeas corpus the state of California would have been put on the defensive by compelling it to show cause why Mooney should not be given his freedom immediately. This would have meant a new trial before a federal court.

When the case reaches the supreme court of the United States, it will be confronted with its own decision in the Scottsboro case that mob intimidation destroys the due process of law prescribed by the Fourteenth amendment. The court will have to answer this question: Are not perjury and mob action equally destructive of due process of law? Students of the facts predict that the supreme judicial body of the nation will answer in the affirmative and order the state of California to remove the striped suit from Tom Mooney and restore him to the liberty of which he has been unjustly deprived for many years.

WHAT PRICE PURITY?

(Nashville Tennessean)

The South—Southern labor particularly—is greatly beholden to Mr. John E. Edgerton. The validity of its debt must be seen rather obliquely, it is true, to be appreciated. Nevertheless, the defense of the Southern laborer is very close to Mr. Edgerton's heart.

Take the matter of differentials, now. Wage differentials. Mr. Edgerton is deeply stirred over this matter. He believes in the differential. But his concern has the cast of shining altruism. In the differential he sees a bulwark to protect Southern labor. He wants to protect racial purity of Southern labor. It is a very high-minded desire.

Mr. Edgerton is president of the Tennessee Manufacturers association, president of the Southern Industrial council . . . and philosopher extraordinary of economics and sociology. In his address before the Southern States Industrial council in Atlanta Tuesday he voiced alarm over the wage scales provided by the new codes. Unless wages are kept relatively low in the South workers from the North, he fears, will come here looking for jobs.

"We will have to learn to speak in seven or eight languages," he fears, "and accustom ourselves to alien standards, customs and philosophies."

It is true, of course, that most of the white labor of the South is of the good old Nordic strain. Waves of immigration from the overcrowded countries of central and southern Europe have never reached us. It is something, possibly, to be proud of. Mr. Edgerton is proud of it, and no doubt our native labor is highly flattered by Mr. Edgerton's ambition to preserve its racial purity.

Mr. Edgerton's formula for keeping our labor Anglo-Saxon, however, may not sit so well; it is simply, hold wage-levels in the South down to such a point that Northern laborers would rather hit the bread line where they are than come here to work.

Seen in this light, and requiring this protection, it would not be amazing if the Southern laborer should ask himself whether or not he is fortunate in possessing blue eyes. He may ask himself what being Nordic has got him. He may even question the theory that he'd rather work for half-pay with another Anglo-Saxon by his side than for a standard wage at the same bench with a Polack. As far as the point of view of labor goes, it is our opinion Mr. Edgerton is far wrong in believing this theory would hold water.

Southern industry wants a handicap in the commercial race. It already has a differential wage scale under the rest of the country. It would be against the spirit of the times and the claims of human justice to press for a further advantage, that would have to be paid out of the pockets of southern workingmen.

We all look forward to the industrial development of the South and are eager to work to that end. But on what basis is this development to be made? On "cheap" labor? The once proud South should feel a natural nausea at the thought. We are not at a disadvantage from other points of view; we have available raw materials, water power; coal and coke, and excellent facilities for transportation. Industry can flourish in the South on the materials at hand and the initiative of its leaders; it would be a shameful success founded on a wage scale of starvation.

SOCIAL SECURITY BILLS FLOOD LEGISLATURES

More Than 125 Measures Before State and National Legislators, Survey Reveals.

New York City, May 31.—The intensified demand for social insurance safeguards has led to the introduction of 127 measures to provide security against unemployment, old age and distress during illness in congress and in the legislatures of fifteen states, according to the findings of a nation-wide survey of the status of legislation published in the April issue of Social Security, issued by the American Association for Social Security.

While legislators everywhere are studying means of providing insurance against these risks, Iowa passed an old-age pension law, the twenty-eighth state to pass such an act, and a congressional committee reported out favorably a bill which would grant federal aid to states paying pensions to their aged.

In signing the Iowa law for pensions of $25 a month to aged citizens of 65 and over, Gov. Clyde L. Herring declared it to be the most important piece of social legislation of the state.

The Dill-Connery bill, which provides for federal aid to states paying pensions to the aged, was advanced in congress through a favorable unanimous report by the house labor committee. To be eligible for aid under this measure, the state laws must be state-wide and mandatory. After Jan. 1, 1939, all state laws would be required to pay pensions at the age of 65. The federal government would contribute one-third of pensions up to $1 a day.

President Roosevelt's indorsement of the Wagner-Lewis bill for unemployment insurance, and his statement urging congress to enact this bill in the present session, "places the administration squarely behind the efforts for a sane and prompt solution of this problem," Social Security declared. The bill levies an excise tax of 5 per cent on payrolls which is remitted to employers contributing to state unemployment insurance funds.

OUTLAW CO. UNIONS EASTMAN FAVORS

Asks Permanent Law to Compel Railroad Managers to "Keep Their Hands Off" Labor.

Washington, May 31.—Joseph B. Eastman, transportation co-ordinator, does not mince his words when it comes to demanding the abolition by law of the notorious company union, which has been and is being used by road employes into bona fide trade unions.

In his proposed bill for the creation of a national board of adjustment for the compulsory settlement of railroad labor disputes, Mr. Eastman took the position that the company union provisions of the emergency railroad transportation act should be placed on a permanent basis. He said the provisions made it unlawful for any railroad to—

"1. Deny or in any way question the right of its employes to join the labor organization of their choice.

"2. Interfere in any way with the organization of its employes.

"3. Use its funds in maintaining so-called company unions.

"4. Influence or coerce its employes in an effort to induce them to join or to remain members of such company unions.

"5. Require any person seeking employment to sign a contract or agreement promising to join or not to join a labor organization. And if such a contract has been enforced, the railroad is required to notify its employes by an appropriate order that said contract has been discarded and is no longer binding on them in any way."

"That the principle underlying these provisions is sound is, I believe, hardly open to question," said Mr. Eastman. "It means only that railroad managements must keep their hands off, so far as labor organizations are concerned. Whatever may have been the attitude of employes in the past, it is plain that they are now prepared to insist upon their right as American citizens to bargain and deal collectively with their employers upon equal terms."

Green Supports La Follette Bill For Great Public Works Program

Declaring Industry Can't Absorb Unemployed, He Urges Passage of $10,000,000 Measure—Says Government Has Responsibility of Putting Millions to Work.

Washington, May 24.—Warning that "hungry men are dangerous men," President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, strongly urged passage of the La Follette $10,000,000 public works bill to give work to the unemployed.

Appearing before members of the senate committee on education and labor, President Green said that the hope that industry will be able, within the near future, to carry the entire burden of recovery, had broken down.

Green pictured the NRA and AAA as having failed to "put back to work in industry the vast number of unemployed." He added that purchasing power had not been raised to the level hoped for last June.

"The estimate of unemployment for April shows well over 10,000,000 men and women still out of work," the labor head said. "Yet we are in a period of peak employment in many of the major industries, and most estimates show there will be substantial declines during the next few months."

Urging appropriation of the $10,000,000 authorized in the La Follette bill, Green said:

"The government has a practical as well as a moral responsibility to continue provision for these millions of unemployed through a program of public works."

While Green indicated the NRA had brought about some re-employment, he said it was "all too obvious that the codes have failed to do what was expected of them, in putting people back to work, nor can we hope for any considerable amount of increased employment in that portion of industry for which codes are still to be adopted."

"Industry," he pointed out, "has been unwilling to shorten the hours of labor sufficiently to absorb a really significant number of unemployed."

He said that from October, 1933, to the end of April, 1934, production had increased by about 11.7 per cent, but that the total employment gain had been only 1.5 per cent.

"We cannot, therefore," he said, "look to private industry for a solution of our problem." He said it was "primarily in the heavy or capital goods industry that the NRA has failed to stimulate production." He expressed the opinion that expenditures would stimulate demand for heavy goods.

President Green predicted a long period when there would be large unemployment "unless further and drastic reductions in the hours of work are made."

"We must look forward for some time at least," he said, "to government provision for this vast supply of surplus labor."

Green pointed out that despite the fact there were over 4,000,000 on the CWA payrolls in January, with 300,000 under PWA, 3,000,000 families, representing 12,000,000 people, were "on the government relief rolls."

"With this record of the past year," he said, "do we dare to say that public works shall not be continued and shall not be increased?"

STRICT CODE ENFORCEMENT IS DECLARED NECESSARY TO RESTORE PURCHASING POWER

New York City.—If purchasing power is to be restored under NRA, every code must be strictly enforced, Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews declared in opening a discussion held by the National League of American Citizenship here.

"Enforcement of the code in every industry and throughout the United States without distinction, exception, evasion or excuse," Commissioner Andrews said, "will bring with it increased purchasing power because the codes are designed to eliminate unfair and suicidal competition which in the past has been based on low wages and the consequent lower purchasing power.

"The way to control the employer who deliverately cheats is to prosecute him rigorously and publicly expose him for what he is. It is true that a great deal can be done by patriotic appeal and agreements upon voluntary compliance within an industry but, in the final push, business men cannot be expected to take the same firm stand against fellow-industrialists that a public department can with its machinery for investigation and prosecution.

"We have all been brought up with the idea that tattling is not fair play and I think we can never expect many employers to make it their business, day in and day out, and month after month, to tell on their competitors. The state must be the umpire, referee, the final judge to enforce the popular will."

GIRL WORKERS' LOW PAY IS SHOCK TO CANADIANS

Montreal.—Girl workers in factories, even where minimum wage rates of $10 to $12.50 a week prevail, hardly receive on the average $496 a year or at the rate of $9.50 per week for the whole year, Miss Marion Low, secretary of the employment bureau of the local branch of the Young Women's Christian association, told the national council of that body in a special report.

Girls in offices and larger stores might get the minimum wage rates for fifty-two weeks in the year, but in factory work the girls were not paid for lost time, sickness or holidays, and were subject to fines.

For factory girls yearly earnings of $496 is the ideal, said Miss Low. By that she meant $496 a year was a standard not attained by the majority.

Within walking distance of work the factory girl had to pay at least $2.50 a week for a room. Her food budget was at least $3.50, and that did not allow for adequate nourishment or variety.

After paying for food and lodging, the girl had a balance of $182 a year for clothing and all other necessaries of life.

The publication of such studies, along with the revelations of huge salaries and bonuses paid executives for maintaining dividends on oceans of watered stocks, has greatly disturbed Canadian complacency .

Episcopalians Ask Unemployment Insurance and Ban on Child Labor

New York City, May 24.—Permanent end of child labor and establishment of some form of Unemployment insurance was demanded by the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York at its 151st convention here.

Bishop William T. Manning, who presided, called for the abolition of child labor and protection of unemployed workers in his annual address. The convention adopted a resolution unanimously expressing agreement "with that part of the bishop's address dealing with social questions."

"Two of these needs I wish especially to commend to your attention at this time: first, the permanent and nation-wide elimination of child labor, and second, the protection of our workers by some form of unemployment insurance," Bishop Manning said in his address, in commending the work of the diocesan social service commission. "I am not discussing here the measure by which this is to be accomplished, but the way can be found to end the wrong and shame of child labor and to relieve the workers of our land from the uncertainty and insecurity which now hang over them and their families through fear of unemployment."

Bishop Manning said it was not the function of the church to prescribe economic systems or forms of government.

"But," he added, "it is the function of the church to bring in the reign of Christ in this world, and Christ's reign is not reconcilable with war, or sweatshops, or slums, or racial prejudices and persecution, or with a blind and selfish nationalism."

PROBE OF PAY CHISELING U. S. CONTRACTORS ASKED

Washington, May 10.—A congressional investigation into wages paid employes on several federal building projects was demanded recently by Representative McFadden, of Pennsylvania, in a resolution introduced in the house.

"Evidence is available that wage rates prevailing in Washington have been ignored in violation of the law (Bacon-Davis act), that wages due have not been paid, and that workers who have asked for their money have been threatened with discharge," he said.

The resolution would authorize the speaker to appoint a committee of five members, with authorization "to investigate the activities of general contractors engaged in federal construction work in the district." The committee would report its findings to the house with such recommendations for legislation as it deems advisable.

Q.—When did American labor first declare for arbitration of disputes between nations?

A.—At the convention of 1887, when a declaration for international arbitration was adopted.

Q.—What was the first American trade union to extend its jurisdiction to Canadian workers?

A.—The International Molders' Union of North America, which in 1863 extended its jurisdiction to Canada, though Canadian unions had been represented at the convention of the organization two years earlier.

What Next!

Chemists of the United States department of agriculture have developed a method of aging leather in three to six months. Thus they can speed up tests of leather's durability and permanence without waiting many years. From this process, the department says, will come new light on the deterioration of book bindings from sulphur acids in the air and other causes.

Lady Says She Took CARDUI for Cramps; Was Soon Relieved

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. Fulfilling a Promise

Passage of the Wagner labor disputes bill would be only making good on a promise to the wage-earners of America, Elmer F. Andrews, New York state industrial commissioner, points out in a statement reiterating support of the measure.

"The nub of the whole matter is that American workers have been promised the right to genuine collective bargaining and are now determined, in greater numbers than ever before, to win that right," Mr. Andrews says, adding: "If they are not given it by orderly government legislation and action, it is to be expected that they will struggle for it in the costly fashion employed in Minneapolis, Toledo and threatened in the steel centers of the country. In my view, enactment of the Wagner bill would not be a surrender to labor, as some employers have said. Rather, it will be a fulfillment of a promise made to the workers of this country and agreed to by every employer signing an NRA code of any description.

"American industry cannot go backward to autocratic methods. The San Francisco Commonwealth club speech of President Roosevelt, in 1932, in which he laid down the principle that industry and business must be conducted with regard to the welfare of the workers and the public, marked a turning point in American history. The Wagner labor disputes bill is an implement for the fulfillment of that principle."

Picture Is Overdrawn

America has often been pictured as a land of golden opportunity for its women in business and the professions, but a report of the United States Women's bureau indicates that the picture has been colored too brightly.

Mentioning the 20,000 business and professional women whose incomes and difficulties were studied by the bureau in cooperation with the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Mary Anderson, director of the bureau, said: "When we look into the question of what they earned, the story takes on a rather depressing aspect."

A check-up of the earnings of 16,000 women, who lived in forty-seven states and the District of Columbia, showed that the average amounted to only $1,625. One-fourth earned less than $1,210, one-fourth more than $2,075, but only one-eighth earned $2,500 or more.

Jobless Generation a Menace

Reports from Europe in the last few years have told of a generation of young people who have never been employed. They have come to maturity during the time of widespread unemployment following the war and have been unable to find work. Now America seems to be developing the same kind of generation.

In Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, a study of the state employment office discloses that 10 per cent of the county's jobless are persons who have never been employed. They are between the ages of 16 and 26.

The Pennsylvania study reveals a serious situation, which undoubtedly obtains in other parts of the United States. Crime, bitter discontent, maladjustments of many kinds are certain to exist to a greater degree among young people who can't get work than among those employed. The nation must remedy the situation or reap a harvest of evil.

Sound NRA Exemption Ruling

A Cleveland worsted mill recently asked exemption from the machinery hours limitation of the code for the wool textile industry on the ground that a strike in March had decreased production and it wished to make up for lost ground. The NRA denied the application.

The code authority and the advisory boards took the sound position that the granting of the application would tend to establish a dangerous precedent. It pointed out that if employers knew they could secure exemptions to make up for time lost by strikes, they would be less apt to make an earnest endeavor to get along in peace with their employes.

If the ruling is an indication of NRA policy in the future, it is of great importance and significance. Labor believes that the application of the Cleveland mill was very properly denied and hopes that similar applications will be rejected.

Quality Goods and Wages

Robert H. Montgomery, New York business man, told the United States Chamber of Commerce in annual convention that extensive exploitation of cheap merchandise has been a big evil of the depression. He went on to say some things of interest to labor.

"Instead of glorifying cheap and inferior products with specious claims of excellence, producers and distributors should explain to the public the economies and advantages in service and in satisfaction of merchandise of good quality," Mr. Montgomery said. "They should inform their customers that not only are quality products of intrinsic value and economy in the long run, but their purchase is a potent aid toward the recovery of general prosperity. By raising the standards of quality in merchandise today, we will also be raising the standards of living, by increasing employment and advancing the general levels of wages. It is the most logical and immediate method available today of putting more people to work at higher wages and in further increasing consumption of raw and manufactured products."

A Pernicious Practice

The unpatriotic filibuster recently used by Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, to prevent a vote in the Federal House of Representatives on the Capper-Norton old-age pension bill for the District of Columbia is a well-defined illustration of a parliamentary practice that should receive little toleration.

The bill had been favorably reported by the House Committee on the District of Columbia, whose chairman is Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey. Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Representative Norton sponsored the measure.

Representative Norton called up the bill on the one day in three weeks devoted by the House of Representatives to measures concerning the District of Columbia.

Representative Blanton declared his opposition to the measure, which was his parliamentary right. But he carried his opposition to the extent of using that most objectionable form of parliamentary obstruction, a one-man filibuster, to prevent a vote. He made a one-hour speech which he admitted was merely a device to kill time. When objection was raised to this procedure he retorted that "under the rules of the House I can use my time in discussing any subject that suits me." He blocked a unanimous consent agreement to limit general debate. He insisted on having the bill read at length. He raised colorless points of order to consume time. He resorted to a number of other devices to block action on a meritorious bill to give the dependent aged of the nation's capital that security from want which is the underlying principle in old-age pensions.

Opposition to any bill which he opposes, regardless of the merit of his position, is the parliamentary right of a Member of Congress. But that opposition should not be carried to the extent of a one-man filibuster to prevent action on a measure on which all the other members are ready to vote. Such a practice is pernicious. It is especially pernicious toward the end of a session of Congress when forced delay may cause a measure to be lost in the volume of parliamentary business incident to such a period.

One man should not be permitted to run the House of Representatives.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

The strike front is hot. It probably will be hotter. Trucks, bakeries, water fronts, factory workers—read your daily papers and treble the strike news to get a fair picture.

Today's strikes may be ended tomorrow, but tomorrow there will be new ones. Men who prefer peace are forced to fight. Industries, urged by NRA to be fair and standing with backs to the wall trying not to be fair. Wages have been hit by a "leveling-off" process, cutting down the higher rates, perhaps here and there raising the lower ones.

In the mass, purchasing power hasn't budged much—ten million still look for jobs where there are no jobs.

Not so good. But better than a year ago. A year ago nobody had the courage to strike—no hope of getting anything out of a strike. Today plenty have the courage. Some have too much.

Bad spot in the situation is the emergence of the reds. Too many of them. Numerically they don't run so big, but they are in some key positions and they flock to strike scenes. "Hard-headed" (which so often means merely bone-headed) business leaders can fight real unionism to a point where they may have to deal with red revolutionists instead of democratic American trade union leaders. Too many employers are too short-sighted. They talk about "running their own business," not knowing what it means in its proper sense, but using the term to cloak a determination to wring the last cent out of workers.

The man who sits on the bank of a babbling brook today trying to see things without bias or prejudice is up against a tough job. The biggest shots among employers have been and continue to be utterly stupid. New York banks pile up big profits and still try to block recovery. Among workers resentment piles up—high up. It gets higher.

Of course, when pressure gets high enough there has to be a let-loose somewhere. Toledo has had one. San Francisco, Minneapolis and so on.

Queer thing about Toledo—many of the business leaders interested in struck plants also were leaders in banks that went bust.

One of the results came when the general Toledo public sided with the strikers. Nobody liked those banker-business men.

GARY SCHOOL SYSTEM AIMS TO MAKE EFFICIENT "HANDS"

Dr. Wirt's Chain Scheme of Education Ignores Character Building, Takes No Account of Child's Personality and Characteristics—Labor Emphatically Condemned Plan at Atlantic City Convention.

Chicago, June 7.—A series of newspaper stories in reference to Dr. William A. Wirt, superintendent of schools of Gary, Ind., who created such a national uproad by his charge that communists were running the government at Washington, would not be complete without an explanation of the Gary platoon public school school system.

Briefly, the platoon system as in vogue at Gary means to keep the children in school eight hours a day and march them from classroom to classroom for instruction by specialists in the various subjects. The teachers and pupils have no chance to become intimately acquainted. The teacher cannot study the personalities, characteristics and aptitudes of the pupil, which is so essential to character building. No intimacy, no chance for maternal care. No child goes home to its parents and says: "I love teacher."

Aims at Good Factory Hands.

There is manual training, and the whole system is predicated upon the idea of turning out good factory hands. Henry Ford makes automobiles in the same manner—the chain system of production. He has a similar school at his factories at Dearborn, Mich., I as told by W. T. Rawleigh, of Freeport, Ill., when I interviewed that would-be statesman more than three years ago, at a time when Rawleigh was installing an alleged school in his non-union factory and had borrowed a Ford employe to install it. Work with a scoop shovel at 15 cents an hour was a part of the Rawleigh curriculum for boys of 13 and 14 years of age.

> Wirt, Ford, Rawleigh, the United States Steel corporation, it is all the same; train the boys and girls so that they will be cheap and obedient servants of the modern industrial system.

Chicago fought this out a decade ago, and Chicago school teachers have been in hot water ever since because they fought for public control of public schools and against their conversion into something that the big vested interests thought would best suit their purposes.

"Intelligence Tests" a Feature.

So-called intelligence tests are a feature of the platoon system. A story is told of a Detroit boy who said to his mother one evening after school:

"Say, ma, they examined me for an idiot today and I didn't pass."

The convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Atlantic City in October, 1925, dealt at great length with the subject of platoon schools and intelligence tests and condemned them. Victor A. Olander, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, who had been in the thick of the fight at Chicago, occupied the floor of the convention for nearly two hours in explaining the viciousness of the system.

Dr. Wirt has sold the platoon idea to New York City and had been hired at $10,000 a year, one week's services out of each month, to install the system here. He had told the New York school authorities that he could close one-half of their school buildings following inauguration of his plan. Failing to make good, Dr. Wirt was fired.

NAMED TO NEWSPAPER BOARD.

Washington.—National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson has announced the appointment, recommended by the labor advisory board, of Jonathan Eddy, executive secretary of the American Newspaper Guild, to be an additional member of the Newspaper Publishing Business Industrial Relations board. Eddy will represent labor on the board.

ROOSEVELT BACKS WAGNER LABOR DISPUTES MEASURE

Washington, May 31.—Following word from President Roosevelt urging the enactment of the Wagner labor disputes bill at this session of congress, Senator Wagner started a series of conferences with senate leaders to win their co-operation for the prompt approval of the measure.

Senator David I. Walsh, chairman of the labor and education committee, will report it to the senate shortly, it was said, in a revised form.

Senator Wagner and the friends of the legislation are convinced that the measure should be made a part of the senate's "must" program to be acted on before adjournment. Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson declined to commit himself on the bill. After conferring with the president, Mr. Robinson said the question of what bills must be passed before adjournment will not be determined until the tariff and silver measures are disposed of.

But Senator Wagner, who is chairman of the national labor board, takes the view that enactment of the bill is a major essential to preserve industrial peace. In stressing the need for the measures he pointed out that the strike of the auto workers in Toledo, the truckmen's strike in Minneapolis and the threatened strike of the iron and steel workers demonstrated the helplessness of the national labor board as now constituted and the necessity for a federal agency which had the power to determine conflicts between labor and industry.

Senator Wagner contended that 90 per cent of the labor troubles in recent months have not been over wage rates or working conditions but over the question of recognition of a labor union. The quickest way to settle such disputes, he said, is to hold an election under auspices of an impartial authority so that the employes can make known their preference of the union they want to represent them.

BAKERY CODE APPROVED; LABOR RULES SUBJECT TO CHANGE AFTER STUDY

Washington, June 7.—Twenty-five thousand bakeries, representing almost every community in the country, will come under the code Blue Eagle on June 18, according to terms of the code for the billion-dollar bakery industry, just signed by President Roosevelt.

The code contains a provision that an investigation of the operation and effect of the labor provisions shall be made by the code authority within ninety days, after which the provisions will be subject to such modifications as the president may find necessary.

Official announcement by the NRA said the 90-day provision was inserted at the insistence of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America because of dissatisfaction with the labor provisions, especially the 48-hour week provisions for the hand-craft division of the industry. The weekly hours for the mechanized plants were reduced to forty. Dissatisfaction with exemptions to the hour provisions was registered also, especially the clause which reads "that on any shift or processing department there shall be not more than one (1) executive for every eight employes or fraction thereof." The "fraction" is held by the union to be nullification of re-employment possibilities in a large group, especially of unionized men.

48-Hour Maximum Set.

Maximum hours of employes permitted under the code are 40 per week in mechanized bakeries and 48 in handcraft shops. Commission salesmen, including house-to-house and route delivery salesmen, are exempt from any limitation on work hours, as are "executives, solicitors and professional persons" who receive $35 or more per week in cities over 100,000 population and $30 elsewhere.

Minimum wages are graded according to population of city and occupation. For clerical employes the lowest wage permissible is $14 a week in cities under 250,000, $15 in cities between 250,000 and 500,000 and $16 in larger places. Salesmen are guaranteed $18, $20, or $22 a week, depending on population; other employes will receive at least 40 cents per hour, except that icers, wrappers and cleaners will receive not less than 32 cents an hour. In the south minimum wages may be $1 a week or 5 cents an hour lower.

Wages above the minimum are protected against reduction and hourly rates must be increased. The code provides: "No employe whose normal full-time weekly hours averaged over the four weeks ending June 10, 1933, are as a result of the adoption of this code reduced by 16 2/3 per cent or less shall have his or her fulll-time earnings reduced; and any employe whose said normal full-time weekly hours are so reduced by more than 16 2/3 per cent shall have his or her hourly rate of pay increased by at least 20 per cent." This provision does not apply to those making $35 a week or more; for such workers the code demands an "equitable adjustment" of rates.

Cannot Praise Code, Union Says.

Following signing of the code, representatives of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union issued a statement which said:

"The union tried desperately to induce the industry to accept a code more in harmony with NRA aims. It presented an enormous mass of evidence and contends that this evidence has not been met by counter-proof. But finally the union withdrew objection to approval of the code, on condition that provision be written into it for review at the end of ninety days. The code contains such a provision and the union expects to lend all possible assistance to the end that the industry may prosper under the code, and real re-employment may be established, which the union contends cannot be accomplished with the long hours fixed in the code.

"The union cannot join in praise of the code, because no code containing provision for a 48-hour work week can be called good from any progressive point of view. But the union has taken the position that since the industry contends it cannot operate on a shorter week and since there is to be review in ninety days, the union can well afford to wait through this brief period, thereupon to join in determination of hours on the basis of what the union hopes will be ample and authoritative statistical evidence.

Thus the union enters upon the code experience without prejudice, looking forward now to co-operation in establishment of working hours based upon jointly established evidence, prepared to give its best efforts toward the stability and prosperity of the industry. Code standards are, of course, far behind union standards, which shows the progressive nature of union relations, but the union regards it as a real measure of progress to have reached the stage where statistics may have their full and proper weight in the fixing of the work-week. The union enters this period with good will and with every desire to co-operate to the fullest extent."

The position of the union as thus set forth bears the approval of A. A. Myrup, secretary-treasurer, and his executive officers.

Wagner Labor Bill Reported To the Senate

Revised Text Affirms Workers' Right to Organize, Prohibits Employers from Using "Unfair Practices" to Nullify This Right.

Washington, May 31.—The revised Wagner labor disputes bill, reported favorably to the senate by the committee on education and labor, is a complete rewrite of the original bill. While the revised text contains much of the substance of the old bill, the language in many instances is sharply modified by making definitions more specific and limited.

As reported by the committee the measure provides for the establishment of a national industrial adjustment board of five members appointed by the president, and legislates out of existence the present national labor board.

Freedom of Association.

The principal work of the adjustment board will be to make effective the rights of labor as set forth in the declaration of policy, which says:

"It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to remove unnecessary obstructions to the free flow of commerce, to encourage the establishment of uniform labor standards and to provide for the general welfare by establishing agencies for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes, and by protecting the exercise by the workers of complete freedom of association, self-organization, and designation of representatives of his own choosing for the purpose of negotiating the terms and conditions of his employment or other mutual aid or protection."

Unfair Labor Practices.

The rights of labor set forth in the declaration of policy have been and are largely destroyed by certain schemes of anti-union employers which are described as "unfair labor practices." On these schemes the bill declares:

"It shall be an unfair labor practice:

Coercion of Employes Banned.

"(1) For an employer to attempt, by interference or coersion, to impair the exercise of employes of the right to form or join labor organizations, to designate representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.

Protects Employers.

"(2) For employes to attempt, by interference or coercion, to impair the exercise by employers of the right to join or form employer organizations and to designate representatives of their own choosing for the purpose of collective bargaining.

Interference with Unions Prohibited.

"(3) For an employer to interfere with or dominate the administration of any labor organization or contribute financial support to it; Provided, That, subject to rules and regulations prescribed by the secretary of labor, an employer shall not be prohibited from permitting an employe, individually, or local representatives of employes, from conferring among themselves or with management during working hours loss of time while engaged in the business of a labor organization.

Union Shop Legalized.

"(4) For an employer by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment, or by contract or agreement, to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization: Provided, That nothing in this act, or in the national industrial recovery act, or in any code or agreement approved thereunder, or in any other statute of the United States, shall preclude an employer from making an agreement with a labor organization (not established, maintained, or controlled by unfair labor practice) to the effect that a person seeking employment shall be required, as a condition of employment, to join such labor organization, if the agreement is sought by a majority of employes in the unit covered by it when made. Nothing in this proviso shall be construed by the board to indicate that an employer is bound to enter into an agreement conditioning employment upon membership in any labor organization."

Collective Bargaining Representatives

On the disputed question as to whom shall represent employes in collective bargaining negotiations with employers, and the method to be followed in choosing such representatives, the bill says:

"Sec. 10 (a). In any dispute as to who are the representatives of employes, the board, if the dispute might burden or affect commerce or obstruct the free flow of commerce, may investigate such dispute and certify to the parties, in writing, the name or names of the individuals or labor organization that have been designated and authorized to represent employes. In any such investigation, the board shall hold an appropriate hearing, and the board shall be authorized to take a secret ballot of employes, or to utilize any other suitable method to ascertain by whom or by what labor organization they desire to be represented.

"The board shall decide whether eligibility to participate in a choice of representatives shall be determined on the basis of employer unit, craft unit, plant unit, or other appropriate unit. Each unit may be given representation in proportion to its membership. The board may determine that representatives agreed upon by the majority of employes in an appropriate unit shall represent the entire unit for the purpose of negotiating agreements concerning terms and conditions of employment. Provided, that nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit an employer from discussing grievances with an employe or group of employes at any time.

"(b) In any dispute not of the character described in subsection (a), as to who are the representatives of employes, the board may offer its services to aid in determining who are such representatives."

HOUSE LEADERS BLOCK RAILROAD 6-HOUR BILL

Washington, May 31.—The move of organized labor for the six-hour day for railroad employes received what is feared is its death blow for this session of congress when the house commerce committee reported out the Crosser bill without recommendation.

Proponents of the measure had secured the signatures of 145 members of the house to a petition taking the bill out of the hands of the committee and compelling a vote on it at an early date. Now the only chance for the bill is through a rule from the rules committee making its consideration a special order of business. The opposition of the house leaders precludes this action.

TOLEDO PAPERS SIGN WITH DRIVERS' UNION

Toledo, O.—Publishers of the Toledo Blade and Toledo Times have signed a contract with the truck drivers, who recently organized under the Teamsters', Chauffeurs' and Helpers' union, Local No. 20, of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, following an 11-day negotiation.

The agreement, which is for one year from May 23, 1934, provides for a 48-hour week at a full time wage of $21.60. The scale under the new contract is the same as formerly in force.

MORE ABOUT TAXI STRIKE

that any driver who made the grade for this bonus was watched for infractions of the rules, such as taking a few puffs on a cigarette, and was fined approximately the amount of the "bonus."

On Thursday the Jolly concern employed Gus A. Wood and Williams & Williams and went into chancery court seeking an injunction. The bill of complaint, as reported in the dailies, followed the usual lines, charging the strikers with almost every crime in the calendar and praying for an order which would have prohibited the men from pursuing the lawful course of the strike. Chancellor Foust issued a temporary writ restraining acts of violence, which the strikers contend they had not committed and did not intend to commit.

"We intend to obey the law," they told The Labor World. "The general public has indicated a fine spirit toward us, and we appreciate their support and ask their continued co-operation in our efforts to make something like a living wage."

Hosiery Workers Open Meet With Bright Outlook

Gains Under NRA Make Picture More Hopeful. South Sends Delegates.

Reading, Pa., June 7.—Representatives of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers from all over the nation met in Reading June 4 for their twenty-third annual convention to celebrate gains under the NRA and to plan for pushing organization still further, especially in seamless branches.

At the last convention, conditions in the industry were in chaos, and NRA gains both to manufacturers and workers were in doubt.

This convention, the picture is brighter, more hopeful. The story of the union's tremendous strikes and its efforts to stabilize the industry in which its workers earn their livelihood was enlarged upon by a large group of speakers.

Gov. Pinchot, Frances Perkins, Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; John Phillips, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, and J. H. Maurer, grand old man of the labor and socialist movements, were scheduled to make addresses.

From all over the nation came not only delegates from the older and now more strongly organized branches, but more important from newly tapped territories where unionization in the last year has been progressing with leaps and bounds.

Probably the most significant of these newly tapped territories are through the south—Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky, etc., which sent a group of workers for the first time to a convention. Out of the west came other delegates from newly organized branches such as Des Moines, Iowa, and widely scattered hosiery centers where the workers have awakened to the need for organization.

And especially from Pennsylvania towns came a group of delegates from areas where before last year the very word "union" was shunned. New Jersey also sent a group of new delegates from recently organized branches.

Mrs. Althea Terrell, secretary of Branch 58, is representing that local union as a delegate in the convention.

Toledo Walkout Ended; General Strike Averted

Settlement Gives Electric Auto-Lite Workers More Pay, Union Recognition — Edison Employes Win Wage Restoration.

Toledo, O., June 7.—A general sympathy strike of Toledo labor, voted by more than 100 local unions, was averted by ratification of a settlement ending the long and bitter strike at the Electric Auto-Lite company plant here.

Following approval of the agreement by the United Automotive Workers' union and by the Auto-Lite council, which did not join the strike, the agreement was approved by company officials. The agreement provides for a 5 per cent wage increase and recognition of a union committee for collective bargaining. It also provides for arbitration of disputes and for a classified system of re-employment beginning with the workers who stayed on the job and the strikers and ending with the employes engaged after the strike began.

The agreement was worked out at meetings presided over by Ralph Lind, representing the national labor board; Charles P. Taft, of Cincinnati, agent of Secretary Perkins; E. H. Dunnigan, labor department conciliator, and Thomas Taylor, representing William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Those who addressed the union meeting hailed the compact as a union victory. The speakers included Thomas J. Ramsey, business agent of the union at the Auto-Lite plant, and Floyd Bossler, president of the union.

While the company officials were considering the agreement a settlement between the Toledo Edison company and union electrical workers was formally signed. The union's acceptance of a 20 per cent wage restoration averted a strike that threatened to shut off power and lighting current in the entire Toledo district.

All of the 900 national guardsmen, sent here to guard the Auto-Lite plant, have left the city.

St. Paul, Minn.—Representatives of newspaper writers and editors, organized in guilds in sixty-five cities in all parts of the country, attended the national convention of the American Newspaper Guild here. The guild has 8,000 members.

The principal business of the convention was the perfection of organization work and the formulation of a national program.

COMPANY UNION BOSSES BLAMED FOR BLOODSHED IN TOLEDO AUTO STRIKE

Washington, May 31.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, placed responsibility for the two persons killed and many injured in the strike of the employes of the Electric Auto-Lite company at Toledo, O., directly on the management of the company, which, he said, is carrying out the anti-union policy of those who dominate the automobile industry.

"It is the outcome of the determination of the management in the automobile parts industry to maintain the company union at any cost and to resist the attempts of the men to organize and bargain collectively under Section 7-A of the law," Mr. Green said to the Associated Press.

"The loss of life is to be deplored. The responsibility for it must be placed where it belongs.

"The Toledo affair is bound to have a repercussion in all industrial centers and will serve to inflame the minds of the workers everywhere. I have been doing all I could to bring about a settlement, but have not succeeded owing to the unyielding, stubborn attitude of the employers."

"There is a widespread state of discontent all over the country," Green added, in backing up his assertion that the Toledo strikers had been "goaded to desperation," and "so much so that other laboring people have been aroused."

VIRGINIA LABOR WARNS STRIKES FACE BOSSES WHO VIOLATE NRA CODE

Roanoke, Va., May 31.—The moratorium on strikes in Virginia has ended, the Virginia Federation of Labor warned at its annual convention here.

The federation charged that many employers are ignoring the plain provisions of the recovery act and the codes and declared that "unless these violations of the codes, as well as the recovery act itself, are punished in a reasonable time after they happen, we hereby give warning to all concerned that we will cease restraining members of unions, as we have been doing for nearly a year, knowing that removal of this curb will cause strikes and other serious disturbances throughout the state."

The federation went on to declare that in taking "so drastic an action," labor was simply placing the blame where it belongs, upon employers who are guilty of code violations and that "it now behooves fair-minded and just employers to exert every effort to see that all wilful violators of the recovery act and codes are rapidly and effectively punished."

Among important matters before the convention was the case of the Norfolk Fire Fighters, whose union has been ordered disbanded by Norfolk officials, with the case now in the courts. Vernon Gornto, president of the Norfolk Central Labor union, was the first to take the floor in behalf of the firefighters, denouncing the city officials for threatening the jobs of the workers if they joined the union. J. Fred Cherry, past president of the state federation, said: "Political bosses are afraid of the political strength of these men."

President Charles J. Hughes announced that fifty new unions, with a membership of 20,000, had been organized during the year. He predicted that all workers in Virginia "worthwhile organizing" would be organized by the next convention.

J. D. Rapp, a railway carman of Clifton Forge, was elected president for the ensuing year. The next convention will be held at Portsmouth.

SETTLE CITATION CASES.

Washington.—The national labor board announced that the hearings in the cases of Kirchick-Beckerman, Inc., in New York, and of the Great Lakes Steel corporation, Ecorse, Mich., cited to be heard by the board, had been canceled on notification that settlements had been arrived at. Both companies had been cited to show cause why their cases should not be referred to enforcement agencies. The board was notified that satisfactory settlements had been carried out by both companies. The decision of the board in both cases turned on the statements ordered on the point that employes had been unjustly charged for union activity.

Feels a Lot Better When Black-Draught Relieves Constipation

From many states come letters like the following from Mr. Henderson, of Jasper, Fla.: "I have been taking Thedford's Black-Draught twenty years. I use it for constipation that gives me a dull, tired, aching feeling. I have headache, too. Black-Draught relieves me of this trouble. After a few doses, I feel as good as new. I keep it in my home. I have a big family. When one of us is suffering (from constipation), we take Black-Draught and almost immediately feel a lot better. It is worth its weight in gold to a family." . . . To the Public:

As previously stated, the cutting of the Memorial Trees on Rossville Boulevard was done in error. The instructions on our employees were to trim the trees—not to cut them, and they took it upon themselves to do the cutting.

The manager of the Packer Adv. Corporation is, comparatively speaking, a new-comer to Chattanooga and he had no way of knowing that the trees were Memorial trees, as they stood on private property. Had this fact been known to him, even orders for trimming the trees would not have been issued.

We honor and respect the memory of all of those who took up arms in our defense.

We deeply regret the destruction of these trees. Therefore, we announce to the public that trees equally as large as those cut will be replanted just as soon as seasonal conditions permit.

Constructive suggestions will be welcomed.

PROPAGANDA FAILS TO DRAW SUPPORT FROM BUSINESS MEN

Unionists Declare Public Will Be Informed When Walkout Settled.

Reported American Bakeries Canceled Advertising Contract With Local Paper Because Facts Were Printed---Unrest in Other Loalities Increases.

NOTICE, BAKERS!

A special called meeting for all local bakers, union and non-union, will be held Saturday evening, at 6 o'clock, at Roosevelt Hall.
C. R. SIMS, President,
Local 25.

Reports that strikebreakers employed as salesmen for the American Bakeries company are representing merchants and business men that the strike at the local plant of the chain concern is over featured the third week of the walkout of bakers and salesmen of the Chattanooga branch of the Atlanta company.

Representatives of the two unions involved in the dispute stated that these emissaries of the company "explain" to prospective customers that strikers had been offered increased pay but refused to accept, and therefore there is no longer any strike.

Union spokesmen pointed out that conferences last week developed only the "offer" by the company to get the strikers back, but on company terms, which were exactly the conditions which prevailed prior to the walkout.

Although the alleged propaganda had a slight temporary effect, the union men explained, merchants and business people soon were informed of the truth, and support for the strikers is being continued as it has been since the inception of the trouble.

Retail dealers were reminded that when the strike is settled the "old salesmen" will be on the job. Until the man who regularly delivered American Bakeries products again calls upon the trade, the strike is still on," a union official declared. "Further, when the dispute is ended the public will be notified through the daily press and The Labor World."

The regional labor board at Atlanta, before which the case was taken some two weeks ago, has not yet made its report.

Committees have continued their visits not only to merchants, explaining the situation, but to surrounding communities and other cities where the company bakeries operate.

Another interesting development recently in connection with the walkout is the report that the Atlanta concern canceled a large advertising contract with a Chattanooga paper because that paper insisted on publishing the facts about the strike. It was recalled by old-time trades unionists that arrogant employers in other labor disturbances had demanded suppression of strike news, but not always with success locally.

Unrest among employes of the chain in other cities increases each day, the unionists report, but spokesmen for the workers declared it was hoped the matter would be settled locally and that workers in other plants of the American bakeries might benefit from the result here, thereby preventing extension of the difficulty into other localities.

Officers of the two locals Friday expressed again their sincere appreciation for the splendid and almost unanimous support given them by the Chattanooga public, and asked The Labor World to urge a continuation of the co-operation until a fair and equitable settlement is agreed to by company officials.

Cuts in Textile Hours Are Urged Without Pay Cut

New Bedford Paper Says Production Letup Should Not Victimize Workers.

New Bedford, Mass., June 14.—The New Bedford Standard-Times editorially advocated a reduction in machine hours without a cut in pay throughout the cotton textile industry. The editorial said:

"Now is the time for New England cotton manufacturers, and especially for those in Massachusetts, to make common cause with labor, and to exert their influence to the end that machine hours are reduced without any reduction in pay, and that the textile code provisions relating to wage differential between the north and south are lived up to throughout the industry.

"A raising of wage rates in the industry should have the support of New Bedford mill, as long as it is made to apply uniformly and in accordance with the intent of the code. There has been too much of a tendency in the south and some other sections to make the minimum wage the maximum.

"That the eighty hours a week of machine operation, now fixed as the maximum under the code, is in excess of what is required to meet the normal demand for goods, has been proved since the code went into effect by the fact that on two occasions a general curtailment of 25 per cent has been ordered."

Sinclair Oil Company Signs Union Contract With Workers

Model Agreement Provides for Closed Shop, Checkoff and Other Features—President Sinclair Hails Pact as Move for Stability and in Line With NRA—Praises William Green and Other Labor Officials for Fairness.

Washington, June 12.—Harry F. Sinclair, chairman of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation, and Harvey C. Freming, president of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America, signed an agreement running for one year, recognizing the union for all of the companies controlled by the oil corporation.

The pact was completed after several months of conferences between Mr. Sinclair; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and President Fremming and R. H. Stickel, of the International association. It covers some 15,000 men working in development, production, pipe line operation and refining carried on by the Consolidated Oil corporation, Sinclair Refining company, Sinclair Prairie Oil company, Sinclair Prairie Oil Marketing company, Sinclair Prairie Pipe Line company and Rio Grande company. Joint announcement of the agreement was made by Mr. Green and Mr. Sinclair.

First National Agreement.

The agreement for union recognition is said to be the first on a national scale signed by a large oil company with an independent union, the oil industry having been hitherto dominated by the monstrosity known as the company union, established, fostered, financed and controlled by anti-labor corporation officials for the purpose of preventing employes from enrolling in bona fide trade unions.

An outstanding feature of the agreement is the machinery established for the amicable settlement of labor disputes without strikes or lockouts, with final adjustment referred to the chief executive of the Consolidated Oil corporation and the chief executive of the American Federation of Labor, whose decision shall be binding upon both parties. Provision is also made for the check-off system of dues collecting when agreed to by the employe and the employer.

The wage schedule makes special provision for increasing the pay of workers doing so-called "common labor."

Strikes and Lockouts Banned.

An official summary of the provisions of the agreement providing for the adjustment of labor disputes follows:

"The agreement provides that there shall be no cessation of work through strikes or lockouts during the term of this agreement, which is for one year from June 1. All grievances and disputes are to be taken up in the first instance with the immediate superior of the employe. If settlement is not arrived at, workmen's committees have the right to take the matter up with the company superintendent locally in charge. In the event that satisfactory settlement is not reached by such conference, the chief executive officer of the association shall have the right to confer with the chairman of the executive committee of Consolidated Oil corporation. The above procedure applies to local disputes and grievances.

Arbitration Machinery.

"In the event any dispute or disagreement arises as to wages or of a general character affecting a large number of employes, such dispute is to be referred for settlement to the chief executive of the employer and the chief executive of the association. In the event that they are unable to arrive at a settlement, the dispute is to be referred to the chief executive officer of Consolidated Oil corporation and the chief executive of the American Federation of Labor. If they are unable to effect a settlement of such a dispute, 'they shall agree upon a method and procedure of arbitration for the settlement of such dispute or grievance,' the award to be binding upon both parties."

No Physical Examinations.

In regard to the rules governing employes the official summary says:

"Other provisions of the agreement provide that in filling vacancies the employer will exercise due regard for length of service, taking into account ability and efficiency.

"A minimum of three hours' pay is to be paid to employes who are called for duty outside of working hours.

"Employes are not required as a condition of employment, in other than exceptional cases, to submit to a physical examination by a physician in the pay of the employer but may furnish a certificate of current date from any reputable doctor.

Check-Off System.

"Upon receipt of written request by any employe, the employer agrees to co-operate with the association in the collection of dues by deducting from wages due the regular monthly dues as fixed by the local union.

"Employes shall not be discharged on account of accidents unless it appears that the accident was caused by negligence, carelessness or malicious intent.

"In cases where an employee reports to his regular place of employment and then is instructed to report elsewhere transportation shall be supplied by the employer or compensated for.

Vacations With Pay.

"Vacations of one week with pay after one year's service, and two weeks after four years' service are provided for.

"Where shift men are required to work overtime due to failure of relief men to appear such overtime is to be paid for on the regular hourly basis, but in other cases overtime is to be paid for on the basis of time and one-half.

"Daylight employes other than shift men are to be paid time and one-half for work on Sundays and holidays."

Strikes Are Unnecessary.

"In this agreement procedure is established for the settlement without strikes of any disputes that cannot be settled by direct negotiation. In this respect the agreement is unique. If arbitration becomes necessary the form it takes is to be finally determined by the president of the American Federation of Labor and employer.

"Should this procedure become a generally adopted formula for industrial relations, it will mean the elimination of industrial warfare with its heavy toll upon the workers and upon business.

Praises Union Officials.

"I want to acknowledge the co-operation and good understanding I have encountered in dealing with President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and the international officials.

Friendly Dealing Instead of Armed Truce.

"I am very happy to have had a part in laying the cornerstone of what I believe is a new foundation, the fundamental of which is that industrial relations can be put on a basis of friendly dealing instead of partaking of the nature of an armed truce."

Mr. Sinclair's statement follows:

Union Represents Employes.

"A new basis of labor relations is embodied in the agreement announced between the Sinclair companies and the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers. It embodies rules for the sane conduct of business between employer and employe. The association is to represent its members in collective bargaining in accordance with the provisions of the national recovery act. I believe that the agreement will work out to our benefit as employers as well as to the advantage of the employes.

Prejudice Eliminated.

"In arriving at this understanding, what are usually considered irreconcilable conflicts have presented no difficulties because there has been confidence on both sides in the fairness and good faith of the other party. We started out by eliminating prejudice and found the other side willing to give up the use of the deadly weapons of industrial warfare when the door was opened for dealing on a basis of mutual recognition of the rights and responsibilities of all concerned.

Oil Workers Contract Commended by Sinclair

Washington, June 12.—The union shop agreement between the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation and its affiliated companies and the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America was described as a forward step in the determination of labor relations by Harry F. Sinclair, president of the corporation.

Pointing out that officials of the oil workers' union will represent the members in collective bargaining negotiations with the management, Mr. Sinclair said this was in conformity with Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act. He praised the method set forth in the agreement for settling labor disputes without either strikes or lockouts, and said he believed the pact would place industrial relations on a basis of "friendly dealing" instead of an "armed truce."

NEW CAB DRIVERS' UNION READY TO AID OTHER LOCALS

Officials and Workers Declare Week's Strike Left No "Sore Spots."

All Four Companies Now 100 Per Cent Union. Spokesmen for Local 594 Offer Thanks for Sympathetic Interest of Labor Movement.

"Local Union No. 594, Taxi Drivers, is now 100 per cent., and we are ready to take our place in the Chattanooga labor movement and render such assistance as is possible to those loyal brothers and sisters who so steadily stood by us with their support during the short dispute which ended Wednesday," said Charles Simmons, president of the new union, discussing the future of his local union.

"The public was with us, and we appreciate this fine evidence of sympathy. At the same time, we appeal to them to support us in rebuilding the business temporarily disrupted by the walkout."

Chattanooga's first taxi strike, which involved the Jolly Cab company and the DeLuxe company, the latter more or less indirectly, came to a sudden end on Wednesday following a walkout which had lasted one week, and every taxi company in Chattanooga is now 100 per cent. union. Contracts have been signed with each of the four companies, the Gray and Watson concerns having signed without any disruption of service; the DeLuxe and the union reaching an agreement Wednesday morning, and the Jolly company following soon after.

Union officials stressed that the occurrence had caused "no hard feelings," and they are confident that no further disagreements of any character will be had.

Apparently company officials were as pleased with the fact that the strike has ended as were the workers. A display advertisement in this issue of The Labor World announces that "We are operating 100 per cent. union, employing members of Taxi Drivers union, Local No. 594."

TEXTILE STRIKERS GIVEN RELIEF BY GOVERNMENT

Greenville, S. C., June 12.—Adequate emergency relief funds are being provided for striking operatives at the Victor-Monaghan plant at Walhalla, S. C., and for workers at the plant of the Lonsdale Manufacturing company at Seneca, S. C., which has been closed for the last three weeks due to lack of business.

John Peel, United Textile Workers' organizer for South Carolina, recently conferred with Senator James F. Byrnes (Dem., S. C.), and complained against the failure of relief agencies to provide funds to the mill people. The senator was notified by Director of Relief Hopkins that no discrimination is being shown against the strikers.

What Next!

A $5,000,000 corporation has just been formed in Great Britain to erect and operate a chain of twenty distillation plants for the production of gasoline and coal. The scheme is the culmination of over three years' intensive experimental research work in the plant on the Cannock Chase coal field. Gasoline has been produced from coal at this plant and marketed since last September at the rate of 1,000 gallons a day.

QUANTITY SALES DROP.

Ottawa.—The Canadian business recovery has not yet helped the farmer to increase their quantity sales. In the first four months of 1933—the "trough" of the depression—agricultural marketing sales were 50 per cent greater than in the first four months of this year. Increase in prices has not by any means offset the decline in quantity marketing.

Labor Gains Through Conference

Organized workers in two great industries—oil and cotton textiles—have just made important gains by sitting down and talking things over with the employers, though in the case of the textile industry a strike was threatened.

In a series of conferences with National Recovery Administrator Johnson, in which the employers, as represented by the code authority, joined, the textile workers won more of a voice in code management and administration. They also won a NRA investigation of wages, hours and man-hour productivity in textiles, with particular reference to the question of wage increases. By the agreement, the workers get closer to the inside of the industry.

The oil workers won recognition from the important Sinclair companies. The agreement, President Green, of the A. F. of L., said, provides machinery for the settlement of disputes in such a manner as "to secure justice for the workers without compelling them to resort to a strike." The agreement, first of its kind on a national scale, is the entering wedge of trade unionism in the oil industry, hitherto largely dominated by the company union.

Gains of the oil and textile workers show the value of negotiation with the employer. "Revolutionary" critics of the labor movement are fond of advising the worker to strike on any and all excuse. The workers know from actual experience the hardships and suffering of strikes and do not take strike action except when necessary. They know that just as valuable gains are often won at the conference table as on the picket line.

Work Week Must Be Shortened

The gravity of the situation resulting from the continual mechanization of industry is emphasized by the following statement coming from no less an authority than Dr. Morris Viteles, of the University of Pennsylvania, in a radio address:

"During the next ten years, ten million white collar men will have to change to manual labor, and fifteen million manual workers of today will find it necessary to take up work different from that for which they have been trained."

Mechanization of industry has obviated the necessity of continuing a work week of more than thirty hours.

Organized labor has consistently advocated a reduction of hours in order that our scientific progress may benefit all of the people.

Otherwise, labor-saving devices will be a continual curse instead of a blessing for the bulk of the population.

Protect the Children

The food and drug administration of the federal department of agriculture deserves credit for its work in ferreting out the degenerate business men who for months have been surreptitiously selling bootleg intoxicants to children in the form of cheap liquor candy.

In December the authorities received complaints from cities as far west as Chicago and as far south as Baltimore that the candy was being sold in large quantities in the form of penny bonbons. Teachers reported that children who had eaten the stuff during school recesses returned to their classes in a semi-stupor. Most of the dope was sold by push cart vendors in crowded sections of the larger cities.

Chemical examination revealed that in each bonbon there was about a teaspoonful of liquid which contained more than 20 per cent of bootleg alcohol diluted with various kinds of flavoring. Federal drug administration authorities decided the dope was distributed from a common source located in Greater New York. Intensive sleuthing revealed that the peddlers received their supplies in alleys after ordering them by telephone. Raids were made and thousands of pounds of bonbons were seized by federal and local authorities. Over one hundred store keepers and peddlers were arrested in New York City alone for selling the stuff. Finally the trail led to the headquarters of the liquor candy ring in Brooklyn and the case was presented to the federal grand jury.

These business miscreants, who undertake to dope children in the schools with intoxicating liquor, should receive the limit of the law for such nefarious practice.

In this connection it will not be amiss to point out that if there is one bureau in the federal government which should not be limited by so-called economy appropriations it is the food and drug administration of the department of agriculture, whose main work is protecting all our people against the subversive activities of certain types of business men whose greed for profit impels them to organize into groups for the sole purpose of unloading impure, poisonous and adulterated food and drugs on a helpless public.

Fake Compensation Insurance

The necessity for state owned and operated workmen's compensation insurance funds for the adequate protection of men and women killed and injured by the neglect of employers is once again brought into the spotlight in connection with the case of a laborer to whom the New York bureau of workmen's compensation had given an award of $2,000 for injuries, in accordance with the workmen's compensation law. When he claimed the award from the insurance company he was informed that the contractor had paid no premium on the policy and that it had been canceled.

The investigation by District Attorney Geoghan, of Brooklyn, revealed the existence of an insurance ring which had issued fake insurance policies to small contractors and victimized numbers of injured workers. The scheme was worked by an architect in co-operation with contractors who desired to avoid the expense of carrying compulsory compensation insurance to indemnify employes for injuries on their construction projects. The plot uncovered by the district attorney's office indicates the extent to which degenerate employers and their assistants in the professional classes will sink in the development and promotion of suppositious devices to defraud working men and women of their rights under the law.

The architect rented for a small amount a workmen's compensation insurance policy purporting to be made out to a general contractor. Confronted with inspectors who asked for the policy required under the state law, the contractors exhibited the "policy" provided by the architect, explaining that they had sublet the construction job from the general contractor named in the policy. In reality the policy was worthless and the names of the contractors were fictitious.

So far six injured workers have been discovered who were victimized by the fake insurance ring, with additional victims piling up as the investigation proceeds. The architect who provided the fake policies pleaded guilty to petty larceny. The authorities say it will not be so easy to penalize the contractors who evidently co-operated with him in putting over the fraud.

In the meantime it appears that it will be very difficult for the injured workers to secure the compensation to which they are entitled under the state law. Of course the architect can be jailed for larceny and the contractors can be penalized if convicted. But the penalization of both groups will not pay the awards of which the employes have been defrauded.

The whole unsavory mess would have been avoided by giving the New York state workmen's compensation insurance fund a monopoly of writing compensation insurance. This would bar activities of insurance rackets designed to defraud the workers of the modest sums which society declares they are entitled to receive for having their bodies mutilated because of the neglect and refusal of employers to install up-to-date protective devices and methods to safeguard their employes against fatal and non-fatal accidents.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

This Darrow-Johnson row has its interesting features. However, the job of such men should be something bigger than to merely be interesting. Both have it in them to give American ideas and action.

Darrow crammed a great deal of solid meat into his report. But he did not do the best job possible—far from it. Johnson fired back with hot shot that, like the Darrow shot, had more heat than meat.

If these two giants have nothing better to do than burn each other up it is too bad. Darrow picked certain weak spots in NRA armor. On these he bored in hard enough. But he overlooked entirely the weakest spots. A better and more serviceable report than the Darrow report can be written and it ought to be written.

Darrow took up the poor business man's burden. He got in the so-called little fellow's corner. He didn't even see the wage-earner's corner, which is odd enough for the courageous old warrior and perhaps still more odd for Charles Edward Russell, who helped write the Darrow report.

If the average of what is called little business played a squarer game in the economic world than he generallyally does play he would have long since had more sympathy and his position today would be much stronger.

After all, there is a question as to how far the body politic or the body economic is bound to support a man in a given position just because he wants to be in that position and when he has ceased to find justification by service rendered to society.

That constitutes no plea for monopoly privately owned, either.

The question is whether we shall go sloppy-eyed over little business, while we let the millions of wage-earners go to a doom that is not softened by any cushioning of public interest.

Little business and big business have one aim in common—to get all they can. And both are squawking to the high heavens against rates of wages and hours of pay imposed by NRA codes, miserable as those hours and wages generally are.

Meanwhile ten millions of workers continue to go jobless. That is worth more than a weeping spell. It is worth more than a report. It demands action.

Do these squawking business men, big and little, imagine this condition can continue? Do they imagine that if NRA fails the next step will be backward toward old terms, or to the right and more conservatism?

There is too much misreading of the economic barometer, too little attention paid to the temperature of unrest.

Clarence Darrow, whose long life story is one that will loom big in history, may from some future perspective turn out to have fired a bigger shot than it now seems to be. Be that as it may, the big shot that needs firing today has not been fired.

The individualism and the embittered outlook of Darrow mixed strangely with the very earnest socialism of Charles Edward Russell to form a report that rings the bell on page 1, but that doesn't ring it in the field of action. It is just too darned bad.

Pres. Green Asks Roosevelt to Back Thirty-Hour Week

Claims That 10,000 Idle Make Legislation for Mandatory Shorter Work Week Imperative.

Washington, May 17. — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, requested President Roosevelt to push through congress legislation making thirty hours the standard work week for all industries.

The labor leader said that the employment program had come to a "dead stop," and while 3,000,000 men had been re-employed under the codes for industries, 10,000,000 still were without industrial employment and being supported either by emergency employment or relief funds.

Mr. Green asked specifically that Mr. Roosevelt support the mandatory 30-hour week bill sponsored by Representative Connery, chairman of the House Labor committee. Mr. Connery, who accompanied Mr. Green to the White House, said that the measure had the approval of every member of the committee.

"Its members represent the North, East, South and West," Mr. Connery added. "I am sure it would be passed by the house and by the senate if we could get a rule that would permit the house to act on the bill."

Mr. Connery said that he and Mr. Green had told the president that "the unanimous demand of labor all over the country is for the 30-hour week."

"We feel there is an absolute necessity for the passage of this legislation," he went on. "The bill is not a hard and fast proposal such as was before the senate in the last session. It contains a flexible provision in the shape of the creation of a board to be set up by the secretary of labor. It would have power to exempt business from the effects of the law for a 30-day period where there is a shortage of labor."

Mr. Green cited the report of the Durable Goods Industries committee as evidence of an apparent unwillingness by industry to take further voluntary steps looking toward increased employment. At the same time he argued that the "heavy" industries are the ones which hold the only power to absorb the idle.

NRA BRINGS DOVE OF PEACE TO COTTON TEXTILE INDUSTRY

Washington, May 3.—To an industry previously torn by industrial strife, it is claimed by the cotton textile National Industrial relation board that NRA has brought an unprecedented condition of peaceful operation. The real problem was whether employers and employes could be put into the same co-operative functioning body and "click." The answer is given in the fact that during the time beginning Aug. 2, 1933, when the board was first created, there has been only one out of the 4,000 complaints filed with the regional and state boards which had to be carried to the national industrial relations board. Only six disputes reached the stage of a major strike and these only lasted a few days each. The records of all the cases have been gone over by a representative of the A. F. of L. and are open for the inspection of any representative of labor.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE PRAISED BY MISS PERKINS

Rochester, N. Y.—The prompt enactment of the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance bill now before congress was urged by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins in an address here before the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

She said its passage would lead to setting up a sound nation-wide system of unemployment insurance within the next few years. This, she predicted, would go toward preventing and lessening the periods of industrial activity in the future because it would give purchasing power to a small but steady market for all industrial products.

"If unemployment insurance had been inaugurated in the years before the crash in 1929 it would have put a bottom to the fall of depression and unemployment," the secretary stated. "We have only estimated to show what would have happened under unemployment insurance, but they are by competent actuaries and cover not the whole country but reasonably small areas."

BUFFALO JUDGE RULES AGAINST PAY CHISELER

Buffalo, N. Y., May 31.—A state court decision upholding the NRA was handed down by City Judge Patrick J. Keeler when he ruled that an NRA code signed by an employer is tantamount to a contract.

The ruling came in the case of Miss Doris Walter, 21, who brought suit against the Hyman-Rose Tobacco company for $230.70, which she claimed was due her under the NRA code.

Miss Walter testified that she worked 52½ hours per week from Aug. 7 to March 10 at a salary of $12 a week, while the company was doing business under the Blue Eagle.

The blanket code for cigar stores provided for a 40-hour week and a $15 minimum weekly wage for employes.

8 WORKERS ESCAPE DEATH IN COAL MINE FIRE TRAP

Linton, Ind.—Eight miners escaped from the Little Betty coal mine near here after being trapped in the pit for two hours by a fire that destroyed the surface buildings. The men groped through the darkened pit to the manway, an emergency exit, and made their way to the surface, 400 feet from the tipple where the fire was raging.

An explosion at this mine in January, 1931, took a toll of twenty-eight lives.

Although warned by that disastrous explosion, the management seems to have taken but little precaution since then to protect the lives of the miners against the dangers to life and limb caused by preventable fires.

Hours Cut, Pay Rise Asked by Board to Save NRA Program

Memorandum Urges 10 Per Cent Reduction in Work Time With Wage Increase—Large Profits Under Codes Cited in Support.

Washington, June 14.—A brief containing a convincing battery of facts and arguments in favor of a 10 per cent reduction in hours and a corresponding increase in wages for workers in industries operating under codes of fair competition has been presented by the labor advisory board to the national recovery administration through the labor policy board, headed by Dr. Leon C. Marshall, according to press reports here.

The brief contends that not only are the shorter hours and higher wages necessary unless the NRA is to fail because higher prices are not accompanied by increased purchasing power, but maintains that larger industrial profits since the NRA codes went into effect make it possible for many companies to make the change without loss. In support of this claim the advisory board cites figures published by the National City Bank of New York to show that 1,475 companies which reported a deficit of $97,000,000 in 1932 showed a profit of $661,000,000 in 1933.

Emphasizing the importance of converting some of these boosted profits into purchasing power through the income of the workers, and pointing out that the maximum work week of 40 hours prescribed in most codes "resulted in a large volume of re-employment, the memorandum continued:

Jobs for 1,500,000.

"A uniform reduction in hours of 10 per cent will not be a great burden at this time in view of the marked improvement in profits in the post-code period.

"A further reduction in hours of 10 per cent, with a concomitant increase in wage rates, would be a far easier burden now than were the original terms imposed in the codes.

"Most industries have had from six to eight months to adjust themselves to the new conditions, and they have done so with profit to themselves.

"The reduction in hours on the 10-10 principle will have the following results:

"First, in anticipation of increasing labor costs, prices will tend to rise, thus stimulating spending, as proved in the first experiment.

"Secondly, we estimate that it will absorb about a million and a half workers on the same level of production.

"Third, the absorption of these workers should still further stimulate demand, production and employment."

Business Must Provide Work for Idle.

Although expressing its belief that in applying the hours cut and pay increase due consideration should be given to the needs of special industries, the advisory board held that these exceptions had little to do with the general application of its proposals, adding:

"We are even more impressed with the widespread unemployment, the ability of business to thrive under the alleged restrictions and co-operative arrangements devised by the NRA, the let-down in activity concomitant with the dissolution of the CWA, while business has failed to continue to absorb new workers.

"We urge the immediate pursuit of the 10-10 program as the most intelligent course under the present circumstances and submit as our judgment that there is no more practicable substitute for the public necessity of maintaining some 11,000,000 workers on relief rolls in the near future."

Union Agreement Signed By Big Florida Brewery

Jacksonville, Fla.—Officials of the newly formed Local No. 171, of the International Union of the United Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers of America, won a distinct achievement when they persuaded William Ostner, president of the Jacksonville Brewing company, to sign an agreement to pay union wages and establish union hours and regulations. The products of the brewery will be marketed under the union label and only members in good standing in the Brewery Workers union will be employed.

In some instances it was stated that the rates of pay were raised from 25 per cent to 75 per cent. It is estimated that the increased wages will add about $25,000 to the pay roll. The plant operates with about 100 employes. It is said that Jacksonville has the distinction of marketing the first union-made beer manufactured in Florida.

Patient (at the end of her visit)—I have known you so long, doctor, I do not intend to insult you by offering to pay you. But I have arranged a handsome legacy for you in my will.

Doctor—That's very kind. Now please allow me to look at that prescription again. There is a slight alteration I would like to make in it.

Hopkins Changes Hours Rules for Work Relief

Washington.—Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, announced a modification of the rule on the minimum hours of labor under the work divisions of the emergency relief administrations throughout the country.

"No person shall be employed in work divisions less than six nor more than eight hours in any one day nor less than eighteen hours a month," the rule now states. "Persons whose budgetary deficiency is less than this shall receive direct relief. The total work allowed a worker in any month may be consolidated in any part of that month."

Previously the rule was that no skilled or professional person should work less than thirty hours a month and no unskilled person less than fifty-four hours a month.

The significance of the modification, Mr. Hopkins said, is that work may be given to many more skilled and technical persons who are receiving relief. In determining who is to get direct relief and who is to be given the opportunity to work for relief, the budgetary deficiency, or need, is first determined. If the person is able and willing to work, the number of hours of work required to provide the needed amount of relief at the prevailing rate for the kind of work is calculated. The minimu rate, however, is stipulated at 30 cents an hour. If the calculation shows that the person requires less than 18 hours of work to earn the needed amount, the person is not given work, but is given direct relief.

CHICAGO TEACHERS PROTEST DELAY IN SALARY PAYMENTS

Chicago, Ill.—More than 5,000 teachers, parents and students paraded through the Loop in protest against delay in the enactment of legislation which would relieve the financial plight of the teachers.

The marchers carried placards, some of which bore the legends: "Chicago, a fair for the world, unfair to teachers," and "NRA—no relief allowed."

The paraders seemed in a happy frame of mind. As they marched in the financial district a barrage of ticker tape and confetti descended upon them.

John Fewkes, the teachers' leader, addressed the paradehs at the Plaza on Michigan avenue. He complained that the salaries of the teachers are nearly eight months in arrears and demanded that the banks forthwith lend the board of education enough money to give them their back pay.

"You earn your wages"

THAT handy servant, the telephone, is a go-getter. He chases after groceries, runs to the drugstore, carries messages here, there and everywhere, and only asks a few cents a day as his wages.

It does not matter who you want or why, whether it be day or night, storm or sunshine. Lift the receiver to order a loaf of bread—casually call a friend for a brief chat—or speed a frantic summons to the doctor, it is all in the day's work to the telephone.

If you are trying to get along without a telephone in your home, it will pay you to investigate the small cost, and the different types, of telephone service.

You will then very likely agree with most folks, who believe it costs more to try to do without telephone service than it does to have it.

For information, just ask any of your friends with the telephone company, or call at the telephone Business Office.

D. C. CARPENTERS JOIN BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL

Washington, May 31.—Union carpenters in the District of Columbia, on strike for a six-hour day and a wage increase from $1 to $1.87½ an hour, were admitted to the District Building Trades council.

This strengthens both the carpenters and the council in the labor field, as it combines in the council all the thirty crafts associated with the building industry in the capital.

The influence of the council recently was thrown behind the carpenters in one particular even before affiliation, when the council agreed to pull all its unions off any jobs where contractors tried to use strikebreakers in place of the carpenters.

These carpenters now have the complete support of all other building trades here, and the official strength of the council behind them.

DOPE ON THE ELECTRICIANS

The Electricians are co-operating with the union bakers in helping them to win their strike, which is still in progress. And since the most of us use bakery products—especially the ones whose wives don't like the idea of making good old biscuits and cornbread—be sure and call for the labeled bread and cakes.

We should at all times be more considerate when we go shopping and demand products that carry the union label, for the simple reason if we don't create a demand for same we can't expect our neighboring brothers to progress and the merchants to stock it. We are more or less obligated to them that much. So in the future let us buy union-made merchandise.

We are very glad to report that the general attitude among the members of our local is a little more like old times, due to the fact that we all feel like we are going to have plenty of work some day, since the general conditions are somewhat better, although we have a long way to go before we have more work than we can take care of in Chattanooga.

Our ball team has been a little bit slow for the last week or so, because our boys have been going visiting on the week-ends and the rain has been so bad, too. But we are going to open up in a few weeks and knock 'em cold from there out. We will let you know from time to time when we have our games.

Brother Butler, our new president, is going to make our local a real organization by making the boys live up to their obligation and attend the meetings more regular so as to strengthen the present movement. That is what it is going to take for us to get anywhere these days. Take a tip. Thanks.

PAY CUT BRINGS STRIKE OF GOVERNMENT WORKERS

Paris, France.—Throughout France thousands of civil servants struck for periods ranging up to an hour in protest against government decrees cutting salaries and pensions. However, many other thousands refused to obey the strike order and virtually every government service except telegraph and posts functioned normally.

The chief center of protests as always was the central telegraph office, while throughout the country it was the postal, telephone and telegraph workers who did the most demonstrating.

The gas, electrical and transport services functioned without interruption all day. Employes of financial services, water supply and the tobacco monopoly also indulged in short strikes with all work suspended. Reports from dozens of provincial cities indicate things went there as they did in Paris. There was a total lack of violence anywhere.

Industry Can't Ignore Problem Of Displaced Men, Eastman Says

Pointing Out Rail Workers Have Suffered Severely During Depression, Federal Transportation Co-ordinator Declares Rail Labor Situation Is "Most Serious" and Can Only Be Solved by Definite Plan.

New York, June 14.—Since 1920, railroad labor has been cut in half and the railroad labor problem is "most serious and difficult," Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, declared in an address to the New York Bond club.

"Our business and financial leaders cannot with any wisdom ignore the problem," Eastman said, "for unless it is solved, they will sooner or later suffer with all the rest." He reminded the club members that faithful workers cannot be cast off like a worn-out garment and that steps must be taken to alleviate the situation caused by the dismissal of employes due to railroad economies.

In addition to outright loss of jobs, railroad men have suffered very severely from demotions, part time and furloughs, Eastman said.

"Railroad economies are very largely labor-saving devices," Eastman continued, "and any program of greater economy in operation for the future inevitably means, at least at the outset, less railroad employment. It is easy for us, who re sfely removed from the field of operation, to give little thought to the acute suffering and hardship which such programs may bring to individuals and even entire communities, but you may be sure that these results are not overlooked by those who have to endure them.

"It is a very difficult problem to work out. With the railroad situation as it is, and the competition which is found on every hand, the conclusion cannot be escaped that the railroads must for their own salvation be able to furnish the best possible service at the lowest possible cost. In the long run this is just as essential for the employees as for the companies. On the other hand, it is neither fair nor humane to cast off faithful workers like a worn-out garment.

"Much can be done to alleviate the situation through retirement annuities, unemployment benefits, placement service, and dismissal wages under certain conditions, and we are endeavoring and hope to work out practical plans along these lines which can be made effective without halting or unduly penalizing progress.

"However, the problem is in reality a much broader one than that and it extends over the entire field of industry. There is no sound reason why more labor should be used in production than is necessary. Nor have we in this country ever come anywhere near to the production of the amount of wealth which it is well within the capacity of our people to consume or utilize.

"Shorter work days, except to supply needed opportunity for rest, leisure and recreation are merely a counsel of despair and a confession of inability to solve the problem as it should be solved. It is not so much a question of the redistribution of wealth as it is of an increase in the opportunity to consume which will permit of a far greater production of wealth.

"The problem is of paramount and even supreme importance, for the people of the country will not forever endure a system which condemns millions to unemployment and lowers the standard of living for all except a very few.

"I wish I could give you the answer to this problem, but I cannot. On one point only I am clear, and that is that it never will be solved in any automatic way by leaving man to his own devices under laissez faire principles. It calls for definite planning by the best which our country can bring to

Choosing Collective Bargaining Agencies

The persistent ballyhoo of anti-union employers that workers favor the notorious company union was given a clear knock-out in the election of a collective bargaining agency by the employes of the Tennessee Public Service company, of Knoxville, Tenn.

Two American Federation of Labor unions and two company unions were on the ballot. The A. F. of L. unions were the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The company unions were the Street Car and Bus Operators' union of the transportation department of the Tennessee Public Service company and the Distribution Department Employes' Protective association of that company. Out of 277 effective ballots, 161 were for the A. F. of L. unions and 116 for the company unions, a clear majority of 45 for bona fide trade unionism.

The tabulation of the votes gave the following figures: Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, A. F. of L. union, 99 votes; Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, A. F. of L. union, 62 votes; Street Car and Bus Operators union, company union, 75 votes; Distribution Department Employes' Protective association, company union, 41 votes. Eight contested votes were not counted.

The election was held by secret ballot under the supervision of Thomas M. Finn, of the U. S. Conciliation Service, who declared that the voting was conducted on a high plane and in strict accordance with Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act. The ballots distinctly stated that the two bona fide unions were affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

It is this kind of an election, held under the supervision of a suitable representative of the federal government, which the bourbon anti-union employers throughout the United States are fighting tooth and nail.

Extending Workers' Education

The division of emergency education programs of the federal emergency relief administration is rendering valuable assistance to the practical education of working men and women not only in the problems which confront them in their efforts to earn a living, but also in the broader field of understanding the causes of the depression, to the end that our democratic institutions may be saved by the protection they give to the inherent rights of the masses to decent living standards, liberty in all of its aspects, and the happiness that naturally follows the acquisition of these essentials.

By means of labor institutes and workers schools, financially sponsored with federal funds, solid and substantial information on economic problems, including occupational questions, is being supplied to thousands of toilers who would not otherwise have the advantages which this knowledge gives.

In outlining the underlying policy in making practical education available for those who do most of the useful work in our complex economic system, Dr. L. R. Alderman, director of emergency education programs of the federal emergency relief administration, says the important thing is "to make the public schools fit the needs of all our people." Inasmuch as most of the people work for a living, special importance should be placed on making the schools fit the needs of working men and women. On this point Dr. Alderman says:

> "I think that workers' education at this time has this two-fold mission, first to help prepare the public schools for groups of organized workers and then to extend to these organized workers the right kind of an invitation to attend."

He points out that our 256,104 school plants should be the means of bringing about a "new understanding of our problems among our whole people that would make democracy stronger."

To assist in this commendable plan the division of emergency education programs publishes a monthly bulletin, "Workers Education." It includes news regarding workers' classes in all parts of the country, articles on resident schools here and abroad and articles by persons actively engaged in workers' education. Every worker, and especially every trade unionist, should read this bulletin regularly. Requests for it should be sent to the Specialist in Workers' Education, 1734 New York avenue, Washington, D. C.

SENATE LABOR COMMITTEE ASKS "KICKBACK" INQUIRY

Washington, June 21.—The senate labor committee has approved the Walsh-Davis resolution calling for investigation of the "kick-back racket" on federal building projects, whereby workers are forced to give up part of their pay to contractors as a condition of getting a job.

Chairman David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, said that testimony given at hearings before the committee "seemed to indicate" that contractors in many cities are violating prevailing rate of wage laws by forcing employes to give up part of their wages.

The resolution will ask for an appropriation of $25,000. If it is approved, Senator Walsh said, the committee would decide whether it or a subcommittee would undertake the inquiry. He said an expert investigator would be employed.

Walsh said the investigation would start in the District of Columbia, but would be extended to all cities where public buildings were under construction by contractors working for the government.

He said evidence already gathered by the committee showed that the "kick-back racket" was being practiced in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and other large cities.

MILL STRIKE INJUNCTION CARRIED TO U. S. COURT

Los Angeles, June 21.—The Mission hosiery mill strike injunction has been carried to the federal courts.

Aghast at the stringent and unprecedented injunction handed down by the California superior court restraining the strikers even for talking "in a loud voice" and enjoining any sort of picketing or congregation, J. C. Packard, heading the Mission strikers' legal staff, immediately took the case to the federal courts.

The strikers expect that on the basis of the Norris-LaGuardia act the federal courts will set aside the injunction. The management in filing its suit with the superior court was careful to ask an injunction only against the branch, and not against the national union in an effort to escape federal jurisdiction.

But the strikebreakers imported from distant states, among them North Carolina, brings the case under federal jurisdiction, the union contends.

TEXTILE MILL IS FINED; CHISLELED NRA CODE PAY

Providence, R. I.—Clyde Mills, Inc., of Westerly, R. I., were fined $100 for violation of the cotton textile code labor provisions. United States District Judge Ira Lloyd Letts, imposing the fine after the company had entered a plea of guilty, explained that the amount was low because of the defendant's financial condition.

The violation was failure to pay the code minimum wage during the week ended Jan. 5, 1934. The company agreed to comply strictly with the terms of the code in the future and to make satisfactory restitution of back wages to the employes.

Howard McGrath, United States district attorney for Rhode Island, was assisted by Reuben J. Martin, assistant counsel NRA litigation division.

This is the second criminal prosecution in Rhode Island for code violations, another textile mill having been fined $1,500 about a month ago.

SHORTER WORK WEEK AND HIGHER WAGES DEMANDED BY WAGNER

New York Senator Condemns NRA Code Employers for Grabbing Big Increase in Profits and Refusing Pay Advances and Reduced Hours.

Washington.—Vigorous criticism of the manifest determination of employers operating under codes of fair competition established by authority of the national industrial recovery act to refuse to increase mass buying power by raising wages coupled with their equally manifest determination to refuse to reduce the length of the work week to provide employment for our millions of idle, all in the face of mounting profits, was voiced by Senator Robert F. Wagner in a speech in the senate in defense of the original principles underlying the recovery program.

Just Return to Industry and Labor.

"A balance between the return to industry and the return to labor is at the very core of economic stability, and it is here that the new deal program seems in greatest need of immediate attention," he said.

"During the period between June and October, 1933, hours of work were reduced 16 per cent and employment increased 19 per cent, although production was declining 17 per cent.

Hours Lengthened, Earnings Cut.

"Paradoxical as it may seem, subsequent improvements in the general condition of business have been matched by increasing unwillingness to reduce hours and to raise wages. Between October, 1933, and March, 1934, production increased over 11 per cent. During the first quarter of 1934, corporation earnings have been three times as great as during the same period last year. Out of 670 dividend changes reported by Standard Statistics, 515 were favorable, as compared with only 156 a year ago.

"But this latter period has witnessed a gain of only 1.5 per cent in employment, hours of labor have been actually lengthened by one-half hour per week, and the real earnings of the individual worker are not appreciably greater than they were in March, 1933.

Injustice Breeds Violence.

"If the return of prosperity, as measured by increased industrial output and higher profits, is going to be accompanied by a desire to return to the wage philosophy of the 1920's, additional and more serious depressions are only a matter of a few years.

"The wage problem is not merely a technical question of providing enough purchasing power to keep industry running at full speed. We cannot justify ourselves of stopping short when that level is reached. We must go on to create a fairer system, in which the worker will share equitably in our great wealth and live in comfort and security. To deny this right to men who are intelligent is to invite unrest and violence.

"The same principles apply to hours of labor. Most of the maximum hour scales are far too high even by the narrow test of re-employment measures. They are indefensibly high when contrasted with the number of hours that people shall be required to work in a highly industrialized civilization."

Mill-Owner Solon Tries Fast One With Child-Labor Bill

Record of Pennsylvania Representative Sponsoring Measure Is 100 Per Cent. Unfavorable to the Workers.

Washington, June 21.—The American Federation of Labor is specifically and positively opposed to the federal child labor bill (H. R. 6184) introduced in the house of representatives by Congressman Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania.

The position of the federation was made known in a letter from W. C. Roberts and W. C. Hushing, legislative representatives of the federation, to Hon. William P. Connery, Jr., chairman of the house labor committee, to whom the bill was referred.

Seeks to Discredit Congress.

"Behind H. R. 6184, a bill to regulate employment of persons under 18 years of age and to provide minimum rates of compensation to be paid employes, is a scheme to discredit congress," the legislative representatives told Mr. Connery.

"One of the arguments used against the child labor amendment," the letter added, "is that congress would be more liberal than the states and would prohibit, regulate and limit the labor of children under the age of eighteen.

Unfavorable to Labor.

"Representative Rich is the only member of congress to our knowledge who has practically a 100 per cent unfavorable record on measures of interest to labor. If he was in favor of the child labor amendment, he would not have introduced the bill. It not only fixes the wages of employes under 18 years of age at 20 cents per hour, but provides that employes 18 years of age or older shall receive 28 cents per hour. He not only desires to regulate the employment of persons under 18 years of age, but has gone beyond that age.

"We are sure that the bill will be used for propaganda purposes to discredit congress and thereby help those who argue that congress would be more liberal than the states in order to defeat ratification of the child labor amendment."

It was pointed out at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor that Representative Rich in drafting the bill did not consult the A. F. of L., the national child labor committee, or any other national agency interested in child labor legislation.

The congressman lives in Woolrich, Pa. He is general manager and treasurer of the Woolrich Woolen mills.

LABOR REPRESENTATION BAN IN FURNACE CODE AUTHORITY

Washington.—The personnel of the code authority for the industrial furnace manufacturing industry made public by the national recovery administration, is composed of five members, all of whom are officials of companies engaged in the manufacture of furnaces. Despite the fact that the authority will enforce the labor sections of the code, the NRA did not deem it proper for representatives of the workers to participate in the administration.

DEPRESSION HASN'T HIT THIS HIGH-SALARY GROUP

Ottawa, Canada.—The forty ranking executives, including officers and directors, of the T. Eaton Co., Ltd., received salaries and bonuses totaling $1,857,300 last year, an average of $33,900, the parliamentary mass buying committee was told by its investigating auditor, W. L. Gordon, Toronto. The average in 1929, the peak year for the vast retail and mail order house, was $54,800.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

AKERY UNION OFFERS PLAN TO ENFORCE REPUDIATED CODE

ganized Workers Telegraph Gen. Johnson They're Ready to Organize 10,000 Bakery Owners to Accept Code in Good Faith and Put Its Provisions Into Effect.

ashington, June 21.—An offer to nize at once 10,000 union bakery rs to enforce the bakery industry as approved by President Roose- was contained in a telegram to very Administrator Hugh S. John- from Financial Secretary-Treasur- A. A. Myrup of the Bakery and fectionery Workers International n. The union took this action fol- ing repudiation of the code by the ers' Council, the organization of loying bakers who filed the code. he wire to Gen. Johnson was sent the union's headquarters in Chi- . The proposal to organize 10,- union bakery owners is but the step, and union officers believe y more than that would be brought the organization within a short . The union charges that the new anization thus created would be more representative of the bakery industry than the organization which sponsored the code, headed by Henry Stude.

Union Holds Code Is Law.

It is the union view that the code, approved by the President on May 29, is in effect and can no more be repudiated than can any other federal law. However, a code authority must be designated, and it is the purpose of the union to bring into being an organization of employing bakers who will accept the code in good faith, who will name a code authority and who will police the code.

The union points out that the Bakers' Council repudiation of the code was based on provisions contained in the Executive Order approving the code, and that all of these provisions are standard and have been included in Executive Orders approving many other codes.

A primary objection of the Bakers' Council was to the President's order that the Council make a report on the operation of the hours and wages provision of the code at the end of 90 days. The union withdrew its objection to the code when it learned the administration planned to give the industry another opportunity to prove with facts that the wage and hour provisions were as liberal and as conducive to re-employment as they might be.

Assert Council Unjustified.

Nnder the code the 48-hour week will apply to a large portion of the industry. Union officials see no justification for the council's insistence on an inflexible standard of labor fixed in advance, and its refusal in the future to face the facts.

Southern Textile Mills Remain Closed by Strike

Federal Relief Funds Are Used to Feed Strikers' Families in Piedmont District.

Greenville, S. C., June 21.—Almost 2,000 workers in three cotton mills of the Piedmont section of South Carolina remained idle this week, while other plants of the area operated under a three-month 25 per cent curtailment program.

The operatives have been on strike several weeks. Representatives of the United Textile Workers' union from each of the three mills have conferred with the managements, but no definite steps toward a settlement have resulted.

There are 900 employes of Piedmont Manufacturing company at Piedmont, 275 employes of the Victor-Monaghan plant at Walhalla and 650 workers at Belton Manufacturing company at Belton now on strike. Federal relief funds are being used to feed strikers' families.

The policy of the relief administration at Washington is to relieve the destitute wherever they are found without regard to the causes of their destitution.

Local leaders of the United Textile Workers' union denied statement by Piedmont Manufacturing company officials that 500 non-union employes out of the 900 on strike had evinced a desire to return to work at a mass meeting on Tuesday. The union men said that only 123 employes of the mill attended the meeting and that 600 union members would "stay on strike until we get justice." The mill has been idle since the strike was called on May 28.

U. S. Court Upholds Anti-Injunction Law

Constitutionality of Norris-LaGuardia Act Affirmed by Federal Appeals Judges.

New York, June 21.—The United States circuit court of appeals, in a notable decision here, upheld the constitutionality of the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act. The act forbids the granting of injunctions by the federal courts in labor disputes except in cases where fraud and violence are proved to exist.

The court ruled that it could not interfere with any attempt by organized labor to bring about the closed shop, engaging in strikes or sympathetic strikes or in any other legitimate and peaceful efforts to bring pressure to bear upon employers to achieve the purposes of a union.

The decision, written by Judge Martin T. Manton and concurred in by Judge Augustus Hand and Judge Harris B. Chase, was upon the injunction application of a group of employers in the construction industry against officers of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

The injunction suit had been in the courts since 1924. It was decided originally in favor of the employers by the federal courts, but was recently ordered retried by the United States supreme court on technical grounds.

TO REPRESENT LABOR.

Washington.—L. Reiss, manager of Shirt Makers' union, Local 25, New York City, has been appointed labor representative on the code authority for the blouse and skirt manufacturing industries, National Recovery Administrator Johnson announces.

GREEN URGES 30-HOUR LAW FOR IDLE RELIEF

Washington.—A final drive to prevail upon congress to enact the Connery 30-hour week bill into law during the present session of congress was made by President Green, of the American Federation of Labor. Trade unionists throughout the country were urged to wire their members of congress asking them to take favorable action on the measure.

"Because unemployment is so widespread and distressing," Mr. Green said, the Connery bill should be made statute law before congress adjourns. He stated the measure is absolutely necessary for all lines of industry as a constructive remedy for the scourge which has thrown millions into the unemployed army.

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

ATTACK ON LABOR UNIONS IS RESENTED

Brazzell Raps Edgerton's Gang.

OFFERS DEFENSE OF RECOVERY ACT

Employers' Action Was "As Natural as It Is to Cheat Each Other."

Attack on organized labor by John Edgerton and his "little group of willful men," meeting in Chattanooga last week under the more or less impressive title of Southern States Industrial council, drew the fire this week of an able champion of the workers in the person of R. H. Brazzell, of Nashville, who offers for Labor World readers a resume of the activities of the labor haters and a few pertinent remarks on the attitude of Edgerton's crowd concerning Section 7-A of the national recovery act in particular.

Calling attention to the employers' antipathy toward the NRA, and their opposition to any action along this line by the state legislature which convenes next week, Mr. Brazzell avers that "America is not yet so desperately bankrupt that we are forced to hand over our public responsibility to this small industrial group."

"It should go without saying," Mr. Brazzell says, "that if the manufacturers' association is permitted to dictate the terms of our social legislation, it will not come within miles of meeting conditions that are crying for correction."

The communication follows:

Editor The Labor World:

The organized labor movement in Tennessee, with which I am proud to be identified, has very properly carried on its work with a minimum of publicity. We have sought results, not public acclaim.

Those who oppose the principles espoused by this movement have availed themselves of every advantage offered through the public press to propagandize a public who of necessity depend to a large extent upon their daily paper for information regarding their economic, industrial and political life. This propaganda, in many instances erroneous, colored, or entirely false, is consumed by an eager populace, swallowed, hook line and sinker, and entirely too often forms a basis for a misguided public opinion in matters of vital public interest.

For that reason I am asking this bit of space to say a few words in regard to a couple of resolutions adopted by the delegates to the Southern States Industrial council which met in Chattanooga last week.

In the first place, according to a news item appearing in the daily papers on Dec. 29, these representatives of industry in the south termed Section 7-A, NRA's collective bargaining clause, "a breeder of more industrial conflict than any other thing," and by a resolution demanded that it be modified so as to be made "constructive rather than destructive." In the preceding breath these same industrial leaders had proclaimed their belief in collective bargaining. They thus gave lip service to this section of the law in one breath and kicked it all out of shape with the next. That was as natural a position for them to take as it is for them to cheat each other. But wage workers figured the law meant what it said and that government officials would enforce the law. The unwillingness of officials of industry to accept at their face value acts, and sections of acts, having for their purpose the recognition of the fact that those who work for wages are of equal standing before the law with those who employ them, is but evidence that such officials are yet of the opinion that those who work for wages are of a lesser order of humanity and not entitled to recognition as equals of

Edgerton's Crowd Alters Tactics; To Try "Soft-Soaping" Legislators

An interesting bit of information is contained in a letter sent out recently by the Tennessee Manufacturers' association, over the signature of C. C. Gilbert, of Nashville, a sort of man-friday for John Edgerton, which indicates that the small group which Edgerton dominates has decided to change its tactics in dealing with members of the state general assembly at the coming session, and instead of the arrogant, bluff attitude formerly assumed by these self-appointed spokesmen for industry, members of the association are appealed to to "soft-soap" the legislators, and whisper in their ears of the dangers of the NRA and the present government administration program.

"Sit down and have a nice talk with him (your legislator)," Gilbert advises, and tell him that the association is ever striving for the best of everything in the state of Tennessee. And then, of course:

"We want to get acquainted with them ourselves, and a word from you in advance of their coming to Nashville will make it easier for us to meet them."

This newest departure on the part of Edgerton's crowd is interesting, if not comical, and is printed below for the edification of our readers:

To the Manufacturers of Tennessee:

Do you know your legislator? If you do, please tell him about the work of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association. Tell him that the association is ever striving for the best of everything for the state of Tennessee. Ask him to co-operate with the association for industrial development in Tennessee.

If you do not know your legislator, won't you immediately get acquainted with him. Call to see him. Sit down and have a nice talk with him. Tell him how difficult it has been for industry to operate during the past few years, especially under the restrictions of the NRA.

Every legislator is honest and comes to Nashville with a desire to faithfully serve his state and his section, but with several hundred bills introduced, it is impossible for any man to give due consideration to each measure. Consequently, a word from you as to present-day business conditions in Tennessee will act as a reminder that much of the proposed legislation would do more harm than good, if enacted into law.

After you have talked to your legislators, please drop us a line and tell us how they feel about the industrial situation in Tennessee. We want to get acquainted with them ourselves, and a word from you in advance of their coming to Nashville will make it easier for us to meet them.

We are enclosing a list of members of the legislature.

Yours very truly,
C. C. GILBERT, Secretary.

HUMPHREYS THANKS LABOR WORLD FOR CO-OPERATION

Editor The Labor World:

Thanks to your co-operation. Through the publicity you have given this office, you have been the means of many people submitting their problems to us. The result has been industrial loans to small concerns, thereby increasing employment; hastening government loans to save mortgaged farms; locating misdirected relief, and other constructive acts.

This is to express my thanks and to say, with your future assistance, we may do much for general recovery.

To make uniform the general recovery program in interstate, as well as intrastate business, NRA, TVA and EFHA will ask the forthcoming legislature to pass enabling laws. Should occasion arise, I hope the national administration will have your support of such bills.

Wishing you a prosperous New Year, I am,

Cordially yours,
HUGH HUMPHREYS,
State Director, National Emergency Council.

Memphis, Dec. 29.

We'll Keep Labor 'Free' in '35, Say Southern Bosses

Industrial Council Proclaims War on Unionism and Fair Wages Under Cloak of High-Sounding Phrases.

War on organized labor was declared by southern industrial leaders at a meeting of the Southern States Industrial council at the Read House last week, engineered by Deacon Edgerton and his well-disciplined lieutenants.

The council, which is hostile to Section 7-A of the recovery act and which opposes higher wages for southern workers, cloaked its declaration of war under high-sounding phrases, expressing its determination to keep "southern labor free" in 1935 and pledging itself to take every necessary step against "manipulation and exploitation" of labor in the south by "any organized labor aristocracy."

The council proclaimed that in 1935 it will seek lower southern wage differentials to compensate for competitive conditions and will resist expansion of government enterprise in the field of competitive business. The council also resolved to seek more advantageous freight rates for southern shippers.

George H. Armistead, editor of the "rat" Nashville Banner, said in an address that the "right to work" is as fundamental as the right to strike, and that governments should uphold that right.

The council's declaration of policy included an attack on Section 7-A, which provides for collective bargaining.

Concluding that it should be either "abolished" or "reformed," the council declared that reform should make labor organizations that have the legal right to collective bargaining also have responsibility "for the discharge of contractural obligations, and full legal liability for any injury which they may do to the rights or property of others."

J. M. MacKinlay Goes to Reward

Passing of James M. MacKinlay, for many years a member of Local 53, Molders, who died last Sunday at his home here, was a shock to many old-timers who remembered the interest of the deceased in the local trade union movement, with which he became affiliated in 1902.

Mr. MacKinlay was commander of the local camp, Spanish-American War Veterans. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the Second Presbyterian church, and were attended by many friends of Mr. MacKinlay from the Veterans' organization and the Molders' union.

Ault Succumbs To Long Illness

Word was received by relatives in Chattanooga Friday morning of the passing at a Knoxville hospital of Charles Ault, brother of Lon Ault, veteran member of Local 74, Carpenters.

Mr. Ault, aged 56, was the victim of a lingering illness, contracted in 1920. Before his illness, he was a member of Lodge 56, Machinists, and worked in various local machine shops. He is survived also by his wife and two children.

Mrs. Ault went immediately to Knoxville, to make arrangements for funeral services, which will probably be held in Chattanooga Sunday afternoon.

WILLIAMS FORECASTS END OF PRICE-FIXING

New York.—In his first public speech since becoming chairman of the national industrial recovery board, S. Clay Williams declared that price-fixing under NRA codes is of doubtful value as a reform measure and predicted an early end of price-fixing as is now indulged in under several codes of fair competition. Mr. Williams, head of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, a strictly non-union concern, was apparently careful to make no commitments regarded as favorable to organized labor.

CENTRAL BODY DELEGATES IN BUSY SESSION

Schools, T. V. A., City Government Discussed.

TAKE POSITION ON VITAL ISSUES

Indorse Cheap Power, Oppose 3-Man Commission, Qualify School Plan Approval.

Reindorsement of municipally-owned power, opposition to a proposal to reduce the membership of city commission to three members instead of five, and qualified approval of the proposed consolidation of county and city schools were among the major items resulted from deliberations of delegates to Central Body at Monday night's regular session, which was unusually interesting and brought out much general discussion.

The TVA had previously been indorsed, and a committee consisting of one member of each craft to secure and disseminate facts and information on the power problem has been working several months.

The stand taken by the delegates on the school consolidation question follows similar opinions expressed by the Chattanooga and Hamilton County Teachers' federation in meeting some time ago. Labor's position, as expressed in the resolution, demands that the present free textbook system be guaranteed by a law passed prior to consideration of the consolidation bill, and that amendments to the proposed measure be made which will protect the school system and the teachers.

The three resolutions follow:

CONSOLIDATION FAVORED, IF—

Whereas, organized labor has always stood for public schools as the very basis of democratic government; and,

Whereas, there is at present a movement to consolidate the city and county school systems, which movement is in line with the recommendations of the Tennessee educational commission; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in regular meeting assembled this 31st day of December, 1934, That we favor consolidation, provided a free textbook law is enacted prior to and certain measures are made part of the consolidation bill, to-wit: A school board elected by the people at large, the school board to have the power to select the superintendent of schools and all other employes of the school system; protection of the pension rights of present city teachers; protection of the tenure of the teachers, and provision for adequate financial support for the schools to put the system on a par with the general level of the nation.

OPPOSE SMALLER CITY BOARD.

Whereas, the commission form of government requires the joint action, as well as the joint responsibility of the board of commissioners on all matters; and,

Whereas, the purpose and intention of the commission form of administration is not served by having each commissioner directly in charge of a separate department, resulting in a departmental government rather than a commission government; and,

Whereas, there is talk in connection with the school consolidation movement of reducing the commission to three members, a number too small to be representative; therefore be it

Resolved, by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council in regular meeting Dec. 31, 1934, That we are opposed to the reduction of the number of commissioners to less than five and advocate instead the enactment of a law to remove the commissioners from their departments and requiring them to sit as a board on all matters, to collectively select trained experts to have direct and full charge of each department who

Cries of "Bogey Man" Fail To Terrorize Richmond Strikers

Situation at the Richmond Hosiery mills, Rossville, where some 700 hosiery workers struck Monday against reductions in pay approximating in some instances as much as 25 per cent., according to spokesmen for members of Local 99, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, was practically unchanged Friday morning.

Threats of calling out the Georgia militia, which according to precedent should not be a very difficult thing to do, but which in this instance has been blocked by provisions of a law which requires that the superior circuit judge join in any request for state troops, and which request has been declined by the present official in that territory, have failed to force the workers back into the mills. "Bogey-man" stories of night-riders and various other manufactured alarms calculated to terrorize the peaceful Rossville community have also failed to have the effect desired by their perpetrators, it is said, and the strikers are standing firm in their determination to stop the inroads of the Richmond outfit on their living standards and their American rights.

A. McKeown, vice-president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, said Friday morning another conference is scheduled for Monday afternoon, in Rossville, between union representatives and John Fowler, of Cartersville, appointed chairman of the new board which has been named since the old directors were indicted in federal court for violation of the law.

Mr. McKeown said a proposed arbitration agreement had been refused by company representatives, but it is hoped a basis for settlement of the difficulty may be reached at the conference Monday.

United Mine Workers' Journal Pays Tribute to "Brush" Smith

A nice compliment to T. J. Smith, veteran official of the United Mine Workers of America, former president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, and mayor, or something, of Graysville, Tennessee, is included in a recent issue of the United Mine Workers' Journal, official organ of the coal diggers.

"Brush," "Whiskers," or what have you, is one of the best-known characters in the southern labor movement, and although his unfailing good nature and an unusual growth of beard has made him the vicitim of much good-natured raillery throughout the state, he is recognized as one of the most competent and keenest trades unionists in the south.

Mr. Smith has a host of warm friends among Labor World readers, who will be interested in the Journal's write-up of the old-timer, and who will congratulate the editor of that publication on his ability to assemble so many facts relating to "Brush's" background:

"Don't waste your strength fighting each other; fight your enemies." That's always been the policy of T. J. Smith, that solid and substantial old-timer who has been a member of the United Mine Workers of America ever since it was organized. And Tom Smith has carried out that policy throughout the years of his activity in the union. He knows the value of organization and co-operation. Although a native of Iowa, T. J. worked in the mines in numerous places, and has represented the union in various fields. He went to Tennessee in 1909 as an organizer for the purpose of organizing District 19. He served as district president in 1903-4; was international board member from 1907 to 1910, and was elected district president in 1914, serving for three years. He was a member of the Knights of Labor before the United Mine Workers was organized. He is a member of Local Union No. 980, at Soddy, Tenn.

For many years T. J. has been one of the most familiar figures in every international convention of the United Mine Workers of America. Without him a convention could not be a success. "Whiskers" Smith is always there. Probably no other man is as well known to the delegates to international conventions. And it may truthfully be said that T. J. Smith never shirked a duty and never backed away from anything.

Sympathize With Brother Members

Sympathy for two members of Local 226, Painters, who recently lost their mothers, was expressed by the local in a resolution drawn by a committee consisting of W. D. Canada, E. W. Gossett and J. G. Burkes. The bereaved members are Frank Miller and James Vonshaw, and The Labor World adds its condolences to the expression of the local members. The Painters' resolution follows:

"Whereas, two of our brother members, James Vonshaw and Frank Miller, have recently been bereaved by the passing of their beloved mothers; be it

"Resolved, That Local 226, in regular session, extend to Brother Miller and Brother Vonshaw our sincerest sympathy in their great loss, and mourn with them the passing of these good ladies; be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be spread upon our minutes and furnished The Labor World for publication."

THE WORD "BOYCOTT."

According to information coming to the attention of the A. F. of L. News Service, the word "boycott," which has come to be extensively used in labor strife, originated in Ireland in this manner: A land agent named Captain Boycott treated his tenants with such severity that they finally retaliated by refusing to work for him and they would not allow anyone else to do so. This occurred in 1881. Since that time, the word "boycott" gradually developed, until it is now used throughout the world.

TEACHERS WIN STRIKE.

Scranton, Pa.—More than 2,500 pupils were freed from classes on Dec. 10 when sixty-six teachers in Jessup borough went on strike for eight months' back pay. The following day, the teachers were paid and returned to work.

Sales Tax Unfair Load on Masses, Filene Declares

Voters Should Make Vigorous Fight on Proposed Tax as "Worst of All," Boston Merchant Leader Says.

CENTRAL BODY "UNALTERABLY" AGAINST TAX

"Unalterable" opposition to the proposed sales tax was expressed by delegates to Central Body Monday night, and the legislative committee was instructed to draw up the "strongest resolution possible" pointing out the position of labor on the proposal, which is to be submitted to the Hamilton county delegation in the legislature.

Labor's opposition to the measure had formerly been stated, but it was felt the lawmakers should be reminded, on the eve of convening at Nashville, that the workers strongly oppose a plan which it is held would further shift the load of taxation from the wealthy to the already overburdened poor.

The resolution will be sent the local legislators this weekend.

A slashing attack on the sales tax, in line with labor's criticism of this tax, was made in a statement issued this week by Edward A. Filene, nationally known Boston merchant.

The sales tax is the worst of all taxes "because it falls disproportionately and unjustly on those least able to afford it—the masses of our people," Filene declared.

"A sales tax means a fractional percentage of the income of us richer people," he said, "while it takes comparatively so large a percentage of the income of the great mass of our people that under present conditions it may be the 'straw that breaks the camel's back.'

"It should, therefore, be vigorously opposed by the masses of the voters, and if they are alive to defending themselves, it cannot possibly be passed.

"I am not speaking as a shopkeeper trying to squirm out of another tax. Nothing is truer than that a sales tax will be transmitted to the consumers in the price of goods they buy. No tax is good that taxes production or buying power at its source.

"It is clearly indicated that the bulk of the necessary revenue for government expenses should come out of income taxes, and the bulk of income taxes should come out of unearned incomes. It is true that income taxes are at present almost unbearably high, but I am in favor of taxing all our big incomes still more if necessary, until we big-income people finally are forced to learn that waste and graft and racketeering in government can be largely stopped if we—and especially our business organizations—make it our business to stop it, just as we make it our business to earn profits. In this way we can reduce income taxes also."

DISCREPANCIES IN TEACHER PAY FURTHER NOTED

Federation Proposes New County Schedule.

WOULD REWARD TRAINING EFFORT

Ask Public to Consider Need for Encouraging Educational Ambitions.

The Chattanooga-Hamilton County Teachers' association, through a duly appointed committee on a salary schedule, submits another table of salaries in this issue of The Labor World. The salaries dealt with this time are those of county teachers and as was true in the former table of the city teachers, it does not include the salaries of principals. The figures used are those found in the research bulletin of the University of Chattanooga. The information is given forth not with the idea of embarrassing either present administration of the county or city. The inconsistencies in salaries have grown over a period of years when there was no definite salary scale based upon qualifications and service. It is readily recognizable that conditions are not as they should be and the Chattanooga- Hamilton County Teachers' association has attacked the problem hoping that something may be done this year about putting the teachers upon a more professional basis than they have ever been before. If the teachers are the most important single element in a school, then it is not selfishness or greed, but wisdom, to give some thought to them and to the value in money that the community places upon them.

Enough facts are not available to make a statistically accurate table of the kind attempted. Nevertheless it is the opinion of those who arranged the material that the general tendency of salaries in the past may be noted in it and the need for an accurate yard stick for salaries in the future. Note, for instance, the wide differences in salaries of teachers of the same training and experience. Note, also, the difference between the salaries paid and those advocated by the federation. The federation scale attempts to reward the well-trained teacher with the idea of enlisting her enthusiastic efforts and also of encouraging the poorly trained teacher to seek further professional growth.

(No attempt has been made in this table to distinguish between experience gained in this community and that gained elsewhere.)

The table referred to, which offers the same comparisons as that presented last week, which covered the salaries of city teachers, will be found on the last page of this issue, and it is hoped that readers of The Labor World will carefully weigh the figures presented, so the inconsistencies and inaccuracies in the present method of compensating our school teachers may be made plain to all.

What Next!

A new and improved solar heat collector, recently exhibited at Pittsburgh, concentrates sun rays to such an extent that within 20 minutes it can develop temperatures in excess of 400 degrees Fahrenheit, or twice the boiling point of water. The device can be used for cooking purposes or for generating steam for power, though not as yet to supplant fuel for driving large steam engines.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What did Samuel Gompers say about knowledge?

A.—"Knowledge is one of the most potent sources of power in the world. Knowledge leads everywhere. Knowledge breaks down all obstacles. Those who know the facts of history and the facts of our time are the ones best fitted to cope with the problems that confront us. Those who do not know either must be taught to know, or they must be carried along the march of progress by those who do know. It is only knowledge that leads us forward."

What a Change!

The proposal to put all electric current in a single, nation-wide pool, controlled by the federal government, is sharpening the cries of anguish of some utility magnates as they see their dividends on "write-ups" slipping farther from their grasp. But think what would have happened if such a plan had been seriously suggested a few years ago. Even so lately as the 1932 campaign, every rugged individualist in the land would have rallied his fainting energies to resist such a bolshevik scheme.

While now, the plan is very well conceived—which does not in the least mean that it will be accepted and carried into effect. It means only that the American people have gotten over being frightened by words, or enraged at the prospect of the "government going into business." The questions asked now about such a plan are, "How will it work?" "What will it cost?" and "Is there a better way?"

The education of the American people in economics has made notable progress in the last few years, even in the last few months. And on this particular matter of electricity, the TVA has been a potent teacher.

A Good Decision

Solicitor Karl Crowley, of the postoffice department, recently made a most commendable decision and one both fair and humane, when he declared that operators with contracts for carrying air mail must pay pilots the wage scale set under decisions of the national labor board.

The solicitor quoted President Roosevelt's letter to the chairman of the committee on post roads when the air mail was considered. The president wrote:

"Public safety calls for pilots of high character and great skill. The occupation is a hazardous one. Therefore the law should provide for a method to fix minimum flying hours, minimum pay and a system of retirement and annuity benefits."

With this sound pronouncement before him the solicitor declared that the industry should avoid the possibility of leaving labor costs a matter of speculation in fixing bids by air-mail operators. The solicitor left the contractors the alternative of paying the wage scale or having their contracts canceled.

Ten Per Cent Co-operative

Remember, O Stranger, that arithmetic is the oldest of the sciences and the mother of safety." So wrote Louis D. Brandeis, then a practicing lawyer in Boston, now a justice of the U. S. supreme court, at the close of his exposure of the extravagance and juggling that wrecked the New Haven railroad years ago.

He might have added that arithmetic is a most potent revealer of pretense.

The housing administration circularized 23,000 financial institutions to urge their help in the housing program. Of these, 8,800 agreed to lend money for this work.

This was thought a rather small proportion, though the housing administration was cheered to learn that the 8,800 institutions which reported willingness to help had about 90 per cent of the resources of the 23,000 firms that had been circularized. But—

Up to date, only 2,300 of these institutions have made actual loans under the housing act; and most of these advances are said to be meager.

Judged by the test of arithmetic, the "co-operation" of financial institutions with the government's housing program is certainly not overdone.

Occupational Disease Dangers

Need for increased watchfulness against the dangers of occupational diseases is illustrated in a special inquiry made in Massachusetts by the department of labor and industries into the use of benzol in the shoe industry. The study covered 145 factories.

Of the factories in which benzol was used, eleven were using it without knowledge of its dangerous properties and were taking no precautions to protect employes from contact with its fumes. Benzol fumes were found in fifty-three of the plants and orders to install adequate ventigating systems were issued.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

And so Donald Richberg and Gen. Johnson are at it again. Richberg tells the Saturday Evening Post he will hold the Satevepost responsible for any libelous matter it may print about him from the flashing pen of the militant Johnson.

It will be hoped by a great many persons—several more than would have so hoped a year ago—that Johnson will say what is on his mind and that the Satevepost will print it as written.

This probably is not because there are any more friends in Johnson's corner, but that because there are fewer in Richberg's corner.

There is none in Washington more affable than Richberg, in his public appearances. Also there is none more skilled in the insertion of a word that extracts the meaning from its predecessor. That's part of the story.

Another part of the story is that Donald Richberg seems to have gone a bit high hat, up-stage, or whatever it may be called.

But at any rate, whatever may be the reason, the circulation of the Post probably will go up several copies when the Johnson chapters make their debut.

If it be thought queer that two men who seem to dislike each other cordially have warm friendship in the White House, that must be put down merely as one of the peculiarities of the present-day Washington.

Of course the difference is that there is friendship for Richberg and he has immense power. There is friendship for Johnson and he has little or no power.

And that is quite a difference, when you come to think of it.

Johnson says that when all the dead cats were coming his way he put up no squawk, he didn't tell publishers to beware what they printed about him. He just let them sling all there was in the basket. Which happens to be true.

That isn't to say Johnson liked all that was said or that he took it all with a grin. There are those who say he kept fairly close track of what the critics said and, while he let them say it, he stored up the memories. Perhaps that was human enough.

But Johnson was, in the vernacular, the better sport and plenty who didn't like his policies admired his nerve.

The inner secret of the Johnson-Richberg row seems never to have come to light. Perhaps now we shall know at least one side of it. It will be interesting, even if it isn't important.

The whole thing would have much more importance if it were a row between a clear-cut conservative and a clear-cut liberal, or progressive.

But it isn't. Neither one is clear-cut either way. Both had and have inclinations both ways.

But of Johnson it must be said that when he said something he said it with directness. He didn't load his sentences with qualifying words which could take the meaning out of what he seemed to say. If he meant to say "Oh, hell," he said "Oh, hell," and that was that. He didn't say, "Oh, varisimilitude of hell," or words to that effect.

These things being as they are, the final wonder of it all is that if Richberg really hoped to snare the general into his net he didn't keep still until the general wrote a really scorching libel, then drag him into court and sock him with a good stiff judgment.

Perhaps Gen. Johnson wonders about that, too, and grins.

SHOE INDUSTRY HEARING.

Lynn, Mass.—Because of a peculiar situation that has arisen in the boot and shoe industry, as evidenced among other things by the migration of enterprises from the state of Massachusetts and elsewhere, the National Industrial Recovery Board has called a hearing to be held in Washington in the immediate future for the purpose of studying the decline in the boot and shoe industry of Massachusetts and the contributing causes.

those who employ them. Employers have taken every advantage of their freedom to organize in trade associations, but have denied their employes this parallel right.

Take such a plain and easily understood section of the law as Section 7-A of the NRA, and note how these officials have twisted and crooked and tortured the plain language of that section, and you are inevitably forced to the conclusion that those fellows just naturally hate to recognize the fact that the law has at last placed the producers of our wealth upon an equal basis with those who reap a profit from their labor. Why, there'd be no living with servants and hirelings who are organized and in a position to demand and receive decent wages and working conditions. This is the real cause which creates confusion as to the meaning of so simple and plain a statement of a right as is contained in Section 7-A. It grants a right, not a privilege, that could be granted one day and revoked the next, and those gentry just hate the idea that labor could demand as a right something which they are willing to bestow as a privilege, provided they happened to like the wage workers upon whom they were to be bestowed.

It is time that we faced the facts that the wage-earners of this country are human, with all the pulsating sensations of intelligent beings. In modern times labor has attained an intelligent understanding of the fundamentals of industrial economics. They can no longer be fed a lot of hooey, while the installment collector raves at the door and the cupboard is bare. It may be, though, but these propounders of industrial bourbonism will find out that congress was not merely passing a "sop" to the workers in Section 7-A, and that when it meets shortly, coming fresh from the people with that unmistakable edict of Nov. 6, will tell these gentry who have mutilated the plain language of that section that it means exactly what it says, and go on to tell them to stop quibbling and obey the law. Until this law is obeyed there will of course be confusion, and if, as these gentlemen assert, Section 7-A is a breeder of strife and confusion, it would not be a hard matter to locate and identify the incubator and brooder in which the strife is propagated. Democracy assumes that the gains of civilization should be shared by the whole people who created them, rather than by a special class of persons. Liberty which does not bring common welfare and social justice loses its very soul.

Their second resolution recommended that state legislatures pass no laws concerning NRA until it has been determined what steps, if any, the new congress may take toward modifying the recovery program. They well know that by the time this can be determined most of our state legislatures will have adjourned and gone back to the routine of everyday life, and that it will be impossible to enact further legislation in this state for at least two years. Our state legislature convenes next Monday with a plain edict from our people to approve the principles of the new deal in the form of state laws that will protect our citizens from further exploitation at the hands of those who have sought to hinder our progress and wreck the liberty of our people.

The legislative representatives of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods have voiced their hearty approval of the industrial life-saving principles of the NRA, and this includes Section 7-A, and we heartily advocate having these principles enacted into state law at the approaching session of our state legislature.

It should go without saying that if the manufacturers' association is permitted to dictate the terms of our social legislation it will not come within miles of meeting conditions that are crying for correction.

America is not yet so desperately bankrupt that we are forced to hand over our public responsibility to this small industrial group.

In America a new world is within our reach, if we organize and act to take possession of it. The sober facts of science and technology, cold figures of production possibilities, show what might be done if confusion and timidity do not paralyze us in the presence of the incredible richness of American opportunity.

MORE "COMPANY HOUSES."

Cleveland, O.—It is reported that the steel and coal industries contemplate the biggest house-building project in the country's history. Under the plan, about 50,000 steel and wood houses would be erected, at an estimated expenditure of about $150,000,000. For many long years, "company houses" have been regarded as a curse to mining and mill towns. Many instances are recorded where workers have been set out of their company-owned houses during strike periods. The present plan, however, calls for co-operation with the federal housing administration and eventual sale of the houses to workers on the same terms offered by the administration.

1934 was a better year than 1933, as most people will agree. More money circulated more rapidly. While heavy industries have been slower in regaining normalcy, at the same time bank deposits have increased considerably.

Our capital and surplus have been kept intact, and our personnel has been increased to a large extent. Each one of the complete banking services we offer is functioning more smoothly than ever. With more people, more deposits, more experience and with the soundness we have preserved through twenty-three years, we are eager to meet 1935 and to greet you in our lobby with a Happy New Year.

Secretary of Labor Sees Further Progress for 1935

Editor The Labor World:

Permit me to thank you and your readers for your co-operation with the department of labor during the past year. The response to the establishment of the new division of labor standards and the inauguration of a labor information service has been particularly gratifying. These accomplishments of 1934 are in the interest of wage-earners and their families. This is in keeping with the policy of the department of labor to be of service to the country's workers, to foster, promote and develop their welfare, to improve their working conditions and to advance their opportunities for profitable employment.

We are better off as a nation than we were at this time last year. Employment for the year 1934 as a whole was approximately 12 per cent and payrolls 7 per cent for the year 1934 as a whole was approximately 12 per cent and payrolls 7 per cent greater than for 1933; farmers' incomes rose by more than a billion dollars and many business concerns reported gains. We should be able to look forward to further gains in the coming year.

Among the hoped for accomplishments of 1935 is the passage of legislation which will provide a greater measure of economic security for the country's wage-earners. There should be some protection against those vicissitudes of life over which we have no control—the loss of a job, sickness, accident, dependent old age and death of the wage-earner.

It is my sincere wish that 1935 will bring increased opportunities for employment at good pay to every wage-earner in the country and that the year will mark the laying of a foundation for a broader, happier and more secure and satisfying life in the future.

(Signed) FRANCES PERKINS,
Secretary of Labor.

TEXTILE LABOR BOARD ORDERS MILL TO REINSTATE STRIKERS

Washington.—In a finding that the Clinton Cotton mill, of Clinton, S. C., has discriminated against four of its employes because of membership in the United Textile Workers of America and participation in the strike in September, the national textile labor relations board has ordered their reinstatement to their former positions without delay. The four employes are Paul E. Deen, T. J. Broom, Lank Furr and L. M. Brewer.

In the event that the mill fails to notify the board that the men have been reinstated to their former positions, the case will be referred to the compliance division of the NRA, and to "other agencies of the federal government" for appropriate action.

This case came to a hearing before the board on Nov. 26 and involves charges of discrimination by both the Lydia and Clinton mills, owned by W. J. and C. M. Bailey, brothers, against employes who held membership in the textile workers' union and took part in the September strike.

The board finds that about 400 of the union member employes of the Clinton mill, out of a total of 600, struck on Sept. 4, formed picket lines and the mill shut down. With the reopening of the mill on Oct. 1, the four employes charging discrimination before the board made application in person for their jobs back. Re-employment was refused to them. The board's decision says:

"The board finds, upon the record new before it, that the mill has discriminated against certain of its former employes who were members of the union and went out on strike, by its failure to rehire said union employes at the end of the strike when the mill reopened, in violation of Section 7-A of the national recovery act and Section 8 of the code of fair competition for the cotton textile industry and has thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employes in the exercise of their right of concerted activities for mutual aid and protection."

Bay State Labor Protests Sending Of State Police to Strike Zones

Boston, Jan. 3.—A protest against injection of state police into strikes of textile mill workers at Southbridge, Dudley and Ludlow, Mass., has been made by Robert J. Watt, legislative agent of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor. In his protest, directed at the retiring governor, Joseph B. Ely, Watt demands the withdrawal of the members of the state troopers assigned to duty in the mills, and immediately outside these plants, at which strikes have been recently declared. The troopers were ordered to the strike zones by the governor.

Watt declared that use of state troopers "was diverting public funds to subsidize private interests. That representation may have been made that troopers were necessary, but that no attempt was made to investigate the other side of the question.

"When so many crimes of violence remain unsolved," he continued; "when highway patrol is essential for safety; fhen a prominent citizen has to telephone to Washington for ordinary police protection to save his daughter from kidnapers, we believe anyone diverting normal police functions to assist mill owners in strike-breaking, is guilty of misuse of executive authority; that the action in ordering out the state police was peculiar inasmuch as the division of conciliation and arbitration seemed to be the proper agency to handle the matter, and if confidence in this division is lacking, the governor has resorted to the state police. That if this contention is true, the governor should dismiss the present members of the conciliation and arbitration board of the state, and replace them with those who are competent, and at the same time withdraw the troopers from in and about the mills at which strikes have been declared."

In addition to the foregoing, Watt asserted the state troopers were being used as strikebreakers, and that the use of the state policemen was a misuse of executive authority by the governor.

64 YEARS IN SAME MILL.

Double Shoals, N. C.—The terrible toll of child labor in the mills of the south, prior to establishment of the NRA, is emphasized with the revelation that Mrs. Mary Deitz, now only 71 years old, has worked continuously in one mill for sixty-four years. At the tender age of 7 years, when any child should normally be in school, she started to work in a cotton mill instead.

State Federations Expected to Fight For Child Labor Ban

Approval of Amendment Urged by President Green; Sixteen More State Approvals Necessary.

Washington.—Twenty-eight state federations of labor, affiliated with the A. F. of L., will lead the fight in their respective states for final approval of the child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States. Twenty states have so far voted approval and sixteen more are necessary.

In a special communication to the state federations in states that have not yet approved the proposed amendment, President William Green stated in part:

"The child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States has been ratified by twenty states. Favorable action by sixteen additional state legislatures is necessary in order to complete ratification of this constitutional amendment by three-fourths of the states.

"The American Federation of Labor has set the ratification of the child labor amendment by sixteen additional states during the coming year as one of its major legislative objectives.

"By direction of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor I am calling upon the organized labor movements and their friends in the states which have not thus far approved the child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States, to call upon the state legislatures to do so, to urge favorable action and to serve in every possible way to secure such favorable action during the coming winter.

"The following states have thus far failed to ratify the child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States: Alabama, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Wyoming.

"It has been made convincingly clear that the evils of child labor can only be overcome and the child life of the nation protected through the application of national remedies. The evils of child labor constitute a national menace which can only be successfully dealt with through the enactment of a federal statute by the congress of the United States.

"Let us win this great victory this winter in behalf of human welfare, child life and the resultant moral advancement of the national life."

Labor Faces New Year In Spirit of Optimism

By WILLIAM GREEN
President American Federation of Labor.

Labor faces the new year in a spirit of optimism and confidence. There is ample justification for the assumption of such an attitude. It is based upon an analysis of the economic and social forces which make for national recovery and social progress. The stern logic of events forces the conclusion that we are nearer the point where the long-continued depression will have spent its force. History records that the economic tide turns in every depression in due course of time, moving the nation upward toward a higher level of comparative prosperity.

There is cumulative evidence on every hand that the peak of unemployment and economic distress has been passed and that the upward trend in industrial and social improvement is at hand. Unless all signs fail, the movement toward national recovery will move on in a substantial and definite way during the coming new year.

Furthermore, labor is cheered and heartened because its long fight for a large measure of social security is being won. Labor is certain that during the new year a federal unemployment insurance act will be passed by the congress of the United States and that this legislation will be supplemented through the enactment of similar legislation in a large number of states. We are hopeful that old-age security, health insurance and other social justice measures will be enacted into law. All this means that labor will move forward during the new year toward the realization of the more abundant life.

CHEAP POWER AGAIN INDORSED.

Whereas, the development and distribution of electric power by and for the benefit of the masses has been and is a major project in the great program for national recovery; and,

Whereas, the federal government, in working out such plans, has spent, is spending and will spend many millions of dollars in the Tennessee valley that our people may have cheaper electric power; and,

Whereas, our sister cities of Knoxville and Memphis has recently voted by overwhelming majorities to take advantage of this opportunity offered by the United States government for the ownership and distribution of power by and for the people; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Chattanooga Trades and Labor council indorse the TVA program and the movement for the sale and distribution of electricity in Chattanooga, under the plans originated and approved as a major part of the government's program for national recovery. We believe that the cheap electric power offered to Chattanooga and the Tennessee valley by the TVA will open to the citizens of Chattanooga and the under-privileged inhabitants of the Tennessee valley a better way of living. Be it further

Resolved, That we call upon every member of organized labor to vote for acquirement and distribution of electric power by and for the whole people, at the election to be held on this question sometime this spring, and we call upon all city, county and state officials to insist that said election be held on the same day as the regular city primary election is held. Be it further

Resolved, That the Hamilton county delegation in the legislature be requested to include in the electric power bill to be introduced and passed in the legislature a provision permitting the citizens of Chattanooga to vote at said referendum election without a poll tax receipt, if legally possible. We believe that in order for a fearless, honest expression of all the people of Chattanooga that the payment of a poll tax should not be a condition precedent to the right to vote on this question.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

Under and by virtue of the authority and power vested in me, the undersigned, as trustee, by a deed of trust conveying to the undersigned, as trustee, the real estate hereinafter described, executed by John O. TEACHERS URGE BIG U. S. SCHOOLS APPROPRIATION

Washington, Jan. 3.—State school superintendents and commissioners of education urged at their annual meeting in Washington that congress appropriate $50,000,000 to isure normal operation of schools next year.

The teachers also suggested use of federal funds to refinance certain school bonded indebtedness and to construct new rural schools.

The request came from Charles A. Lee, Missouri state school superintendent and president of the national organization. The educators found the national school situation improved this year over last. Teachers, they said, are receiving slightly increased salaries. Qualification and morale of teachers are higher, more teachers are employed, enrollments have increased, and school terms have not been shortened materially, they reported.

TEST CASE TO COME IN FEDERAL COURT IN ATLANTA SATURDAY

Rights of American Citizens May Be Defined.

Use of Federal Equipment by State Militia and Strikebreaking Activities by Army of Georgia Attacked by Hosiery Workers and American Federation of Labor.

Federal relief administration has been authorized to extend its service to strikers at the main plant of the Richmond Hosiery mills, according to announcement Friday morning, and families of those forced to walk out when wages were again reduced may be relieved to a considerable extent thereby. Federal relief offices were opened in Rossville Friday morning, it was said, at McFarland avenue and Cherry street.

Activities of Talmadge's army, sent to Rossville to "quell" disturbances which did not exist, are under investigation from various angles, according to information given The Labor World Friday morning, and it is probable that the alleged strikebreaking activities of the "soldiers" will be curbed to a considerable extent immediately, it was said.

From Atlanta comes the information that a test case will be brought before the federal court in Atlanta Saturday, to determine whether the state militia has a right to arrest and incarcerate citizens walking the streets and engaged in their usual avocations. Wire to this effect contained no details, but it is presumed the case will be brought on behalf of some of the "army's" prisoners sent to the "bull pen" in the Georgia capital during the past week.

From Washington also comes the information that representatives of the Hosiery Workers and the American Federation of Labor are entering vigorous protest against alleged violation of the law through the use of federal equipment by Talmadge's army in attempting to break the Richmond strike.

It was said that the activities of the militia have even reached the point of seeking out strikers and urging them to return to the mill as strikebreakers. Unionists charged that the more active members were being pointed out to the "soldiers" by company officials, and forthwith taken into custody by the latter on some flimsy charge. It was charged further that union members coming out of union relief headquarters and bent upon investigating suffering families were apprehended by the "soldiers" and placed under guard. This apparent effort, however, to break the morale of the strikers, it was said, has had an opposite effect, and has made them far more determined to battle to the last for what they regard as their rights.

A rumor which has gained considerable headway, also, is that Talmadge's army is being paid by the mill owners, whose plea of poverty becomes somewhat weak when it is considered that the maintenance of some 350 "soldiers" runs into big money as time goes on.

Presence of the "soldiers," moreover, has failed to have the desired effect of terrorizing the workers, and alleged strikebreaking activities has resulted in a great strengthening of the morale of the strikers.

Postal Clerks Urge Better Rating System

Why Not Give Consideration to Rewards as Well as Penalties, Union's Organ Asks—Court of Appeals Urged.

An efficiency rating system which is not a "one-way street," in other words, one not exclusively of penalties, is advocated by the January issue of the Union Postal Clerk, official organ of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks.

"While this is being said," the clerks' federation says, "it should not be forgotten that ingenuity has not yet been able to devise any system of rating which is not, in the last analysis, the opinion of some supervisor. A rating system must diminish this personal element as much as possible. There will enough of it remain at best. But, if penalties are to be decimal-pointed, why not rewards also?"

The Union Postal Clerk also advocates a court of appeals but makes clear that this, to be useful, must be a court of final appeal.

The statement is made that, "It has been demonstrated that the most efficient manner in which to build up machinery for the protection of individual and collective rights is to open the door to negotiation and representation between the employing agency and the authorized spokesmen of the group concerned."

"By all means, a court of appeals. But it should be a court of final appeal for the purpose of adjudicating wrongs which cannot be settled elsewhere. To do otherwise is to impose a super-burenecracy over other bureaucracies without assurance that the ills aimed at would not be accentuated rather than diminished."

SLOAN QUITS INSTITUTE.

New York.—George A. Sloan, stormy petrel in the recent textile strike, has tendered his resignation as president of the Cotton Textile Institute, Inc., to become effective Jan. 1, 1935. The resignation has been accepted by the institute's executive committee. Mr. Sloan announced that he wishes to devote all of his time to the code authority for the cotton textile industry, of which he is chairman. Temporarily, at least, G. H. Dorr, counsel, will serve as president of the Cotton Textile Institute, Inc.

Mill Officials Grow Hysterical?

Suggestion that representatives of the Richmond Hosiery mills are becoming hysterical was seen by some local workers this week in allegations in a petition filed in Judge Lusk's court charging various and sundry unlawful acts against strikers at the Daisy branch of the concern—which petition, incidentally, was promptly thrown out by the court.

The charges, presumably prepared by John Chambliss, attorney and former director for the company, who was among directors of the mill indicted for alleged violation of federal law, contained the statement, according to the Times' account, that the defendants

"Constitute, being a considerable crowd, far in excess of the number of three, an unlawful assembly,"

And some of them actually carried banners!

Gee, it must be great to be a lawyer!

Machinists' Lodges Hold Joint Session

Installation of newly-elected officers featured a joint session of Lodges 1450 and 56, Machinists, Tuesday night at Roosevelt hall, when a large attendance of members of both organizations was present for the joint ceremonies.

To add to the satisfactory nature of the proceedings, it was announced, Lodge 56 initiated fifteen new members.

T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, was a special guest of the occasion, and delivered a splendid talk on organization, members reported.

Brewery Workers Like Old Officers

Local 79, Brewery Workers, evidently is well satisfied with conditions as they are respecting the business of that organization, as all old officers were re-elected at the annual election held on Jan. 3.

"Our members are very much pleased with the records of the officers," a spokesman for the local told The Labor World, "and we are looking forward to another good year in 1935."

The official family of Local 79 is as follows:

President—R. R. Lee.
Vice-President—Carl Ervin.
Financial Secretary—Richard Burks.
Recording Secretary—Erskin D. Fischer.
Treasurer—Leo Lee.
Trustees—Ed Steiner, Joe Bell, Tom Ellis.
Sergeant-at-Arms—Bob Parks.

Shoe Repairers Plan 'Get-Together'

What it is hoped to make an annual "get-together" and social gathering will be staged by Local 620, Shoe Repairers, on the first Thursday night in February, it was announced Friday morning following an interesting meeting of the local Thursday night.

Refreshments and cigars will be served, and some short talks arranged for, it was said, and everyone connected with the shoe repairing industry in Chattanooga is invited to attend.

Committee on arrangements is as follows: D. R. Massey, H. U. Garland and Walter Starnes.

PLENTY OF PINEAPPLES.

The long-heralded prosperity has really "turned the corner" for Hawaii's pineapple industry, according to figures just released. Hawaii's pineapple pick this year, for instance, exceeds 8,000,000 cases. In the year that the first Hawaiian shipment was made, 1895, the islands produced only 480 cases. Most of this year's crop will be exported.

Organizer

E. E. McDANIELS

E. E. McDaniels, member of the executive council of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, president of Local 175, Electrical Workers, and for the past few months engaged in special organization work for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, this week accepted a commission as general organizer for the Building Laborers' International union, and already has assumed his new duties.

Mr. McDaniels' activities will be confined to the southern territory, with particular reference at present to TVA projects. He has proved unusually successful as an organizer, and local friends predict a splendid future for him in his new field.

NEWEST PLAN OF PRESIDENT HITS WORKERS

Labor Sees Peril to "Prevailing Wage."

LOW RELIEF PAY FEARED BY UNIONS

Building Trades Hold Scales Endangered by Possible Ruling.

Building trades unions and the American Federation of Labor are up in arms against President Roosevelt's declaration for lower than prevailing wages on government relief work.

The declaration was made in the President's message to congress, in his proposal for a new program of emergency public employment. Outlining proposed "practical principles" for the program, he said:

"Compensation on emergency public projects should be in the form of security payments which should be larger than the amount now received as a relief dole, but at the same time not so large as to encourage the rejection of opportunities for private employment or the leaving of private employment to engage in government work."

Labor sees the president's proposal as a menace to the Bacon-Davis "prevailing rate of wages" act and other legislation designed to protect wage and working standards on public construction projects. If the principle is carried into effect, labor can see only one result—the tearing down of present wage rates in the building industry with the destruction of standards established by decades of effort on the part of the organized workers.

For this reason, while the president's message was generally approved in labor circles, emphatic opposition to his proposed wage principles on emergency public projects was registered at A. F. of L. headquarters and headquarters of building workers' international and national unions in Washington.

President Green, of the A. F. of L., voiced feeling here when he demanded that the 30-hour week and provisions for payment of the prevailing rate of wages be written into any legislation enacted in accordance with the president's work relief program.

Would They Kill The Fatted Calf?

More or less dramatic appeal issued by officials of the Richmond Hosiery mills to their striking employes, through the "news" columns of the daily papers, to return to work "and all will be forgiven, recalled to one of the strikers this week an advertisement which he declared was published in an eastern daily, as follows:

"If John Smith, who deserted his wife and 6-month-old baby twenty-seven years ago, will return home, said baby will be delighted to beat hell out of him."

CLAIM EVERY DAY IS 'DEADLINE DAY' AT RICHMOND MILLS

Tactics of Management Fail to Register With Strikers.

Day After Day "Passes Quietly," as Workers Fail to Heed Call to "Return and All Will Be Forgiven"—Strike Increasingly Effective at Three Plants of Hosiery Concern.

Every day is "deadline day" at the Richmond Rosiery mills in Rossville, according to strikers, and as the date is moved up by officials of the company it has become more apparent that few if any of those who walked out some two weeks ago in protest against further pay cuts have been moved by the more or less impressive pronouncements issued through the columns of the daily papers.

Scarcely a day has passed, it is declared, but what "plans" have been announced for a resumption of operations. The whistle is blown, the doors are thrown open, Talmadge's army stands at attention and a lane is made for the entrance of any who may choose to desert their fellow workers and assist in breaking the strike.

Frantic efforts of the management to recruit what might appear to be a full force of workers has resulted in the enlistment of some 250 from the highways and byways of Georgia and Alabama, it is announced, most of whom possibly never saw the inside of a hosiery mill. It was suggested Thursday night that the management might consider the strikers dumb, but said management should give them credit for having enough knowledge of their work to know that inexperienced workers cannot successfully operate a hosiery plant.

It was pointed out, also, that though the management announced, under great headlines in the Times, that Thursday was positively the last day on which "former employes" might report for their jobs, further quotations published in the "news" columns of the Times, regarded as semi-official, stated that 900 applications had been received, but this "new force" would not be used to replace employes who decided to return to their jobs.

Thursday's "deadline," which had been ballyhooed in various ways, was reported in Friday's Times as having "passed quietly."

A "deadline" announced for Soddy employes of the Richmond unit, who also have been on strike for several weeks, also "passed quietly" this week, when it was announced that the mill would resume operations Wednesday morning. Apparently, the fireman came and made up a big fire in the boilers, the whistle blew, the superintendent was on hand to open the gates—but nobody came to work.

Daisy, where still another unit of the Richmond outfit is on strike, reported the only alleged disturbance so far as the state of Tennessee is concerned, when a number of strikers were hailed into Judge Lusk's court in an effort to have them placed under peace bonds, but the court promptly threw the case out after hearing only prosecution's evidence.

This strike is declared to have become very effective, and to be growing in effectiveness every day.

Spokesmen for the Richmond strikers as a whole expressed thorough satisfaction with the condition of the walkout, and declared there is no doubt whatever but that the workers intend to secure justice before returning to their jobs.

Congress in Session; Labor Officials Alert

Washington, Jan. 10.—The first session of the 74th congress of the United States opened at the capitol here at high noon, Thursday, Jan. 3.

With the plodding Joe Byrns, of Tennessee, elected as speaker of the house, and William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, as floor leader, for the ruling democratic party, the south holds a dominant position. Vice-President Garner, of course, presides over the senate, while Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, will continue as the senate floor leader.

It is reported that a veritable flood of anti-labor bills were waiting to be dumped into the well-known "hopper." Labor officials have received enough advance information regarding proposed reactionary legislation to know that they must be alert to protect the public interest to the best of their ability.

The legislative program of the American Federation of Labor, embracing five principal points, including the 30-hour week, an industrial disputes act, continuation of the NRA, unemployment insurance and old-age pensions, and restoration of the government pay cut as of Jan. 1, will be followed through vigorously, it is stated.

Wisdom

While there is yet time, let us turn to Justice and obey her; let us trust Liberty and follow her. Then will dangers that now threaten disappear, forces that now menace turn to agencies of elevation. To remove want and the fear of want, to give all classes leisure, and comfort, and the decencies and refinements of life, would be like turning water into a desert.—Henry George.

Kept Taking Cardui Until She Got Rid of the Severe Pains

When Mrs. Ida Hege, of Edinburg, Ind., was in a painful, rundown condition, she took Cardui, with the results she describes below: "I had just been what one might say dragging around, feeling miserable and all out of sorts. I remembered how Cardui helped my aunt. I sent for six bottles of Cardui and when I had taken them, I was much better and stronger. I did not suffer so much pain. I continued taking Cardui until I had taken nine bottles. I do not have the severe pains." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefitted them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

"Whatever That Means!"

The morning Times' editorial writer, in an editorial Sunday discussing "Radicalism in This Community," with particular reference to a series of lectures which had been announced for Chattanooga High school this winter and with incidental shots, of course, at organized labor and the Roosevelt administration, made an open admission, possibly unwittingly, which is refreshing, to say the least.

Last winter a series of lectures was sponsored by the local parent-teachers, which brought to Chattanooga several outstanding speakers on economic and social topics, and a small number of citizens enjoyed and benefited from the advice and opinion of these national figures. This year, however, the parent-teachers failed to sponsor the events, and an organization of forty men and women, called the Chattanooga Forum, undertook the task of financing the lectures. A committee consisting of Mr. Harry Miller, prominent local merchant, and Dr. T. B. Cowan, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, secured the use of the high school auditorium, at a stated rental price, and the Times' writer immediately "saw red," with the result that the contract has been cancelled so far as the school auditorium is concerned, and it has not been announced where the program will be given.

The most interesting point in the Times' editorial, however, and which is regarded as a frank admission of a situation long familiar to Chattanoogans, was a reference to one of the speakers as a "fighter for 'social justice,' whatever that means!"

Volumes have been written, countless public utterances made by leaders of economic thought and the columns of daily newspapers and other publications have been filled particularly during the past two or three years on subjects which might be included in a discussion of "social justice," but it has been well apparent to any who might read the utterances of the morning paper's editorial writer that he has failed utterly to grasp the idea.

However, he having publicly admitted lack of knowledge of what social justice means, it may be possible that President Roosevelt and other forward-looking Americans will be forced to continue along in their "radical" ways, battling for a recognition of social justice, without the advice and influence of the Times' editor.

NRA Reviews Its Work

The national recovery administration has issued a statement reviewing the first year and a half of the two-year span given the NRA, claiming a maximum efficiency for its widespread code structure.

Chief among definite accomplishments affecting labor are: 1. Elimination of child labor and curtailment of home work. 2. Establishment of the principle of a limited work week and minimum rates of pay. 3. Decrease of industrial unemployment and augmented wage purchasing power. 4. Curtailment of the use of wage cutting in price competition.

> These accomplishments, insofar as they have actually been made, are indeed commendable. They afford justification for the establishment of the NRA as an original experiment in industrial recovery and industrial progress. President Roosevelt truly deserves high commendation.

Yet, if we are to profit by experience, and provide equal labor representation on all code authorities and on the NRA administrative board, along with adequate enforcement, far greater blessings for a majority of the people may be realized.

It is to be hoped that the present congress will revise and extend the national industrial recovery act, beyond its expiration date of June 15, 1935, and include in the revision the equitable and sound recommendations of the American Federation of Labor. Thus will our continued industrial development be assured to result in the greatest good to the greatest number.

Insurance "Congress" Wavering

Despite feverish activity on the part of communists throughout the country, we have apparently been trying to deceive the public into believing that their forthcoming "National Congress on Unemployment and Social Insurance," in Washington, has the support of legitimate organized labor, their efforts appear to be wavering, with the alleged "congress" doomed to deserved demise.

> Even the socialists, who were reported at first as lining up, are now reported as withdrawing or refusing to send delegates. An example of this is found in a dispatch from Pittsburgh, which says the New Kensington branch of the socialist party of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, has denied emphatically a report appearing in the communist official newspaper that the branch would send delegates to what they term the "communist led" congress.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, has issued a formal warning to organized labor, saying that the A. F. of L. is not in any way sponsoring, nor in any manner connected with, the alleged "congress." Notwithstanding this, the communists continue to play upon the good name of the federation and may possibly dupe a few people, who will eventually catch the significance of such activities.

Railroad Works of PWA

In the year just ended, PWA has made work loans to railroads totaling $193,236,000. This money has not gone to pay old debts out of new ones. It has been spent by the railroads to make improvements which have put considerable men to work. The Pennsylvania, for example, has practically completed the electrification of its lines between New York and Washington with the money loaned by the PWA. Several roads have bought new stream-line trains from the same source.

Indeed, it may be said that most of the advances in railroading in the last few years have been financed by Uncle Sam. When Leonor F. Loree demands that the government shall get out of the railroad business, he is calling for something that his railroad colleagues would find desperately embarrassing.

But the details of the use of this money are not sufficient. It is said to have produced 150,000,000 man-hours of work. This means that each man-hour's work cost the government about $1.28. The average wage paid in this work is probably not more than one-third of that sum. There is too large a spread to be left unexplained.

If this is the best we can do with relief funds, we shall go ahead. The loans to the railroads have been productive of a great deal of good, and if the expense can be shown to be necessary, there will be little complaint. But with 10,000,000 persons still out of work, it is necessary to see that each dollar goes as far as possible.

STRIKE IN CLEVELAND.

Cleveland, O.—Four hundred members of the Commission House Drivers' union went on strike here Jan. 2, affecting 102 produce merchants. Pickets were immediately placed and the matter referred to the regional labor board.

WORKERS FAVOR GOOD BOOKS.

Chicago.—According to Charles H. Compton, in a talk to the mid-winter conference of the American Library association, it is not the person of formal culture, but the working men and women, without college or even high school education, who are reading the best books nowadays.

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

Congress meets. Prophets proph. All is excitement. What will be done to which and why?

A great many pretend to know everything that is in the mill and what will happen to it. One man knows. And he tells very little—until he wants to.

F. D. R., he knows, because this congress will do little that he doesn't want done and if it does he will yield the veto axe pronto.

Perhaps this session of congress is more important than the first new deal congress. The first enacted emergency legislation; this one will go in for permanent legislation, on the bases of experience had in the past eighteen months.

Many issues are being shaped up, but the biggest was shaped up when the smash came back in 1929. That one had been shaping for many years; it merely came to a head then—a head so visible that everyone had to see it.

What about unemployment? What about what makes unemployment?

Well, we shall see. A great deal of the answer, insofar as there is to be any answer, will be found in the permanent recovery act.

We wait to see. Meanwhile the unemployed are still that way, in growing numbers. Relief is not the answer—not the American answer. Labor keeps pounding that home.

Work and wages—that's the only decent answer. And good wages. There are some wage-cutting gentlemen in the administration, but they probably will be muffled.

Housing limps along, thus far, for reasons that labor men saw in the early stages. There will be plenty of hot talk about how to push housing. Plenty, too, about war profits and war profiteers, but the axe will probably not go to the roots in that issue.

Senator Nye seems to have been out-maneuvered, for no fault of his. But maybe that is not all loss. To center all attention on war profits would be to take the spotlight off industry profits.

Industry profits have been growing—growing while men in millions have been idle and hungry. What about that? It's a good thing for spotlighting.

If all the big issues were put under spotlights there would be a boom in the spotlight business.

Anyhow, congress now is in session. Plenty of greeds are in session also. Plenty of personal ambitions. Plenty of little jealousies. Plenty of petty hates.

Let us hope there is plenty of unselfish desire to serve, to do and to get somewhere. The nation needs it. Humanity within the nation needs it.

Those whose job it is each year to cast up the record for the past year and to set forth forecasts for the coming twelve months aren't having such a rosy job getting happy forecasts in shape for the New Year editions.

Secretary Perkins says she has a program that will put all the unemployed at work for the next twenty-five years, but details are still guarded. If she breaks forth with that program before the forecasts are all run into the mold the job will be easy. She will have fixed everything. But there isn't any great rush of enthusiasm toward taking the promise on faith until the details are let out of the bag.

We and the forecasters wait to see. They wish to behold. They wish to observe the blue prints. Meanwhile facts are the only things that count.

That old unemployment figure still sticks out of the economic picture like a very sore thumb. Much more than a sore thumb. Much more worrisome to all who have to do with fixing the machine so it will work and give men and women a chance to work.

Building trades employment shows a slightly better tone, but the building trades are facing a wage battle that doesn't look like picnic pleasure.

Honest Harold Ickes is out to bring wages down on the shadowy promise that there will be more work and a higher annual income. He hasn't yet said whether he means higher than it is just now or higher than it was in 1927, '28 or '29—or when. That is important and so are several other things. Chief among the important things is the question of what Honest Harold intends to do about the cost of building materials. Ah, there's the point. Right now they are just 100 per cent above a year ago.

So many things happen in this world and so many things are overlooked. It's always fair game to go after labor and its wages, but it seems seldom to occur to a great many persons that there are real abuses lurking elsewhere that might be gone into.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Code Enforcement Cases Won by NRA

Courts Uphold Government Attorneys in 93.3 Per Cent of Cases; Good Effect of Decisions Held Likely.

Washington, Jan. 10.—With a new and improved method of handling NRA code enforcement litigation, it is stated that quicker and more effective action is being secured, with the likelihood of a good effect upon many concerns inclined to be recalcitrant.

Federal courts have sustained the arguments of government attorneys in seventy-seven of the eighty-one court rulings concerning the national recovery administration and industrial codes during the eight weeks ended Dec. 25, according to an analysis made public by the NRA litigation division.

During the period the handling of court cases was greatly expedited and facilitated by the creation of the new position of special assistant attorney-general and the appointment of G. Stanleigh Arnold to the post. Much closer liaison between the NRA and the department of justice has resulted, and co-ordination of preparation of cases has been noticeably furthered.

The success obtained in legal actions during the Nov. 1-Dec. 25 period increased to 93.3 per cent the percentage of rulings favorable to the government in code cases.

Since the litigation division of the NRA was created in March, 1934, it has docketed 909 cases and obtained 210 court rulings. Only fourteen of the adjudications were against the government's position and one has since been overruled on appeal. There have so far been three rulings by appellate courts, all favorable. In no case has an appeal been decided against the NRA.

President's National Campaigners on "Polio"

When President Roosevelt recently consented to "lend" his 53rd birthday anniversary on Jan. 30, 1935, to a nation-wide ball, proceeds of which will be used to fight infantile paralysis, again the country's attention was focused on the seriousness of the disease.

The map above shows the number of orthopedic hospitals in the United States recognized by the American Medical Association, and their location. These 69 today carry the load in giving treatment to the 200,000 persons in the country who bear the handicaps of the disease. Seventy cents of every dollar raised this year will go to aid these victims in communities raising the money.

The other 30 cents will be turned over to the President's Birthday Ball Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research headed by Col. Henry L. Doherty (lower center) of New York and Miami, who was chairman of the 1934 Birthday Ball for the President and was recently appointed to serve in the same capacity in 1935.

Vice-chairman is Jeremiah Milbank (lower right) of New York, treasurer and trustee of the Institute for the Crippled and Disabled and a noted philanthropist. Paul de Kruif, formerly a bacteriologist at Rockefeller Institute and famous as an author, will be secretary, while Edward S. Harkness (lower left), a trustee of the Presbyterian Hospital and of the Metropolitan Museum of New York, will be the treasurer.

Other members of the Commission are Felix M. Warburg, Senator James Couzens, John S. Burke, Edsel B. Ford, Lessing Rosenwald, Mrs. Nicholas Brady and Raymond B. Fosdick.

LIFE OF DIME CIGARETTE AT STAKE SAYS LABOR MUST GO TO THE RESCUE

By O. R. STRACKBEIN
Executive Secretary, the Allied Tobacco Trades Council.

Unless the 10-cent cigarettes, such as "Wings" and "Twenty Grand," both of which bear the union label, are given tax relief from the present congress their future will be very uncertain. The Brown & Williamson Tobacco corporation and the Axton-Fisher Tobacco company, both located in Louisville, Ky., are fighting an uphill battle to continue selling their cigarettes at 10 cents per package.

The principal difficulty experienced by these union employers lies in the increased leaf cost brought about by crop curtailment, the paying of a processing tax and the high internal revenue tax. At the same time these firms have been paying better wages than their non-union competitors, better known as the Big Four, who sell their cigarettes at 18 cents per package.

The internal revenue tax exacted by the federal government amounts to 6 cents per package of 20 cigarettes. It makes no difference whether the cigarettes are sold at 10 cents per package or 15 cents. The result is that 60 per cent of the retail value of the 10-cent cigarette goes for federal taxes exclusive of the processing tax, while less than 50 per cent of the retail value of the higher priced cigarette goes for taxes.

During the past few years while the price of leaf tobacco was low the independent companies who make the 10-cent brands were able to pay the tax and yet realize a moderate profit; but with the price of leaf tobacco soaring and with the processing tax to pay, this margin is on the verge of disappearing completely. Since the 10-cent cigarette is not advertised it would undoubtedly be fatal to raise the price to 11 cents per package. Sales would fall off and the market would be taken over by the "Big Four," whose notorious record of profits on the one hand and low wages on the other has been the subject of much comment in recent months.

Labor is entitled to the purchase of cigarettes at 10 cents per package and there is no reason why labor should be forced to pay its cigarette funds into the coffers of some of the most anti-labor employers in the land who have waxed wealthy and powerful at the expense of labor and the farmer. The manufacturers of the 10-cent brands mentioned above, i. e., "Twenty Grand" and "Wings," have been fair employers. They run union shops. They pay better wages than the "Big Four," who manufacture "Camels," "Chesterfields," "Lucky Strikes" and "Old Golds." And they do this even though their margin of profits is less than half of that enjoyed by the "Big Four."

Furthermore, the union shops have done all within their power to bring about the adoption of a better code than the "Big Four" are willing to agree to. They have co-operated with labor, whereas the "Big Four" have fought labor. They have given labor its best argument for raising wages in the plants of the "Big Four."

But now they need labor's help in bringing about an equalization of the internal revenue tax by congress. Labor will be helping not only its friends but itself as well by supporting this effort to equalize the tax; for by so doing labor will help retain a cheaper cigarette on the market. Why should a 10-cent cigarette pay a tax of 60 per cent of its retail value while the 13-cent product pays only 46 per cent? That is not equality of taxation. It is discriminatory taxation.

What can labor do about it?

Labor can do a great deal about it. Labor organizations throughout the country can let their congressmen and senators know how labor feels about this question. If labor does not rise to the just defense of its friends it fails to make use of its most powerful weapon against unfair employers. The answer in this instance lies entirely with labor. The "Big Four" are a powerful group and unless their power is offset by a more powerful opposing force, the answer to the cigarette tax equalization question can be given beforehand.

Is U. S. in Danger?

"Is the United States of America in danger?" is the title of a communication offered this week by William R. Barney, commenting on a letter to the morning Times of last Sunday signed by Carter U. Farris, a local citizen, in which Mr. Farris professed to believe the trend of the times, and particularly the efforts of the American government to feed its hungry millions of unemployed, constitutes a danger to our present system, and "feels it his duty to protest against any further confiscation of private property and the further encroachment of the government in business." Mr. Barney's letter follows:

A letter in last Sunday's paper, headed "Capitalism in Danger," calls for serious thought. We are just what we are and nothing else. What is done has to be done, if we progress; otherwise we stagnate. Sociology is the science of the constitution, evolution, and the phenomena of human society. This science is taught in schools and colleges.

A socialist is one who knows sociology, or a student of that science. Therefore, I am not a socialist, only a citizen of the United States of America coming from Colonial lineage. As I read history, capitalism of this day was toryism in the days of our revolution for independence. The signers of our Declaration of Independence, the preamble of our constitution, the statesmen that drew up the constitution, and all subsequent statesmen, even to our day, carry only the idea of maintaining the sovereignty of the American nation; laboring for "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people," not for capitalism (toryism).

The Tories of revolutionary times were those who benefited under the existing conditions. Just so are the capitalists, and those who benefit now, are well satisfied and write and talk to continue the present nightmare. But the 22,000,000 that want the right to earn a living for themselves and their dependents want only the rights our Declaration of Independence defines for them and the constitution guarantees to all the nation.

If I read history right, the Tories were in the majority—that is, they and their "yes men;" likewise the same applies to capitalism and its "yes" adherents.

Be that as it may, or was, we are all satisfied that the United States of America prevailed, and are proud of our country. I was taught as a boy and man to revere our ancestors, who made the United States of America a fact, and to respect the slogans such as "United we stand; divided we fall," "one for all, and all for one," and too many others to mention.

Capitalism, as well as Toryism, may have held its proper place in sociology, but as we outgrow methods they must be discarded for better and more adequate means of establishing the common weal of the nation. WM. R. BARNEY, SR.

(In acknowledging receipt of two unsigned communications on current events, The Labor World desires to again point out the fact that we cannot publish letters unless they contain the signatures of the writers. Such signatures may not be used, but must be given as an evidence of good faith. This is a necessary rule of all well-regulated publications.—Editor.)

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

Here's how Black-Draught fills the needs of a family laxative in the home of Mrs. J. S. A. F. of L. Unemployment Figures Show Slight Increase Over Last Year

Big Industries, Apparently Bucking Both Government and Labor, Fail to Put People to Work.

Washington, Jan. 10.—According to careful surveys made by the staff of the American Federation of Labor, unemployment is greater than at this time last year. Many attribute this condition in part to the continued failure of big industries to re-employ men and women, while apparently bucking both the government and labor in a "last stand" fight against possible advance in labor organization and wages, the shortening of working hours and improvement of working conditions.

Meantime, relief expenditures have soared higher than ever. While work relief is being opposed by big business also, it is an outstanding fact that the relief millions have stimulated business to a very marked degree throughout the country.

President Green's Statement.

In releasing a summary of the figures, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, made this revealing statement:

Unemployment increased in November, as is usual at this season, and trade union figures show that in December the increase continued. Our estimate for total unemployment in the country as a whole showed 420,000 more people out of work in November than October and trade union reports showed that 1 per cent of the membership lost their jobs in November and 3 per cent more were laid off in the first part of December. (From our weighted figures.) These increases in unemployment are similar in amount to those that occurred at this time of year in 1932 and 1933; they are considerably smaller than in 1931 and 1930.

The striking fact about this month's report, however, is that unemployment is higher than last year's level by more than 400,000. In November last year our revised figures, which have been corrected by the census figures recently made available, show that 11,030,000 were out of work while in November this year 11,459,000 were unemployed. The revised figure for October was 11,039,000.

The rise in unemployment is due largely to the normal increase in population, which yearly adds more than 400,000 to the army of job seekers. Our industries have not created enough jobs in the last twelve months to put these boys and girls to work, or, if they have found jobs, it has been at the expense of some older persons employed.

Comparing the year's employment gains and losses in the different industries, the figures show a striking decline of employment on farms, due largely to the drought. In November this year, some 200,000 farm laborers who had work last year were unemployed. In construction and on the railroads also, unemployment increased during the year, while in manufacturing, coal mines and wholesale and retail trades there were slight gains.

Trade union figures for the first part of December show an interesting development; employment in building construction gained in December for the first time since our union reports were started in 1928 and the gain this year put 2 per cent of the membership back to work. It seems probable that this is due to the federal housing program.

With unemployment higher than last year and a large part of the unemployed without regular work for one or two years or even more, relief need has increased rapidly. September figures show 1,100,000 fore families, or 5,000,000 more individuals on relief rolls than in September last year and reports from 145 cities show 3 per cent more on relief in October than September and 2 per cent more in November than October and relief payments higher by 10 per cent and 8 per cent, respectively, in those two months.

These figures point to the increasing seriousness of the unemployment problem. Industry has failed to put men and women to work. The responsibility falls on the government to find employment for those who have been denied a chance to earn their bread.

A. F. of L. Executive Council Meets in Washington, January 29

Washington, Jan. 10.—A meeting of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor has been announced for Jan. 29, 1935, to be held at the A. F. of L. headquarters in Washington.

While a special meeting was held in San Francisco, immediately following the 54th annual convention of the federation, this is the first regular meeting of the new council, which now contains eighteen members.

No special announcement of business to be acted upon has been released thus far, but it is held as reasonably certain that the council will be afforded the opportunity to accomplish considerable work of a constructive nature. Among matters awaiting consideration is selection of a city for the 55th annual convention of the A. F. of L. to be held this year.

The present Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor is composed of the following: President, William Green; secretary, Frank Morrison; treasurer, Martin F. Ryan; first vice-president, Frank Duffy; second vice-president, T. A. Rickert; third vice-president, Matthew Woll; fourth vice-president, John Coefield; fifth vice-president, Arthur O. Wharton; sixth vice-president, John N. Weber; seventh vice-president, G. M. Bugniazet; eighth vice-president, George M. Harrison; ninth vice-president, Daniel J. Tobin; tenth vice-president, William L. Hutcheson; eleventh vice-president, John L. Lewis; thirteenth vice-president, David Dubinsky; fourteenth vice-president, Howard C. Bates; fifteenth vice-president, Edward J. Gainor.

Basketball Card Called "Classic"

The greatest basketball classic of the year will be presented at the Memorial auditorium Monday night when the world champion Celtics meet the southern champion Ford V-8 club, according to the promoters.

On the same card will be both City High and Central and Baylor and McCallie.

The Celtics will give a one-hour basketball lesson before the game, it was announced.

MEAT TRADE GETS CODE.

Washington.—A new NRA code of fair competition for the retail meat trade went into effect Dec. 31. The big packing industry is not yet under the NRA. A separate schedule, amounting to a supplementary code, was approved for the Kosher meat retailers. Labor provisions of the retail meat code follow closely those of the retail food and grocery code. Maximum working hours are set at forty-eight a week, at minimum wages of $10 to $15 a week, with a $1 differential in the south, hours and wages both being regarded by labor as entirely inadequate. The schedule of the Kosher trade established minimum wages of $25 in cities over 1,000,000 population and $20 elsewhere for employes engaged in preparing and cutting meats for sale, or assisting in such work.

President's Picture for Schools.

Washington.—The federal office of education announces that a photograph of President Roosevelt, especially inscribed by the chief executive, "To the pupils and teachers of the United States," and signed Franklin D. Roosevelt, is now available to every school child and teacher in the country. When John W. Studebaker became U. S. commissioner of education, he discovered the need of a good picture of the president, to meet the many requests received. The new picture is used as an insert in the current issue of "School Life," official publication of the federal office of education. They may be obtained from the superintendent of documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Another thing that gives a man "pain in the neck" is this overlasting chant about "honor among thieves." What evidence is there that there is any more honor among thieves than among the rest of us?

VICTIMS THREATEN CIVIL SUITS AGAINST MILITIA 'TERRORISTS'

Reports of "Barbarous Treatment" Come From Detention Camp.

Thirty-three Prisoners Alleged to Have Been Herded Together in Filthy Shack and Forced to Endure Hardships in Effort to Break Their Morale.

Allegations that Rossville hosiery strikers and citizens were "treated barbarously" while in the detention camp at Fort McPherson have been made by George L. Googe, of the American Federation of Labor, and John W. Edelman, representing the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, in a communication addressed to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The statement by the labor men included a very broad intimation that suits would be launched in the courts against the Georgia militia officials for illegal arrest.

"Every effort was made by the company commander of the guards, Capt. Black, to terrorize the strikers before their release into signing papers agreeing not to enter the state," allege Googe and Edelman.

"We are informed that not a single one of the prisoners waived their rights to secure legal redress and the organized labor movement will aid all those who have the courage to assert their claims against the guards or the state of Georgia," the statement continues. "Strikers when released were verminous as a result of the filthy conditions in the quarters in which they were imprisoned at Fort McPherson and many were ill because of barbarous and wretched treatment while under detention," Googe and Edelman allege. "Thirty-three prisoners were herded together in a filthy garage 63 feet by 39 in size located just below the rifle range at Fort McPherson. There were no sanitary facilities in the building and guards frequently failed to take prisoners to the latrines. Despite the fact that two of the strikers were suffering from acute cases of 'trench mouth,' only one drinking cup and a tin pail were provided for drinking purposes. "The floor of the garage was thick with dust and dirt which choked up the lungs and noses of the prisoners. The furnace leaked and sickened the men with coal-gas fumes. An adjoining storeroom was alive with rats and mice which kept the men awake at night. The odor of carbide prevailed in the place was most noxious.

Local Typos Pass Talmadge Lines; Captured at Miami

Camp and White Run Gauntlet of Georgia Napoleon With Cards in Pockets.

Two local printers, Stewart Camp and Hugh White, of the Times composing room force, had a most remarkable experience this week, according to letters to friends, which said friends are still trying to figure out.

These two gentlemen motored to Miami, Fla., for a visit with relatives, and upon arrival at their destination were arrested and held by Miami police for nine hours, as "suspicious characters," being refused even the opportunity to phone any one of many prominent citizens there to establish their identity. All of which, naturally, has made the boys somewhat "sore" at the Miami police force.

But there was nothing particularly remarkable about that unfortunate experience. The angle which local friends cannot understand is how Messrs. Camp and White traveled through Talmadge's domain, with their union cards in their pockets, without running afoul of the Georgia army and being incarcerated in the bull-pen established allegedly by the great commander-in-chief of the armed forces of that state for working men who dare belong to a trade union or question the absolute authority of their bosses. Local citizens suggested the possibility that the "soldiers" had been tucked in their beds for a much-needed rest after their strenuous campaign, while the officers may have been more or less incapacitated following a reception, dancing, etc., in celebration of their great military victory at Rossville and the capture of many prisoners from the ranks of the enemy.

It is rumored that the Chattanooga printers will take a circuitous route on their return home, in order to avoid the domain of the Georgia Napoleon and his minions.

DEFIES LABOR BOARD ORDER.

Greenville, S. C.—The Clinton mills, of Clinton, S. C., has definitely refused to reinstate employes who were out on strike with the United Textile Workers of America, even though ordered to do so by the national textile relations board, it is stated here. W. J. Bailey, president of the mills, issued a statement in which he indicated that if the NRA wishes to take away his Blue Eagle "they will just have to do it."

Dairy Workers Celebrate First Anniversary

Local Union Enjoys Splendid Success in First Year of Existence.

First anniversary of Local 428, Dairy Workers, was celebrated this month with appropriate ceremonies, including presentation of a beautiful loving cup to the retiring president, B. F. Harrison, in appreciation for services rendered. The presentation was made by Arnold Morgan.

The Dairy Workers union is the only local of its nature in the south, and during the first year of its existence has enjoyed remarkable success. Working agreements have been signed with eight creameries, and a splendid spirit of co-operation is being enjoyed by all parties affected.

H. H. Bodenheimer was named president for the ensuing term, with the following "assistants:"

Vice-President—H. E. King.

Business Agent—B. Z. Cooley.

Secretary-Treasurer—B. F. Harrison.

Recording Secretary—M. L. Brown.

Trustees—J. T. Bowles, J. T. Johnson and M. L. Cox.

The Dairy Workers are urging every union man and woman to insist on milk and cream from a union dairy. Newly-elected officers expressed the hope that all members will be present at the next regular meeting, Jan. 22, in order that the year's program may be outlined with the advice and counsel of each and every one.

Sims Again Heads Bakery Workers

Curtis R. Sims, who has served the local Bakery Workers during the hectic first months of its organization, was again chosen president at the annual election last Saturday. Other officers are:

Vice-President—Ed Wilkey.

Secretary-Treasurer—R. J. Gentry.

Corresponding and Recording Secretary—Miss Helen Lawrence.

Sergeant-at-Arms—C. B. Norwood.

Trustees—George Hattenbach, E. N. Davis and G. G. Pack.

Despite numerous difficulties, the Bakers and their allied craft, the Bakery Salesmen, have made splendid progress during the year, and are expecting a most successful year of 1935.

LIVING COSTS UP.

According to statistics issued by Secretary of Labor Perkins, living costs for families of workers' earning less than $2,000 a year rose by 1.8 per cent during the five months from July 1 to Nov. 30. The announcement was made Jan. 8. Secretary Perkins said: "The index of living costs compiled by the bureau of labor statistics for November was 138.9, as compared with 136.4 in June." In June, 1933, one year before, the index figure was 128.3, which shows an increase since then of 10.6 per cent.

COLORADA FUEL HIRES MEN.

Pueblo, Colo.—The Colorado Fuel and Iron company has reopened its rail mill, resulting in the hiring of 600 additional steel workers. It is stated the mill is starting a seven-weeks' run on a 22,000-ton order received by the company from the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad company.

CARPENTER WORKS AT 100.

Fort Worth, Tex.—On Jan. 15, 1935, W. H. Bilson, local carpenter, will be 100 years of age and he announced in advance that he expected to work as usual on his century anniversary date. Mr. Bilson, whose life has been a veritable "housing program," started at the carpenter trade when he was 14 years old and has worked at the trade for the past eighty-six years.

CHURCHES SEEK STRENGTHENING OF LABOR RULES

Federal Council Urges More Power.

WOULD PROTECT FARM WORKERS

Resolution Demands Extension of "New Deal Provisions.

An appeal for strengthening the authority of national and regional labor boards and also their extension to cover labor relations in large-scale agriculture, such as is found in the Imperial Valley in California, was made public Monday by the executive committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The resolutions, as adopted by the governing body of the church council, were as follows:

Whereas, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has from its beginning contended for the right of labor as well as of employers to organize and deal collectively through representatives of their own choosing as the most hopeful method of assuring orderly, just and co-operative industrial relations; be it

Resolved, That the executive committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, while recognizing that all parties involved—labor, employers and the general public—have rights and liberties which must be conserved, favors the strengthening of the authority and effectiveness of impartial national and regional labor boards.

Whereas, there are to be found especially among migrant workers in agriculture in various parts of the country, particularly low labor standards in wages, hours and working conditions, resulting at times in grave disturbances, in violence, vigilantism and the suppression of civil liberties such as occurred last year in Imperial Valley, California, and in Ohio and other states; be it

Resolved, That the executive committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America feels that the cause of humanity, justice and industrial peace calls for the provision of orderly means for the adjustment of labor relations in such areas. The committee, therefore, favors the extension of the national and regional labor boards or similar machinery to cover employed labor in large-scale agriculture, including migrant workers.

This action by the Federal Council, according to a statement made by Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the council, grew out of an extended study of the situation by Rev. James Myers, industrial secretary.

"UNFAIR LIST" NOT ABOLISHED.

Martinsburg, W. Va.—The Central Labor union here has given consideration to a demand of a citizens' committee that its "unfair list" be abolished and has advised the committee that it cannot act favorably upon any such demand. It is said thirteen local business firms are on the alleged "unfair list."

HUNGARY GETS BUS ORDERS.

Budapest, Hungary.—It is reported that orders for fifty-seven rail busses have been received by Hungarian manufacturers from Argentina and Egypt. The orders will keep 2,000 Hungarian workers out of the unemployed ranks for a year.

Truck Drivers Called to Meet Again Sunday

Local 594 Sponsors Another Open Session at Roosevelt Hall Sunday at 2.

Another open meeting for all white truck drivers in the city is being sponsored by Local 594, Taxi and Truck Drivers, for Sunday afternoon at 2, at Roosevelt hall, and President Simmons expects a great gathering. In a message addressed to the workers President Simmons explains:

"There will be several able speakers to explain the labor movement in Chattanooga and why you should be in the labor movement and a member of some union.

"We want all truck drivers to be present at this meeting.

"This meeting is of vital interest to all truck drivers who are not getting what their time is worth. We are trying to get better working conditions and more pay.

"If the boss is paying you all you are worth and you are satisfied with your present conditions, it would be useless for you to be there. We are trying to help those who are not satisfied with their present conditions.

"Be there and find out how you can better your conditions. Bring all the white truck drivers you can get to come."

Branch 53 Loses Two Loyal Members

Editor Labor World:

Will you please print this in The Labor World? It is regrettable that Branch 53 is losing two of their most loyal members, Misses Catherine Smith and Bessie McCaig, who are leaving for Philadelphia, where they will be employed after Jan. 21. Miss Smith and Miss McCaig have been active and popular members. Although we regret they are leaving, the members of Branch 53 wish them the best of luck.

EDITH SMITH, Secretary.

Warns on Arms At Mine Hearing

Following Miners' Charges of Terrorism, Coal Labor Board Head Threatens to Take Weapons from Witnesses or Spectators.

Pineville, Ky., Jan. 17.—Charles B. Barnes, chairman of the bituminous coal labor board, made it plain that no attempts at intimidation will be tolerated at hearings here on complaint of Harlan county miners against terrorism of operators.

Members of the United Mine Workers of America charged at the first day's hearings that operators had violated wage agreements and sought to intimidate workers by gun play in Harlan county, notorious for its mine operators' bitter anti-unionism. Following the testimony, Barnes, tall, broad-shouldered and white-haired, said slowly and emphatically:

"I may be old and not very strong, but if I know there is a man in this house with a gun I am going to take it off of him."

A moment of silence was broken by a burst of applause.

Previously, in reply to William Turnblazer, district president of the union, who declared that miners feared discharge if they testified before the board, Barnes declared that such action would result in fines or imprisonment for operators.

After two representatives of the United Mine Workers testified as to acts of violence and intimidation of miners by Harlan county deputy sheriffs, Van A. Bittner, labor representative of the board, declared that if Gov. Laffoon failed "to clean up" the county and to remove Sheriff Middleton, President Roosevelt should be asked to take action.

TWO-DAY SESSION TO CONSIDER MANY LABOR PROBLEMS

Child Labor, Compensation, Hours and Wages to Be Discussed.

Governors of Twelve Southern States to Attend. Secretary Perkins, Gov. McAlister on Program of Great Meeting Scheduled for State Capital.

Organized labor leaders from fourteen southern states are called to an emergency council in Nashville Sunday and Monday by George L. Googe, chairman of the American Federation of Labor organization committee in the south, to discuss means of preventing or limiting the use of troops in strike situations and to outline policies or other vital issues relating to the functioning of labor relations and compliance boards in this area. A. C. Kamin and T. R. Cuthbert, president and secretary, respectively, of Central Body, will officially represent the Chattanooga movement.

Mr. Googe has called an executive meeting at the Labor Temple in Nashville on Sunday and a larger meeting on Monday morning. On Sunday afternoon the entire labor group will attend the community meeting in Nashville to be addressed by Miss Frances Perkins, United States secretary of labor.

"I have been instructed by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to make every effort to have a wide and representative attendance from the ranks of labor in the southern states attend the conference which Miss Perkins is calling with the governors of the southern states on the 21st to discuss social security legislation," Mr. Googe told The Labor World.

"Because of the critical nature of the situation which has developed as a result of the misuse of troops as a strikebreaking agency in the Rossville hosiery and other strikes I am calling the responsible labor officials in from the entire south to plan a fight against these illegal and unwarranted tactics. There are other issues which require concerted action at once, especially the question of the breakdown of the effectiveness of labor boards and compliance enforcement agencies in this area. We will certainly be faced with serious strikes again in the near future if governmental bodies are not enabled by peaceful means to force employers to respect Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act and to have codes complied with.

"The trade union movement in the south is vitally

Plan Formation Of Label League By 'Womenfolks'

Crosby Says Meeting to Be Called Soon—Appeals for Purchase Union Goods.

E. E. Crosby, chairman of the label committee of Central Body, said this week the committee is planning formation of a Woman's Trade Union league for Chattanooga, and much encouragement has already been received on behalf of the movement.

Mr. Crosby pointed out that such organizations have been successful in other communities, and with the unusually large number of ladies now carrying union cards in Chattanooga, he predicted one of the most effective leagues of this character in the country, when the organization "gets going."

Appealing for purchase of union-labeled articles, Mr. Crosby said:

"Help your brother keep his card by buying the products he produces. Make more work for a union brother and that will encourage the merchants to handle more labeled goods for the ones that want to buy them. Do not merely be a card man or woman, but a real unionist.

"Some of the older union members can see the progress the label is making and it is a little easier to obtain them, but there is not enough demand and use of the label yet.

"If you can't find an ad in The Labor World for the union articles you want get in touch with someone on the label committees and they will help you get it.

"Plans are now being made to call a meeting in the near future for forming a Woman's Union Label league so the wives, husbands, sons and daughters of the members of organized labor can belong to a union and have more people demanding the union work card and label."

ORIGINAL ENGRAVER.

The engraving of book plates has become an important industry in America, employing several thousands of union workmen. A recent inquiry revealed that the first American book plate of which there is record was engraved by Nathaniel Hurd, of Boston, for Thomas Dering, away back in the year 1740.

For a whole hour the captain had been lecturing his men on the "duties of a soldier," and he thought that now the time had come for him to test the results of his discourse.

Captain: "Private Murphy, why should a soldier be ready to die for his country?"

Private Murphy (a smile flitting across his face): "Shure, captain, you are quite right. Why should he?"

If he remembers the bicycle built for two, he is old enough to be your grandfather.

Reaction Busy for Child Labor

Announcement by Senator Fletcher Morgan, of Hamilton county, that he will oppose ratification of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution was deplored by local citizens who had hoped that the entire Hamilton delegation would heed the strong plea of President Roosevelt and the recommendation of Gov. McAlister in favor of that progressive bit of proposed legislation.

Chattanoogans who visited the capital city this week declared all the forces of reaction and anti-Rooseveltism in this section appear to be mobilizing to defeat the amendment, and thus keep Tennessee in the class of backward states which consistently refuse any progressive legislation. The time-worn "arguments" against the amendment are being used by opponents—the farmer's boy will not be allowed to do the chores, the daughter cannot wash the dishes or sweep the floor if the amendment is passed, and various similar silly twaddle shrewdly designed to impress the rural legislator and the uninformed.

Twenty states have already ratified the proposed amendment, but sixteen more are necessary, in order that it may have the two-thirds majority as required for proposed amendments.

Now comes the good news that labor is being backed in this fight of the people by the national non-partisan committee for ratification of the child labor amendment, recently formed in New York. Charles C. Burlingame, ex-president of the New York City bar, is president of the committee and members include: Newton D. Baker, Samuel Seabury, Senator Robert F. Wagner, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Dean Roscoe Pound, Bishop Francis J. McConnell and Miss Grace Abbott. This committee also announces it will fight for ratification in 1935. Technical objections raised some time ago by the American Bar association were overcome by legal opinions of members of this committee.

Hope for success of the drive for ratification is brightened also by indorsement by twenty-seven governors of states, twelve of them in states which have not yet voted to ratify.

Ratification has been strongly urged by President Roosevelt as "the obvious method of maintaining the present gains" achieved under NRA codes.

Social Security on the Way!

President Roosevelt's Committee on Social Security is reported to have drafted three distinct social security measures for the immediate consideration of Congress. It is practically assured that others will follow later. The three to be recommended for prompt passage are: (1) Unemployment insurance, (2) Old-age pensions, (3) Widows' pensions.

It is understood in advance of official announcement that the following plans will be recommended:

1. Unemployment insurance, to be partially financed by the Federal Government through a payroll tax not exceeding 2 per cent. The money would be paid as a partial subsidy to states adopting laws conforming to a Federal standard.

2. Old-age pensions, to be operated under state laws with a partial subsidy from the Government on a matching basis. Funds for this subsidy would be drawn from a $100,000,000 appropriation which the President is expected to ask.

3. Widows' pensions on the same basis as old-age pensions, with funds provided by the same $100,000,000 appropriation.

Organized labor as represented by the American Federation of Labor is vitally interested in the whole subject of social security. The A. F. of L. has had a staff of experts making a careful study of all phases of social security and its representatives will be in position to render valuable aid in securing the right kind of laws.

It is gratifying to millions of people to know that social security is really "on the way!" It is a long-delayed blessing to humanity.

The Electric Age Coming

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company reports 1934 the best year in its history for sales of electrical appliances. Sales ran 73 per cent. above those of the previous year; and a very high percentage of those sales are for domestic equipment. Yet the company expects to sell 40 per cent. more electric refrigerators this year than it did last.

Which inspires two reflections.

First, the prophets from Senator Norris on, who have been saying that the American people are ready to use almost any amount of electric current if they can get it at a proper price, are being justified in their predictions. Indeed, they have helped to bring those predictions about. The TVA is not only a unique and so far amazingly successful social experiment; but as a salesman of electrical wares, it stands alone.

Speaking about the brains of Big Business, it is a joke that the first men in this country to slash electric rates on a large scale and insist on cheaper electric devices for the home were the college professors of the TVA, not at all the financiers of Wall Street.

But the other reflection inspired is not so comfortable. No one grudges the Westinghouse any decent measure of prosperity. But no one who has given much thought to the matter can doubt that electricity still sells too high over most of America; or that the difference between the cost of manufacture of electrical equipment, and its cost to the housewife, is simply enormous.

The high cost of selling is still with us.

Mars Raising Taxes Again

Mars grunted and snored in his uneasy sleep a short time ago; and the President of the United States asked Congress for $792,000,000 for the army and navy in the fiscal year beginning July 1 next. This is $180,000,000 more than has been set aside for the two services in the present fiscal year; and $312,000,000 more than was put to the same use last year.

President Roosevelt is not an alarmist; not a jingo. He is obliged to seek staggering sums from Congress for domestic relief; and would not be human if he did not wish to save on other matters. Yet he asks the largest military appropriations ever sought in peace time. Why?

Evidently, Mars is stirring. One disquieting circumstance is known to all. Japan has denounced the treaty by which herself and Britain and the United States limited naval armaments. But there are still almost two years before that treaty expires; and one would think it might be possible to negotaite a new agreement in that time.

One thing is sure: The increased military and naval appropriations make it more important than ever to carry on the Senate investigations of the munitions industry, so well launched by Senator Nye. If we are going to spend such sums on armaments, we should see that we at least get our money's worth, and that no war profiteers are boosting their expected gains by stimulating scares.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Congress is in session and congress is going to threaten to do all manner of things. Some it will do, some it will not do.

For example, it may do things to the order issued by Judge Grubb in Alabama, who issued an order stipulating that Alabama cities must secure his permission before they get PWA loans, on the ground that public plants would competo with the Alabama Power company.

That's a nice howdy. Judge Grubb is a federal judge and maybe something can be done by congress to get the judge's mind off the Alabama Power company. Stranger things have happened.

Congress may find time to get around to Judge Grubb and of course there are those in TVA who will make it their business to agitate that way.

Of a different complexion will be the fight over wages. Strangely enough, the president, proposing his enormous public works program, said that wages on such projects should be less than wages in surrounding employment.

If the program goes into operation the government will be about the biggest employer in the country. If the president's idea is carried out the government would become the payer of the lowest wages.

Wouldn't that be a nice new deal?

Maybe the president spoke without thinking through to the end of the trail on that issue.

But the building trades know what it means and they are ready to take the warpath to protect standards that have been a half century and more in the building.

Who wants to see the government setting a backward pace which all employers would do their level best to follow?

That way lies despair and disillusionment.

The president's birthday is to be celebrated throughout the nation. Labor is playing a great part.

The date is Jan. 30. Of the proceeds, 70 per cent will go to local institutions, under the direction of local committees, for the treatment of infantile paralysis victims. Thirty per cent will be used in research under direction of a national commission appointed by the president.

The president, a victim of infantile paralysis, gladly gives his name so that other sufferers must be helped. It is a noble thing in which labor gladly does its part.

Infantile paralysis knows no boundaries; it strikes without regard to race, creed, color or previous condition of servitude.

Labor last year brought fine credit to itself; it will do likewise this year.

Various arguments are advanced against the proposed 30-hour week.

Opponents say it won't work.

Possibly nobody can completely prove that it will work.

But this we know: Nothing else has worked.

Unemployment is not reduced materially. The average of all factory hours today is but slightly over thirty.

But if hours are cut, wages must stay where they are. There has been enough sharing of poverty.

It is time to share plenty.

Why doesn't someone figure out a recovery program based upon the use of plenty—plenty of machinery, plenty of materials, plenty of transport and the employment of plenty of idle workers.

Wouldn't that be interesting?

N. Y. Newspaper Workers Win Strike

Guild Reaches Agreement With Jewish Daily and Telegraph Agency — Newark Strikers Backed at Big Mass Meeting.

New York City, Jan. 17.—Striking employes of the Jewish Daily Bulletin and the Jewish Telegraph agency won a four-day walkout and returned to work under an agreement between the New York Newspaper Guild and Jacob Landau, publisher of the paper and managing director of the agency. Landau agreed to pay the employes $1,363 in back wages and promised reinstatement of all employes.

A new detailed contract between Landau and the Guild will provide the five-day week, a guild preferential shop and the setting up of a grievance committee for the settlement of disputes.

Newark, N. J.—The cause of the striking editorial workers of the Newark Ledger, who quit work in November, was championed at a big mass meeting held here by the Newark Newspaper Guild and the Essex Trades council. Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild, and others spoke. A telegram from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, expressed deep interest in the strike and expressed the hope that "collective bargaining and economic justice" would be won.

ELEVEN STATES GET $1,418,100.

Washington.—Twenty-two construction projects in eleven states will be made possible by PWA loans and grants totaling $2,418,100, it is announced by the public works administration. Officials estimated that the funds would give 15,533 man-months of direct employment in the eleven states concerned, and a greater amount of indirect employment where materials will be produced, in transportation, etc.

NAMED LABOR MEMBER.

Washington.—I. M. Ornburn, president of the Cigar Makers' International union, has been chosen labor representative on the cigar manufacturing industry's labor complaint board.

COURT SETS BARBER PRICES.

Chicago.—Under a court order issued here, barbers cannot charge less than 25 cents for a shave or 50 cents for a haircut, the level fixed by the Master Barbers' association.

A Nickel at a Time—

IT costs a few cents a day to have a telephone—but it costs as much or more to try to do without it.

You pay for doing without a telephone a nickel at a time. Instead of calling the grocer or druggist, you have to make a trip. If you must get in touch with a friend, you have to go in person or send a message. And in bad weather, such trips are none too pleasant.

When an emergency comes and you want a doctor, fireman or the police QUICK—a few minutes delay may be costly. You would give a lot then for a telephone...

Let the telephone go to work for you right away. Just get in touch with the telephone business office, or any telephone employe you know. Then make a check, if you like, and you will find your telephone more than pays its way in convenience, comfort and protection.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demend exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of unior meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

STRIKE UP THE BAND

A social event which is expected to make the recent English royal wedding seem like a garden party will embrace more than 5,600 American communities on the night of January 30, when the entire nation will celebrate President Roosevelt's fifty-third birthday anniversary with dances for the benefit of infantile paralysis victims throughout the country. More than four million persons and every important orchestra in the country are expected to take part. Above (center) is a typical Birthday Ball gathering, assembled under the auspices of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas at Kansas City last year. Insert (upper right) some New York social registrites laying plans for the Waldorf Astoria Birthday Ball in New York City. Left to right — Laura Brown, Lucretia Osborn, Doris Terhune and Pamela Prime, popular members of New York's younger set. Upper left, some of the infantile paralysis victims who will benefit by the parties. The girls pictured here, hospital attaches, were stricken with 137 co-workers during their heroic fight against the recent epidemic in Los Angeles. Seventy cents of every dollar raised this year will be retained by local communities to rehabilitate infantile paralysis victims. Thirty per cent will be turned over to a Birthday Ball Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research, appointed by the President, and under the chairmanship of Col. Henry L. Doherty, who is also national chairman of the 1935 Birthday Ball.

RAILROAD LABOR PRESSES DEMAND FOR LAW TO SET SIX-HOUR WORKDAY

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Representatives of railroad labor, meeting here, vigorously reiterated their demand for the six-hour day and other measures to increase employment on the railroads.

"Any program that has for its purpose the improvement of the efficiency of the railroad industry must comprehend a progressive shortening of the workday without any reduction in compensation," the Railway Labor Executives' association declared.

The association also announced that it would support bills to provide larger train crews, to limit the length of trains, to strengthen the liability claims of employes against the railroads, to cut maximum hours of duty from sixteen to twelve and to provide more adequate maintenance of tracks and more adequate supervision of signals.

Eastman Warning Disregarded.

The renewed declaration for the six-hour day came after the meeting had listened to a warning against its program, given by Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation. Immediately afterward George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks and chairman of the meeting, read the opinion of the executive committee and declared that Eastman's statement would have no effect on the legislative program of the railway labor organizations.

"Their program has been introduced in congress and every possible effort will be directed toward securing its enactment into law during the present session," Harrison said.

More Jobs Vital Need.

In reiterating its stand for the six-hour day and other measures, the railway labor executives said:

"Railway labor now witnesses the fifth winter of the depression, with but little improvement in economic conditions. Their fellow-workers are still unemployed and many of them working only part time. To contemplate the institution of any program which will bring about further reduction in railway employment will only increase the suffering and misery now prevalent among the workers.

"Economic conditions will not be improved by a further loss of work opportunities. A shrinkage of rail facilities with a continuation of present policies and practices will intensify our difficulties.

"Railway labor believes that recovery of our industry must depend upon enlarging employment opportunities, reorganization of financially unsound carriers, regulation of competing forms of transportation and rehabilitation and modernization of the industry, so that it may furnish the character of service desired by the traveling and shipping public and a general revival of business.

"The shortening of the workday in the railroad industry would extend a ray of hope to approximately 1,000,000 railway employes who comprise one of the largest units of the national army of unemployed and would constitute a substantial contribution to the national industrial recovery program."

MINE UNION ASKS COAL BE MADE PUBLIC UTILITY

Washington, Jan. 17.—The United Mine Workers of America will propose to congress that the coal industry be given a utility status and thus subjected to strict government regulation, President John L. Lewis, of the union, announces.

The union measure, drawn up by Henry Warrum, general counsel of the organization, provides:

1. Creation of a commission to administer standards and rules fixed by congress as the industry is placed on a utility basis.
2. Fixing of minimum and maximum prices.
3. Allocation of production through tonnage quotas.
4. Collective bargaining.
5. A "reasonable" standard of wages and hours.
6. Just and adequate returns to investors.

In making public the union's proposal, President Lewis praised the conclusions of the national resources board on the coal industry and said these conclusions were embodied in the bill. The union had been assured that hundreds of substantial coal operators would support the bill, he said.

Playing Both Ends Against Middle

Cooleemee, N. C., Jan. 17.—Mill managements in this section of North Carolina are capitalizing to their own interest both the crop limitation payments of the federal government to farmers and the relief rolls of the federal relief administration. Workers who live in mill villages are being put on part time or laid off entirely, and left to depend on federal relief for a subsistence, while the mills replace them with nearby farmers.

These farmers have been the recipients this year of crop limitation checks from the government. Many of them for the first time in years have accounts with banks. They are being offered jobs in the mills, and generally at lower wages than are paid to workers living in the mill settlements and usually with an increase in the work load.

This in effect means lower payrolls for the mills, for the farmer who lives on his own nearby land and has the prospect next year of a crop limitation check from the government is not very particular as to the amount of "extra money" he earns during the winter by work in a cotton mill. Some of these mill worker-farmers this winter are banking the money paid to them in wages by the mills.

Meantime, the federal relief administration is meeting the cost of displaced workers who, without farms to turn to and dependent only on their mill jobs for a livelihood, must seek funds from the government to supplement their entirely inadequate part-time wages or cessation of wages altogether.

PREDICTS 10% INCREASE

New York.—Douglas G. Woolf, editor of the "Textile World," predicts a 10% increase in textile mill activities during 1935. "This is a conservative estimate," Woolf stated. "If it proves reasonably correct, it will mean that 1935 will be a 'normal' year, based on the 1923-1925 average."

"No towels or soap were issued for three days and even then not enough to go around. Only two meals a day were served and everyone was forced to stand up to eat. Letters written by the prisoners to their families have not been delivered. MORE ABOUT CONFERENCE interested in the conference Miss Perkins is calling on social legislation and we are planning to launch the most vigorous drive in our history to have southern representatives in congress vote for social security bills; at the same time we shall attempt to co-ordinate our fight for concurrent, or similar, measures in the state legislatures. It is high time that the southern states modernize their laws for the protection of human rights.

"In view of the fact that the labor representatives will be coming to Nashville for Miss Perkins' conference with the governors we are seizing the opportunity to hold a conference on the menacing situation which now confronts the workers in the south.

"For months past organized labor in the south has been fighting the communist on the one hand, who is opposed to our American constitutional democracy, and on the other hand we have been obliged to contend with the high-handed and selfish employer who takes the position that the law was written in his special interest. Now we find ourselves attacked from a new quarter. Certain public officials who should maintain a policy of neutrality as between employers and labor have thrown the whole weight of government on the side of employers and against workers seeking to better intolerable and anti-social conditions of employment. It is absolutely essential that public opinion be so informed and aroused as to cause state and local governmental officers to live up to their pledges to administer the law in the interests of the entire population and not for any group or for any financial or employing interests."

CAPITAL UNIONISTS PREPARE FOR SESSIONS.

Nashville, Jan. 18.—Labor will be well represented at the conference of the governors and commissioners of labor at Nashville Jan. 20 and 21, during which W. E. Jacobs, commissioner of labor for Tennessee, has arranged for Frances Perkins, U. S. secretary of labor and first woman cabinet member, to give a public address in the War Memorial auditorium next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, instead of 7:30 p.m., as was originally announced.

The change in the time of the address, which will be community-wide in nature and the principal one delivered by Secretary Perkins during her visit here for the Southern Labor conference, was made in order that church services might continue as usual. Mr. Jacobs said.

Secretary Perkins will talk on "Labor Legislation and Economic Security," interpreting President Roosevelt's attitude toward the important new deal subjects.

Gov. Hill McAlister will also speak at the meeting. Mr. Jacobs will preside.

Sessions of the conference, to which the governors and commissioners of labor of the twelve southern states have been invited, will be held at the Hermitage hotel Monday. Each of the twelve governors will send an official delegation and in addition there will be 400 delegates to represent the American Federation of Labor in the south, Commissioner Jacobs said.

Child labor, minimum wages, hours of labor, workmen's compensation, occupational diseases, and unemployment insurance will be among the subjects discussed. An official delegation from each of the states will be present and will take definite action in regard to proposed state legislation to aid in the carrying out of the national labor and economic security programs.

The conference sessions will last all day Monday, with Secretary Perkins speaking again at a luncheon at the Hermitage hotel at 1 p.m. Monday night the official delegates appointed by the various governors will meet to take action on the matters discussed.

The meeting is being held by the division of labor standards of the U. S. department of labor and is the first of a series to be held throughout the nation. It is a follow-up of the Atlanta conference of two years ago and is expected to result in definite movements in regard to labor standards in the southern states.

Secretary Perkins, who is chairman of the president's committee on economic security, in her speech Sunday afternoon will interpret the President's viewpoint on this subject, and also his desires in regard to various pieces of labor legislation.

Round Table Talk Removes Strike Threat

Mill President Picks Arbiter to Make Impartial Decision; Bosses and Workers "Pulling Together."

Shelby, N. C., Jan. 17.—Mark up a victory for friendly conference and negotiation, for in Shelby this week was a victory that is epochal!

The result: A threatened strike dissipated. The management has demonstrated its fairness and good faith, and won the confidence of its employes in a greater measure than it has ever enjoyed. The employes have convincing evidence of the good faith of the managers from President Earl Hamrick down, and they have gone to work with a will, determined to make better quality cloth, get the maximum production, and help the mill make profits and have a successful year.

They have a slogan: No more depression for this mill; we all pull together.

It happened at the Eton mill, where trouble was imminent and a strike in prospect for the next morning. The management proposed to increase the work load, and there was a pay reduction in sight. Eight weavers would have lost their jobs. And then President Hamrick, with Overseers Quinn and Abercrombie, met with a union shop committee consisting of P. L. Davis, chairman; George Robertson, G. W. Frye and Paul R. Christopher, of the United Textile Workers of America.

In discussing the differences, President Hamrick made the proposal that Christopher, who is an expert weaver, go into the mill the next morning and weave on the looms himself, and make the decision as to the number of looms which each weaver should operate.

"We have confidence in Christopher and believe he will make a fair decision and we will abide by it," said Hamrick.

The committee accepted the offer, and next morning Christopher in his work clothes entered the mill at 6:30. He watched the weavers closely, and helped to pick-out, make start-ups, change the filling, draw in the ends, and all the other things that go with weaving. He counted the pick clock readings hourly, and checked the actual readings with what they should be.

Christopher tried to be fair to the management and fair to the workers. He knew the importance of his decision—what it would mean to the management and to the workers, and its effect in eliminating feeling of hostility on both sides at this time and in the future. He considered the effect of his decision on profits to the management, and what the work load would mean in production, both in quality and quantity, and in keeping men and women at work.

Christopher hoped that a strike could be avoided, for he realized the hostility and bitterness that would grow out of it. He studied the movements of each weaver, and the skill and rapidity with which they performed their tasks. After nearly four hours the management and the workers agreed that he had had enough time to make his decision.

Then he carefully explained his position to the management and to the workers, and his desire to be fair to each of them. He did not believe the work load should be increased, and he felt the change in pay unjustified as viewed from the tasks the weavers were performing. The management and the workers accepted all the points he laid down, and his decision went into effect.

The mill is humming along, the workers determined that the quality of its production shall be the best and that it shall have a good year. And they are "strong" for President Hamrick and his two overseers. "We are all pulling together," is the slogan, and there is a will behind it.

TWENTY-FIFTH YEAR!

With this issue, the American Federation of Labor Weekly News Service enters upon its twenty-fifth year of service to the labor press and to the labor movement of America.

Throughout the past twenty-four years, the service has never missed an issue and it has consistently presented each week a summary of the outstanding news and views affecting the interests of all wage-earners.

There are a number of labor publications that have received the service ever since it was started, while many new ones have been added. The service has been pronounced as of very material benefit to all of these publications and as a vital factor in the sound progress of the great American labor movement.

To have served its mission so faithfully so long is ample reward for those concerned in its production and ample proof of the wisdom of the 1910 convention of the American Federation of Labor, which established it.

After the Strike

A member of the hosiery workers on strike at the Richmond Hosiery mills offers the following sidelight on the situation there. To the tune of "After the Ball," this trades unionist presents his viewpoint:

A little girl climbed an old man's knee,
Begged for a story, do papa, please!
Why are you lonely? Why are you sad?
Why do the workers call you a scab?
I'll tell it all, dear, I was to blame,
I was in with them until trouble came,
Then I thought it best, dear, to turn a scab,
Best to return, dear, to the job I had.

CHORUS

After the strike is over,
After the battle is won,
After the strikers return to their jobs
And the city gets rid of the scum,
Many a heart will be aching,
Although their hope seemed bright,
And many a scab will vanish,
After the strike.

Brave workers striking, standing side by side,
Striking for justice, striking with pride.
I was in with them—with them heart and soul,
But when the test came I left them in the cold.
I could not stand it with the yellow streak I had,
So that's why the workers call me a scab.

CHORUS

After the strike is over,
After the battle is won,
After a few politicians
Consider the work they have done,
Many a heart wil be aching,
Although their hope seemed bright,
Many of them will vanish,
After the strike.

The blonde, says a Baltimore investigator of racial types, is on the way out. Very well, hand us our hat.

We are 100% for the Labor Movement, and for the improvement of working conditions.
We have been for, and growing with, the Labor Movement for 20 years.
Just ask your old time brother union man.

Martin Francis Ryan, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America and treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, whose photo appears in the above group, died at his home in Kansas City Thursday, Jan. 17. Death was attributed to congestion of the lungs.

The deceased is survived by his widow, a married daughter and two sons, to whom the heartfelt sympathy of thousands of staunch friends in all walks of life is sorrowfully extended.

Martin Francis Ryan was born in Coldwater, Doddridge county, West Virginia, Oct. 23, 1874. He was educated in the public schools. Upon leaving school, he took up railroading as his life's work and promptly joined the union of his chosen craft, the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America.

His extensive and loyal service in the ranks of the union resulted in his election as a member of the executive board of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, in 1903. He was elected as general president of the organization in 1909 and held this very important office continuously until his death.

Martin Francis Ryan served continuously as a member of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor since 1923, and served as treasurer since 1928.

He was a prominent member of the Railway Labor Executives' association, which represents railroad workers in negotiations with the management of railroads. He was also treasurer of the Union Labor Life Insurance since 1927.

Mr. Ryan was appointed by President Wilson to serve as a member of the first labor mission to Great Britain and France, in 1918. He was a delegate to the Pan-American Federation of Labor convention, in Mexico City, Mexico, in 1924, along with President Samuel Gompers, of the A. F. of L., and was with President Gompers when he died while returning on that eventful trip.

Martin Francis Ryan, a big man with an ever jolly disposition, was generally regarded as one of the most able executives in the organized labor movement of America. His friends were legion and his popularity unsurpassed.

Labor officials, including officers of the American Federation of Labor, the various railroad brotherhoods, and many others, were in Kansas City on Monday of this week to attend the funeral of their late fellow-worker and well beloved brother, whose passing is deeply mourned by all.

BIRTHDAY BALL WILL BLANKET ENTIRE NATION

Labor Co-operation to Be General.

CENTRAL BODIES REPORT ACTION

Last Year's Records May Be Surpassed by Workers' Interest.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Plans for the birthday ball for the president moved into their final stages this week, with but a few more days to go.

The great national event takes place on the night of Jan. 30, with more than twice as many cities entertained as last year. Labor participation is expected to about equal last year's record, with some slight chance of passing that record by a small margin.

Secretary Matthew Woll, of the labor advisory committee, urged all cities that have not yet reported labor participation to do so at once.

President William Green is following the reports closely and is anxious for the fullest measure of labor participation.

Labor Representation Important.

It is pointed out that, since 70 per cent of the funds raised will be spent locally, it is important that labor representatives either become members of the general committee in each community, or organize their own birthday ball committee. That 70 per cent spent locally will be expended under direction of the committee which guided its raising, "I am afraid many communities do not yet realize the importance of this," said Secretary Woll.

Among cities where labor is active and where elaborate plans have been made are Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago. In Detroit labor is conducting its own ball, planning to beat its own record of a year ago by a wide margin.

Credentials for Labor Chairman.

Labor participation in nearly 300 cities has been reported to headquarters of the labor division, birthday ball for the president, in charge of Matthew Woll, secretary, in the Carpenters' building, Washington. The ball forms a network across the country, including practically every one of the larger cities and many of the towns and villages. No community is too small.

Beautiful parchment credentials are being issued to all labor chairmen direct from national headquarters in New York, on the suggestion of Secretary Woll, of the labor division. Many cities have not yet reported the name of their chairman, so credentials cannot be sent, but as rapidly as names of chairmen are sent to labor headquarters credentials will be forwarded. In most cases these undoubtedly will be framed as souvenirs of particularly attractive character.

Closed Session To Be Held By Central Body

Regular session of Central Body Monday night will be closed to all except accredited delegates, officers announced Friday morning, and a matter which requires to mature consideration of all members will come up for disposition. Nature of the business to be discussed was not divulged, but it was said it involves the welfare of every local in the immediate future.

Local 1785 To Hold General Meet at Central

Local 1785, United Textile Workers of America, will hold its monthly general meeting Saturday night at 7, at Central High school auditorium. Officers of the local asked The Labor World to urge that all members be present, as business of importance will be discussed.

Organize Over Million Workers in South Under NRA

Googe Declares Workers Must Co-operate for Success of Program.

Following are the highlights in an address by George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, before the Nashville conference Monday:

"Over a million workers have been organized into more than 1,600 new labor unionsin the south since the NRA. The vast majority of these new members are sticking and are fast becoming steadfast trade unionists."

"The social and political significance of this great new labor movement in the south cannot be overestimated. The results of the state and national elections in November, 1934, proved that the educational activities of the organized labor movement is fast increasing the number of liberals elected to public office. The south has been held beck in the past by some political leaders who have too often been thoroughly reactionary in their economic and social policies while using liberal sounding phrases in their campaign speeches."

"The fact that a group of southern governors declared in favor of the ratification of the federal child labor amendment in their inaugural messages this week is to a great extent due to the activities of organized labor.

'The success of the social security program in the southern states depends to a great extent on the progress which the labor movement is able to make in this region during the next two years. Some measures of social insurance may be more or less forced on backward states by the action of the United States congress, but the southern states will not permanently and effectively modernize their laws protecting workers until the labor movement is permitted to operate freely and is able to perform its real function, that of enlightening the masses."

"The organized labor movement will strain every effort to achieve passage of the president's social security program, but we must point out that the best system of social insurance would be used oppressively when administered by some of the political racketeers who now hold office in certain southern states.

"All liberals throughout the south should open their eyes to very real danger which confronts us in some sections where corrupt reactionaries, masking as friends of the poor man, now wield terrific power by playing

RICHMOND STRIKERS RELATE TALES OF BRUTAL TREATMENT IN GEORGIA 'BULL PEN' PRISON

Stories of Barbarous Indignities and Insults to Women Victims Related Before Nashville Meeting—400 Delegates Resolve to Extend Organization in South—Secretary of Labor Urges Action in Support of President's Plans for Social Security—Mine Workers Recall "Gun Rule" in Coal Fields, Warning of More Serious Disorders Threatened as Result.

GEORGIA OFFICERS REPLACE MILITIA AS STRIKEBREAKERS?

Charges that Georgia peace officers, including the sheriff and many deputies at Rossville, are replacing the Georgia army in efforts to terrorize strikers at the main plant of the Richmond Hosiery mills were made by officials of the Hosiery Workers' union Friday.

It was charged that strikers are being arrested indiscriminately, on flimsy charges, and held in the Georgia jail, and various other uncalled-for indignities are being heaped upon them by the officers.

Morale of the strikers, however, it was announced, was never better, and despite many handicaps and struggles, their determination to secure justice before returning to their jobs is increasing daily.

Nashville, Jan. 24.—The organization drize throughout the south must be extended and strike action, if need be, will be resorted to by the vast new membership of the American Federation of Labor Unions, numbering between 800,000 and a million workers enrolled since NRA, to force laborhating southern employers and their political tools to cease warfare against the union movement.

This was the vital resolve adopted by the emergency conference, attended by over 400 delegates from fourteen southern states, called by President Green through his southern representative, George L. Googe, which met here Sunday and Monday.

The labor conference was primarily called to have unionist delegates attend the social security meet which Miss Frances Perkins, of the United States department of labor, arranged here with the governors of the southern states to adopt a uniform program of social security and protective labor legislation in this area.

More than forty trade union officials attended Miss Perkins' conference as official delegates representing the governors of their respective states, and over 400 in all attended both meetings.

Highlights of the conference called by Mr. Googe was the adoption of plans for militant action to win labor's rights in the south, but at the same time the labor groups undertook to throw their full weight and force back of a drive for a rounded program of security legislation to be pushed in congress and in the several state legislatures. The majority of southern states are in session at this time and, as a result of the political activities of the newly organized workers in the November elections the attitude of several of the governors and legislatures now going into office is very much more favorable towards labor's legislative program than has ever been the case in the past. In West Virginia thirty-three unionists, twenty-five of whom were miners, were elected to the legislature and five unionists to the state senate, it was reported.

The labor conference adopted formal resolutions in which the administration was solemnly warned in carefully phrased language that unless employers are compelled by legal means to obey Section 7-A of the recovery act that widespread strikes are bound to take place in the south.

In vigorous terms the delegates demanded legislation by the United States congress that will make it difficult or impossible for reactionary southern governors, acting as agents for anti-union manufacturers, to use militia as strikebreaking forces. Richmond hosiery strikers from Rossville, Ga., came to the conference and told of the barbarous treatment they had undergone at the hands of Georgia national guards in the detention camps in Rossville and Atlanta. Girl strikers told of indecent suggestions made to them by guard officers. Boys who had been thrown in the bull pen told how they had been tricked by guard officers into signing papers which delayed efforts of counsel for the Georgia State Federation of Labor in bringing habeas corpus proceedings before the U. S. district court in Atlanta.

District presidents of the United Mine Workers in telling a dramatic story of continued "gun rule and murderous attacks on union organizers in infamous Harlan county, Kentucky, declared that the most serious sort of guerilla warfare might break out in that district unless mine operators were forced to disarm and discharge the deputies who now control the mine field by force of

Purchasing Power Must Be Raised, Gov. Earle Says

Pennsylvania's New Chief Executive Declares for Program of Labor Reform Designed to Create Increased Market.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 24.—A hot attack on special privilege and a pledge to support a program designed to increase the purchasing power of the masses featured the inaugural address of George H. Earle, sworn in as the first democratic governor in Pennsylvania in forty years. Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, took office as lieutenant-governor with Earle.

Gov. Earle assailed special privilege as responsible in part for the plight of the state during the depression years and promised to lead a fight for "new ground."

"For the next four years, and I hope I speak loudly enough to be heard in Wall Street, it's 'hands off Harrisburg,'" Earle warned.

The new governor urged a graduated state income tax as the remedy for what he described as the present "grossly unfair" taxation system.

The governor expressed a belief in "the profit motive" and in "private ownership" as providing "the only basis for our present civilization and its future progress," but he said the fact could not be escaped that "today private ownership means the 'ownership' of nothing by the majority of our citizens."

"We must create new markets by increased purchasing power to the customers of industry, the masses who labor in field, factory and store," he added. "Minimum wage laws, abolition of sweatshops, protection of the right of unionization, decent workmen's compensation laws and unemployment insurance are but a few of the lines on which this fight must be won. Child labor must never return."

Earle said he believed in "work relief rather than the dole" and pledged his administration's co-operation in an "intensified relief program."

CHURCHES FILE ANOTHER PLEA FOR CHILDREN

Again Urge Passage of Amendment.

CALL ATTENTION TO RESOLUTION

Quote President Roosevelt in Appeal to State Lawmakers.

Critical weeks lie before the country in the decision as to whether child labor shall be permanently abolished in America.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, at its biennial convention in Dayton, Ohio, last month, adopted the following resolution in support of the federal child labor amendment:

Whereas, Christianity has always surrounded the child with special tenderness and solicitude,; and,

Whereas, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has for many years advocated the abolition of child labor; and,

Whereas, substantial progress toward that end has been made under the national recovery administration and the codes, and it is apparent that the obvious method of making permanent improvement in child labor conditions is through ratification of the national child labor amendment; be it

Resolved, That the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America reaffirm its previous declarations in favor of the abolition of child labor and urge the speedy ratification of the national child labor amendment by the states.

The federal child labor amendment, which is merely an enabling act giving congress power to "limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age," was passed by congress in 1924 by a vote of 297 to 69 in the house of representatives and 61 to 23 in the senate. It had the indorsement of both political parties and presidential candidates.

The amendment was deemed necessary, if there were to be federal control of this evil, because two federal child labor laws, one passed in 1916 and the second in 1919, had both been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court of the United States. Experience under these two federal laws, before they were declared unconstitutional, showed that federal control gave protection to many thousands of children who were not reached by state laws.

Child labor has been temporarily abolished in the major industries of the country under the NRA codes, but President Roosevelt has urged ratification of the child labor amendment as the obvious method for making permanent the child labor provisions of the codes. In a letter (Nov. 8, 1934), to the national child labor committee, he said:

"One of the accomplishments under the national recovery act which has given me the greatest gratification is the outlawing of child labor. It shows how simply a long desired reform, which no individual or state could accomplish alone, may be brought about when people work together. It is my desire that the advances attained through NRA be made permanent. In the child labor field the obvious method of maintaining the present gains is through ratification of the child labor amendment. I hope this may be achieved."

The amendment has now been ratified by twenty states—Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin. Sixteen more ratifications are necessary before it becomes part of the constitution. The legislatures of twenty-four states which have not ratified are meeting in 1935 and will be called upon to consider ratification. They are as follows: Alabama, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Maryland, Massachu-

Lady Says She Took CARDUI for Cramps; Was Soon Relieved

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. The President's Ball

Next on the calendar is the birthday ball for the president. In thousands of cities and towns—even in little hamlets tucked away in the hills and mountains—there will be birthday balls.

It is a good custom. One hour of radio binds all together in one tremendous national celebration.

It will be a time to forget, as far as we can, the things that otherwise trouble us. It will be a time to felicitate a man whose burdens are great and a time to help a great cause. Because of this birthday ball thousands of sufferers will be helped and, it is hoped, finally the cause of their suffering may be found so that future generations may be spared the lives of cripples.

Because the president was stricken with infantile paralysis this great effort is being made. Last year a great foundation was set up. This year each community will benefit—YOUR home town—and those in your town who have been stricken. Their care will be helped. And a great research fund will be set up to hunt the cause. It will be one of the greatest hunts of all history.

Labor is playing a big part; it will have credit for what is achieved.

This is a battle no one wants to be out of, no one wants to miss being in. This is one of those battles to which men and women go gladly. It is just a battle to help sufferers and to prevent more suffering. What battle could better fit the spirit of labor?

Into this great battle steps the Postal Telegraph company, for a service unique and interesting. For 25 cents it will send a name from any point to be added among thousands of others, as a signer of a great birthday greeting to the president.

To this service Postal gives the services of its 2,000 offices, its managers and bookkeepers and its telegraph operators, many of whom are union operators. And Postal gives the whole 25 cents —ALL OF IT—to the president's national research fund to use in the fight to STOP infantile paralysis. That's going some. Not a penny is taken out for anybody anywhere!

What makes this the more pleasant for union members is that Postal is friendly—a union man can work for Postal and hold up his head and Postal has no fake company union scheme.

At this hour the records show twice as many birthday balls arranged as last year.

It's goign to be a great day, this Jan. 30, which is the president's birthday.

President Green and Vice-President Matthew Woll, as chairman and secretary of labor's committee, have worked hard and they have had fine co-operation.

In the midst of all the turmoil there's a lot of warmth left in this wobbly old world.

Every labor man and women who goes to the president's tbirhday ball anywhere can feel, while having a good time, that those who suffer are being helped. That's a fine feeling to have. It's rather a wonderful thing this president's birthday ball. And Col. Henry L. Doherty, who takes on the task of being national chairman has congratulation coming for such a fine job done. The same can go for Carl Byoir, wizard general organizer, one of the nation's cleverest of men.

Buying Power Is Essential

Wage earners, who constitute by far the majority of our people, are naturally the chief consumers of goods, upon whom, those who sell goods must depend for sales, and for profits.

When wage earners are unable to buy normally, either through loss of income or low wages, business becomes stagnated.

A millionaire should eat no more than a person with less funds. If a working man wears his clothes a little longer than the rich man, or denies himself certain so-called luxuries and recreation that the few rich may enjoy, it is not through choice. With ample income, the wage earner would buy proportionately more than the millionaire. And the same principle applies to the family of each. So the "consumer goods" industries clearly depend upon the ability of the wage earners to buy, while the "capital goods" industries depend upon both the consumer goods industries and the prosperity of the wage earners.

These simple truths point conclusively to the fact that buying power of the masses, the wage earners, is essential to recovery and to sustained prosperity.

Among the many facts which the NRA research staffs have uncovered is this: In 1932 the average wage earner produced 15 per cent more per hour than he did in 1929, while the employers' labor cost per unit of product was reduced about 25 per cent. Thus, the workers' output was increased about 5 per cent per year, while the employers' labor costs decreased about 8 per cent per year.

We all know the result! When production runs so far ahead of consumption, through the failure of industry to pay wages and provide employment that will give the wage earners ample buying power, the economic structure of the nation loses its equilibrium and disaster follows.

The 30-hour work week bill, which has been introduced in congress, is intended to help bridge this economic gap.

Modern industry and commerce have progressed substantially in recent years, both in production and distribution. Unless labor is enabled to progress relatively, we cannot have a sound economic structure.

The chief immediate answer to the pressing problem of increased buying power, which includes putting unemployed wage earners back to work, is the adoption of the six-hour day and five-day week, without reduction in pay and with increased pay where merited, as proposed in the 30-hour work week bill sponsored by the American Federation of Labor.

Wage Restoration Aids Recovery

Virtually every cent of the ten per cent wage restoration of federal government employes last year went toward industrial recovery, answers to a questionnaire sent out by the National Federation of Post Office Clerks reveal. This is of especial interest with legislation for full restoration pending in congress.

Out of 100 sample answers, 74 used their restoration to pay old debts. Fifty-five bought needed clothing for the family. Twenty-nine made delayed repairs on homes. Thirty restored their diet to better standards of nourishment. Seventeen were enabled to renew the interrupted education of their children. Twenty-two were able, for the first time since the wage slashes, to indulge in amusements and in such additions to a "better life" as books, movies, membership in study and social clubs, etc. It is highly significant that sixty-seven specifically stated they were unable to stretch the ten per cent restoration to cover such "near necessities" of family life.

"These answers reveal the hardship and, in many cases, downright suffering to which Uncle Sam subjected his nephews during the very period when he was excoriating private employers for the same practices," said Gilbert E. Hyatt, legislative representative of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks.

"It is shown that the wage cut was immediately reflected in a lowered standard of living which extended to such fundamentals as food and clothing. Answers to previous questionaires show that the assumption of added obligations such as the entire or partial support of unemployed relatives was a usual development of the same period during which wages were cut."

President Green States Case

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in his address at Northwestern University, January 15, stated clearly and effectively the position of organized labor on two of the most important subjects now facing all wage earners —collective bargaining and social security.

This address appears elsewhere in this issue. Any elaboration upon it could be nothing more than a weak attempt to paint the lily.

Attention of the reader is, therefore, merely directed to this address, in the belief that the revealing facts which it sets forth should be the knowledge of every person who works for a living.

The "Blue Eagle" Is Not a Substitute for the Union Label

By I. M. ORNBURN, Secretary-Treasurer of the Union Label Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C.

There are some who think that the Blue Eagle is a substitute for the Union Label. This false idea is fostered by certain anti-union employers who see in it a distinct advantage, because the Union Label represents superior standards of employment to those required by the national recovery administration.

The Blue Eagle does not signify that products are made under trade union conditions. Daily, in the newspapers, our attention is directed to the fact that many industries and business establishments, which are entitled to use the Blue Eagle, are completely ignoring proper representation and collective bargaining agreements by denying their workers the right to organize. In these cases the standards and other advantages of trade unionism are entirely prohibited.

Other industries which fly the Blue Eagle may comply with the minimum wages, maximum hours and other labor provisions of the NRA codes, but it does not insure to the purchaser of their products that the workers in those industries are receiving the higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions which have been established by the skilled workers who are members of trade unions. It is necessary only to compare the minimum wages and maximum hours of the codes with those of trade union agreements to prove these statements beyond question. Buying under the Union Label, Shop Card and Button is unquestionably the only way to maintain the hours, wages and conditions for which trade unions have fought for many years.

The Blue Eagle is also placed on prison-made products which go into interstate commerce and unfairly compete with the union made products of free American citizens.

The Union Label assures the purchaser that the goods are made in America. Importers are allowed to place the Blue Eagle on goods made in European and Asiatic countries under extremely low and depressing conditions of employment. If the products are made in foreign lands, the purchaser has no guarantee that they are not made by child labor or enslaved men and women. The Union Label thus assures the buying public that the goods are not only union-made, but also that they are made in America.

All these facts should be taken into consideration when buying labeled goods. The discriminating purchaser will look for the Union Lavel because it will insure the highest quality of goods made under the most sanitary conditions by skilled workers. The Union Label guarantees to the buyer that the goods are American-made and not foreign-made. Union Label goods assure the purchaser that the industries and business establishments which display them pay their workers better wages, work them shorter hours and under better conditions than those industries and business places which display only the Blue Eagle.

Therefore, when it comes to Union Labels and the Blue Eagles, look for both of them, if you choose, but demand the Union Label. There is no substitute for the Union Label!

Bricklayers Head, G. T. Thornton, Dead

End Comes at Home in Boston—Joined Union in 1887 and Became International President in 1925.

Boston, Jan. 24.—George T. Thornton, president of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America, died at his home in South Boston on Jan. 21, at the age of 68.

Mr. Thornton first became a member of the Bricklayers' union in 1887, when he was initiated into subordinate Union No. 1, Nova Scotia. In 1888, he transferred his membership to Subordinate Union No. 3, of Boston. He was active in the advancement of his union and displayed an aptitude in the masonry trades which made him an outstanding workman of the craft.

Mr. Thornton served the Boston union as an officer and delegate to international union conventions from 1897 to 1904. He was prominent in the formation of the Massachusetts state conference and was the first chairman of the organization.

In 1904, Mr. Thornton was elected third vice-president of the international union. He became second vice-president in 1905 and third vice-president in 1925. He was elected president in 1925 and held the office until his death.

Surviving are Mr. Thornton's wife, two sons and four daughters.

N. A. M. GIRDS FOR FIGHT AGAINST LABOR

New York.—The National Association of Manufacturers, which has been conducting numerous "surveys" and "inquiries," but usually among its own people, is reported as girding itself for a hard fight for anti-labor legislation at this session of congress.

The high point is their alleged claim of "freedom of contract," which they hope to have enacted into law. Employes must be free, they say, to ally with any organization, or none at all, as "they" please.

The Wagner Industrial Disputes bill will be vigorously opposed, as will be the 30-Hour Week bill and other labor measures. They will seek, it is stated, a law prohibiting "general" or "sympathetic" strikes, so worded as to practically deny workers the right to strike. A number of other items of anti-labor legislation are reported as "in the making."

It is understood that considerable assistance in this respect may be relied upon from the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Industrial Conference Board, both of which are also regarded as strictly anti-labor, regardless of the needs of the country or the people, or, in the final analysis, their own best interests.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

DOWN-HEARTED? A UNANIMOUS NO!

It may be hard to teach your legs to do things after they've had a battle with a flock of infantile paralysis germs, but little Carrie Suriak of New York isn't downhearted about it, as the picture (lower left) plainly indicates. Carrie is showing her legs a thing or two with the help of Miss Constance Huerstel. Nor has she anything on the 15-year-old lad smiling from a respirator (right). He is Herbert Fuchs, also of New York. Two smiling youngsters (upper left) their legs in braces, partake of their midday luncheon at Camp Alyn for Crippled Children in Cincinnati, Ohio. These four and more than 200,000 fellow-sufferers throughout the nation will be beneficiaries of the 1935 Birthday Ball for the President, Jan. 30, when more than 5,600 communities from coast to coast unite to raise funds for fightting what Col. Henry L. Doherty, national chairman of the Birthday Ball committee, calls "the most-dreaded disease menacing the nation". Seventy cents of every dollar raised will be retained by local communities to rehabilitate infantile paralysis victims, while thirty cents of every dollar will be turned over to a Birthday Ball Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research appointed by the President.

PRESIDENT PROPOSES PROGRAM TO GIVE ALL SOCIAL SECURITY

Congress Asked to Speedily Approve Legislation Providing Unemployment Compensation, Old Age Pensions, Federal Aid to Dependent Mothers and Children and Public Health Work.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Following submission to congress by President Roosevelt of a broad and definite program of action for the security of men, women and children, bills to put the program into effect were at once introduced.

The president requested legislation to carry out the second phase of the "new deal," designed to protect the jobless with unemployment compensation, to care for workers in their old age and to aid dependent mothers and children.

Simultaneously with Roosevelt's message recommendations of the president's committee on economic security were made public. The committee urged immediate action to establish:

1. Job unemployment compensation.
2. Old age pensions.
3. Benefit for dependent mothers and children.

The program championed by the president would be financed mainly by taxes on payrolls, some of the tax being deducted from wages and the rest paid by employers. It was estimated $100,000,000 would be required to start. States also would contribute.

The president asked for speed and hopes to have the program operating by Jan. 1, 1936. "Federal action is necessary to and conditioned upon the actions of states," he said in his message. "Forty-four state legislatures are meeting or will meet soon. In order that the necessary state action may be taken promptly, it is important that the federal government proceed promptly."

The president recommended: 1. Unemployment compensation. 2. Old age benefits, including compulsory and voluntary annuities. 3. Federal grants in aid of state mother's pension systems and for the protection of homeless, neglected dependent and crippled children. 4. Additional federal aid to state and local public health agencies.

Major features of the president's program are:

Old Age Pensions.

1. Federal contributions to the states to enable them to pay up to $30 a month to persons now 65 or who soon will be and are in want. To to put in effect in a year if possible. Government to contribute $50,000,000 next fiscal year and $125,000,000 annually thereafter.

2. A federal compulsory pension system. First pensions under this systemwould be paid to persons who become 65 in about 1947. First pensioners would receive maximum of $30 a month. Workers now young could expect up to $100 a month at 65 as system develops. Funds to be raised by tax on payrolls starting with 1 per cent Jan. 1, 1937, and reaching 5 per cent Jan. 1, 1957. Tax to be shared equally by employes and employers. Persons making more than $250 a month barred from this plan.

3. For all who desire, a system of government annuity policies, similar to those sold by insurance companies. Maximum, $9,000.

Unemployment Insurance.

1. States to administer the insurance and determine amount of payments to jobless. Up to $15 a week suggested by government experts.

2. Federal government to aid states with grant of $5,000,000 for next fiscal year and $50,000,000 annually thereafter.

3. Federal funds to be raised by payroll tax of 3 per cent on all employers of four or more persons. Tax starts Jan. 1, 1936. Will be reduced to 1 per cent at first unless business improves. Employers' contributions to state unemployment insurance fund will be credited against this tax up to 90 per cent.

Aid to Children and Mothers.

Government to allot $43,500,000 annually for maternal and child health, aid to dependent children, care of crippled children and public health work. States must contribute.

Criminal Prosecution of 7-A Violators Expected Hereafter

Washington, Jan. 24.—It is understood from information secured from reliable sources here that the department of justice will ask federal grand juries in different parts of the country to return criminal indictments against employers found to have violated Section 7-a of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

The act provides that violation of this section is a misdemeanor, punishable by a maximum fine of $500 for each offense, with each day's violation considered a separate offense.

So far, punishment for violations of Section 7-a has been chiefly to remove the offender's NRA Blue Eagle, only two criminal prosecutions having been initiated thus far. In the last case, that of a York, Pa., battery manufacturer, tried in Harrisburg, Pa., the accused was found guilty on ten separate counts and fined $150 on each count, or a total of $1,500.

It appears to be the consensus of opinion among officials of organized labor that decisive action on the part of the government to enforce the punitive provisions of the act would have a salutary effect upon those reluctant to comply with the law and result in greater harmony and progress for all concerned.

Building trades labor never has earned a high yearly wage and its hourly wage never has been really high. Propaganda has made it seem high to those who don't pause to think. Meanwhile the promotion artists and the banks and mortgage companies have reaped theirs in millions.

Take a chare of the construction industry and observe how the big construction companies and the big banks and insurance companies are all bound together.

Butler to Remain Head of Local 175

Acceptance by E. E. McDaniels of an appointment as organizer for the Building Laborers International union has necessitated new changes in the official personnel of Local 175, Electrical Workers. Mr. McDaniels was recently named temporary president of the local, but the realignment was the result.

A. E. Butler, who has served the local in many capacities with credit, will hold the presidency, The Labor World is informed, until next regular election, with the following executive board appointments also having been approved: W. L. Cooper, financial secretary, and Robert H. Duncan, business manager.

Popular Unionists Lease Barber Shop

Charles Terry, veteran member of Barbers' Local 415, visited The Labor World office Thursday to announce that he and J. H. Boyd, vice-president of the local, have leased the barber shop at the Walden hotel, opposite the Terminal station, which from this date will become a tonsorial parlor de luxe (says Charlie). The new emporium is a four-chair shop, modern and sanitary (still according to Charlie), and will offer service with a smile.

Messrs. Terry and Boyd have been at the Buckeye for the past three years.

LABOR REPRESENTATION ON CODE AUTHORITIES STILL BEING OMITTED

Washington. — Need for a definite mandate by law continues in evidence as new code authorities are appointed with labor representation, although the need for such representation has been clearly shown by labor officials.

At least six new code authorities have been appointed recently, composed entirely of members of the industry. These include: Cement industry, wholesaling and distributing trade, medical and allied book publishing industry, china clay producing industry, crown manufacturing industry, textile machinery manufacturing industry.

GOV. NICE FLAYS SALES TAX

Baltimore, Md. — Repudiation of the sales tax as a method of raising increased taxes required by the state government and support of the income tax characterized the message of Gov. Nice to the state legislature. Confronted with the necessity of raising at least $30,000,000 additional taxes, $18,800,000 of which will be required for unemployment relief during the next two years, Gov. Nice said: "While the choice of methods is within your province, I think it proper to say that there should be no sales tax, for it operates disproportionately upon those in the community least able to bear it." The recommendation of Gov. Nice reflects the policy of the American Federation of Labor, which has persistently opposed the sales tax and favored in its place higher taxes on incomes and inheritances.

TWENTW MILLION JOBLESS.

Geneva, Switzerland.—Twenty million workers were unemployed at the end of 1934 in twenty-eight countries, including most of the industrial ones, according to figures compiled by International Labor office here. Africa, Latin America, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Asiatic countries, excepting Japan, were the only countries for which statistics were not given. A year ago the total unemployed in the countries included in the present figures reached 21,000,000. The jobless in the United States number 10,671,000, an increase of 500,000 during the year, the report said.

A PERSONAL MESSAGE

From the Editor of The Labor World

My Friends:

On Wednesday of this week I made formal announcement of my candidacy for the City Commission. This step was taken only after careful consideration of encouragements of many friends and associates. If elected, it must be by the wholehearted co-operation and support of those who believe me fitted for this important post.

While not in any sense attempting to use my activities in our labor movement as an excuse to gain political preferment, I believe it is proper and justifiable to call attention to a few facts in connection with my life's work.

I have been an active member of Organized Labor for more than a quarter-century, eighteen years of which time has been spent as editor of your Labor World. In this position, as well as in others with which my fellow-workers of the city and state have honored me, I have endeavored to render conscientious, sane service to those people who most need that type of advice and counsel, giving to this cause every ounce of energy I possess, and endeavoring at all times to be reasonable and fair in meeting the many problems which are our lot.

I have never been politically ambitious, as my closest friends well know, but having entered the race, of course, would like to win. To those working men or women who do not personally know me, I invite most careful investigation of my record as a representative of Labor and as a citizen of Chattanooga.

As the campaign progresses I will have more to say concerning the issues involved, and hope to convince a majority of the voters that if elected I will endeavor to make a satisfactory representative of all the people.

I have always contended that it is the duty of every working man and woman to qualify themselves and their families and cast their ballots for those whom they believe will render best service to the community, and I urge upon you to take this step now.

May I repeat, if elected, it must be by the active, energetic support and interest of all my friends, and this I earnestly solicit.

Feels a Lot Better When Black-Draught Relieves Constipation

From many states come reports like the following from Mr. W. M. Henderson, of Jasper, Fla: "I have been taking Thedford's Black-Draught twenty years. I take it for constipation that gives me a dull, tired, aching feeling, and I have headache, too. Black-Draught relieves me of this trouble. After a few doses, I feel as good as new. I keep it in my home. I have a big family. When one of us is ailing (from constipation), we take Black-Draught and almost always feel a lot better. It has been worth its weight in gold to my family." . . . Sold in 25¢ packages. "Children like the Syrup."

on the prejudices of an oppressed and uninformed population. The imitation Hitlers who break strikes in the south today are the men who will kill social legislation tomorrow. The activities of this type of politician prevent this modernization of our welfare laws in the south and their opposition is the most serious obstacle to the passage of security legislation.

"If the United States congress will only put teeth into the labor provisions of the national recovery act so that southern labor can obtain the right to organize, which the law is supposed to give us, we shall be able to build a labor movement that will be a bulwark against corruption and will prevent the growth of dictatorships. Seeds of dangerous social conflict are sown when employers are permitted to openly violate the law by discharging workers merely for joining labor unions.

"The national administration must co-operate with the labor movement in the south, forcing compliance with code regulations and labor provisions, if it expects popular support for new deal policies to grow in this area. The workers now look to President Roosevelt for leadership and aid. If the administration fails the southern workers they are liable to fall under the sway of some of the most dangerous and anti-social demagogues that civilization has ever known."

MORE ABOUT RICHMOND

Mine Presidents Turnblazer, Morgan, Caddy, Mitch and other representatives in the southern coal fields presented to Miss Perkins a first-hand story of the Harlan situation while she was in Nashville.

Holt Ross, Mississippi and Louisiana representative of the American Federation of Labor, brought the house down with his slashing attack on the Southeastern States Industrial conference, the latest anti-union enterprise to be formed by John E. Edgerton, whose headquarters are in Nashville.

Daily papers have featured the attack made by Ross on Edgerton and quoted Ross as describing W. W. Anderson, of the Bibb textile interests, and Edgerton as the "polecats of American industry."

In his opening speech Mr. Googe stressed the point that the best way to insure modernization of the labor laws in southern states was to remove obstacles to the growth of the organized labor movement. Googe stated that the efforts of the movement had resulted in securing formal indorsements for the ratification of the child labor amendment from three southern governors in their inaugural addresses.

Sitting in with the officials of the bureau of industrial standards of the U. S. department of labor and the various representatives of the southern governors, the labor representatives assisted in framing a comprehensive uniform program for workmen's compensation, hours and safety legislation in southern states. Departments of labor, it is expected, will be set up in Alabama and several other states here which still are operating on the theory that the bosses give all the protection needed. Larger appropriations for existing labor departments will be sought so that factory inspection systems can be set up in many sections where it is desperately needed.

The conference was characterized by a remarkable feeling of vitality and determination on the part of the workers whose unions are still battling against odds in order to halt discriminations or to secure recognition. State federation of labor officials criticized the failures of their governors and legislators in plain terms seldom heard in this part of the country up to now.

Delegates from some states have counted noses and are certain of putting over substantial portions of labor's program.

The organization drive here will develop new momentum in the south as quickly as congress takes action to put teeth into Section 7-A was the general consensus of opinion.

BIG INDUSTRIES PLAN EXPANSIONS

Reports to Housing Administration Show Half Billion to Be Spent on Plant Construction Projects.

Responding to inquiries made by the federal housing administration, a group of large industrial concerns have reported that they are planning, or have in operation plans for plant betterments and replacement that will mean cash expenditures approaching a total of half a billion dollars during the year 1935.

These planned expenditures are either new or large increases over similar expenditures made during 1934, and in some instances for the past several years. The figures do not include the usual expenditures for necessary repairs to plants and equipment; they are solely for betterment and replacement

Industry is showing more and more tendency to co-operate with and take advantage of the stimulation of the durable goods industry and preliminary replies from other concerns indicate that industry generally is laying plans now for emulating firms that have already set their programs on betterment and replacements to their plants.

Building Shows Gain Over Period of Year

Stress New Dwelling Units, But Big Increase in Number and Value of Permits in 778 Communities.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Substantial gains for the building industry for 1934, over 1933, although there was a sharp seasonal decline in the number and value of permits issued in November, as compared with October, according to the bureau of labor statistics, U. S. department of labor. The report is based on reports from 778 identical cities having a population of 10,000 or over.

Comparing November, 1934, with the corresponding month of the preceding year, there was an increase of 24.6 per cent in the number and an increase of 19.0 per cent in the estimated value of total building operations.

Permits were issued for new dwellings to provide 2,788 dwelling units. This is a decrease of 29.5 per cent as compared with November, 1933.

The permit figures include all public buildings for which contracts are awarded by federal and state governments in these 778 cities. The October valuation of such public building was $2,261,637; the November valuation, $7,293,368.

Comparing November, 1934, with November, 1933, there was an increase in both the number and cost of new buildings, and of additions, alterations and repairs. The value of additions, alterations and repairs was more than 60 per cent greater in November, 1934, than in November, 1933.

DOMESTIC DUTIES

She takes the parti-colored squares
And sets them in a row
And sorts them carefully to see exactly where they go;
And in her needle's leisured sweep
there somehow seems to be
A sort of quaint suggestion of old-time stability.
Why, one might think prosperity
around the corner peers
To smile upon a happy task of other, saner years;
Ah, it is not a novelty which thoughtful souls enchants
When Mother patches bright new quilts instead of Father's pants!

FIGHTS INDUSTRIAL PENSION LAW

New Orleans, La. — Federal Judge Wayne G. Borah signed a temporary injunction here restraining Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie from enforcing United States Senator Huey Long's industrial pension law passed by the recent session of the legislature and set the hearing for January 25 before a three-judge federal tribunal.

The injunction was asked by the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana and the Standard Pipe Line company, an affiliate, the charge being that the law would deprive the companies of their "constitutional" rights.

Under the law the Standard Oil concerns would be required to provide proportionate pensions for employes dismissed after having been employed for one-fourth of the years which would make them eligible for pensions.

In recommending the enactment of the law at the special session of the legislature Senator Long declared it was intended to prevent the discharge of employes who would soon be eligible for pensioning.

SWINDLER GETS 10-YEAR TERM

Leavenworth, Kan. — Oscar M. Hartzell, former Iowa farmer, began serving a 10-year term in the federal penitentiary here. He was convicted of swindling over $700,000 out of Americans by the promotion of a claim to the fictitious estate of Sir Francis Drake. Hartzell, who was originally a victim of the Drake fortune racketeers, turned racketeer himself, went to London, according to the charge of the government, and mulcted American investors out of between $700,000 and $1,400,000 by exploiting the name of the British naval hero.

LABOR SHORTAGE PREDICTED.

Baltimore, Md.—H. N. Milburn, Jr., manager of the Baltimore office of the national re-employment service, revealed the age deadline set up by employers in the statement that before long he expected a shortage here in pajama and shirt-sewing operatives under 40 years of age.

Legislature Bows to Reactionary Demands

EDGERTON AGAIN MAKES PLEA FOR FIGHT ON LABOR

Asks for More "Dues" From Bosses So He Can "Protect" Tennessee Industry.

Roosevelt Policies Termed as Dynamite to Destroy Every Factory in the State—Collective Action Espoused for Bosses Only.

Usually, those employers who howl loudest against the organization of workers are merely throwing out a "smoke screen" behind which they can better perfect their own organization plans to combat every move of the workers to obtain adequate wages, equitable working conditions and even the meager comforts of average employment.

This fact is plainly brought out by the following letter, on the letterhead of the association, recently sent out to members of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association, by J. E. Edgerton, president of that organization:

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 28, 1934.

IMPORTANT.

To the Manufacturers of Tennessee:

As president of your association, it is my privilege to communicate with you occasionally, giving account of my "stewardship" and to keep you advised as to the state of industry in Tennessee.

Since I have been president, I have not abused the prerogatives of my office, but have written only as the exigency of the occasion permitted or the emergency of the case demanded.

I sometimes feel that the manufacturers of Tennessee do not realize the importance of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association or what it means to them in the conduct of their business. Day in and day out, the association is handling problems for industry which can only be solved through "collective" action. Many of the things accomplished cannot be discussed without going too much into detail; suffice it to say, however, many things hurtful to industry are stopped through the aggressive influence of the association before they get underway. Whereas, if they once got started, they would work a tremendous hardship upon industry.

Industries in Tennessee, like those in other states, will be called upon in 1935 for contributions for support of trade organizations, national associations, code authorities, and for many other purposes. This friendly letter is not to disparage any of these. They all have a place, however, that after serving these nineteen years as your president, I am convinced that the manufacturers of Tennessee should give first consideration to the Tennessee Manufacturers' association. My knowledge of the work of the association—what it has accomplished and what it is now doing—compels me to say that were it not for the protecting influence of the association, I would take out of industry every dollar I have invested. No industrialist would go for a day without adequate insurance protection, yet the safest and soundest insurance coverage for manufacturers in Tennessee today is the watchfulness and alertness of the Tennessee Manufacturers' association. Nothing escapes the association. It is in constant touch with every section of the state, and it is familiar with every move antagonistic to industry.

On Jan. 7, the legislature convened for another epoch-making period. One hundred and four members, without legislative experience, will be in that session. They will be stalwart Tennesseans who will want to serve their state faithfully and well. How well they succeed in solving questions affecting industry depends upon the co-operation and assistance this association is able to extend.

For weeks we have been compiling data and gathering information relative to a multiplicity of questions these legislators will have to consider. The twenty-eight members who were in the last session are familiar with the work of the association, and will feel free to call upon it for information relative to the matters brought before them.

Some of the legislation which we are sure will be proposed will be as follows:

"Old age pensions," "unemployment insurance," "minimum wages," "maximum hours," "compensation amendments," "taxation," "state NRA law," "collective bargaining," etc.

There is enough "dynamite" in this list of proposed legislative subjects to destroy every factory in Tennessee.

I am, therefore, making a request in this personal letter which can be granted by each of the 2,840 industrial concerns in Tennessee, namely, Give financial support to the Tennessee Manufacturers' association in 1935. Surely there is no concern in Tennessee which needs its funds any worse than does the mill of which I am president and which has operated since the advent of NRA less than 25 per cent capacity. But knowing industrial conditions as I do, and having spent days, weeks and months in trying to solve problems for my fellow-manufacturers, I am making no apology for this request. I am therefore asking the manufacturers of Tennessee to do as my mill will do, namely, mail the association a check for dues when you receive a memorandum on Jan. 1 from the association.

I am asking nothing for myself, as I have served as president of the association for nineteen years without a salary, consequently, I am expecting the manufacturers of Tennessee to give the association their financial and moral support in the new year just ahead.

I want to thank the manufacturers for the support they have given in the past, and assure them that the association is being operated economically, is conducted on a business-like basis, and is considered one of the best associations in the country.

Sincerely yours,

J. E. EDGERTON, President.

BOB COOKE GIVEN LEAVE OF ABSENCE

R. M. Cooke, editor of The Labor World for the past eighteen years, has been granted a temporary leave of absence from his duties in connection with the editorial and news work of the paper for the next few weeks.

During his absence, T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, will act as editor.

Hosiery Code Is Upheld by Court

Washington. — A petition for rehearing filed with the Circuit Court of Appeals, of the case of Richmond Hosiery Company vs. Camp, was denied by the court without opinion on January 11.

This is the case in which Judge Underwood, of Georgia, ruled in favor of the Government and denied an injunction against the enforcement of the provisions of the hosiery code. The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals had previously upheld Judge Underwood's decision.

LOW INTEREST ASKED FOR HOUSING LOANS

Washington. — An urgent recommendation that the interest on loans for housing made by the Public Works Administration be reduced to 1½% in place of the present 4% rate was made by Mayor LaGuardia, of New York City to the National Public Housing Conference here.

CHILD LABOR DAY.

Following a custom established thirty years ago of observing "Child Labor day," the observance of this year will be held the week-end of the last full week in January, which is Jan. 25, 26 and 27. The custom was established by the national child labor committee, which includes some of the country's outstanding men and women.

The keynote of the observance this year will be ratification of the pending child labor amendment. Twenty states have so far approved the proposed amendment and sixteen more are necessary. It is hoped to gain these sixteen additional approvals during 1935.

Many special labor meetings are being held throughout the country, particularly in states that have not yet voted approval of the child labor amendment. On Sunday, hundreds of churches will observe the day with special ceremonies. It is hoped the observance as a whole will add such vigor to the movement that the fight for approval of the amendment will be pushed forward to a successful conclusion this year.

The lower house of the Tennessee legislature the early part of this week definitely killed all possibility of ratifying the child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States. Propaganda given out by reactionary manufacturers of the state, who have always opposed this humanitarian measure, convinced the rural legislators that the farmer could not allow his daughter to wash the dishes or his boy to weed the garden if this amendment is passed.

However, the same day that Tennessee disgraced herself, the state of Utah ratified the amendment, and it is predicted that the required number of 36 ratifications will be secured.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Textile mill owners both north and south are mobilized to defeat ratification of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution. This amendment is up before the state legislatures this winter, and many of them are besieged by manufacturers' agents bent on defeat of ratification of the proposal.

The only ban existing on child labor today in many of the states is the provision put into industrial codes at the insistence of Gen. Johnson, as head of the NRA. But Johnson is no longer head of the NRA, and these provisions are rapidly falling by the wayside—they are being quietly forgotten in practically every line of industry. The recovery act expires next June 4.

For more than a score of years textile mill interests have concentrated their best efforts on defeat of child labor legislation. Their fight in this direction goes back behind the administration of Woodrow Wilson, who signed the first child labor law in 1916.

A short time later Roland Dagenhart, a mill worker of Charlotte, N. C., brought suit in the federal courts, alleging that the "constitutional rights" of his two sons, Reuben, 14, and John, 12, who worked in a mill, were being invaded. The case went to the United States supreme court,

Textile Report Shows Big Strike Entirely Justified

U. T. W. of A. Summarizes Four Demands Workers Intend to Present.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The study of wages and hours in the textile industry, ordered by President Roosevelt at the ending of the textile strike last September, is now released. The clear revelation of low wages and tricky practices by the mill owners more than justifies the protests of the textile workers and fully warrants the action taken by them in striking.

The demand for the shorter work week is also justified by the report in the statement that: "In the four months immediately preceding the strike the average hours per week was only thirty."

The report says, among other things: ". . . the most obvious fact developed in subsequent pages is the low earnings of workers in the industry, even where there is no special curtailment and even under the scale of wage increases provided for and generally observed under the code. Such a condition breeds discontent and unrest, and challenges the ingenuity of all connected with the industry or responsible for public welfare to find some solution."

Low Wages Basic Problem.

Recognizing the foundation for the protest voiced by the United Textile Workers, the report says: "This conflict between those seeking more adequate incomes from the industry and those contending that this is beyond the financial capacity of the industry, is the basic problem of the industry."

Going to the root of the matter of hours and wages, "In no week since the adoption of the code has the industry averaged more than 36.5 hours per person, though 40 hours are necessary to attain the 'minimum' weekly earning of $12 and $13 for those receiving the minimum hourly rate."

Uncovering the trickery of the mill managers is the factual statement: "More important as a source of misunderstanding is the fact that the code refers to the maintenance of . . . July 17, 1933, . . . wage rates paid various classes of employes, and then . . . defines the process of raising wages in a manner which destroys the differential." Skilled workers in the industry resent the fact that they are paid at rates which do not preserve traditional and customary differentials.

As to the hours per week, the report further says: "For the first twelve months of the code the average was approximately thirty-four hours. In the four months immediately preceding the strike the average number of hours per week was only thirty."

Concerning the stretch-out, the report says: "The stretch-out as a source of discontent . . . is being handled by the work assignment boards. We must note, however, the intimate connection which exists between this problem of the capacity of the industry to pay, and between the stretch-out and wages in the minds of the workers."

"Since the adoption of the code average hourly earnings have been raised more than in any other industry. Between July, 1933, and July, 1934, average hourly earnings increased 64.5 per cent. . . . The mere fact of such increases, however, proves nothing with reference to the adequacy of the wages paid and the living standard they afford."

Following this up: "In October, 1934, the last month for which data are available, the average hourly wage in all manufacturing industries in the United States was 55.4 cents; the average for cotton goods was 38.0 cents. The United States average is for eighty-five industries, which employ more than four-fifths of the wage-earners in manufacturing.

On the showing made in this report of statistical facts, the United Textile Workers of America now make these demands:

That the codes be reopened, for the establishing of wages and hours and conditions of work.

That wages be increased.

That the differentials between the various grades of skill be clearly defined and wage rates fixed accordingly.

That the work-week be made shorter.

MAKERS OF CAMEL CIGARETTE TRY TO DOWN AFL UNIONS

S. Clay Williams, Head of Reynolds Company, Leads Fight.

Company President, Also Chairman NIRB, Supposed to Administer NRA While Own Industry Not Under Any Code.

The Big Four companies which dominate the tobacco industry, led by the R. J. Reynolds company, are waging a war of extermination against labor unions in general and the Tobacco Workers' International union in particular. As the Reynolds company leads the corporation attack, so, apparently, S. Clay Williams leads the Reynolds company, though absent in Washington as chairman of the national industrial recovery board, which administers the national industrial recovery act.

Anti-labor and anti-union policies are an old story with the Reynolds, especially under the S. Clay Williams leadership. Tobacco workers in Winston-Salem, the North Carolina town where the biggest Reynolds plant is located, still tell of the way Williams crushed the attempt to unionize that plant in 1928. The lowest estimate they give is that more than 2,000 workers at the plant were fired. Every one who took any part in union propaganda had to go.

They were not merely fired; they were blacklisted, at least so far as that company was concerned. Tobacco workers are agreed that Williams refused to rehire any one who had been dismissed for union activities. The obvious attempt was to rub the fear of the Reynolds Tobacco company into the whole tobacco district; and to a high degree, that effort succeeded.

When the recovery act was passed, union officers in the district called Williams' attention to Section 7-A, which gives workers the right to organize as they please, without "interference, influence or coercion" by the employer.

'We shall comply with the law," said Mr. S. Clay Williams.

"Then we may send organizers into your plant?" persisted the union officers.

"No."

The union officers argued the case, but Williams would not yield. He repeated his parrot-like statement that the company would "comply with the law." But he refused to let the union send organizers into the plant, refused to let any union literature be distributed in the plant; and all appeal to the law which he had promised to obey was futile. Workers who showed signs of independence in this matter were discharged. Accounts as to the number who went under the industrial guillotine vary; but the discharges were numerous enough to fix fear of the overlord firmly in the minds of the whole force.

This year, another attempt has been made to unionize the workers who serve the Big Four. It has won splendid success in some places. Union leaders say that more than 90 per cent of the workers in the Liggett & Myers plant at Durham, N. C., have joined the union, and the company at least is "considering" a conference with the union on wages and hours.

But in the huge Reynolds plant at Winston-Salem, the union "does not go." Workers who attend union meetings or are seen in conversation with union organizers are "transferred" from their present jobs to others—of course, less desirable ones. The "tranfer" is notice to the person shifted that the company's spies have marked him, and a threat of discharge if he does not give up his hopes of union.

It is probably that Mr. S. Clay Williams, chairman of the NIRB, in Washington, is more daunting to the tobacco workers than if he were on the job in Winston-Salem. The NIRB was created to help carry out the purposes of the recovery act. One of the chief aims of that act was to give workers perfect freedom to organize, but Mr. S. Clay Williams, who has smashed the Tobacco Workers' International union in his plant once and is throttling it there now, is chairman of the board whose duty under the law is to protect the workers in their free choice of associations and representatives!

Speaking about law enforcement, the tobacco workers who know the record of Mr. S. Clay Williams are puzzled and alarmed. If he is powerful enough to dominate this keyboard of recovery, they think, he must be powerful enough to work disaster to them, and his record shows that he is perfectly willing to do it.

"We are very happy to announce that a peaceable and mutually satisfactory adjustment of the matters in dispute between the Kaynee company and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has been effected.

"We also wish to take this opportunity to ask you to give your support to the Kaynee company and its products as you have done in the past.

IMPORTANT MEETING PLASTERERS NOTED

P. B. Garber, secretary Plasterers' local union, calls attention to all members to the next regular meeting to be held in their hall next Wednesday, Feb. 6.

Mr. Garber impresses the importance that every member attend, as business of great importance will come up for attention.

DATE SET TO PLAN FORMATION OF WOMEN'S LABEL LEAGUE

The first meeting of the Women's Label league is to be held at the labor hall, Seventh at Market (over Liggett's drug store), at 7:30 p.m., Feb. 22, 1935, says E. E. Crosby, chairman of label committee for Chattanooga Trades and Labor council.

Each local union is to have two delegates. The others that are to be eligible for membership will be the wives of men unionists and the husbands of the women unionists and any member of organized labor. It might be that after the first meeting of the league other members of the unionist families may be taken in. We want every one to talk up the organization and boost for it and see if Chattanooga can't have the largest organization of this kind in the country.

The two committees on this feel positive of having the largest one of this kind in the south.

BRICKLAYERS ARRANGE JOINT GET-TOGETHER WITH CONTRACTORS

What Next!

Two Mississippi State collge professors have discovered a new low-cost method of making perfume from common gasoline. They are taking aldehydes, the artificial aroma-producing chemicals, out of gasoline at a cost of $25 a gallon. Perfume manufacturers are showing much interest in the discovery, as the old method of producing aldehydes cost about $250 a gallon.

Truth in Small Compass

David E. Lilienthal, one of the three men who manage the TVA, has found the right name for the utility holding company. He calls it a "financial tape worm."

"The electric operating utilities seem to be suffering from financial tapeworm," he said. "The patient always seems hungry, and the more he eats, the thinner he seems to get. The patient thinks he ought to have more food. The tapeworm is sure that what he needs is more food.

"The doctor may decide that what the patient needs most of all is to get rid of the tapeworm."

That is likely to prove one of the phrases that make history. It puts the case against the holding company in words that everyone can understand—and it puts the case right. The utility holding company, in at least nine cases out of every ten, is a parasite. It uses up the food—the rates—which the public give the operating company just as the tapeworm uses up the food given to the patient. And in both cases, the fact suggests the remedy—get rid of the parasite.

Lilienthal has given the country a phrase which tells the truth and sets forth the facts. And that is no small help toward the abolition of holding companies.

Income Tax and Jobless Relief

Subversive business men, heedless of public welfare, continue to harp on the alleged injustice of assessing people with large incomes with increased taxes to meet the exigencies of unemployment relief. From their thundering protests one would think that the increased taxes threaten to reduce them to the direst poverty.

The complete sophistry which underlies this propaganda is quite well illustrated by the recommendations which Gov. Nice, of Maryland, made in a message to the legislature of that state, urging the income tax rather than the sales tax as the most equitable method of raising emergency taxes approaching $30,000,000 which various aspects of unemployment relief and similar social emergency measures make it necessary to impose. Gov. Nice suggested that the state income tax should be one-half of the federal income tax. The following tabulation shows the approximate amounts of federal and state income tax which salaried men, supporting wives, would be required to pay, under Gov. Nice's plan, on the earnings given:

Earnings	Federal Tax	State Tax	Total
$ 5,000	$ 80.00	$ 40.00	$ 120.00
10,000	415.00	207.50	622.50
25,000	1,905.00	925.50	2,857.50

After all of the "confiscation" which it is alleged the combined federal and state income taxes impose on people with these large incomes is deducted, the Maryland citizen with an income of $25,000 per year would have $22,142.50 left, the citizen with an income of $10,000 would have $9,377.50 left, while the piker with only $5,000 would have $4,880 left.

It is apparent that all of these groups would suffer no reduction in reasonable living standards because of these federal and state income taxes. In fact, much heavier rates could be levied by both the federal government and the state without jeopardizing the prosperity of the higher income groups.

State income taxes should be given serious consideration by every state legislature as the most equitable plan for financing unemployment relief and other social security measures. It puts the burden on the shoulders of those who are most able to pay, and that is where the burden belongs. The sales tax, on the other hand, puts the burden on the shoulders of those least able to pay, and that is where the burden does not belong.

Concerning Snow and Society

Snow in the country is beautiful in itself, and is a promise of water for crops in the spring. Snow in cities is an almost unmixed nuisance. It clogs traffic, delays business, breaks trees in the parks and streets, sometimes breaks telephone wires. It brings hardship and distress to those who must be out in it without proper clothing; and if there is a leaky roof in town, the snow will find it. And it remains beautiful in cities only for the few hours before it is well mixed with soot.

Yet to tens of thousands of people, the snow which blanketed so much of the eastern half of our country was a boon and a blessing. It gave the husky unemployed a chance for work. Cities in the snow belt have employed tens of thousands of men, officially, for snow removal; and enterprising men and boys have tramped the residence districts for jobs. The pay they collect for this work in thousands of cases is the first money they have handled for weeks or months.

Could anything show more clearly the distorted, inside out, upside down, hind-side-afore nature of our economic system than the fact that an event which is a nuisance and expense to communities provides employment to many whom society does not know enough to employ under ordinary conditions?

"How will your people get through the winter?" asked a bishop of the parish priest on the storm-ridden Brittany coast. "Quite well, my lord, with the help of God and a few wrecks," was the candid reply. To some extent, we are still depending on a few wrecks—and never recognize our stupidity.

The New Executive Council

The first regular meeting of the 1935 Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor will be held in Washington, beginning January 30.

The Executive Council now has eighteen members, the number having been increased from eleven, through the addition of seven vice-presidents, at the 54th annual convention, in San Francisco, October, 1934.

Labor moves along with trend of the times—always forward, ever upward and onward, in step and in harmony with modern progress, toward the goal of industrial democracy and economic security, which brings a gradual increase in the happiness of all people.

Opposition to 30-Hour Week

Big business opposition to the 30-hour week is daily becoming more vociferous, with spokesmen for financial and industrial interests shouting that ruin faces the nation if the shorter work week is put into effect. The opposition was to be expected. The same clamor was raised against the 8-hour day, 40 and more years ago, but the 8-hour day came and no ruin followed. On the contrary, the nation benefited tremendously from the reduction in hours.

Labor department figures for industries which employ nearly two-thirds of all industrial and small-salaried workers show an average 37½-hour week during 1934, when unemployment did not fall below 10,250,000. A 30-hour week throughout industry could put at least 4,000,000 to work if the shortening of hours was fully used to create employment, the American Federation of Labor says.

Despite the unemployment situation, which calls more and more insistently for remedy, the opposition to the 30-hour week continues to rant of "ruin" for the nation. As a matter of fact, ruin faces the nation from unemployment, not from the 30-hour week. Realization of this grows and the nation is becoming impatient with those who strive to block the only practical plan yet offered for putting the millions of idle to work in private employment.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

We move along 1935, watching a new and largely unknown congress get under way, with a work that easily may turn out to be more important than the work of its predecessor congress.

The last congress went into a huddle and brought forth NRA, which has done certain things, but that has not made much of a dent in unemployment.

This congress will throw out four billion dollars for a gigantic drive to get men on payrolls.

It will make NRA permanent and it will establish the principle of social responsibility by writing unemployment insurance and old age pension laws. They will be a beginning, though they will be timid.

One of the strange things about this congress, filled with new faces, is that when legislative agents want something done, they go to the same old veterans—men who have been right in the same seat for a term or more before this one.

Those who know the ropes through experience still pull the wires and make legislation go through its paces.

But it may be different in the next session, when the youngsters get to know something about the ropes.

At this writing many of them scarcely know their way home after dark.

Administrative measures are in the hands of practiced and experienced figures, like Wagner.

Of course, there are lots of things in Washington besides congress.

There is S. Clay Williams, tobacco king, who hates unions but who is supposed to uphold 7-A as head of the NIRB, as strange a combination as ever was.

And there is the New York speech of this same Clay Williams, in which he said we should all praise the rich, because they work for us so hard and pay Uncle Sam so much in taxes, which will yet get to be one of Washington's best jokes.

And there are certain NRA subalterns who are just now in hot water because of their zeal in behalf of business.

And there is the proposed hippodrome day, set for Jan. 30, when labor is supposed to go, en masse, to tell NRA what's the matter—in general terms, but not in specific terms.

And there is the question of who is to administer the four-billion public works fund. And the unpleasantness between Ickes and Hopkins.

There are many other things of interest about Washington, not all of which are known to the sightseeing guides. As a matter of fact they know more about mortar and stones and dead folks than about live folks.

If the gold decision comes before you read these lines you will know that the prediction, written prior to the decision, that the government is set for eventualities is a good one.

There is wonderment about what's back of Senator Borah's bill to license corporations. It provides for a license, but nothing else. Is it an artful beginning?

Only trouble is that, as many agree, Borah loses interest when a fight is nearly won.

Washington is booming, what with legislators and lobbyists added to NRA. Keep your eye on Washington. A lot that will happen to you will start in Washington.

U. S. Civil Service Commission Warns Against Misleading Information

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—The United States Civil Service Commission says that numerous letters received at its office from different parts of the country indicate that misleading information is being given to the public by agents of some of the correspondence schools which give instruction in preparation for civil service examinations.

To guard against the loss of money paid for tuition of this kind the Civil Service Commission informs the public as follows:

No one can promise appointments to positions for which the United States Civil Service Commission holds examinations. The claim that such assurance can be given brands the person making it as a fraud.

Information regarding examinations for the United States Civil Service may be obtained from the boards of United States Civil Service Examiners. There is such a board in each community which has a postoffice of the first or the second class. In nearly all cities the civil service board is located at the postoffice.

Before paying money for tuition, or signing a contract, it is advisable to make inquiry concerning the prospect of examination. There is reason to believe that agents of some schools deceive the public as to the probability of early examinations.

No school has advance information regarding the need for employes or the probability of examinations.

If I boost your union label
You should do as much for mine;
This is simply reciprocity,
A never failing sign
That the spirit of true brotherhood
Among us ranks supreme
To promote the union label
All the time should be our theme.

In the field of union labor
This should be our golden rule:
Work and strive to win diplomas
In the union label school;
Always do unto each other
As you'd wish to be done by;
Have the label of your brother
Union man on what you buy.

Act together as a unit
In this most important move;
The result will be astounding.
Raise yourself from out the groove
Of inaction, for, remember,
On one point you should agree—
If I demand your label,
You should do as much for me.

MORE ABOUT CHILD LABOR

and the law, in a 5-4 decision, was held unconstitutional.

Dagenhart Was Pawn.

Dagenhart really had nothing to do with the matter. The mill owners hired Morgan J. O'Brien, corporation lawyer, of New York City, to carry the case to the supreme court.

Reuben Dagenhart said a few years ago, after he grew to manhood—a grown man, without education, and weighing 105 pounds—that all he got out of that suit was a soda fountain drink and an automobile ride. He added:

"I think the years I put in in the cotton mills stunted my growth. They kept me from getting any schooling, for I stopped at the third grade. Now I need the education I didn't get. For twelve years I worked twelve hours a day, from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m., with time out to eat. I only weighed 65 pounds. My sister and myself worked together 'on section spinning.' We did the work of grown men. My father made $2.50 a day, and John and myself made a dollar each a day.

"Now, they are trying to put my little sister, 15, in the mill, but I will never stand for it. It would have been a good thing for all the kids in this state if that law they passed had been kept."

This statement was from one of the complainants in action in which all of the machinery of the American judiciary was invoked to preserve his "constitutional rights."

State Rights Jeopardized.

Mill owners are basing their opposition to this constitutional amendment on the allegation that it is an infringement of states' rights. They are loud in their claims that the labor of children is adequately cared for by the states, and, therefore, there is no need for an amendment to give congress the authority to regulate or prohibit the employment of children in mills or factories.

According to the 1930 census, more than 2,000,000 children between the ages of 10 and 17 years, inclusive, or one out of every nine, were gainfully employed. Of children 10 to 15 years of age, there were 667,118 gainfully employed.

The census figure is an understatement of child employment, however. It does not include children under 10 years, a considerable number of whom are engaged in street trades and tenement home work.

Gains in the elimination of child labor in some sections and some industries pointed to by advocates of state control are distorted by regional increases, or by increases in branches of child labor such as sweatshops, domestic service and street trading. For example: While the number of children under 16 years of age employed in the textile industry decreased by 59.3 per cent between 1920 and 1930, the number of children employed in such establishments in South Carolina and Georgia increased 23.7 per cent and 11.9 per cent, respectively, during the same period. As a further illustration, the general decline in factory employment was offset by increased employment of children under 16 years of age in several branches of street trading and in domestic service.

The Evil Still Exists.

During the first six months of 1933 the exploitation of working children increased enormously, not so much in the number of children employed as in the gravity of the abuses to which they were subjected. Sweatshop conditions like those of a hundred years ago appeared in a number of states. Starvation wages, long hours, deplorable conditions of work came to characterize the depression, and to break down industrial standards set up through years of painful effort by friends of working children.

A survey made by the federal department of labor, covering shirt factories in nine states, examined some 20,000 payrolls. Half the workers were found to be receiving less than $7.40 for a full week's work. In Maryland 42 per cent of all workers, in Delaware 43 per cent, and in Pennsylvania 35 per cent earned less than $5 a week.

An investigation by the national child labor committee of sweatshop conditions in the Lehigh valley area of Pennsylvania, where mills employed some 3,200 boys and girls of whom about one-fourth were under 16 years of age, revealed wages of $1 to $2 a week or less. Some 250 shirt workers received less than 50 cents a day. Such conditions were reported even in the middle west and south, which had been comparatively free from fly-by-night manufacturers.

Present Ban Soon Expires.

During the second half of the year 1933, the picture radically changed. The national industrial recovery act, outlawing child labor, was passed in June. However, this law expires in June of this year, and unless some other means of curbing the vicious exploitation of children, hundreds of thousands will again be employed in industry.

The United Textile Workers of America hold that the children of the nation must no longer be the helpless victims in the game of grab. Pressure of economic advantage between states has long encouraged the exploitation of children in states with high as well as states with low standards. Employers have claimed that they could not economically manufacture when their competitors are permitted to employ cheaper child labor. The NRA codes, with their universally acclaimed 16-year minimum standards for employment of children (and 18 years for especially hazardous industries) have pointed the way. The national uniform standards temporarily achieved by the codes should not be lost. The gains thus made should be preserved through prompt ratification of the proposed federal child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States.

GRADUAL WORK WEEK CUT REJECTED BY ENGRAVERS

New York.—A proposed new labor contract offered by the Photo-Engravers Board of Trade stipulating a gradual scaling down of the length of the work week to thirty-six hours without reduction in weekly wages within three years was unanimously rejected by the New York Photo-Engravers' union. The present contract expires Jan. 31. Practically the full membership of the union, 2,800, attended the annual meeting at which the vote was taken. Union officials reported a balance in the treasury of $332,886, which was described as a necessary surplus "for coping with emergencies in times of stress."

THIRD DEGREE PROBE

New York.—A thorough legislative probe of "police brutality, commonly referred to as the 'third degree,'" was recommended by the Prison Association of New York in its annual report.

ACME SERVICE IS A LOCK AND SEALED JOB!

THE coal is weighed and certified by our Weighmaster, locked in truck with heavy Yale lock in his presence and key is placed in envelope, sealed with sealing wax showing our seal, and delivered to you with the load of coal. You are required to break the seal and give the driver the key that he may unlock the truck and unload under your direction.

THIS is the only system of its kind in the United States and was originated by Walter D. Moore, President of the ACME COAL COMPANY, after studying and working for two years on a safe and accurate delivery of fuel to his customers.

The Right Fuel for Every Purpose!

FOR RANGE, Laundry Heater or Monkey Stove use Clinchmore Red Ash Nut. It burns into a powdered ash—nothing left in the firebox when burned up.

HOTEL OR RESTAURANT RANGE, use Blue Gem or Red Ash Egg. Red Ash Egg also for Arcola hot water heating.

FOR LARGE HEATER, any make, use Red Ash Lump. For medium size heater use Red Ash Egg.

FOR GRATES use medium Red Ash Lump. If slow fire is desired, use Whitwell Egg or Lump.

FOR STOKER, any make, use Clinchmore Special Prepared Stoker Coal.

FOR FURNACE, use Whitwell Nut, Egg or Lump, according to strong or weak draft.

Whitwell Coal is the ideal coal for furnace because it contains the highest fixed carbon of any Tennessee coal on the market. It is semi-smokeless and practically sootless. There is no other coal that equals Whitwell as an economical and satisfactory domestic fuel.

Clean, Dry Storage for Radiant Coke!

We keep Chattanooga Radiant Coke in a clean, dry storage bin where coal dust and rain cannot touch it. So much cleaner than coke delivered from the open yard where it lays out, absorbing rain and coal dust. See the big load of dry Chattanooga Radiant coke it takes to weigh a ton—you'll be amazed.

Some Injudicious Slander

While Chattanooga daily papers have thus far attacked all strikers and impugned the efficiency of a police force that would not act as scab-herders, it appears they might now be treading dangerous territory. Dangerous, at least to the ones responsible for a story which appeared last Monday in the News which made a charge that deputies in and around Daisy and Soddy spent their time "goosing" women strikers. Taking no heed of possibilities of breaking up happy families, the great newspaper made a general statement of fact. Even if there should be foundation in one particular instance, it would appear to be the part of wisdom to refrain from being so sweeping in nature. Some of these deputies are husky fellows and might resent losing a good wife simply because a news reporter in his efforts to break a strike grabs a handful of mud and makes a wild sling.

Taxing the Holding Company

After telling at length and with a wealth of evidence the story of the high crimes and misdemeanors perpetrated on American consumers and investors by privately owned utilities of the country, the federal trade commission makes some suggestions to congress for stopping such work. Since most of the chiseling and gouging and nearly all the stock inflation was done through the agency of the holding company, the FTC devotes its main attention to that.

And of all the weapons which can be brought to bear on predatory holding companies, the FTC finds that the most effective is taxation.

The thoroughness with which the commission has probed the possibilities of holding company taxes is impressive. It suggests a tax on the net income of any holding company which is derived from other states than the one in which that holding company is incorporated. It urges an excise tax on the holdings by one company of stock in another. Both of these taxes get higher as the sums involved get larger.

Then the FTC proposes a tax on all transactions between companies in which one corporation or any of its officers or directors has an interest in one side of the transaction; a tax on the gross income of holding companies, graduated upward like a holding tax; a tax on stock authorized but not issued—which really means a tax on inflation.

The FTC proposes other reforms not connected with taxation. For example, it suggests that congress prohibit interstate commerce in gas and electricity if the company involved bases its rates on any sum greater than the actual prudent investment in the property. Going farther, it says that congress should prohibit interstate commerce in inflated securities. But the commission's main reliance is on taxation.

In this, the FTC is taking a leaf out of the book of experience. The simplest, surest way to stop commercial gouging or malpractice is to make it unprofitable; and the simplest way to do that is by taxing it.

After regulatory laws had stumbled and wobbled, this country wiped out the poisonous phosphorus by taxing it. It can do the same with holding companies; and some of these are as poisonous as phosphorus.

Machinery and Progress

The introduction of labor-saving machinery in industry is often described as industrial progress. The description would be accurate if the machinery were regulated so it would be of real benefit to the majority of our people. But under our economic system, operated by minority groups who control it solely for the production of maximum profits, machinery does not create progress for the masses.

The fact is that machinery is used by employers as a substitute for human labor. The reason for this substitution is that iron men are cheaper than men of flesh and blood, and cheap production of commodities is interpreted by our industrial magnates as meaning larger profits for the owners of our industrial plants. Moreover, employers frequently install machinery for the specific purpose of throttling labor's demand for better work conditions resulting from higher pay, shorter hours and improved work conditions generally.

Such a policy is thoroughly anti-social and should receive the condemnation of all progressive citizens. Genuine social and industrial progress does not consist in hogging the benefits of machinery by employers.

A Wesleyan university professor says that Germany is passing through a formative stage marked by quiet, order and discipline. Certainly the Germans murdered in Hitler's "purge" a few months ago are quiet, orderly and disciplined, anyhow.

George T. Thornton, Bricklayers' Head, Dies in South Boston

Boston, Mass.—Funeral services for the late George T. Thornton, for nearly eight years president of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America, were held here at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 23, attended by all brother officers of the union, many other labor officials and a host of other friends and relatives.

Mr. Thornton, who was 68, died at 4 a.m. Jan. 21, following an illness extending over a year, at his home in South Boston. He joined the union in 1887, in Nova Scotia, and transferred his membership to Local Union No. 3, Massachusetts, at Boston, in 1888. He served as an officer of his local and international convention delegate from 1897 until 1904, when he was elected third vice-president of the international. He later became second vice-president and was elected first vice-president in 1925 and president in 1928.

The deceased is survived by his wife and eight children. Although the international headquarters of the union are in Washington, Mr. Thornton had been conducting his business chiefly from a special office at his home during the past year, due to his illness.

George T. Thornton was recognized as an expert mason and an exceptionally capable union official, whose passing was received with deep sorrow throughout his wide circle of friends and the labor movement in general.

Junior (after attending Sunday school)—Say, daddy dear, our lesson today told about the evil spirits entering the swine.

BABY BONDS FOR SMALL INVESTORS.

The "baby bonds" which President Roosevelt's administration proposes to authorize the United States treasury to issue in connection with the $4,800,000,000 federal public works projects to provide jobs for between three and four million adults now on relief rolls, will be in denominations of $25 and up with a maximum limit of $10,000 to each purchaser. The interest rate will not exceed 3 per cent. It is said the government will utilize the postoffices as a medium for selling the bonds.

PEOPLE WANT WORK.

In the typical southern industrial city of 50,000 to 250,000 population, 92 per cent of the households (families or single persons) receiving aid from local, state or federal emergency relief funds contain at least one member 16 to 64 years old who is looking for a job or has some non-relief work producing insufficient income to support the family. In only 8 per cent of the households are all the members disqualified from the search of work because they are either too old or disabled, young people attending school, or housewives whose home duties prevent them from going out to work.

FARMERS BOYCOTT SALE.

The solidarity of farmers living in the vicinity of Berlin, Md., blocked the sale of personal property belonging to John N. Gordy, one of their neighbors, to satisfy a debt of $160. The constable in charge of the sale first offered a farm electric light plant. The farmers admonished him that lighting plants are classed as real estate under the law instead of personal property. The constable then put up numerous farm implements, but the stony-faced farmers refused to offer a cent. The constable saw the truth, stopped the sale and went home. Sympathetic neighbors of Mr. Gordy had checkmated the auction sale by refusing to bid for the goods.

Total on Relief Gaining Despite Increase in Jobs

No Prospect of Industrial Gains Giving Employment to the More Than 11 Million Idle, William Green Says.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Despite a slight gain in employment in December, the number of persons on relief is increasing, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, emphasized in making public the federation's monthly report on unemployment.

"Reports from 141 of our largest cities show 4 per cent more persons on relief in December than in November, although unemployment in the country as a whole decreased by 71,000," President Green said. He continued:

"This fact points to the exhaustion of resources among the unemployed, many of whom have now been without regular work for three, four or even five years. Although employment will probably increase further in the spring season just ahead, there is no prospect that industrial gains will be enough to employ more than a small portion of the 11,329,000 now without work.

Little Change in Year.

"Our revised unemployment figures for November shows 11,400,000 out of work at that time and in December unemployment decreased to 11,329,000. In December last year 11,323,000 were out of work so that at the end of 1934 unemployment was at practically the same level as at the end of 1933.

"The decrease in unemployment in December this year was due largely to two facts: Christmas trade was unexpectedly good, better than in any year since 1931, creating over 200,000 jobs temporarily at least, in retail stores; in factories increased production of automobiles and of steel and machine tools to supply the automobile industry re-employed a large number as did also activity in textiles, boots and shoes so that jobs in factories were increased by more than 100,000. These gains more than offset the seasonal lay-offs in building (123,000), farms (23,000), railroads (18,000) and other industries.

Improvement Continuing.

"Trade union reports for the first part of January indicate that this improvement in employment is probably continuing. In December, reports from unions in twenty-four cities showed 21.2 per cent of the membership unemployed (weighted figure, revised) compared to 20.9 per cent in the first part of January. Gains in employment in theaters, railroads and manufacturing, which are not usual at this time of year, reduced unemployment slightly and put a small proportion of the membership back to work."

STRIKE TO CONTINUE.

Newark, N. J.—The Newark Newspaper Guild has notified trustees of the Newark Ledger that the proposal to negotiate for a strike settlement was agreeable, but that the guild would not suspend strike activities "while strikebreakers are still employed in the editorial rooms of the Ledger." The guild suggested that the trustees meet with the guild committee to consider a form of settlement. The guild promised to conduct its activities in such a way as not to interfere with an equitable settlement. The strike of Ledger editorial workers began in November.

THE UNION LABEL

By E. E. CROSBY

The Union Label stands for the noblest sentiments and loftiest aspirations of the human race. By it the toiling masses are delivered from industrial thraldom and its beneficent influence extends to the home and fireside.

It is the sign by, and through which the common people may conquer humanity's high-handed oppressors and gain a bloodless victory, the fruits of which will continue to be reaped by generations yet unborn.

It is the emblem of co-operation between employer and employe and completes the relationship necessary to the most effective practice of co-operation by making the purchaser also a partner in the business.

It is the only guarantee of industrial peace. The child who demands the Union Label wields more influence for human betterment than the man or woman who strikes.

Tyrannical judges can't enjoin it, soldiers can't shoot it down, traitors can't sell it.

Incorruptible and indestructible it gleams as a diadem in the firmament of hope. You can easily do your part to help make the world a better and happier place in which to live.

Don't save your good intentions for tomorrow, but demand the Union Label today and every day. Solicit your friends to demand the label and see how much better quality and workmanship they will receive for their money, and the better things are the ones that last the longest or go farther. By organizing to buy with the label you will be really helping yourself and the other unionist.

Don't forget to boost the Woman's Label league the first meeting Friday, Feb. 22, at 7:30, at the labor hall. All the wives of the union men and the husbands of the union women and any one that is a member of organized labor are eligible for membership. Also want each local union to send two members to represent their local union in the league.

Consumers' Advisory Board Asks Improvements in Recovery Act

Washington, Feb. 8.—The Consumers' Advisory board has submitted seven specific recommendations for the revision of the National Industrial Recovery Act, to the National Industrial Recovery Board.

Organized labor is particularly interested in the action, and a number of the recommendations are in accord with those of labor.

After reviewing at considerable length the reasons for the conclusions arrived at, the following recommendations are made:

"(1) That the government retain the right to impose codes of fair competition as a measure of industrial control;

"(2) That the vast majority of these codes be confined to the establishment of simple minimum standards governing hours, wages, child labor, collective bargaining and fair trade practices:

"(3) That there be added to these standards comparable quality standards for the protection of the consumers;

"(4) That definite limits be set on such price and quantity controls as may be permitted to code authorities in exceptional cases;

"(5) That public membership on code authorities be made proportionate to the powers which they exercise;

"(6) That the tariff section of the act be repealed; and

"(7) That provision be made for the collection of complete industrial statistics.

"Whether the policy embodied in these recommendations should be written explicitly into the law is for congress itself to decide. In the main, it might be carried out in the administration of the act without specifically amending its terms. These proposals do not constitute a complete program of public control. They are presented rather as minimum requirements which should be met even if congress confined itself to a brief emergency extension of the act.

"Continuance of the Recovery act as an emergency measure, however, will merely postpone issues which must sooner or later be faced. Social control of lumber, petroleum, bituminous coal, public regulation of these industries in which high concentration has destroyed market freedom, establishment of consumer quality standards, establishment and protection of minimum standards for labor, in short, the socialization of competition—these are human objectives which cannot long be delayed."

Be not vehement against egotism lest you give yourself away, for the very modest egotistical are the first to rail against it in the other fellow.

MILLIONS SPENT FOR HEALTH.

Federal, state and local governments raise by taxation around $83,000 annually for public health work, according to a statement made by Dr. C. E. Waller, assistant to the surgeon-general of the United States, in the hearings before the ways and means committee of the house of representatives at Washington on President Roosevelt's security bill. Federal taxes contribute $10,000,000 of this amount. Dr. Waller pointed out, however, that actually only about one million dollars of this sum is used for what might properly be called the public health service, the most of it being allocated to the marine hospital service operated by the federal government.

Private foundations spend about $27,000,000 annually for public health work, raising the total of government and private funds around $110,000,000.

TO BUY STREET CAR SYSTEM.

New York City's plan for municipal street railway ownership forged ahead with the announcement that the conferees representing the city and the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit company had practically reached an agreement on the price to be paid for the company's lines. Originally the company, it was said, insisted on $200,000,000. It was reported now, however, that the city would pay around $190,000,000, with suitable provisions for amortization.

LOW PAY PLANNED.

The low-wage basis on which the administration experts figured the three and one-half million jobless would be paid under the Wagner-Lewis bill appropriating $4,800,000,000 for public works was brought to light in the hearings on the measure before the United States senate appropriations committee.

Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, head of the treasury department's procurement division, who, with Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the budget, drafted the bill, said it was estimated that it would be necessary to employ 3,500,000 persons for about two years, and that the proposed so-called subsistence wage was figured at about $50 per month.

Black-Draught Brings Refreshing Relief of Constipation Troubles

Constipation produces many disagreeable sensations, several of which are mentioned by Mr. T. R. Stith, of Boonville, Ind., who writes: "I have used Thedford's Black-Draught many years when needed for biliousness and other minor ills when a laxative was needed. I have a tight feeling in my chest when I get bilious. I get dizzy and feel very tired, just don't feel like doing my work. After taking Black-Draught, I feel much better. This is why I continue to use it when needed." . . . Thedford's Black-Draught is a good, purely vegetable laxative, obtainable for 25¢ a package.

Wedding Feature of Tobacco Workers' Big Birthday Ball

Audrey Price — Margaret Johnston

Louisville, Ky.—A wedding, with every member of the wedding party belonging to Local Union No. 185, Tobacco Workers' International union, featured the big birthday ball for the President here at the Seelbach hotel by the local union. The union's members are all employed in the plant of the Brown & Williamson corporation, makers of the well-known union label Wings, Raleigh and Kool cigarettes.

The bride was Miss Margaret Johnston and the bridegroom Mr. Joseph Phillips. Members of the wedding party were: Maid of honor, Miss Audrey Price; best man, Mr. Arless Knust; bridesmaid, Miss Hallie Phillips; lady-in-waiting, Miss Carolyn C. Johnston. Mr. Bernard Johnston accompanied the maid of honor to the altar.

The bride was charming in a dress of white satin, with large puff sleeves from elbow to shoulder, then tight from the elbow to the wrists, a point extending over the hand, bias cut waist front, pleats on both sides. She wore white satin shoes, veil of silk bob net lace and carried pale yellow roses.

The maid of honor wore a metallic brocade dress and carried red roses. The lady-in-waiting wore blue corded silk and carried red roses. The bridesmaid, whose dress was white crepe with red velvet belt, also carried red roses.

The ball was one of the most successful of the thousands held throughout the nation on the President's birthday to forward the fight against infantile paralysis. In addition to the Brown & Williamson employes and members of their families, hundreds of other Louisville citizens attended. Mrs. Eugenia C. Martin, financial secretary and treasurer of Local Union No. 185, was chairman of the birthday ball committee, in general charge of arrangements.

Meatcutters No. 600 Elect New Officers

Election of officers by Local 600, Meat Cutters, was held Tuesday, Feb. 5.

The officers elected were: Ted Henson, president; G. R. Hawk, vice-president; C. R. Chandler, financial secretary; John Phillips, corresponding secretary; M. E. Ball, business agent; C. E. Smith, Elmer Ball and H. O. Smith, trustees.

The local went on record as favoring TVA power for Chattanooga.

Organizer Landis, who has been in Knoxville for the past month helping to get a local started there, will be in Chattanooga next week. He comes back to finish up the work started before he left.

Brothers Charlie Williams and Robert Sherrell are back at work after being laid up with the flu.

$8,000,000

Electric Power Bond Issue

For weeks, the people of Chattanooga have been presented with half-facts and general mis-information from certain individuals who, in the guise of "Public Interest," are urging that EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS of the taxpayers' money should be spent to put the city in the Electric Light and Power Business.

It is an easy thing to talk about spending $8,000,000.00 as long as it is somebody else's $8,000,000.00. For a while, perhaps, it is easy to show some people that they are bound to profit from such an undertaking.

Fortunately, however, not all Chattanooga people are so gullible—especially when it comes to spending their own money. They listen to the speculator for a while—then they demand all of the facts back of the proposition.

That demand—for ALL OF THE FACTS—has arisen from every suspiciously inquiring quarter of Chattanooga' . . . and takes form today in the mobilization of a protective, conservative, fact-finding body of 100 representative Chattanooga men and women . . .

Aroused by the false promises and mis-information that is being spread among innocent and unknowing listeners, the above committee has volunteered its services to defeat this proposed expenditure of $8,000,000.00. On this committee are men and women from every walk of life . . . men and women who have spent years of their lives in helping make Chattanooga the city it is today—and whose sane, conservative judgment and character are represented by the entire community.

These citizens, as well as every other man, woman and child, would have to bear the staggering burden of taxes that would come as the very first result of this $8,000,000.00 venture.

NEW WOLL BOOK SEES LABOR AS CHIEF HOPE FOR FUTURE

American Federation Official Glories in Trade Unionism's Record and Shows Great Depression Was Foreseen.

"Labor, Industry and Government" is the title of a most timely book by Matthew Woll, a vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, just published by the Appleton-Century company.

The book is a sketch of the present day in this country, written from the viewpoint of organized labor, by an experienced, observant member of the labor movement. Very early in the book, Mr. Woll gives a brief sketch and an appraisal of the federation, which really sounds the keynote of the entire work. He does not apologize for the A. F. of L.—and one does not see any reason why he should. On the contrary, he not only praises its work in the past, but sees in it labor's chief hope for the future.

"The American Federation of Labor," says Mr. Woll, "has seen no need to alter its foundation principles, for these are the principles of American democracy, both on the economic and on the political field. One of these principles is that decentralization is absolutely indispensable, if democracy is to be a living reality.

"The A. F. of L. stands for natural

U.S. Survey to Give Basis For Change in Hours and Wages Under Bakery Code

Dr. Isador Lubin — Dr. A. F. Hendricks — Dr. J. Pearlman

Washington, Feb. 15.—Fourteen investigators are covering the United States from Maine to California and from Florida to Washington for the hard facts about hours and wages in the baking industry so that the President may know how to change the labor provisions in the code.

The survey is being made by the bureau of labor statistics of the U. S. department of labor. It should be finished shortly after the middle of February. When the facts are assembled, they will be analyzed by the National Recovery Administration, by the Bakers' Council for the Industry, and by officers and Washington staff of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America. Independent conclusions America. Independent conclusions will be submitted at public hearing, after which the President will make the deciding ruling.

Other Data to Be Given

Other evidence bearing upon the subject of hours and wages will be submitted at the hearing. The Bakers' Council, which acts as the code authority for the industry, will have data submitted by more than 6,000 bakeries covering about 100,000 employes. This is the data which the council was directed by the President's order to have ready by November 15, 1934. When the Council failed to comply with the executive order and asked for ninety days more of delay, the international union protested vigorously and asked that the Government make an independent survey for the purpose of getting unbiased facts and aspeedy determination of the matter.

When the administration decided that the request of the international union for an unbiased survey was justified and that the bureau of labor statistics was the proper agency to get the facts, a victory was scored for labor. The union's position in all code matters has been that the only proper conclusions were those based on a representative body of facts. It would be satisfied only with truth, but it would abide by the truth when fully revealed.

Tested Experts to Do Job

Faith in the bureau of labor statistics in this survey means particularly faith in the men supervising the job. Dr. Isador Lubin is the director of the bureau; Dr. A. F. Hendricks is the economist; Dr. J. Perlman is in charge of the survey. All these men have been through fire in connection with other important investigations; they came through the textile survey wih flying colors. They are outstanding examples of that fine body of men in the government service whose lives are spent seeking the elusive facts of truth.

Not every city in the United States will be covered in this survey and not every bakery in the cities visited. The goal is a sample of 30,000 workers selected by states, cities, towns and by baking classifications so that a true picture can be presented of conditions generally. Here is the list of cities covered:

Syracuse and Elmira, N. Y.; Pittsburgh, Pa., and Huntington, W. Va.

Lewiston and Auburn, Me.; Boston and Fitchburg, Mass., and Manchester, Vt.

Albany, N. Y.; Middleton and Bridgeport, Conn., and Providence, R. I.

Metropolitan New York; Manhattan, Brooklyn, Bronx, Queens, and Richmond.

Trenton, N. J.; Scranton, Pa.; Philadelphia, Pa., and Wilmington, Del.

Baltimore, Md.; Washington, D. C., and Richmond, Va.

Raleigh, N. C.; Columbia, S. C.; Atlanta, Ga., and Decatur, Ala.

Miami and Lakeland, Fla.; Mobile, Ala., and New Orleans, La.

Memphis and Johnson City, Tenn., and Little Rock, Ark.

Los Angeles and San Francisco, Cal.; Eugene, Ore., and Seattle and Spokane, Wash.

Houston, Dallas and Waco, Texas.

Fargo, N. D.; Sioux Falls, S. D.; Omaha and Grand Island, Neb., and Denver, Colo.

Shawnee and Oklahoma City, Okla., and Topeka, Kans.

Chicago and Galesburg, Ill.

Indianapolis and Evansville, Ind.

Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Louisville and Paducah, Ky.

Bay City, Grand aRpids and Detroit, Mich.

Minneapolis and Rochester, Minn.

St. Louis and Joplin, Mo.

Cincinnati, Lima and Zanesville, O.

Madison and Milwaukee, Wis.

In each of these cities the investigators will call on the local bakery union officials for such additional facts as they may have regarding labor and unemployment conditions.

Bakery Salesmen Included.

Facts regarding driver-salesmen will also be included in the survey.

The most important result from this survey will be a decision on whether the hours for handcraft bakeries should remain at 48. The international union has protested that the differential between the 48-hour handcraft and the 40-hour machine bakeries is too great and is a source of trouble.

Many bakeries operating 40 hours are protesting the differential, but they are doing it on the basis of a plea for establishing a separate classification of 44 hours for bakeries who do a certain amount of hand work.

Efforts to establish this 44-hour classification in advance of the survey of the baking industry have been protested by the international union, which insists tht decision in this matter should await the survey facts.

LaGuardia for City Power Plant

New York.—Characterizing the proposal for a $10,000,000 reduction in electric rates made by officials of the Consolidated Gas system here as nothing but a smoke screen, Mayor LaGuardia declared that the city would go ahead with the construction of a municipal electric light and power plant, which he claimed was backed by President Roosevelt, as a national example of the real cost of producing electricity for mass consumption.

"The companies propose the same old thing," the mayor said. "They demand an exorbitant rate of return on admitted water and written-up capitalization, and lay down so many conditions whereby the consumers pay and the companies reap. Nothing will be done to retard the present plans of the city and we shall continue our work.

"The companies should promise to write off the excess capitalization immediately and without condition. Since when is a wrongdoer permitted to dictate terms as a condition to ending his wrongdoing?"

TEXTILE WORKERS!

Local Union No. 1785 and all units are asked to meet in Ridgedale, at the Junior Order hall, Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m., Feb. 17. All are asked to bring groceries for the striking textile workers at Rossville. Every one that has a car please bring it and help take the crowd to Rossville.

But if a man builds a better mouse trap now, he is so busy making speeches that he never has time to make any more.

Investigate! Be sure your friends and neighbors register, Feb. 18, 19, 20.

Special Meeting Bakers' Union

Curtis Sims, president of Bakers Local No. 25, announces a special meeting for Saturday, Feb. 16, in Hall No. 1. He says that no member will be excused from this meeting.

Herman J. Schad, international representative of the Bakers' and Confectioners' union, will attend, and take up matters that will concern and affect everyone in the craft.

Meeting will be called for 3:30 p.m.

TAKING PROFIT OUT OF WAR.

Taking the profit out of war, which is alleged to be the object of certain bills under consideration by congress, did not receive the approval of Secretary of War Dern in his testimony before the committee on military affairs of the house of representatives. He limited his approval to measures designed to prevent "profiteering," which is far removed from abolishing all profit.

CODE AMENDMENT INCREASES WAGES IN PAPER INDUSTRY

Largest Wage Increase Yet Secured Through Code Revision Voluntarily Secured — Minimum to Get Further Study.

Washington, Feb. 14. Wage increases for approximately 25,000 workers in the paper and pulp industry will result from a code amendment which has been approved by the president, a NRA announcement says.

Simultaneously, the national industrial recovery board announced its approval of a similar amendment to the paper bag code which is expected to raise wages above the minimum for about 3,000 employes in that industry.

The amendments are the result of voluntary agreement between NRA and both industries, and represent the largest wage increase thus far effected through code revisions. They become effective as of Feb. 6.

The amendments will increase by two cents per hour the present minimum for males of 38 cents in the north, 35 cents in the central zone, and 30 cents in the south. The increase also applies to female employes whose minimum under the code has been 33 cents in the north and 30 cents in the central zone. The minimum rate of 30 cents per hour for female workers in the south remains in the code unchanged.

Office Pay Also Raised.

Minimum rates of pay for office workers now ranging from $12 to $15 per week, depending upon population, also have been revised upward. This class of employes will, under the agreement, receive $16 per week in the north, $15 in the central zone, and $14 in the south, regardless of population.

The exception permitting subminimum wages of not less than 90 per cent of the basic code rates, or wages equal to those paid prior to July 15, 1929, whichever are higher, is deleted from the codes under the approved revision.

The paper and pulp amendment is the direct result of a stipulation in the president's executive order approving the code, that further consideration be given the problem of determining the adequacy of the minimum rates. At that time the feeling was expressed that the minimum should not be less than 40 cents per hour.

Same Rates in Both Codes.

Because of the close relationship between the paper and pulp, and the paper bag industries, and because the wage provisions in the two codes are identical, the amendment to the latter code provides for the same rates of increase.

In view of provisions in both codes providing for equitable adjustments of wages above the minimum, it is expected the amendments will eventually affect 100,000 employes in the paper and pulp industry, and 5,000 in the paper bag industry.

Executive Council Urges Extension Of Recovery Act

Employers Must Obey 7-A, Roosevelt Told—Workers Declared Standing Pat on Opposition to Auto, Tobacco Codes.

Washington, Feb. 14.—President Roosevelt and the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor go together in conference at the White House on Feb. 11. They talked over their difficulties, said a number of nice things about each other; and it may be taken for granted that both sides meant every word of it.

But while tension was relieved, better feeling promoted, and the ground thus cleared for further conferences, the differences which brought President and federation to the verge of a break have not been settled. The federation is still opposed to the automobile code and wants the automobile labor board abolished; but the code is extended to June 16, and the board in which labor has lost all confidence continues, in Kipling's words, to "piddle and piffle" as before.

And while the newly-formed cigarette code is supposed to last until June 16, the federation does not see why workers should put up with underpayment for that time by the most prosperous industry in the United States.

NRA Extension Urged.

Speaking for the council, President William Green urged the extension of the national recovery act, and made the following recommendations:

"1. That the administration of the national industrial recovery act be kept a governmental function. We believe it is a basic principle that the development and administration of codes should not be transferred to private, non-governmental agencies.

"2. That Section 7-A be retained, which gives legal status to employes' rights to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing.

"3. That provisions for the regulation of child labor, the establishment of minimum rates of pay and maximum hours of work, be retained.

"4. That labor shall have equal representation with industry in the administration of the national industrial recovery act and shall be accorded adequate representation upon all code authorities. Labor representatives upon code authorities will guarantee improved code enforcement and better protection to the public against indefensible price fixing and monopolistic control.

"5. That when there is undue delay in the submission or development of a code through the trade association of an industry, the president shall have the right to impose a code upon such an industry.

"6. That labor equally with management shall have the right to suggest amendments to codes of fair competition."

7-A Enforcement Stressed.

President Green spoke with strong feeling on Section 7-A. Workers had joined the unions to obtain the benefits of that provision, he declared, but they have been shocked and disillusioned by the failure of the government to protect them in their rights. "Their resentment has been deep and bitter, and is growing," said Mr. Green.

Section 7-A should be adopted as substantive law, Mr. Green held, so that it could be applied to industries which have no codes. He urged strongly the adoption of an industrial disputes law, which is being prepared by Senator Wagner, of New York.

Much of Mr. Green's speech was devoted to the automobile situation, though he spared a few plain words for the tobacco matter. He favored the recommendation of the NRA automobile report that new models be shown in the fall as a means of steadying employment, but added that the industry would be helped more by the establishment of true collective bargaining. As for the automobile labor board, he declared:

"In no case has the board ever actually ordered reinstated or rehired a man discriminated again for union membership."

President's Statement.

When the conference ended, President Roosevelt issued the following statement:

I have been particularly glad to receive and discuss common problems with the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor, and to congratulate them upon their enlarged executive council, bringing into co-operation more units of the labor movement.

The American Federation of Labor has been helpful and co-operative in the development of the programs for the rehabilitation of industry and of our economic life over the past two years, and I hope their co-operation will continue active and effective.

Co-operation with labor as well as

In trial runs near Philadelphia, the train recently made a speed of 100 miles an hour. The train is powered by a 600-horsepower Diesel electric engine. The weight of the entire train, including the power plant, is 212,000 pounds, compared to the 200,000 pounds of an ordinary Pullman car.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—How are departments of the American Federation of Labor supported?

A.—By a per capita tax paid by affiliated national and international unions.

Q.—Did organized labor ever officially condemn the Ku-Klux Klan?

A.—Yes. A. F. of L. conventions in 1922 and 1923 denounced the klan as an interference with liberty and danger to the labor movement.

Q.—Have trade unions made studies of the sanitary and safety conditions in their industries?

A.—A number of unions, including those in the printing and garment trades, have made such studies. These surveys have usually inculuded physical examinations of the workers to determine the effects of working conditions.

Turning the Light on Power Rates

The new Federal Power Commission has done a piece of work which should have been done at least ten years ago. It has prepared a booklet giving the actual prices paid by domestic consumers for electric current in 191 cities of the United States. Further publications of the same sort will supply other information on the same general subject—the cost of current.

To the consumer, this is an enlightening and encouraging document. To the power trust, it is a devastating document. It is a death-blow to the evasion and mystery and hocus-pocus by which the present often outrageous charges for current have been preserved.

Tables are given showing the sum paid for a given amount of current in different cities; and with one important exception, cities with publicly owned plants are bunched toward the low end of the scale, while the private plants invariably carry off the prize for getting the most money for the least current.

Cleveland, Ohio, served by a municipal plant, pays 60 cents for 15 kilowatt hours per month. Miami, Fla., under the dominion of the Florida Power & Light Co., pays $1.17. Mount Vernon, N. Y., with a private plant, charges $7.31 for 100 kwh. per month. Springfield, Ill., with a public plant, sells you 500 kwh. for just one cent less—$7.30.

What price rugged individualism?

Of course, no household ought to use as little as 15 kwh. per month. Few households do, where the rates are decent. Coming up to the use of 40 kwh. per month, the housewife pays $1.31 in Cleveland, and $4.18 in Miami. All Florida seems to be a high rate zone. Some years back, Sidney Z. Mitchell was told by his doctor to take a rest from the exacting toil of Wall Street. He went to Florida—and Florida is still paying for his visit with 30-year franchises and top rates of 12 cents per kwh., and other boons that monopoly loves to scatter.

Another high rate plateau is found in New Jersey, where the Public Service Electric & Gas Co. rules the electrical roost. Camden, Elizabeth, Jersey City, Newark, Paterson, Trenton—all pay $3.20 for 40 kwh. while Cleveland pays $1.31.

The Power Commission deserves a vote of thanks from the householders of the country. Graft and extortion flourish only in darkness, and the commission is turning on the light.

Good Advice from the Bench

"Let me advise you to join a trade union and you will not be sweated at the price you are today," said Magistrate Dimberline of Sheffield, England, the London Daily Herald reports.

This advice was given to Eric Porter, aged 22, a miserably paid motor driver, who was summoned for driving a lorry without due care.

The counsel given by the English judge reflects favorably on his insight and intelligence and would be good advice from any judge.

An Unimportant Objection

The 30-hour week for the building trades will be strenuously opposed by organized employers and manufacturers in the industry, according to an article by M. L. Matthews in the current Dow Service Building reports. He claims it would add from 10 to 15 per cent to the present cost of building. Suppose it does. What of it?

Objectors of the Matthews type to the 30-hour week seemingly ignore the fact that there are over ten million workers in the unemployed army. Government figures show that 25 per cent of the workers usually employed in the building industry have been forced on relief rolls. Month after month has gone by without private industry cooperating with the government to make any reduction in this multitude of the jobless. The 30-hour week applied to all industry would put millions of these jobless to work at wages sufficient to provide a fair living for themselves and their families. It is the only generally effective solution of the unemployment problem. It is just as essential in the building trades as in any other industry. If profiteering price boosters advance the price of housing beyond the limits fixed by the ethics of the New Deal, that will constitute a problem which will undoubtedly be strictly dealt with. But regardless of whether price of housing go up or not because of the 30-hour week is an unimportant question. The supreme need of the hour, if our economic system is to function in the interest of all the people, is to abolish the unemployed army with employment. The 30-hour week, compulsory for all industry, will be a long step toward this goal.

RELIEF LABOR TO CLEAR SNOW.

State emergency relief administrations have been notified that men on relief rolls may be used for snow-removal projects in all communities where there is need for such labor, it was announced by Harry L. Hopkins, administrator, federal emergency relief administration.

This action of the FERA, it is estimated, will give work to thousands of men who are in urgent need of help and will at the same time aid materially in keeping streets and sidewalks open for traffic in many communities where street cleaning departments are unable to cope with the storm.

If the Telephone were Not There!

MANY TIMES each day you reach for the telephone on your desk at the office or in its familiar spot at home. It is an old and trusted friend. You scarcely give a thought to what it means to a busy day.

Yet suppose the telephone were not there! Suppose—for a week—or a month—you could not call anybody by telephone and nobody could call you! The whole machinery of business and the home would be thrown out of gear. Orders would be lost—efficiency and profits reduced. You would be out of touch with your world.

America needs quick, reliable telephone service to get things done in the brisk, crisp American manner. And it enjoys the best service in the world. America leads in telephone service. In relation to population there are six times as many telephones in this country as in Europe and the telephone is used nine times as much.

Greater progress has been made in this country because of the Bell System's one policy, one system and universal service.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

The super-hyper-ultra rich are reported to be leaving New York. Gov. Lehman has proposed a state income tax, reaching to 7 per cent on incomes above $9,000. The Goelets and the De Pysters and others of the group whose living expenses are around $85,000 per year per family just naturally cannot stand such a levy; and they are moving to Rhode Island. That state, the report goes, knows how to show proper deference to wealth, and never soaks a millionaire more than $4 per $1,000 on his personal property.

Even in Rhode Island, however, the exceedingly rich will not escape the federal income tax, which is a good deal higher than what Gov. Lehman proposes. Not so high as it might be. The British income tax is notably higher than our own.

A married man with no dependents and an income of $100,000 a year pays $30,394 in taxes in the United States; and $45,304.69 in England. Uncle Sam takes $263,944 from an income of $500,000, married and with no dependents; while Britain collects $294,804.69 from a chap in the same circumstances. And such a man with $1,000,000 income would pay Britain $42,160.69 more than he would pay the United States.

As a matter of fact, the rich never have been "soaked" by income taxes in America—or in Britain, either. The man who complains of the "burden" of the surtaxes in either country is either a rotten sport, or he doesn't know what real burdens are.

What hardship is inflicted on the man with a million dollars of net income who has to pay $571,394 of it to Uncle Sam? None whatever. Even the apostles of plutocracy would not say that he is missing meals or lacking a place to sleep. Comfort and culture for himself and family, luxury in any sane proportions, and reasonable provision for the future can be secured with 10 per cent of what he has left.

Such a tax deprives Mr. Moneybags of just one thing—power, economic power, power to make others obey his will and pay him tribute. That is the only thing overstuffed wealth can buy for its owner; and it is the only thing that the income tax takes away from him.

The "burden" of the surtax! Mr. Moneybags, with a million-dollar income, has $428,606 left when he gets through paying his tax bill. One per cent of that sum would be $4,286. The Brookings institution has shown that in the prosperous year of 1929, nine-tenths of all the families in the United States lived on incomes of $4,600 a year or less.

In other words, 1 per cent of the income which Mr. Moneybags has left would put a family in the top layer of nine-tenths of the families of America. And still, we are asked to mourn for the sorrows of wealth with its burden of taxes.

Experimental Jobless Insurance

Turning the forty-eight states of the United States into forty-eight laboratories to experiment with a hodge-podge of unemployment insurance plans was recommended by the subcommittee which drew up the plan sponsored by President Roosevelt in order to try out various systems and ultimately determine which of them was most successful.

This was the explanation of the subcommittee's action which Alvan Hanson, chief economic analyst of the state department, who acted as chairman of the committee subcommittee, made to the house of representatives ways and means committee during the hearings on the bill. The subcommittee ignored the recommendation of the advisory group which studied the unemployment insurance question for a federal subsidy system, based upon a payroll tax of 5 per cent paid entirely by employers, although it carried the group by a vote of 9 to 7.

DECISIONS NOT ENFORCED.

Cincinnati.—Many of the decisions of the national labor relations board became mere scraps of paper without legal validity, according to a statement by Francis Biddle, chairman of the board, in an address before the Ninth district regional labor board here. He said:

"I think the enforcement feature of my board has broken down. It ought to be strengthened, let's admit it."

He declared the Blue Eagle is dead as a practical proposition, but expressed the view that it has great value as a moral symptom.

CENSURES SECURITY BILL.

New York.—The importance of an appeal to President Roosevelt to present a more adequate security measure to congress than the Wagner-Lewis bill was stressed by the Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise, rabbi of the Free Synagogue here, in a sermon on "The Roosevelt Revolution."

"The president deserves infinite credit for his aims, but the present program, although a vast advance, is far from being revolutionary," he said. "It represents the president under the pressure of the great and ruthless interests in America, which probably warned and threatened him until he found it needful to whittle down a program that would have been bloodlessly and gloriously revolutionary to a compromise which will give no security to millions."

FASCIST JAIL SOCIALISTS.

Vienna, Austria.—In a terroristic drive the officials of the fascist dictatorship here arrested a great many socialists in a determined effort to stamp out so-called social democratic "illegal literature." Herr Seiler, former editor of the social democratic official organ Arbeiter Zeitung, was among those arrested. He was charged with having organized the "February committee," which was planning demonstrations for the anniversary of last year's socialist uprising.

KOHLER OF KOHLER IS UNFAIR

To All Labor Unions, Union Members, Friends and Sympathizers:

Greeting:

Federal Labor Union No. 18545, composed of striking employes of the Kohler company, of Kohler, Wis., were forced to strike July 16, 1934, because of the Kohler company's refusal to deal fairly with the members of our organization.

The Kohler company organized a company union for the purpose to avoid dealing with a bona fide labor union.

The Kohler company refused every reasonable offer for a fair adjustment of wages, working conditions and for redress of many wrongs.

As a result of a cowardly attack on the pickets during the strike approximately fifty persons were injured.

Two men were killed during this massacre.

When Kohler workers were earning as low as $5.00 for a period of two weeks in 1933, Mr. Walter J. Kohler was receiving $22,000 a year salary and also received between $25,000 and $30,000 annually from his stock in the company.

The Kohler company has advertised widely its "model village." This has served as a smoke screen for the intolerable conditions in the plant of which the public was not advised. Less than 10 per cent of the working force lives in this so-called "model village" of Kohler.

The Kohler company manufactures plumbing fixtures, electric light and heating plants, steam plants, pottery ware, bath tubs, etc.

The Kohler company's ability to destroy our union depends upon the patronage of people using the products of Kohler.

We, Federal Labor Union No. 18545, chartered by the American Federation of Labor and affiliated to the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor and the Sheboygan Trades and Labor council, therefore appeal to all unions, union members, friends and sympathizers to abstain from the use and purchase of Kohler products until such time as the Kohler company shall assume a fair attitude toward us.

Remember, Kohler gunmen are still on the ground. Nevertheless, we are continuing to picket the plant. Our union has no intention of surrendering to Kohler millions and Kohler autocracy.

The conversion of Kohler can only be effected when they shall be deprived of the patronage which the company is seeking.

We respectfully and most earnestly appeal to all who from a sense of fairness are willing to help the cause of the workers who are being victimized by an autocratic corporation.

BUILDING UNIONS TO SETTLE ALL JURISDICTIONAL DISPUTES THROUGH CODE PLANNING BOARD

Disagreements Between Trades Over Work on Construction Jobs to Be Adjusted by Body Composed of Equal Number of Representatives of Workers and Employers, NRA Says.

Washington, Feb. 14.—All building trades unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor have agreed to settle jurisdictional disputes through the planning and adjustment board of the construction industry code, George L. Berry, division administrator of the NRA, announces.

The agreement is hailed here as a big forward step in the building industry and as offering increased hope for settlement of the controversy between the building trades unions affecting the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor.

In announcing the agreement, Administrator Berry, who is president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union of North America, emphasized its importance to the great building industry, on which industrial recovery so largely depends. He pointed out that jurisdictional disputes have frequently resulted in loss of time, reacting to the disadvantage of labor, capital and the public and causing great monetary and property losses.

Definite Agreement Made.

"Under the direction of the president," Mr. Berry said, "negotiations have been conducted for some months seeking to solve perhaps one of the greatest economic abuses of the construction industry of the United States, namely, jurisdictional disputes, and I am pleased to be able to say that the president's insistence in this matter has brought it to a finality. An agreement has been signed by all of the international building trades unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to definitely settle all jurisdictional disputes through the machinery set up in the planning and adjustment board of the construction industry code.

"The planning and adjustment board, made up of an equal number of contractors and representatives of building trades organizations, with a disinterested chairman, appointed by the president, offers the finest facilities for the rehabilitation of the building industry and the enlarged plans of the president for public works that has yet been conceived.

"There is no good reason why all the problems and differences as between government, private industry and labor should not be adequately and fairly solved within the sphere of the authority as well as the possibilities of the planning and adjustment board. The building trades unions of the American Federation of Labor are to be congratulated upon the definite commitals that have been made by signature and seal to the machinery set up in the planning and adjustment board for the settlement of jurisdictional disputes."

Wire Cos. Likely To Accept Code Urged by Labor

Washington, Feb. 14.—A proposed telegraph code which incorporates many of the provisions urged by labor has been drawn up and it is thought here that it will be accepted by the telegraph companies.

A report on the proposed code by the NRA labor advisory board recommends the 40-hour week, labor representation on code authorities with a vote, barring of workers under 16 years of age and every other suggestion made by President Frank B. Powers, of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of North America. The suggestions also include provisions for time and a half overtime after eight consecutive hours in any twenty-four, and after forty hours in any week, and double time for the seventh day in any week.

At a conference of NRA officials with telegraph heads, it was indicated the vital labor provisions would be accepted. The attitude of the telegraph companies is a distinct victory for President Powers, who has fought for months for a telegraph code with fair labor provisions.

President Powers told International Labor News Service that the latest proposals for the code represent a big step forward. He said that outside of a few minor objections which the union has filed it is pleased with the code. "We are quite well satisfied that the 40-hour week will satisfactorily increase employment," he added.

ARE YOU WILLING TO PAY HIGHER TAXES?

The law authorizing the $8,000,000 Bond Issue plainly states that you would HAVE to pay increased taxes!

Citizens . . . Taxpayers: Don't allow yourself to be tricked by political speeches. The thing you want is FACTS—and the way to get these FACTS about Increased Taxes is to read what the law itself says.

If you have the slightest doubt as to whether this $8,000,000 power bond issue would force you to pay higher taxes—

READ FOR YOURSELF →

. . . . . .

There you have, in plain black and white, the answer to your question: "If this $8,000,000 Bond Issue passes WILL I HAVE TO PAY MORE TAXES?"

The answer is YES! YOU WILL HAVE TO PAY—and pay dearly. The city tax rate would be raised from $1.86 per $100 of property to $2.76.

This is a 50 per cent increase in your taxes—at a time when the burden of your taxes is unbearable. Do you know that higher taxes mean HIGHER RENTS—and that a vote for this $8,000,000 Bond Issue is a vote to raise your rent—at a time when people cannot stand higher rents?

AN EXACT REPRODUCTION FROM SECTION 4 OF THE BOND ISSUE LEGISLATIVE ACT

Said bonds shall be known as "ELECTRIC POWER BONDS OF THE CITY OF CHATTANOOGA", and shall be direct and binding obligations of the City of Chattanooga, and it shall be the duty of the governing board of said city to levy a tax each year over and above the taxes levied for general municipal purposes to pay the interest and principal of said bonds as they mature, provided, however, that in event the revenue derived from the operation of the electric power plant and distribution system herein provided for is sufficient to pay the interest and principal of said bonds as they severally mature, then in that event it will not be necessary to make a special levy for this purpose, but the said city shall each year levy a sufficient amount which, when added to the amount of revenue derived from the operation of the said electric power plant and distribution system, will be sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds and the installments maturing.

Black-Draught Good For Biliousness and Bad Taste in Mouth

"I have found Thedford's Black-Draught so good for biliousness, bad taste in the mouth and other disagreeable feelings due to constipation," writes Mrs. Mary Garner, of Burleson, Texas. "My mother used it for a number of years and we do not think there is a better medicine. I was pleased when I saw Syrup of Black-Draught advertised. I sent for it and gave it to my children (as a laxative) for colds and when they felt bad. Soon they felt fine." . . . MORE ABOUT RECOVERY ACT with business is essential to the continuation of the programs we are working out for a more stable and more satisfactory industrial life in this country.

Organization Advocated.

I have on a number of occasions urged the necessity as well as the soundness of furthering the principle of collective bargaining as between labor and management. This is my personal point of view, but it is also set forth in the national industrial recovery act.

In pursuance of this policy as referred to, we must fully understand the difficulties attendant to its accomplishment by reason of the absence in many respects of a disciplined order both as it refers to labor and industry.

Notwithstanding this, it must be obvious that the best possible results in rehabilitating our economic structure is to be found in the well organized and highly developed organization of both employes and employers, with their relationship resting upon the foundation of conciliation and arbitration and the full and frank recognition of the unescapable community of interests to be found in industry itself.

Work of A. F. of L. Praised.

The federal government has indicated through the national industrial recovery act its desire that labor and management organize for the purposes of collective bargaining and the furtherance of industrial peace and prosperity, but the federal government cannot, of course, undertake to compel employes and employers to organize. It should be a voluntary organization.

To you of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, permit me to very definitely assure you of my appreciation and recognition of the federation in the work of rehabilitating industry and in the protection of our country itself. No one can disregard the importance of the American Federation of Labor as one of the great and outstanding institutions of the country. It has been my purpose to recognize this in every practical and logical way, and I have no intention of changing my point of view.

Patience Is Advised.

My impression is that our difficulties are found largely in the heretofore totally unorganized field, both as it affects employers and employes. In such cases we must have patience.

Finally, permit me to say that we are seeking to promote peace, co-operation and understanding in all the industries of the United States between labor and management, and to the end that we can eliminate the inequalities and institute practical and scientific stabilization for the common good of all those engaged in industry as well as for the nation itself.

Charity Hospital Workers Forced to Aid Long "Machine"

New Orleans.—Charity hospital workers will have 5 per cent taken out of their semimonthly salaries for the rest of the year to provide the Long organization with funds for the 1936 gubernatorial campaign. The 5 per cent "kick-back" has been in effect for a month or so, and the workers thought it was only a temporary levy. Members of the political administration, however, have informed them that it will continue at least through January, 1936, when the gubernatorial campaign takes place. About $600 a month is obtained by the Long machine in this way. In addition, other levies are made occasionally. Recently all hospital workers had to buy "Kingfish" buttons, purrchasing them through agents specified by the administration.

Relief Workers Strike Against Pay Reduction

Fort Smith, Ark.—More than 500 relief workers in South Sebastian county are idle with the announced intention of presenting a strong passive protest over the reduction in relief wages ordered for the county and the state of Arkansas, effective Feb. 1. Some 225 workers left their jobs to join 300 others in a walkout over a reduction of 20 cents an hour in relief pay. Approximately 1,500 workmen are listed on projects in the section.

ANTI-RED BILL APPROVED.

New Orleans.—The Alabama house of representatives has passed the Street sedition bill "aimed to wipe communism out of Alabama," by a vote of 71 to 24 after exempting newspapers and magazines that are permitted to be sent through the United States mails.

MORE ABOUT NEW WOLL BOOK

growth, encouraging the amalgamation or co-ordination of collective effort of unions through agreement and voluntary acquiescence.

"It has shown itself ready to accept the changes made advisable by the development of mass production . . . Never has American labor been so united as at the present moment."

A critic might say that the federation broke no speed limits in recognizing the need of meeting and dealing with mass production; but the important fact is that the federation has reached that point, and is shaping its action accordingly.

Praises Labor's Achievements.

Woll glorifies in the records and achievements of labor; and it is very good to have more books written with that in the writer's mind. He tells a brief story of the services of organized labor to education, to improving the lot of all workers, union or otherwise. He points out that labor saw in the early twenties that our so-called prosperity was headed toward disaster, which could be averted only by a fairer distribution of wealth.

He quotes from the famous report which the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. made to the Portland convention in 1923, and which the convention ratified by unanimous vote:

"Industry must realize that it exists to give service to a nation, and not to a single master or to a syndicate of stockholders. We must have an American industrial life, an American industrial order, not a group of warring units, each seeking to be a law unto itself."

It may be fairly said that the national recovery act was an attempt to embody this warning in a system of industrial law.

Plain Warning Given.

Woll gives other instances of labor's foresight, and says:

"Here were plain warnings from labor, repeated and repeated. Labor saw and said that the industrial chiefs of the nation had embarked on a dangerous course. It proclaimed that mass production must be balanced by mass consumption, and that the only way under our present system to increase mass buying power lies in raising wages and improving the position of the farmers.

"In fact, the most advanced financial writers and spokesmen of today have scarcely learned the truths which labor has been telling for from nine to eleven years."

One chapter of the book is an eloquent defense of the right to strike—which may yet prove the necessary base for gaining of all other economic rights. He deals with many other topics of the day—labor's wage theory, co-operation with management, foreign trade, incorporation of labor unions and injunctions in labor disputes. He turns thumbs down on the last two and as for foreign trade, he has his doubts that it is worth the pother we have made over it. Certainly, it will help us little if we do not set our house in order at home.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS IN SWEDEN.

Old-age pensions are now guaranteed to nearly 4,000,000 persons in Sweden, and since the total population is only a little over 6,000,000, this means practically all adults.

Shack occupied by Lillian Brown, employe of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company, Winston-Salem, N. C. Five in family. Wages from $3 to $4 a week. Rent of shack, $1.50 for two rooms.

By George L. Knapp.

Washington.—"When I ran a machine seven years ago," said a tobacco worker, "I got 46 cents an hour. I am running the same kind of machine now, only more efficient, and in the same factory. I am now making 40 cents an hour."

This was said to the present writer on a personal trip to the tobacco belt of North Carolina. It is a fair illustration of what has happened to the more fortunate tobacco workers. Production has gone up, and wages have gone down. The coming of the NRA seems to have checked the decline—again speaking only of the comparatively fortunate; but since the tobacco industry has managed to stave off the adoption of a code for a year and a half, the effect has not been great. The most consistent fact in the region dominated by the Big Four is pressure on wages.

Just in passing, S. Clay Williams, chairman of the national industrial recovery board, may not have been responsible for delaying the tobacco code so long, but all the workers in the tobacco district think he was.

Wages of Best Paid Low.

Still keeping to the lucky ones, a cigarette machine operator in the Reynolds plant gets 48 cents an hour, and a cuff machine operator the same. A cigarette machine inspector gets 34 cents. Machine feeders and inspectors get 30 cents.

Thus, on a 40-hour week, the best paid ones get $19.20 a week; and the common run of machine feeders and tenders, much more numerous, get $12. In the smoking tobacco plant at Reynolds, tobacco grinders and tobacco sifters get the same 30-cent—$12 wage. The snuff industry pays a little better; a machine operator there gets 55 cents an hour, $22 a week; but Reynolds doesn't make snuff.

All the workers thus far mentioned are getting what the tobacco trade calls high wages. Turn now to the less fortunate, the stemmers. Practically all the stemmers are negroes, and most of them are women. Women habitually get lower wages than men although they were given equal pay for the same work when McAdoo took over the railroads—and colored men usually get more than their share of industrial oppression.

Glaring Wage Exploitation.

Both these factories seemed to have been used to the limit to squeeze the last atom of pay out of the tobacco stemmers.

A sample list of forty-nine stemmers, working in establishments of the R. J. Reynolds company, was compiled by union officials in Winston-Salem, giving the number in the family, the weekly wages and the rent.

The forty-nine "breadwinners" earned collectively $228 a week for the period covered. They paid $88.75 a week for rent. This left them $139.2,5 a week for all other purposes—food, clothing, furniture, medicine—everything. It comes to an average net wage of $2.84 per family, over and above rent. Or, spreading it evenly among the 210 persons found in the families of the group, it gives each person the magnificent sum of 66 1/3 cents a week to provide for all his necessities and luxuries, except a place to sleep.

U. S. Makes Up Pay Deficit.

No argument is needed to show that families cannot live, cannot even exist, on such incomes. Odd jobs and the wages of other members of the family provide some help; but it must be clear to anyone that the basis of support for these families is public relief.

Uncle Sam provides most of that relief. The only relief worker who gave me definite figures on this point said that in his city, relief expenditures ran from $50,000 to $60,000 a month. Of say $51,000 of relief expenses, the federal government furnished $45,000, the city $3,000, and the combined "charities," including the subscription of the tobacco companies, $3,000.

In other words, Uncle Sam is subsidizing the big four tobacco companies by supporting the families of workers whom the big four need, but will not support. Some time ago, it was publicly declared that 400 families on relief in Winston-Salem had members working in the Reynolds stemmeries. One wonders that there were only 400. Reynolds is credited—or debited—with three-quarters of all the stemmers employed in that city at the peak; 3,677 out of a total of 4,946.

If only 400 were on relief, what did the other stemmers live on?

Francis Gorman Slated to Speak At Knoxville

Given Under Auspices of Knoxville Central Labor Union.

Peel, George Dempster, Maj. Berry and Mayor O'Connor on Program.

Some half-dozen automobiles of Chattanooga trades unionists are preparing to leave Chattanooga early Sunday morning to visit Knoxville for the mass meeting scheduled for 2:30 that afternoon. Knoxville Central Labor union has arranged for a speaking, at which Francis J. Gorman, first vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, will be the main attraction. John Peel, well known and well liked in Chattanooga, will be on the platform with Gorman.

The mayor of Knoxville, John O'Connor, himself a prominent and old-time trades unionist, and Maj. George L. Berry, president of the Pressmen's International union, will tell citizens of Knoxville of the aims and purposes of the American Federation of Labor.

There will be no admission charges and no collections taken up. The speaking will be held in Market hall.

Machinists of Lowell, Mass., Sign Closed Shop Agreement

The Harvard Brewing company, of Lowell, Mass., has recently signed a closed shop agreement with the International Association of Machinists, Local 138. The agreement, very short in nature, provides a wage scale of $1.00 per hour, five days per week and eight hours per day. Provision is also made for arbitration agreement, which will eliminate necessity for future strikes or disturbances.

MEMBERS OF LOCAL 1785 SUFFER BEREAVEMENTS IN THEIR FAMILIES

The Death Angel visited two families of members of Textile Local 1785 within the past week. On Feb. 14, Mr. Frank Pitts, father of Lucille Ward, passed away at his home in Peavine, Ga. On Feb. 16 the baby of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Garrett was taken away.

Following resolutions from the local union to express its sympathy with the bereaved members were passed:

TURKISH WOMEN VOTE.

Istanbul, Turkey.—Turkish women were eligible to vote for the first time at the recent general elections to choose 399 deputies for the grand national assembly of Turkey. Popular enthusiasm for the election is dimmed by the fact that only one political party, the republican people's party, exists. The party approves all candidates. The election is therefore largely a question of personal popularity.

OPEN HOUSE SET TO HEAR SEEKERS OF PUBLIC OFFICE

Regular Session of Central Body Given Over Entirely to Candidates' Plea.

Open house for all candidates for election to public office will be held next Monday night, Feb. 25. Following the annual custom, Chattanooga Trades and Labor council has set aside this evening when no business will be transacted other than to listen to the pleas and argument of candidates. Although limited time will be allowed each aspirant for office, each one will be free to say anything he desires. No one in the audience will be permitted to heckle or ask questions—in other words, they will be guests and will be treated as such.

The meeting will be open to only trades unionists and their families.

Such meetings in the past have been largely attended and a good time had by all. The affair will be opened promptly at 7 o'clock instead of the usual hour of 7:30. President Kamin says that he will bring the gavel down promptly, and requests that co-operation be shown.

Rubber Workers Out in Ohio City

Willoughby, O., Feb. 21.—A deputy sheriff was beaten and six union pickets injured after United Rubber Workers went on strike at the Ohio Rubber company plant, here.

The plant normally employs 900 workers and has been working at capacity. Strike leaders claimed 750 of the workers as union members.

The walkout climaxed breakdown of negotiations which started last July. George Roberts, A. F. of L. organizer from the National Rubber Workers' council at Akron, said. The men are seeking observation of seniority rights, the check-off system, and abolition of a small company union.

PRISON-MADE GOODS CURB.

Washington.—The prison labor authority filed with the national recovery administration a plan for the creation of a million-dollar corporation for the purpose of reducing the sale of convict-made goods on the open market and to provide an adequate amount of employment of prisoners. Under the scheme sponsored by the authority, the federal government would aid the establishment by any state of prison industries, the products will be sold to tax-supported state agencies or in limited quantities in the open market. The open-market sales of prison goods is opposed by organized labor, which holds that they should be sold exclusively to state institutions.

ICKES SUPPORTS LOW WAGES.

Denver, Colo.—Low wages for the millions of unemployed who will be hired to work on the government's $4,800,000,000 work-relief projects were advocated by Secretary of the Interior Ickes in a speech here before the chamber of commerce. Declaring that the purpose of the government is to encourage private business, Secretary Ickes declared that while the wage rates on government projects would be higher than existing relief roll payments they would be far enough below rates paid by private employers so that the "carpenter or laborer who is working on a public works administration project will be glad to accept employment on a privately-financed project when the opportunity offers itself."

Labor's Fight for Prevailing Wages on Work Relief Jobs Before United States Senate

English Woman To Speak Here

Jennie Lee, Former Member of Parliament, to Talk on War.

Jennie Lee, of London, England, has just arrived in the United States from the troubled areas of Spain. She will speak here Feb. 28 at 8 o'clock at the Hamilton county courthouse on "Preparations for World War." Miss Lee will be introduced by Mrs. Abby Crawford Milton, who will also act as chairman of the meeting. This lecture is one of the series planned by the League for Industrial Democracy and sponsored by the Chattanooga Forum.

This is the third consecutive year that Jennie Lee has come to the United States under the auspices of the League for Industrial Democracy. She is a charming speaker with a vivacious manner that is both brilliant and entertaining. Since her early youth Miss Lee has been active in the Scotch and British labor movement. She is the daughter of a Scotch miner and her grandfather was one of the founders and leaders of the union movement in North Lanark, Scotland.

Miss Lee attended the village school in her own community and went from there to Edinburgh university, where she was graduated with the degrees of M. A. and L.L. B. Following her graduation from the university, Miss Lee taught school. During this time she was actively campaigning during election time for independent labor party candidates in Scotland. In 1929 she was elected to parliament, the youngest member to be seated. She was re-elected at the next general election and astute political observers believe she will be returned to parliament when the next general elections are held.

Miss Lee is a speaker and writer of rare ability. Her travels have been almost world-wide. She has made frequent trips to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, Germany, Austria and Spain.

In the fall of 1934 Miss Lee was married to Anuerin Bevin, labor party member of parliament from the mining regions of Wales.

The next speaker on the League for Industrial Democracy lecture series will be Broadus Mitchell. The subject to be discussed is "The Coming Struggle for Power."

Active Unionist Escapes Grand Jury Impersonation Charges

Nope! Attorney Chambliss Did Not Instigate This Attack—It Might Give Him Ideas, However.

Reports from the office of the attorney-general for Hamilton county have it that a certain well-known trades unionist, sometimes going under an alias of "Firepot," was placed under indictment for impersonation.

When questioned, Assistant Darwin, of Atty.-Gen. Howard's office, said that the indictment was quashed when it was found that the defense would be offered that the impersonation was carried on with such poor effect no one could have been taken in by the deceit. Thereupon, when the charge of impersonating a plumber was withdrawn, "Firepot," whose real identity was not made known, was said to have left the courthouse overjoyed at his luck in escaping.

PRESIDENT GREEN APPEALS FOR McCARRAN AMENDMENT SUPPORT

Bill as Reported Out Is Menace to Wage and Living Standards, Senators Told—Labor Head, Leaving for Speaking Trip, Warns of Strike Against Automobile Labor Board.

Washington, Feb. 21.—Following up its fight before the senate appropriations committee for inclusion of a prevailing rate of wages clause in the administration $4,880,000,000 work relief bill, the American Federation of Labor has carried the battle to the membership of the senate. The battle was begun with a letter to each senator, signed by President Green, urging support of the McCarran amendment to the bill providing for payment of prevailing rate of wages.

In a blast before leaving for a week's speaking trip in the automobile manufacturing centers, President Green hit out at the reports of the automobile labor board on the recent elections in automobile plants and strongly hinted that if necessary a strike would be called to force removal of the board, which has been repeatedly denounced by the A. F. of L. and auto workers' unions.

"Evidently the report is designed to allay the opposition of automobile workers generally to the work of the board and the board itself," Green said. "The automobile board has lost the confidence of the automobile workers. This lost confidence cannot be regained through the submission of figures regarding the number of cases handled and analysis of the disposition made of such cases. In giving consideration to this reyort the automobile workers will be reminded that in no single instance has the board actually ordered any worker who has been discharged or discriminated against, re-employed or rehired.

Says Board Must Go.

"The automobile workers, members of federal labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, will have nothing to do with the automobile labor board. They insist that it shall pass out of the picture and that an independent national labor relations board under Resolution No. 44 be created.

"The automobile workers," said Green in ending, "should not be compelled to go on strike to force removal of the automobile labor board as it is now constituted."

Green again emphasized labor's stand on the automobile labor board in the first speech of his speaking tour, at Cleveland. The board, he declared, "has got to go." He flayed company unionism and warned of a strike.

"We plan to attack and wage unrelenting war on the company union," the labor head said. "It is the company's pet plaything. We hold it unfair for either industry or government to force us to strike to get rid of it—but get rid of it we will!"

The labor appeal to senators on behalf of the McCarran amendment to the work relief bill leaves no doubt as to where labor stands on a compromise amendment adopted in the face of determined A. F. of L. opposition. This amendment, offered by Senator Russell, of Georgia, provides that if the wages paid by the government endangers the prevailing rates on similar construction, the federal rate shall be changed.

Labor Not Protected.

"This amendment," Green told the senators, "if adopted, will in no way protect labor in its efforts to protect wage standards set in different communities as a result of years of struggle and effort on the part of organized labor.

"We are of the opinion that a relief wage established on a lower basis than the prevailing rate of pay will tear down our wage standards and, either directly or indirectly, cause reduction in the wages of American working people.

Matter Vital to Labor.

"For this reason I appeal to you in behalf of labor to vote against the Russell amendment and to support the amendment offered by Senator McCarran providing for the recognition, observance and protection of prevailing rates of pay in each community.

"Labor regards this matter as very vital and of tremendous importance."

Senators are further told that the Russell amendment is totally unacceptable to labor and that labor cannot permit a temporary relief measure to be used as an instrumentality through which standards of living shall be lowered.

FLASH!

The United States senate on Thursday passed the McCarran prevailing wage amendment into the president's $4,880,000,000 relief bill.

Columbian Plant Loses NRA Fight To Molders' Union

Press dispatches of Feb. 19 from Washington say that the Columbian Iron works, of this city, has been given until Feb. 23 to bargain collectively with its employes. This complaint had been presented to the NRA authorities by the local Molders' union and has been hanging fire for some time.

The dispatch says that in event of continued refusal of the Columbian works to deal collectively with its employes, the case will be referred to other governmental agencies for appropriate action.

CANDIDATES QUESTIONED.

The Federated Trades council of Milwaukee, Wis., voted to submit a questionnaire to fifty-six school board candidates to determine their qualifications to administer the public schools. Organized labor will ask the candidates if they believe the schools should maintain inviolate the principles of academic freedom. The questionnaires will also ask whether candidates are of the opinion that public school students should be informed on all phases of controversial issues connected with present social and economic problems.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What is the usual minimum age for employment of children set by state legislation?

A.—While four states have set the minimum at 16 years, the majority cling to a 14-year minimum, and nine, through exemptions, allow boys and girls less than 14 years of age to work in factories during school vacations because of poverty, or other reasons.

Q.—Did Connecticut once find it necessary to pass a law prohibiting the employment in factories of young children?

A.—Yes. In 1855, Connecticut excluded children less than 9 years old from factories.

Q.—Is the Amalgamated Lithogravers of America on old union?

A.—It was organized in 1882 and is thus one of the oldest affiliated organizations of the American Federation of Labor.

Kept Taking Cardui Until She Got Rid of the Severe Pains

When Mrs Ida Hege, of Edinburg, Ind., was in a painful, rundown condition, she took Cardui, with the results she describes below: "I had just been what one might say dragging around, feeling miserable and all out of sorts. I remembered how Cardui helped my aunt. I sent for six bottles of Cardui and when I had taken them, I was much better and stronger. I did not suffer so much pain. I continued taking Cardui until I had taken nine bottles. I do not have the severe pains." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

The Prize Write-Up

The FTC last week presented what ought to be the prize example of utilities write-up. The Electric Power and Light Corporation was organized to take over assets of the Utah Securities Corporation of the Electric Bond and Share group. The Utah corporation carried these assets on its books at a valuation of $3,854,264. But when transferred to the Electric Power and Light, they were written up to $33,373,344.

This is almost ten times their original valuation, and not a nickel of value had been added.

The FTC points out two evils resulting from such write-ups. When securities are diluted this way, the whole capital structure becomes weak and waterlogged, and the least ill luck means disaster. The FTC cites the case of the Tri-Utilities Corporation, which went broke; and the preferred creditors received 3½ mills on the dollar. But another and greatest evil, the commission believes, is the excuse which these fantastic valuations give for high rates.

The Labor Havoc of Inventions

The NRA report on the automobile industry gives figures on the displacement of labor which are not less than appalling.

In 1928, a firm making bodies for automobiles had a wood mill that employed 3,000 men. Today, it has no wood mill; wood is not used in modern automobile bodies. In 1929, the labor cost of making doors in one plant was $4 per door. Today, the labor cost is 15 cents per door.

When the depression began, one manufacturer finished 100 8-cylinder motor blocks on a given line-up with 250 men. Now, he finishes 250 motor blocks on that line-up with nineteen men. A firm making roller bearings employed between 1,000 and 1,100 men only a year ago. Now, 150 men have been dropped from the payroll, while production has gone up 15 per cent.

"This has been accomplished," says the report, "by speed-up and labor-eliminating machinery."

While development of automatic machinery is going faster in the automobile industry than in most other forms of work, it is proceeding everywhere. And wherever it comes, there is a trail of lost jobs and broken homes.

The remedy does not lie in stopping invention. That simply cannot be done. The remedy lies in making a fair distribution of the benefits of invention. Every discovery which lessens the need of human workers should be reflected in lower prices, shorter hours or higher wages—or all three; and definite rules must be worked out for compensating workers who are displaced by science and invention.

The fact that no one at the present time knows just what those rules should be only emphasizes the need of a prompt start at finding out.

Have a Care

Speaking at the economic association meeting at Chicago, two messages so different that they might seem contradictory, were delivered by two eminent authorities. John T. Ferris, of the TVA, insisted that industry must be decentralized; that manufacturers must be carried out to the country, rather than all the rural and village populations required to come to great cities for things that could be made just as well next door. While Carter Goodrich, of Columbia university, pointed out that "a cow and a few acres" may tie working men down in fields where there are few sources of employment, and where they might be worse off than if foot-loose and able to migrate.

Both the learned gentlemen are right. The waste of our centralized industry today is nothing less than appalling. There was some reason for centralization in New York when foreign commerce played an important part in our industrial life. But for years, less than 7 per cent of our total transactions have crossed the national boundary; and our exports are chiefly agricultural.

And yet the thoughtful worker would be rash indeed if he did not look with some alarm on the blithe proposal to distribute our industries. There is no worse industrial despotism on the continent today than the small mill town, unless it be the coal camp. Only when working men are brought together in sufficient numbers that their mass, when organized, is a counterweight to the capital of the boss, can they hope to bargain on even terms.

Economy would be too expensive if bought at the price of any of that still small quantity of liberty which labor has been fighting for so long.

Forced by NRA Agencies to Pay Over $3,000,000 in Back Wages

Washington.—Restitution of back wages to employes, arranged through NRA field offices and the newly organized regional compliance councils, has exceeded $3,000,000, figures released by the director of compliance and enforcement show.

This figure does not include authenticated reports of restitutions arranged by code authorities, which amount to well over half a million dollars, or by any other agencies except the NRA offices outside of Washington headquarters.

Restitution figures were not tabulated before June 16, 1934, but it is estimated that in the first year the field offices arranged for payment of $1,000,000 to workers. Since June 16, 1934, detailed statistics are available; the total sum restored has been $2,152,102.97.

These sums represent the difference between what was paid to employes by chiseling employers and what they should have received under the appropriate NRA code of the president's re-employment agreement.

Some 21,083 cases have been adjusted by wage restitution, of which 756 involved the PRA. The total number of employes who received the restitution since June 16, 1934, is 87,922.

ATLANTIC CITY SELECTED FOR 1935 A. F. OF L. CONVENTION

Executive Council Ends Meeting After Over Two Weeks of Strenuous Work and Outstanding Accomplishments.

Washington.—The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, meeting in Washington since Jan. 30, adjourned the meeting Feb. 14. All seventeen members of the council attended.

While no official announcement concerning the general work of the Executive Council has been issued, it is generally known that outstanding accomplishments were realized.

A goodly portion of the time of the council members was taken up with important interviews and hearings, such as the NRA and 30-hour work week bill hearings and the interviews with Secretary of Labor Perkins and President Roosevelt. This, of course, was aside from the many regular sessions of the council devoted entirely to numerous important federation subjects.

Select Atlantic City.

After extensive consideration of all angles, the executive council finally decided that the fifty-fifth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor will be held this year in Atlantic City, N. J. It will begin the first Monday in October, which will be Oct. 7. During the week prior to the regular federation convention, the several departments of the A. F. of L. will hold their regular annual conventions. Secretary Morrison and an official of each department left for Atlantic City the day after the executive council meeting adjourned, to complete arrangements of necessary details. Official notice of the convention will be released in due course.

REACTIONARY LABOR PROGRAM OF BIG BUSINESS IS REVEALED

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Feb. 22.—Big business representatives, meeting here in a discussion of recovery steps, took the lid off and revealed their whole reactionary purpose when the group drafting a "cooperative" proposal for labor legislation agreed on the principles of its program.

The plan still has to be acted upon by the whole conference. But in its essentials the sub-committee's recommendations appeared likely to be adopted. It proposed:

1. Insistence that employers be accorded the specific right to bargain collectively with organizations or individuals.
2. Opposition to the majority rule of employes representatives.
3. Prohibition of sympathetic or general strikes.
4. Legal responsibility for the conduct of both employer and employe organizations and prevention of coercion either by the employer or by unions.
5. Binding of employers to continue labor provisions in codes even after the codes themselves might be relinquished if they are put on a voluntary basis.

LYNCHING SCORED.

Washington.—Senator Edward P. Costigan, co-author of the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching bill, denounced lynching to a senate sub-committee as "open anarchy." Costigan, the first of a large panel of witnesses, said he believed lynching could be eliminated entirely by this law.

The bill provides that any county in which a person is lynched will be subject to claims for damages from $2,000 to $10,000 to the relatives of the victim.

Senator Wagner, co-author of the bill, told the committee:

"The lynchings perpetrated the past two years constitute almost every type of infamy that blot the record of civilization."

YOUTHS OF 16 REFUSED JOBS.

Many British employers have established the practice of dismissing boys and girls of 16 years from employment, according to statements at the higher education conference of the National Union of Teachers in London. Children are eligible for higher wages when they are 16.

"I know a firm which takes practically all the boys and girls in the neighborhood into its employ in midsummer," one teacher from Manchester said. "Almost the same number of boys and girls of 16 and 17 get notice to cease work. I know of two different towns in the north of England where nearly every milk boy ceases employment at 16."

that the city would lose $1,200,000 A YEAR experimenting in the POWER BUSINESS!

Let's stop all this political flim-flam and get down to cold facts. Here---in simple arithmetic---is what you will have dumped off on you if this $8,000,000 BOND ISSUE should pass.

CITIZENS and TAXPAYERS...HERE IS THE PROOF!

Cost of Operating Proposed City System:

Cost of power to city from T. V. A.	$ 680,000
Operating Expenses, Employes' wages, materials and supplies	400,000
Interest on $8,000,000 bonds	480,000
Installment payment on bonds	300,000
Depreciation, Reserves and Additions to power system	490,000
Taxes now paid to city and county by Power Company	300,000
Total cost to operate proposed city system	$2,650,000
Revenue from sale of city power assuming 10% surcharge	$1,450,000

ANNUAL LOSS TO CITY $1,200,000.00

The politicians say that the proposition is to cheap T. V. A. power. IS IT CHEAP AT THIS PRICE? . . . AT A LOSS OF $1,200,000 A YEAR.

THEN ADD TO THAT LOSS, THE FURTHER LOSS OF $500,000 A YEAR PAY ROLL OF POWER COMPANY'S HEADQUARTERS EMPLOYEES WHO WOULD BE TRANSFERRED TO OTHER CITIES.

How Will the City Make Up This Loss of Over a MILLION DOLLARS a Year?
By Collecting Additional Taxes From the People!

THE POLITICIANS WHO FRAMED THIS BILL KNOW THIS. THEY KNOW THAT A CITY-OWNED PLANT IN CHATTANOOGA WON'T PAY. SO THEY ARRANGED TO HAVE YOU PAY, BY PUTTING THE FOLLOWING IN SECTION 4 OF THE LAW. READ IT:

"It shall be the duty of the governing board of said city to levy a tax each year over and aboxe the taxes levied for general municipal purposes, to pay the interest and principal of said bonds as they mature."

And how much would your tax increase be? About 90c on the $100, so that you could pay the interest and installment on this $8,0000,000 of borrowed money.

Your present tax rate is $1.86. It will be $2.76 if the politicians get you to vote this $8,000,000 DEBT. Just a 50 per cent increase in your taxes, that's all.

And if you don't pay it in TAXES, you will pay it in HIGHER RENTS. No matter who you are, you won't escape your part of paying this loss.

LABOR URGED TO FORCE BETTER CODE PROVISIONS

New York City, Feb. 21.—Better enforcement of labor provisions in NRA codes and changes of provisions to improve wage and working standards was urged by trade union executives and others at a symposium held here by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

Julius Hochman, general manager of the joint board of the Dress and Waistmakers' union, predicted a wave of strikes unless Section 7-A of the recovery act is enforced. He also said:

"If times do not improve soon, then the disappointed labor forces will probably not resort to strikes but will attempt to do things by political action. Probably there will be an effort made to organize a third political party, to be called a labor party, or otherwise, but in any event with the backing of labor."

Labor Disappointed.

David Dubinsky, president of the union, said that labor was disappointed with the results of the codes, but that he favored retention of NRA and would rely on strikes to win code enforcement, if other means of enforcement failed.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, President Dubinsky said, was working under a code much more satisfactory, from the viewpoint of labor, than those existing in many other industries. This, he said, was due to the fact that the organization was strong enough to force acceptance of its demands by the employers during the process of code making.

President Roosevelt, the union head predicted, would lean in future code negotiations toward the side that shows it has sufficient force behind it to demand respect.

Mr. Dubinsky urged union leaders to insist upon classified wage minimums in all codes, with wages specified by crafts, to prevent any reduction of the wages of skilled workers to the unskilled level.

7-A Declared Not Enforced.

Other speakers were Clinton S. Golden, mediator of the Pennsylvania state department of labor and industry, who said the "feudal" organization of the steel industry, rather than any indifference of steel mill employes, was responsible for the failure of steel workers to organize more extensively; Charleton Ogburn, counsel for the automobile unions of the American Federation of Labor, who declared that a wide interest in organization exists in the automotive industry, and Miss Charlotte S. Carr, former secretary of labor in Pennsylvania.

Miss Carr said Section 7-A and the labor provisions of the industrial codes were not being enforced. She stressed that the unions must assume the responsibility for "policing" the codes and for bringing about a change in the system of leaving enforcement to code authorities dominated by employers.

SOCIALISTS ORGANIZE BOYCOTT AGAINST NATIONAL BISCUIT CO.

Chicago.—The socialist party announces that a nation-wide housewives' boycott of Uneed bakers' products would be launched in support of the strike of 6,000 employes of the National Biscuit company, makers of Uneeda cakes, cookies and crackers.

This action was taken, said Paul Porter, socialist national labor secretary, because the biscuit company has refused to negotiate with strikers' committees in any of the five cities where the strike is in progress. The strike was called by unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor on Jan. 8 in New York, Atlanta, Newark, Philadelphia and York, Pa., following the collapse of seven months' negotiations with the company for a pay increase.

Food stores selling National Biscuit company products will be asked by the housewives' committee to remove them from their shelves until the company grants the strikers' demands, Porter said.

The aid of the socialist party in organizing the boycott was requested by William A. Galvin, president of the Inside Bakery Workers' Union No. 19585, on behalf of the A. F. of L. unions involved in the strike.

BURKE ASKS PROTECTION FOR NEWSPRINT WORKERS

Washington.—John P. Burke, president of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers of the United States and Canada, charged American publishers with making arrangements for securing newsprint in Scandinavia as a protection against possible price boosts by Canadian producers at the hearing here on a proposed reciprocal tariff agreement with Finland.

"The large publishers," he said, "are determined to get newsprint at ridiculously low prices, even if it destroys the United States industry." He urged the government not to take any action with Finland which would prevent the application to protective measures for American producers. In this connection he directed attention to the anti-dumping laws.

Pointing out that newsprint manufacturers in the United States provide only 957,000 tons out of 3,000,000 tons consumed in 1934, despite a productive capacity of 1,800,000 tons, Mr. Burke declared the domestic industry is "in a precarious condition."

MINERS BACK GUFFEY COAL REGULATION BILL

Washington.—The Guffey coal bill, which would set up a commission to regulate the industry on a public utility basis, was indorsed before the senate interstate commerce committee by representatives of the United Mine Workers of America.

The bill was explained by its author, Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, in a statement to the committee, as a measure which would eliminate abuses in the soft coal industry and prove of benefit to workers, operators and the public.

YOUTH ASK CHILD LABOR BAN.

New York.—Plans for a campaign to collect 1,000,000 signatures of young people urging the New York legislature to approve the federal child labor amendment were announced by the New York state committee against child labor. The effort of the youth committee is sponsored by the Young Women's Christian association, the Greater New York Federation of Churches, the Federal Council of Churches, and a number of other prominent religious, reformist and student organizations.

Gen. Wood Is Named Relief Fund Chief

Washington. — President Roosevelt appointed Gen. Robert E. Wood, chief executive of Sears-Roebuck & Co., as his main advisor on the administration of the $4,800,000,000 work relief fund

Gen. Wood's appointment was announced by Secretary of Commerce Roper following a conference at the White House attended by the secretary, Gen. Wood, and Henry P. Kendall, chairman of the business council.

It was stated that although technically heading a committee of the Business Advisory and Planning council to consult with the president on how the billions shall be expended, Gen. Wood would in effect be the virtual administrator of the fund.

WOMEN WORKERS GALORE.

According to reliable reports there are about 2,000,000 women office workers in the United States.

Everything's been printed about the World war except the list of millionaires who were killed in it.

Interesting revelations have been coming through about incomes. The House of Have still seems to get along fairly well, thank you. More million-dollar incomes.

Out of whom do they come? Some day some one will do a real job of taking apart the books of big business, to show who gets what for doing how much.

A worker lives on ten bucks a week. Millions, almost, do it. Lots of them get nothing just now. The Reynolds babies, through lawyers, fight over millions of dollars. Neither of those babies ever did a stroke of work. Yet they are rich, fabulously rich.

What's it all about? Ask that question of those around you. Put the answers together and see where it leaves you.

SMEDLEY BUTLER SCORES USE OF STATE MILITIA IN STRIKES

Chicago.—In a scathing criticism of the use of national guardsmen during strikes, Gen. Smedley D. Butler outspoken ex-head of the Marines, tells the world about "double standard law enforcement," in an article, entitled "Dog Eat Dog," in the current issue of the (union printed) magazine, Real America.

In his own inimitable fashion, Gen. Butler writes in part: "During the past eight months I have traveled through forty states and spoken at more than three hundred meetings. I've talked with farmers and miners, small town business men and mill hands, railroad section men and housewives. In fact, I've talked with a cross section of real America; with the people who made this nation the greatest country on earth. There is a feeling that various settlements of recent labor disputes haven't given the little fellow what was promised when the recovery act was signed."

Striking at what he terms the "double standard of law and order," Gen. Butler writes: "For years the industrialists have depended on the state militia—in many cases their own workers—to break strikes for them. And they've always done it with the plea that 'law and order must be preserved.' What industry means by law and order is this: They are strong believers in a system which encourages company thugs and national guardsmen to kill honest workmen under the guise of 'protecting' a few mill windows from breakage during the stress and excitement of a strike without any consequences."

TEXTILE WORKERS TO PUSH UNION ORGANIZATION WORK

Washington, Feb. 22.J"As the result of the meeting of our executive council in New York, from which I have just returned, organizing work throughout the textile area, North and South, will proceed with renewed vigor and with certain new features," said Vice President Francis J. Gorman of the United Textile Workers of America at his office in Washington. The executive council meeting was held in New York city at national headquarters of the union.

"Discussion of an offensive and defensive alliance to meet the united anti-union line-up in textiles, steel, automobiles, tobacco and one or two other lines is moving forward. If the foes of labor can unite in an offensive to fight unionism and to prevent the making of a constructive contribution to the welfare of industry, then labor is bound to unite along like lines to promote labor welfare and to make possible labor's constructive contributions to industrial prosperity for all.

"As for the recent decisions of the National Textile Labor Relations Board I want to say the whole textile union movement will be heartened by the decisions already handed down. They demonstrate the fact that the union has been right in its claims. Every succeeding decision must be exactly like those already handed down, wherever the union is able to prove discrimination, as it has in these cases. The old rule of one law for the rich and another for the poor grows weaker every day, it seems, but a lot of the rich haven't found it out yet.

"In a day or two I shall be in a position to discuss more in detail the plans made by the executive council and the orders issued for work in all branches of the textile industry. They are of the utmost importance."

"I don't worry about my electric bill.... it's the smallest item in my family budget"

"ELECTRICITY does a lot of things at my house. It runs the refrigerator, washing machine, does all the ironing, sweeping, making coffee, toast and waffles. And there's the radio and lights of course. In fact there's not a moment during the day that we aren't using electricity for something or other.

"But my stars, man! I'm not worried about my electric bill. It's insignificant compared to my other living expenses. My bills for food and clothing, automobile expense . . . upkeep on my home . . . and taxes, say, my taxes figure more than $5.00 a month!

"My electric bill averages $3.75 a month eh? Well sir, I think that's cheap enough. My wife doesn't know it, but I spend nearly twice that much for cigarettes."

Norris Says Wealth Redistribution Is Essential to Save Civilization

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 21.—Redistribution of wealth is essential if civilization is to be preserved, Senator George W. Norris declared in speaking at the University of Nebraska.

To accomplish this end he advocated a progressive federal inheritance tax, designed to curb the growing concentration of wealth in the hands of the few—a concentration in which Norris sees a national menace.

"Today there is little doubt in the minds of thinking people that the redistribution of wealth is a necessity if we wish to preserve our civilization," Norris said. "If we are to secure a permanent remedy for our difficulties as a people, it is an absolute necessity that this be one of the aims which a complete recovery must have in view."

Redistribution, as contemplated by a progressive inheritance tax, Norris explained, does not contemplate taking from one man and giving his property to another.

"It means taking money from the estates of the very wealthy, where it can perform no real service for humanity, and giving it, in the form of all taxes, to all people, from which it was originally taken and under whose laws it was accumulated."

"Such a program," the senator predicted, "would in a few generations, relieve society entirely from the dangers which now threaten the very life of the nation. To a great extent it would relieve our country of pauperism and poverty. It would very materially help to feed the starving and clothe the naked."

One reason why romance lasted longer in the old days was because a bride looked much the same after washing her face.

NRA FASCISM INCREASING DANGER TO LABOR, UNION HEAD TELLS CONGRESSMEN

Washington. — Labor can expect "increasing doses of fascism" from NRA, I. M. Ornburn, president of the Cigar Makers' International union, told the house labor committee.

He said labor can expect no help from the recovery administration in fighting unemployment because of the "presence of the inner councils of the NRA" of too many representatives of industry.

"The trend," he said, "is alarmingly similar to the early stages of fascism in Europe where labor was first baited with promises, such as the NRA, and then suppressed."

Ornburn sharply criticized the cigarette code, noting the code provides for a 40-hour week with seasonal exceptions permitting 45 hours.

He told the committee that Divisional Administrator Armand W. Riley had recommended a 36-hour week, but that this provision was rejected by the recovery board on recommendations of the cigarette industry's code committee.

Ornburn said Riley had told the recovery board that the industry was well able to accept his proposal.

Ornburn termed the stewardship of S. Clay Williams "unconscionable, callous and arrogant" and "a standing insult to labor."

"With NRA now headed by one of industry's chief night riders, labor can expect increasing doses of fascism from its decisions and activities," the union head said.

Business Chief Backs Labor View Of Slump's Cause

Samuel L. Antonow Says Failure Of Masses to Share Fully in Industry's Income Brought on Depression.

New York City, Feb. 21.—Squarely backing labor's view of the causes of the depression, Samuel L. Antonow, president of the Vadsco Sales corporation, declared present economic conditions are directly traceable to the failure of the farmers and workers to share more fully in the income of industry.

"Had these two producing groups received a larger portion of the value of our industrial production we never would have come to the deplorable economic conditions in which the country finds itself today," Antonow said.

"The possession of greater purchasing power by individuals in the agricultural and labor groups would have brought us prosperity of an undreamed-of nature and the available purchasing power would have resulted in a labor shortage instead of the labor surplus that we have today.

"Dr. Walter Rautenstrauch has shown that if, instead of getting an increasingly smaller proportion of the national income, farmers and workers had shared in the national income as they were sharing in 1917, the laborer's income would have been 56 per cent above what he actually received in 1932, and the farmer's, 216 per cent over his 1932 level."

ICE-CUTTERS WIN STRIKE.

Warm weather helped the ice-cutters at Conneaut Lake, Pa., to win their strike for a pay increase of from 20 to 40 cents per hour. After a two-days' walkout the cutting firm sensing a thaw, granted the boost and the cutters went back to work.

Automobile Workers Submit Model Contract to Fisher Body Corporation

Cleveland, Ohio.—A proposed working agreement embodying many of the features which the American Federation of Labor believes essential to peace and progress in the automobile industry has been submitted to the Fisher Body corporation, a General Motors subsidiary, by United Automobile Workers' Federal union local here, affiliated with the A. F. of L., the contract has not yet been signed.

It provides that when new jobs "are created or occur in the respective departments, the oldest employe laid off shall be the first to be re-employed." Another clause asserts that employes who have given long and faithful service and who have become unable to handle heavy work "will be given preference to such light work in their line as they may be able to do."

An annual minimum wage of $1,560 for unskilled workers, and $1,820 for skilled workers is asked, as is a 30-hour week of five six-hour days. Wages of time and one-half for Saturday work and double wages for Sunday work would be required.

Other clauses call for arbitration of all difficulties which cannot be settled by mutual agreement of the company and the union, and reinstatement with full pay for all time lost by the discharge of any employe who may be judged to have been unjustly discharged.

STATE PRODUCTION URGED FOR UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF

Madison, Wis.—Representative Ed. Kiefer introduced a broad-gauge bill in the Wisconsin legislature providing for the establishment of the Wisconsin Production corporation, which would engage in practically every form of productive enterprise.

Mr. Kiefer said the bill was designed primarily to relieve distress caused by the prolonged unemployment which has cursed thousands of Wisconsin citizens for years. The corporation would be given power to purchase and acquire natural resources, to engage in enterprises to secure raw materials, to buy, distribute and sell and to manufacture and produce the products necessary for the "American standard of living for the agricultural and industrial worker."

The bill provides the 6-hour day and 30-hour week by statute for all employes and declares that the minimum wage shall be the highest union wage in the locality. The measure is said to be sponsored by the socialists.

IMMIGRATION HEAD SUED.

Washington.—Immigration Commissioner D. W. MacCormack was sued by Mrs. Lucy J. Harris, of Washington, for $150,000 damages. The papers were filed in the supreme court of the District of Columbia. Mrs. Harris, who was at one time chairman of the board of special inquiry in Chinese cases, charges that Mr. MacCormack wrote letters to United States senators stating that she was the "worst" employe in the immigration service. She says she was dismissed from the service as the result of these letters.

COTTON PICKER MENACES JOBS.

Chicago.—An official of the International Harvester company here announced that after a number of years spent in experimenting the engineers of the company had perfected a cotton picking machine which would throw thousands of cotton pickers out of work. It was pointed out that in one test the machine picked more cotton in seven and one-half hours than a good hand picker could pick in the entire season of three and one-half months.

BANS GAS SALES BELOW COST

The Wisconsin department of agriculture and markets has issued a general order prohibiting manufacturers and dealers from selling gasoline and other petroleum products below cost. The ban was ordered to forestall the spread of price wars which, it was said, would force out of business dealers who could not absorb the losses resulting from prolonged cut-throat competition. The order fixes the basis of cost at not less than 5 cents per gallon and forbids secret discounts and "come on" price signs.

AFL UNION WINS ELECTION.

Racine, Wis.—The election held by the employes of the Wisconsin Gas and Electric company at Racine and Kenosha resulted in the choice of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, as collective bargaining representative. The vote was 100 for the A. F. of L. union to 61 for the Public Service Employes' union. A previous election was held void because no group received the majority.

CHEAP APARTMENTS.

The town council of South Queenferry, Scotland, is erecting a block of four-room apartments which will be rented for $1.50 per week. Apartments of three large rooms will be rented for $1.45 and three small ones for $1.40. The council is using direct labor to build the apartments, having found this method much cheaper than contract work.

TAXI DRIVERS STRIKE.

Mexico City.—A strike of the chauffeurs here left the entire city without a single taxicab for hire. The strikers demanded a collective contract and a change in status from operators on their own account to employes. Hitherto the chauffeurs have paid the owners about 5 pesos a day for the use of their cars. The strikers patroled the city in a large number of cars to prevent the strike being broken.

KANSAS PROFESSOR SEES STATE MEDICINE COMING

Memphis, Ten.—Dr. Logan Clendenning, professor of clinical medicine at the University of Kansas, declared in a statement here that medical care of people by the state is sure to come because so many are without the benefits of modern medical science.

"The doctors," he said, "will have to do something themselves about making medical attention available. The question is, does the public want political doctors or medical men?

"The medical profession, instead of blindly opposing it, as has been the tendency in some quarters, is going to take direction of the program and see that it is wisely handled."

President Approves Extension of N.R.A. For 2 More Years

Favors Continuing Section 7-A, Child Labor Ban, Minimum Wages and Maximum Hours; Would Impose Codes on Backward Industries; Asks Right to Declare Emergency at Any Time; Says to Allow Act to Expire Would Bring Chaos.

Washington.—In a special message to congress, Feb. 20, President Roosevelt asked that the national industrial recovery act be extended for a period of two years, from its expiration date, which is June 16, 1935.

Only a few changes are suggested, the chief one being a request for authority to impose codes of fair practice on backward industries that refuse or neglect to work out codes voluntarily. Authority is also asked to permit the declaration of an emergency at any time the public welfare is threatened. Price fixing would be prohibited and the president declares that "no monopoly should be private."

Would Retain Several Features.

President Roosevelt in his message urges that several features favored by organized labor be retained. These include: the ban on child labor in industry, the "right of employes to freely organize for purposes of collective bargaining," maximum hours and minimum wages.

After reviewing chronologically the development of the original NIRA and the administration thus far, the president stated:

"The fundamental principles of the act are sound. To abandon them is unthinkable. It would spell the return of industrial and labor chaos."

Continuing, President Roosevelt said: "I therefore recommend to the congress that the national industrial recovery act be extended for a period of two years."

"Voluntary submission of codes should be encouraged," the message states, "but at the same time, if an industry fails voluntarily to agree within itself, unquestioned power must rest in the government to establish in any event certain minimum standards of fair competition in commercial practices, and, especially, adequate standards in labor relations.

"For example, child labor must not be allowed to return; the fixing of minimum wages and maximum hours is practical and necessary.

"The rights of employes freely to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining should be fully protected.

"The fundamental principles of the anti-trust laws should be more adequately applied. Monopolies and private price-fixing within industries must not be allowed nor condoned. No monopoly should be private.'"

The president concludes: "By your action you will sustain and hasten the process of industrial recovery which we are now experiencing; you will lighten the burdens of unemployment and economic insecurity."

Ohio Court Upholds Ban on Prison Goods

Cleveland, O.—In an outstanding decision the court of appeals here held that the Ohio legislature can prevent goods made by convict labor in other states from coming into the open market of Ohio and "wielding their evil influence." This is the first higher court ruling in the United States since the federal Hawes-Cooper act took effect in January, 1934.

Under the federal act goods made by prisoners in other states, upon their entry in Ohio, are placed upon the same footing as Ohio prison-made goods, which can be used only in correctional institutions, Judge Manuel Levine said in a written opinion.

The case was brought before the court in the appeal of Asa H. Whitley, of Montgomery, Ala., agent for the sale of Alabama prison-made goods, who appealed from his conviction in the municipal court for selling goods in Ohio made by convicts in the Kilby prison. The attorney for Whitfield contended that Ohio did not have the power to enact a law which prohibits the so-called free flow of commerce between the states which he said comes wholly within the jurisdiction of the United States congress. Judge Levine held, however, that under the Hawes-Cooper act the Ohio law banning Alabama prison-made coal labor products was valid.

Hosiery Workers of Three States Call Executive Meeting

Walter Bramley, in charge of the organization of hosiery workers in this section, announces that on Saturday morning, March 2, there will be a meeting of the officers of all local unions affiliated with the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in the states of Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. The meeting is set for 10 o'clock in Roosevelt hall.

Mr. Bramley also makes announcement of the opening of a district office in 734 Chattanooga Bank building. This office will be open from 8 until 5 each day. Mr. Frank Ward, who has been assigned to this territory by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers for nearly a year, will be located in the new headquarters also.

Broadus Mitchell to Be L. I. D. Speaker Thursday

Broadus Mitchell, assistant professor of political education at Johns Hopkins university, will speak on "The Coming Struggle for Power" on Thursday, Feb. 28, at the Hamilton county courthouse at 8 o'clock. Dr. Mitchell is the fifth speaker in the League for Industrial Democracy lecture series which is being given here. Next week Roger Baldwin will speak on "What Liberty Under the New Deal?"

The chairman of Dr. Mitchell's meeting will be Judge Charles Lusk.

Dr. Mitchell comes from a distinguished southern family of South Carolina and is the son of Samuel C. Richardson, of the University of Richmond. Upon graduation from the University of South Carolina, Dr. Mitchell entered the newspaper world, but his fundamental interest in social and economic problems led him to Johns Hopkins, where he received a Ph. D. degree. At this time he was invited to join the faculty of the university.

His writings include: "The Rise of Cotton Mills in the South" (Johns Hopkins Press); "Frederick Law Olmstead, a Critic of the Old South," also published by the Johns Hopkins Press, and "William Gregg, Factory Master of the Old South," which was published by the University of North Carolina. "The Industrial Revolution in the South" was published by the Johns Hopkins Press, and his book, "A Preface to Economics," was published by Henry Holt & Co. last year. Dr. Mitchell is also a regular contributor to such magazines as the Virginia Quarterly Review, Commonweal, the Survey Graphic and the Yale Review. At one time he was president of the Baltimore Urgan league, and he is a member of the executive committee of the American Economic association.

Other speakers in this series were Harry Saidler, Powers Hapgood, Harrison Brown, Jennie Lee, and the final lecture, "What Liberty Under the New Deal," will be given next week, Thursday, March 7, by Roger Baldwin.

Due to repeated inquiries, Dr. Mitchell will give a special ten-minute talk on the work of the League for Industrial Democracy and its widespread activities. The formation of a permanent L. I. D. chapter is being considered here by league members.

DISPUTES BILL READY.

Washington.—Senator Wagner (N. Y.) announced that he has completed preparation of his industrial disputes bill and expects to introduce it in the U. S. senate within a few days.

While similar to the bill which Senator Wagner introduced at the last session of congress, some improvements have been included. Complete details are expected to be announced soon.

CAMERON & BARR BAKING COMPANY SIGNS AGREEMENT

Bakery Workers and Salesmen Negotiate Joint Contract.

Local Concern Voluntarily Negotiates With Its Employes Collectively for Best Conditions Yet Secured.

Cameron & Barr, manufacturers of "Betsy Ross" bread, owned by local people, on last Friday concluded a series of the most pleasant negotiations with representatives of its employes, say officials of Bakers and Confectioners' union, Local 25, and Bakery Salesmen's union, Local 594. Although organization of this plant has been gradually completed for the past year, the point was reached only recently when the unionists requested the management to receive them and discuss a working agreement.

Assisting in the negotiations, Herman J. Schad, representative for the International Bakery and Confectionery Workers' union, reports that he was most pleased with the attitude taken by the management in dealing with him and the rest of the committee, and he wishes to make known to the labor movement this fine spirit shown.

The agreement was signed on Friday, February 22. Conditions in the contract provide for an increase in the wage scale, a week's vacation with pay, pay for all holidays and seniority rules for the laying off or taking on of additional employes.

Signing of the Cameron & Barr bakery puts the local bakery workers in a fine position to deal collectively with the baking industry. All of the three large bakeries of the city are now under signed agreements and numerous of the small shops are also.

Curtis Simms, president of Local 25, requests the organized labor movement to show their appreciation to these bakeries that have signed up, and in this way lead to a future agreement whereby the bakers' union label will appear on all loaves of bread in this city.

AUTO UNIONS WARN OF STRIKE DANGER

Detroit.—Automobile workers will refuse to work under conditions now prevailing in the industry, the National Council of United Automobile Workers warned in a letter to President Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

The council, meeting here to discuss employe-management relationship, is composed of representatives of 107 unions.

The letter was a formal verification of President Green's selection to discuss organized labor's grievances with manufacturers' representatives.

Three factors contribute to present conditions, the council stated. The letter listed:

1. Conspiracy by employers to destroy organized labor unions.

2. Discrimination, coercion and intimidation of workers, and maintenance of espionage systems to spy on organized labor.

3. Forcing of employes into company-controlled unions; and subordination of the automobile labor board to activities of the company unions.

INSURGENTS DISCIPLINED BY IRON WORKERS' UNION

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Officials of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers planned the revocation of charters of lodges which authorized delegates to a so-called "rank and file" meeting here. Secretary-Treasurer Louis Leonard said the lodges liable to charter suspension would not be revealed until the list was complete. The United Press stated that around 400 "delegates" attended the outlaw meeting.

ASK INVESTIGATION OF NRA.

Washington. — Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), and Senator Nye (R., N. D.) have introduced a resolution asking for a thorough investigation of the national recovery administration. While twenty-one allegations are made, they are not sponsored by these senators, who merely contend that the senate should know definitely what is being done and how.

Labor Support Pledged Wagner Disputes Bill

A. F. of L. to Push Measure, President Green Announces—Wagner to Insist on Decisive Action at Present Session.

Washington, D. C.—The labor disputes bill introduced by Senator Wagner, of New York, will receive the full and complete support of the American Federation of Labor, President Green, of the federation, announced.

"The proposed act is regarded as of major importance to labor," Green said. "It defines unfair labor practices, prohibits employers from making contributions toward the support of company unions, and to that extent outlaws company unions. Furthermore, the measure provides that Section 7-A, the collective bargaining provision of the national recovery act, shall be made the law of the land.

To Press Fight for Bill.

"Labor will appeal to congress to enact the Wagner disputes measure into law at the earliest possible date and will call upon its friends to actively interest themselves in its behalf."

In introducing his bill, Senator Wagner said its enactment would "stabilize and improve business by laying foundations for amity and fair dealing upon which permanent progress must rest."

Wagner, who fought for a similar bill at the last session, intends to insist upon decisive action this time.

For Permanent Board.

Wagner told the senate the temporary labor relations board set up last spring "is gradually but surely losing its effectiveness because of its inability to enforce its decisions." He proposed to make the board permanent, with unquestionable powers to settle labor disputes.

His bill amplifies the collective bargaining guarantees of the NIRA. Wagner said that "employes attempting in good faith to exercise their liberties under Section 7-A have met with repeated rebuffs."

The new Wagner bill would set up a permanent national labor relations board of three members to supervise the settlement of labor disputes.

Members of Local 1747 Suffer Bereavements In Their Families

The Death Angel visited two families of members of Textile Local 1747, Feb. 10 and Feb. 15, 1935. On Feb. 10, Mr. John Richardson, father of Miss Daisy Richardson, passed away at his home near Sparta, Tenn. On Feb. 15, Mrs. Lema Malone, mother of Mr. Erwin Malone, passed away at her home.

The following resolutions from the local union to express its sympathy with the bereaved members were passed:

"Whereas, on Feb. 10 Mr. John Richardson, father of Miss Daisy Richardson, of this local, passed away at his home near Sparta, Tenn.; be it therefore

"Resolved, That we take this means of sending our sincere sympathy to Sister Richardson and family; be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be put upon our minutes, a copy sent to Sister Richardson, and a copy furnished The Labor World for publication."

LOW MINIMUM WAGE SET FOR CLOTHING CONTRACTS

Ottawa.—The Dominion government has decreed that the "fair wage clause" in government clothing contracts means the contractor must pay female workers a minimum wage of 20 cents an hour and males a minimum of 30 cents, or the provincial minimum wage rates if they are higher. Workers are asking if these are to be standard wage rates in Premier Bennett's "new social order?"

LABOR INSTITUTE BY CENTRAL BODY ABOUT REALIZED

Edw. Grady and Epstein Pledge Names for Extension Program.

University of Chattanooga to Co-operate With Central Body Committee Under Chairmanship of C. C. Burgner.

Dates for the labor institute under auspices of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council have been set for Friday and Saturday, March 22, 23.

Chairman C. C. Burgner announces that arrangements have been made to bring to the city for this occasion a number of outstanding persons in the labor movement and workers' educational movement.

Theme for the institute will be "Social Security" and addresses will be delivered by Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor; Spencer Miller, Jr., secretary and director of Workers' Education Bureau of America; Abraham Epstein, director American Association for Social Security; George Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor; John W. Edelman, research director American Federation of Hosiery Workers, and others.

Dr. Alex Guerry, president of the University of Chattanooga, has rendered assistance in preparing the program, and instructors from the university will take part in the institute. Dr. T. B. Cowan, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, will speak on "The Part of the Church" in achieving social security.

Location for the sessions of the institute will be announced at a later date. Friday morning, March 22, Mr. McGrady will deliver an address on "Basis and Background of Social Security Problem."

Saturday morning's program will consist of three 30-minute addresses, each followed by a 10-minute round-table discussion. Saturday afternoon will be devoted to panel discussion, Mr. Spencer Miller, Jr., leader, with short addresses by a number of visitors and representatives of Chattanooga university.

Saturday night Mr. Epstein will deliver an address on "Implications of the Social Security Program," and Mr. Miller will give a summary of the institute and recommendations for the organization of a labor school.

The labor institute is the result of a suggestion of a member of the teachers' federation to the Trades and Labor council and a great deal of time and effort has been given to consummation of the task, the great portion of which has fallen on Chairman Burgner and other teacher members of the committee, and it is believed that members of Chattanooga labor unions will show their appreciation of this work by their attendance at the sessions of the institute. It is the hope that from this institute the organization of a labor school will result and will prove of great benefit to the labor movement in this section.

It is believed that the list of speakers secured makes this institute one of outstanding importance and should call for a representative attendance from each local union of our city, and numbers of visitors from adjoining towns and cities.

TEXTILE UNIONS ORGANIZED.

Lowell, Mass.—John J. Molloy, organizer of the United Textile Workers of America, has established a number of textile unions in Lowell and vicinity during the last few weeks. The new organizations include woolen and worsted workers employed by the United States Bunting company, Walsh's mills, the Royal Worsted, Ames Worsted, and the Navy Yard and Collinsville mills. It was announced that employes of the Newmarket Manufacturing, Abbott Worsted, Boott, Merrimack and Waterhead mills and the Hub Hosiery mill had also been organized. Union officials said that twelve locals of the Textile Workers' union were functioning here.

Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers, Secretary-Treasurer James Starr, and Horace Riviere, fourth vice-president, are coming to Lowell on March 2 to participate in the ceremonies attending the formal opening of the Lowell Textile council headquarters.

Connery Bill Takes Federal Arms Out of All Strike-Breaking

Connery Scores Unfairness Of Cigarette Tax

Unionized Makers of 10-Cent Packages Under Severe Handicap, Massachusetts Representative Shows.

New York City.—Speaking over Station WEVD, Representative William P. Connery, Jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the house labor committee, assailed the influence of the Big Four tobacco companies in putting over the tobacco code and scored the present cigarette tax as unfair to manufacturers of the 10-cent cigarette, which are made in union factories.

"The testimony recently presented to the committee on labor by I. M. Ornburn, secretary of the Union Label Trades Department of the A. F. of L. and president of the Cigar Makers' International union, was most illuminating," Connery said. He continued: "Ornburn showed that the cigarette industry, represented for months in the NRA by S. Clay Williams, chairman of the recovery board, recently put over a code for the cigarette industry which permits the payment to the exploited workers of that industry below $10 per week. The labor costs of making cigarettes, we were shown, is less than 2 per cent of the wholesale value of the cigarettes. That is the type of co-operation which President Roosevelt has received from the great captains of industry whom he placed in executive positions in the NRA in his effort to bring back prosperity to America.

"It was shown to our committee, and I am citing this simply as an illustration, that while the four large cigarette companies whom you might describe as the trust, producing almost 90 per cent of all the cigarettes made in America, insisted that they be permitted to continue to exploit their workers, the two large independent cigarette companies, both unionized, who sell the 10-cent packages of cigarettes, were willing and wired the president of their willingness to subscribe to a code with wages 40 per cent higher than those provided for in the code put over by the cigarette trust. The efforts of the unionized cigarette manufacturers to better the conditions of the workers of that industry were in vain, as the influence of big business in the present set-up of the NRA is most apparent in Washington.

"Incidentally, to show you the unfairness of present-day conditions, the government imposes a flat tax of 6 cents per package of cigarettes. When those cigarettes sell for 10 cents, which are the cigarette put out by the unionized factories, the manufacturer has but 4 cents with which to pay for his tobacco, his labor, his printing, his overhead and profits, while the non-union cigarettes, selling for 15 cents or two for a quarter, the product of the exploited workers of the non-union cigarette manufacturers, after paying the tax of 6 cents provides the non-union cigarette manufacturer with either 7 or 9 cents with which to pay for tobacco, labor, printing, leaving them substantial profits for themselves.

"Is it any wonder that President Roosevelt, in his recent message to congress, said: 'Monopolies and private price-fixing within industries must not be allowed or condoned.'"

Boot and Shoe Workers Union to Hold Open Meet Of Shoe Repair Industry

D. R. Massey, secretary of Local 620, Boot and Shoe Workers' union, and H. U. Garland, its president, state that on Thursday, March 7, there will be an open meeting held in the Odd Fellows hall on West Seventh street for all people connected with the shoe repair industry. The meeting will be called to order at 7:30. Aside from business for the welfare of the industry, there will be social enjoyment for those who attend.

Measure Bars Employment of U. S. Military Equipment Without Secretary of War's Permission

Proposal of Special Interest to Workers of Georgia, Whose Governor Used Federal Munitions to Break Strike.

Washington. — Congressman Connery, of Massachusetts, has introduced a bill—Joint Resolution No. 141—to take Uncle Sam's military equipment out of the strike-breaking business. It provides that no federal equipment, arms, munitions, or any form of war material belonging to the federal government shall be used by state troops on strike duty without the express permission of the secretary of war.

This bill is designed to end one of the meanest anti-labor grafts that even big business and its political henchmen have been guilty of. It should be especially interesting to the workers of Georgia, smarting under the injustice of the mischievous clown whom they were tricked into electing governor.

Eugene Talmadge was running for his second term in the governor's chair when the textile strike came. The primary is the real election in Georgia, as in most of the south; whoever wins the nomination in the democratic primaries is elected. Workers tried in vain to find what Gov. Talmadge proposed to do; but until the votes were counted, and he had a safe lead for the nomination, he wouldn't tell.

Talmadge Shows Hand.

Then he struck. First he ordered two companies of state militia to Cartersville. He ordered out others almost hour by hour, until in three days forty companies of Georgia militia, all of them more or less equipped with federal supplies, were doing all the governor could make them do to break the textile strike.

Two hundred pickets were seized and herded into a detention camp just outside Atlanta. Another 130 were arrested at the mill town of Newman. Others were arrested in other places until Talmadge thought he had the strike smashed. He doesn't understand yet how the strikers held out.

Talmadge's attitude may be judged from an article which he wrote for the Manufacturers' Record, hard-boiled anti-labor organ of the mill bosses.

Opposes Basic Labor Rights.

"When anyone quits a job," he wrote, "he doesn't have the right to hang around the place of business and interfere with anyone else who wants to work on the job."

The right to strike is one of the basic rights of labor everywhere, and the right to picket peacefully has been upheld bq high federal courts. But that made no difference to Talmadge.

"Your declaration and maintenance of martial law," wired President Green, "your wholesale arrest of men and women who dared to strike against economic injustice, your imprisonment of men and women in your detention camps in Georgia is evidence of your bias in favor of the mill owners and powerful financial interests."

To which Talmadge replied with a tirade calling labor leaders "loafers and bluffers."

"They don't know what labor is," he bawled. "They've got hard heads and weak muscles."

U. S. Money Aids Georgia Idle.

Talmadge berates the administration in Washington; but federal money is taking care of 450,000 people on relief in Georgia. From March, 1933, to the end of 1934, the federal government put about $35,000,000 into the state. And, under the so-called leadership of Talmadge, the state of Georgia didn't contribute a plugged nickel. The city of Atlanta is doing what it can; but not the state under Talmadge.

At least, if this bill in congress goes through—and it will be pushed vigorously, Talmadge still may sponge on Washington for relief; but if he wants to break any more strikes, he will have to look elsewhere for uniforms, rifles, munitions and the rest.

Industrial Safety by Law

The imperative necessity of strict laws requiring employers to provide their employes with safe machinery and equipment to work with is stressed by the current report of the California department of industrial relations to the governor's council. The report says:

> "Two freight elevators in a garage were operating without protection at the entrance landing. Three times the employer had been cited to appear before the district attorney's office and each time promised to remedy the unsafe conditions, also that he would not permit them to occur again. Upon the employer's failure to do any of these things, it was decided to seek a supreme court injunction prohibiting him from operating these elevators in an unsafe condition.
> "The employer must have sensed our intention to stop this unsafe condition, because before the injunction could be issued he put a gang of men to work all night and put his elevators in good condition."

The action of the industrial relations department in finally compelling the employer to make the elevator safe is commendable, but the fact that he was cited three times to appear before the authorities for violation of the state safety law indicates an uncalled-for delay in compelling compliance with the law. It would seem that the first refusal of an employer to provide for safety of his employes as required by law should automatically result in the immediate application of the statute to him. Any delay compels the workers to run the danger of injuries in operating the unsafe machinery or equipment.

Workers should promptly report to the proper authorities unsafe working conditions. Otherwise, unscrupulous employers, cunning in their devices to get away with safety law violations, are likely to be the means of imposing serious injuries on their workers.

Tools of "Big Business?"

Organized labor has always had the utmost confidence in President Roosevelt. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, states that labor still looks to the president with faith and confidence.

But there are many who believe that "big business" has succeeded in working in several willing tools to key positions in the administration. It is contended that the activities of these conscienceless individuals in high positions the government are not only wrecking many of the reasonable hopes and aspirations of labor, but are actually denying in some instances all semblance of right and justice to wage-earners.

John L. Lewis, testifying before a senate subcommittee, denounced Donald R. Richberg as "reprehensible and dishonorable." President Green and other responsible labor officials have likewise challenged his sincerity in no uncertain terms.

S. Clay Williams, of the national industrial recovery board, was severely criticized and his fitness questioned in a resolution passed by the 54th annual convention of the A. F. of L.

Leo Wolman, chairman of the automobile labor board, has been soundly denounced by many responsible officials of organized labor.

A complete recital of the reactionary attitude and subversive actions of these three individuals could not possibly be contained in the space available in this publication, nor is it necessary, since much of this attitude and many of these actions are now well known.

Suffice it to say that, so long as reactionary individuals, believed to be willing tools of "big business," are permitted to hold responsible key positions in the administration and to sway actions inimical to the public welfare, there can be no industrial peace—and peace is essential to sound progress.

Senate Subcommittee Favors 30-Hour Week Bill by 4 to 1

Washington.—The subcommittee of the U. S. senate committee on the judiciary, headed by Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) which has been conducting hearings on the Black 30-hour work week bill, favors the bill by the wide margin of 4 to 1.

A poll of the five members of the subcommittee showed the following result: For the 30-hour bill, Senators Neely, McCarran, Norris and Hatch; against, Senator Austin (R., Vermont).

The bill was to be reported to the senate committee on the judiciary Feb. 25, where it is expected to be approved and reported to the senate. Final adoption of this extremely important measure is freely predicted, although organized labor is still aware that the fight must be continued unrelentingly until the 30-hour work week actually becomes the law of the land.

OHIO ACCIDENTS INCREASE.

Columbus, O.—The tremendous toll in dead and mutilated workers which those who own and operate industry levy in accidents, most of which are preventable, is strikingly illustrated by the increase in claims filed with the industrial commission of Ohio for December, 1934, made public by Thomas P. Kearns, superintendent of the division of safety and hygiene. Demanding compensation for fatal and non-fatal injuries and occupational diseases, the claims for the month reached 12,835, or 1,040 more than in November, and 2,349 more than in December, 1933.

Seventy-six workers were killed during the month. Workers handling objects received 2,410 injuries; machinery was responsible for 2,202 injuries and two deaths; falls of persons imposed 1,336 injuries and seven deaths, and stepping upon or striking against objects caused 1,190 injuries and one death.

FAVORS DEALING WITH UNIONS.

New York.—Adam Wilkinson, representing employers in New England, and R. B. Wolf, representing employers in the northwest, in addresses before the twentieth annual meeting of the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry here, declared that it was preferable to consider labor conditions by the medium of collective bargaining than to run the risk of having labor disputes injected into politics. Declaring that the new deal had won the imagination of labor, Mr. Wilkinson said:

"It is far better for us in the industry to conduct negotiations with responsible heads of the labor groups than to refuse and have the entire question become a political one." He added that Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act "may prove to be not an unmixed blessing."

Union Head Asks Protection For American Paper Industry

Washington.—American publishers are seeking newsprint in Scandinavia to offset possible increases in price by Canadian producers, John P. Burke, president of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, said at a hearing on a proposed reciprocal tariff agreement with Finland.

He asked the government to refrain from any action in negotiations with Finland which would prevent application of protective measures for domestic producers, such as enforcement of anti-dumping laws.

STUDENTS, TEACHERS STRIKE.

Havana, Cuba.—University students here went on strike to influence the government to grant their demands, which include removal of military jurisdiction over Cuba, immediate release of political prisoners, demilitarization of the police, guarantee of personal rights, suppression of urgency courts created for trying so-called "terrorists," and larger appropriations for schools. Teachers at Regla, near here, who declared a 48-hour strike to enforce their demand for greater school funds, were joined by the teachers in twenty schools in Havana.

GUFFEY COAL BILL URGED AS BENEFIT TO CONSUMERS

Washington.—Henry Warrum, general counsel of the United Mine Workers, told a senate interstate commerce subcommittee that the Guffey coal bill would protect consumers despite probable wage increases.

Warrum quoted government reports to show the valuable Pittsburgh coal seam would be exhausted in 100 years and said that on this basis the conservation features of the Guffey bill demanded its passage.

Guffey's bill would make the bituminous coal industry a public utility and divide the country into twenty-four production districts. Each district would receive a yearly production quota.

DEBT! OVER 21 MILLION DOLLARS IN DEBT ALREADY — and the staggering sum of $8,000,000 more is asked for.

That is what Messrs. Wilhoite, Chamlee and Clark of the "League for Political Power" are asking the citizens of Chattanooga to pile on for a Municipal Power System—a scheme that will lose over a million dollars a year at their own figures.

Do you know that if this $8,000,000 is piled on top of what the Taxpayers already owe, you will be paying over $3,000 A DAY IN INTEREST ALONE?

Do you realize that the interest you will have to pay on this $29,000,000 total debt for just one year would build a Million-Dollar Hospital? It would easily build two new fine Schools at $500,000 each.

It is astounding when you realize that the deficit which will be incurred in just one year of Municipal experimenting with an electric power system would pay the salaries of all our city school teachers.

But instead of having the money to build new Hospitals and Schools, we will be paying it out in interest on a staggering debt.

Remember one thing — All these hundreds of thousands of dollars that are paid out for Interest are dollars that are gone and will never come back.

Yet Messrs. Wilhoite, Chamlee and Clark have the brass to get up and ask the Taxpayers of this city to sink themselves $8,000,000 deeper in debt—for an experimental electric power Scheme—a debt that threatens to bankrupt the City of Chattanooga.

WHEN GABRIEL BLOWS HIS TRUMPET, WE WILL STILL BE PAYING FOR THIS $8,000,000 EXPERIMENT.

Letter of A. G. Gamble To Organized Labor

A. G. GAMBLE

"In making my appeal to you in my candidacy, I feel that it is in justice to myself that I should make my record as an employer clear to you. I have been in the construction business in Chattanooga for the past twenty years until two years ago, at which time I went into the coal mining business. Up until then I had never been able to recognize organized labor as there was not any organization with that class of work. But I always paid the highest wages in that line of work. As soon as I was in a position to recognize organized labor I asked Mr. Cooke and Mr. Aymon to send to my mine and organize my men. As I had always felt that co-operation between employes and employer was beneficial to both parties, during your recent strike I was in sympathy with the many people who was out of employment and I told Mr. Cooke that I would make a donation of $1.00 per ton on all coal sent out for relief work. Mr. Cooke and Mr. Aymon will both verify to the correctness of this statement.

"If my record merits your support I will appreciate it.

"Yours truly,

"A. G. GAMBLE."

—Adv.

"My electric bills? I say they're remarkably cheap"

"MY electric bills for 1934 averaged only $5.60 a month — and I am simply enthusiastic about all the real service I get every month for less than six dollars!

"We have a good-sized electric refrigerator that saves me so much time—keeps loads of food fresh for a week—and makes all the ice we ever need. For waffles we use an electric waffle-iron.

"All the washing and ironing is done on the place—and it's a full day's ironing for Georgie with a fast electric iron. Every week all the rugs upstairs and downstairs are cleaned with the electric vacuum cleaner.

"Then of course we often listen to the radio. And lights — my goodness! We're up late nearly every night with lights blazing all over the house. We like plenty of light—and we have it!

"I think the Power Company's service is excellent and cheap as can be—and rates have been getting lower and lower ever since I can remember. And—like I tell Jim—the taxes on our home are already $14.52 a month — and The Power Company is really helping to keep our taxes from going any higher!

"Yes, I most certainly do think The Power Company's rates are perfectly fair in every way—and I am so pleased with your service!"

Thirty-Hour Week Is Held Essential For Recovery and Profit System

President Fremming, of Oil Field Workers, Declares Hours Cut by Law Necessary to Provide Jobs and Purchasing Power for All Workers.

Washington.—Vigorous condemnation of our prominent industrial leaders for their continued belligerent opposition to shorter hours for the workers and a well fortified argument that shorter hours are necessary for business recovery and permanent prosperity featured a statement in favor of the federal 30-hour week law by Harvey C. Fremming, president of the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America.

He charged that our captains of industry fail to hear the clarion voice which demands economic justice and security for the workers by the medium of adequate purchasing power, and declared that the 30-hour week is absolutely necessary to provide this purchasing power for our millions of jobless.

Pointing out that the industrial overlords organized in the National Association of Manufacturers, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the American Petroleum institute carry on extensive publicity regarding the necessity of maintaining intact our present system of private initiative for private profit, Mr. Fremming said that in their opposition to the 30-hour week these people are "completely pushing back the one factor which has kept and will continue to keep the profit system alive in the United States, and that one factor is purchasing power."

The purposes of the 30-hour week law, Mr. Fremming said, are:

"1. To decrease the man-day productivity.

"2. To reabsorb millions in gainful employment.

"3. To resuscitate a lost purchasing power.

"4. To take from the charity rolls many who throughout their lives have been producers.

"5. To save this nation from the despotic rule of 'dictatorship.'

"6. To permit the continuance of the profit system.

"7. To place our entire industrial society on an equal competitive basis.

"8. To decentralize wealth through the painless instrumentality of sustained purchasing power rather than the creation of a new economic order.

"9. To reassure working Americans that there is a job for every willing hand.

"10. To maintain and continue our present modern civilization.

"11. To practice in fact the doctrine laid down by holy writ—that 'labor is worthy of its hire.'

"12. To know and understand the doctrine of technological development and its relationship to increased productivity.

"13. To keep in step with natural and normal economic laws.

"Finally, to build in this nation an economic tranquillity in proportion to normal transition, leaving behind unnatural industrial traditions.

"All of which are in the interest of the maintenance of our present profit or capitalistic system, none of which can be accomplished unless jobs are made available with a commensurate purchasing power.

"The 30-hour week means in effect that a well-paid worker steadily employed is the nation's greatest asset."

Glass Workers Get Pay Increase

Toledo, O.—General wage increases averaging 9½ per cent for all unskilled and semi-skilled employes of the Libbey Glass Manufacturing company were unanimously approved by nearly 400 workers on two shifts.

The raises range from 5 to 15 per cent, are effective immediately and run for a year. They apply to about 750 workers. The larger increases will go mainly to those in the lower pay brackets.

Educational Program Is Inaugurated by Unions

Albany, N. Y.—The history, traditions and aims of organized labor are vividly and effectively presented to workers of Troy and Albany, New York's great twin industrial centers, in an educational program inaugurated by the trade unions and conducted by the Affiliated School for Workers.

Backed by the Central Labor unions and state offices of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the classes are reaching increasing numbers of members of the Amalgamated, shirtworkers, collar workers, longshoremen, paper makers, molders, machinists and other American Federation of Labor affiliates.

Most popular of the classes in both Troy and Albany are those on "History and Present Problems of the Labor Movement" and "Parliamentary Law and Spoken English." Requirements of the younger members of the movement have been met with classes in tap-dancing and organization of a dramatic group.

Teachers, all of them volunteers, have been drawn from a variety of occupations but all are experienced in working with labor groups and sympathetic with the aims of the labor movement.

WAGE CHISELERS PENALIZED.

Sacramento, Cal.—The determination of certain California employers to refuse to pay workers the wages due them, despite the plain mandate of the state labor laws, was indicated by the fact that during December, 1934, the division of labor statistics and law enforcement of the department of industrial relations received 1,914 complaints of violations of the wage laws of the state. During the month the division collected $47,557.29 in wage claims which the employers had refused to pay but which the state officials declared were legally due the employes concerned. The amount of withheld wages collected during the month was $43.04.

The persistence of pay chiseling employers to defraud workers of the pay due them is shown by the fact that in December, 1933, the division collected $47,445.54 in illegally withheld wages. The total collected for December, 1934, shows an increase of $111.75 over the December, 1933, record.

Says one father: "We were very proud when our daughter's school grades were announced and we learned that she had made 'A' in tap-dancing at college." But let the young excel in whatever they have the ability for.

Volunteer State Life Makes Marked Progress

In this issue of The Labor World appears the 32nd annual statement of the Volunteer State Life Insurance company.

Since organization of this company in 1903 it has shown steady growth, being recognized today as one of the largest insurance companies in this section of the country, and is conservatively managed, yet the management is alert and aggressive. The primary thought in the minds of the officers of this institution at all times is to thoroughly safeguard the funds which have been entrusted to it by the insuring public and this has been done in a commendable manner, as an examination of the financial statement will clearly reveal.

The assets of the Volunteer State Life, as shown by its 1934 statement, amount to $21,931,921.74. In addition to its regular policy reserve of $19,290,138.00, which figure is the legal reserve requirement, the company has set aside additional funds for the protection of policy owners in an amount of $1,491,775.74. Local policy owners are the recipients of thousands of dollars annually. In 1934 the total sum paid to all policy owners and beneficiaries amounted to $2,716,506.00. Since organization of the company in 1903 the total amount paid to policy owners and beneficiaries is in excess of $38,000,000.00.

The Volunteer State Life maintains on its payroll a large group of employes, thousands of dollars being paid to them annually, which money finds its way into all local trade channels. Taxes on its Class A home office building brings to the city and county treasury a substantial sum annually.

At the annual meeting of stockholders on Feb. 21 President Richard H. Kimball reported that during the past year marked progress had been made in every department of the company. The company's agency organization paid for 23 per cent more business in 1934 than during the preceding year. The home office agency showed a paid increase of 33 per cent over 1933. Jake Bishop is manager of the agency, having served in this capacity for almost twenty-nine years. His outstanding success in the life insurance business is known throughout the country.

The Volunteer State Life is operating in thirteen states, therefore carries the name of Chattanooga to the attention of housands of people each year.

CHILD LABOR BILL DEFEATED.

Carson City, Nev.—By refusing to reconsider its former vote refusing to ratify the child labor amendment to the federal constitution the Nevada senate killed the resolution, approved by the house of representatives, for the remainder of this legislative session. The legislature is not scheduled to meet again until 1937.

"Everybody is crazy over me," said the inmate of the first floor of the Lions View insane asylum.

FOLKS:

Many evidences are constantly being reported of the most remarkable determination and solidarity being shown by my friends. I want you to know I am doing everything humanly possible to show my appreciation of this fine spirit, and am making every effort to see and talk to friends of ours about the race.

I ask you to be patient if I have so far failed to follow many suggestions as to contact, and to carry on in my behalf until the last vote is counted.

Indications now unquestionably point to a splendid victory and we can make this certain by constant, ceaseless solicitation among all groups of our citizenship.

H. L. JUDD STRIKE WON BY UNION IN GREAT VICTORY

Signed Agreement, 100% Union Shop and Pay Increase Secured.

Members of Carpenters and Joiners Local 1882 Stay Out Nearly One Month to Gain Recognition.

Organized labor of Chattanooga chalked up another one for its impressive string of achievements during the past two years. This time the victory was absolutely complete, so says Floyd Smith, young secretary of Local 1882, affiliated with Carpenters and Joiners' International union. For many months the woodworking boys perfected their organization. They got to be 100 per cent. They asked for recognition. The New York office of the Judd company didn't think so. Things went on this way for quite a while.

Finally, the new unionists decided to try out their new-found economic strength. They struck on Feb. 11. They stuck to the fight like veterans. About ten days ago negotiations were opened up directly with the New York representative who came here for the occasion. Although much conversation was indulged in, the union boys kept their eyes on the ball and stood out to the last.

On Thursday morning, March 7, all the strikers went back into a plant that they had made 100 per cent union—and also, they got a wage increase to boot.

Much credit for the organization work of this local goes to J. L. Carpenter, vice-president of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, who spent many hours with the new union in advising them and steering them along the best lines of procedure. He did a fine job.

Boot and Shoe Workers Reaffirm Determination To Vote Bond Issue

Thursday night, March 7, Local 620, Boot and Shoe Workers, held a splendid open meeting in Odd Fellows' hall on West Seventh street. The meeting was attended by the proprietors of shoe repair shops and non-members of the union, as well as the union members themselves. A string band was in great form, and the refreshments were given a great deal of attention.

A brief resume of the accomplishments of the local in its eighteen months' existence was given, and informative talks were heard by A. C. Kamin, president of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, and T. R. Gilbert, secretary of the council.

Mr. Ben Cash, attorney, spoke to the audience on the necessity of public ownership of the power utility so that Chattanooga might prosper as Knoxville has been prospering. Mr. Cash was assured by the spontaneous response of his hearers that with this bond there is no doubt but that the bond issue will receive unanimous approval.

R. M. (Bob) Cooke was also represented, and Local 620 informed him that he would carry the vote of every shoe repair man.

DALTON UNIONISTS PLAN LABOR RALLY SATURDAY EVENING

Saturday evening, March 9, at the courthouse in Dalton, Ga., will be held a general organized labor rally, and a committee from the Dalton unionists to inform The Labor World. The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m., and speakers from Atlanta and Chattanooga will assist in the occasion.

In the last two years Dalton has become almost a solid union town, and the new locals have decided to get together and review their progress and pledge themselves for the future.

Visitors from Chattanooga have been extended an invitation to attend.

Roger Baldwin Final L. I. D. Speaker Thursday

Roger Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties league, will speak here on Thursday, March 14, at the Hamilton county courthouse at 8 o'clock on "What Liberty Under the New Deal?" He is the final speaker in the League for Industrial Democracy lecture series.

A 1936 program of discussion lectures is being planned by the League for Industrial Democracy, Stanton Smith, the chairman, announced today. The program will be presented at Mr. Baldwin's meeting.

Rev. Lin Cartwright will be chairman of the meeting on this evening.

A pacifist and internationalist, Mr. Baldwin has been active in the fight for free speech since the beginning of the war. When the United States entered the war, he at once volunteered his services to the cause of civil liberties, severing his connections in public work in St. Louis, Mo., where he had lived for ten years since his graduation from Harvard. He organized the National Civil Liberties bureau to oppose conscription, aid conscientious objectors and defend persons prosecuted for their opinions against war. When he was called to service late in the war, he refused to obey the draft act and was sentenced to prison for one year.

He resumed the work for civil liberties in 1920, expanding the Civil Liberties bureau into the American Liberties union. He has been involved in all the free speech fights and campaign since. For staging a meeting against police repression during the silk strike in Paterson in 1924, he was convicted of unlawful assemblage and sentenced to jail for six months, but on appeal secured a complete vindication.

In addition to his free speech activities, Mr. Baldwin is a trustee of the American fund for public service to which Charles Garland left his fortune. He has also been active in connection with enterprises for the economic reconstruction of Soviet Russia. He is chairman of the international committee for political prisoners, which organized American aid for victims of repression abroad.

He recently spent a year abroad, studying practically all the dictatorships of Europe, and making a two-months' survey of liberty and repression in Soviet Russia, covered in a book "Liberty Under the Soviets."

Mr. Baldwin is a Harvard A. M., 1906, who taught sociology at Washington university, St. Louis, for several years. He later became executive officer of the St. Louis juvenile court, and is a joint author of a book on "Juvenile Courts and Probation," written when secretary of the National Probation association. He was active in social, civic and political reform work both locally in St. Louis and nationally before giving up his connections on the country's entrance into the war.

DEATH IN THE FAMILY OF SECRETARY STACY NOTED BY PLUMBERS

Steamfitters' and Plumbers' union, Local 43, drew up the following expression of sympathy in the death of the sister of Brother E. S. Stacy, secretary of Local 43:

"Whereas, Almighty God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to call to her reward Mrs. Maime Stacy Humbree, sister of our loyal and faithful brother, E. S. Stacy;

"Whereas, her passing is mourned by his fellow members and by all others with whom she came in daily contact; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we extend to the family of our beloved friend and coworker our deep sympathy; and be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread on the minutes of our meeting, a copy sent to The Labor World for publication, and a copy sent to the home of the bereaved family."

OLD AGE PENSION BILL.

Little Rock.—The Arkansas house, by a vote of 92 to 1, passed an old age pension bill and sent it to the senate. The pension would be administered in co-operation with federal old age plans for persons 65 or more in age.

LABOR ENDORSES PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Organized labor is about to see the successful realization of one of the main principles of government for which it has held forth for many, many years. Labor believes that the nation's natural resources belong to the people. God put them there. He did not intend that a few people should capture these resources for the private gain of their select group and deprive the masses from enjoying benefits therefrom.

The rivers and watersheds of this country rightfully belong to the people. The energy created in these rivers have been controlled by private interests and lavish profits have been extorted from the millions of citizens who were not in on the combination. President Roosevelt has acted, and through his influence with congress and with the help of those legislators therein who are desirous of helping the so-called common people to receive benefits from the resources of these storehouses of power, has created an agency called the Tennessee Valley Authority. Through the TVA municipalities are given the ability to exercise their inherent right to benefit in the public resources. If they will only exercise that right, they can now take over these power distributing agencies and operate them for their own benefit and not for the benefit of a few.

On March 12 the citizens of Chattanooga will go to the polls and say whether the Tennessee Electric Power Company shall continue to charge enormous rates for electric energy, whether this company shall continue to wring large dividends to be sent to holding companies in New York, and through these powerful groups and monopolies be able to retain their grip on politics, schools and the welfare of the nation in general.

The Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council has frequently gone on record as favoring public ownership of its utilities. We have specifically gone on record for public ownership under TVA regulations. The Labor World believes that organized labor will go down to the polls practically en masse and vote for the bond issue which will make possible the distribution of power by the people rather than by the power trust. The Labor World, the mouthpiece of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council, calls on every working man and woman to go to the ballot box on March 12 and vote "Yes."

Holmes Upheld Workers' Rights In Notable Dissenting Opinions

Famous Supreme Court Justice Was Great Liberal, Great Jurist and Great Man.

Washington.—Former Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, who died at his home in Washington, W. C., on March 6, 1935, was a great liberal, a great jurist, and above all, a great man.

"To the lips of eager youth," said his successor on the court, Justice Cardozo, "comes at times the halting doubt whether law in its study and its practice can fill the need for what is highest in the yearnings of the human species. Thus challenged, I do not argue. I point the challenger to Holmes."

It is hard to see how any man could live a fuller life. Born the son of Oliver Wendell Holmes, physician, poet, essayist, author of one of the finest comic poems in the language—"The One-Hoss Shay"—young Oliver inherited all his father's versatility and mental power. He was 20 years old when the Civil war broke out, enlisted in the Twentieth Massachusetts, and came out a lieutenant colonel. He was severely wounded in three battles; and it is said that to the end of his days, he would rather be addressed as "Colonel" than as "Mr. Justice."

The physical adventures of his life ended before he was 25 years old. His adventures of the mind continued to the end. He studied and taught law, he wrote books on law which are still classics. He became a member of the supreme court of Massachusetts, and in 1902, was named to the supreme court of the United States. President Roosevelt said he appointed Holmes to get a little liberalism on the supreme court—and there was nothing wrong with his choice.

Holmes was a liberal at a time when the great court was conservative almost to the point of being hidebound. When he could not convert his brethren to the broader view, he dissented from them, and told why. He dissented to uphold the rights of labor, to uphold the validity of laws to further social justice, to defend free speech; and he wrote with a mastery of language greater, rather than less, than that of his father.

Defends Hours' Limitation.

New York passed a law limiting the hours of labor in bakeries to ten a day or sixty a week. It came to the supreme court, which knocked it out because it violated "freedom of contract"—freedom for a baker to work himself to death. Justice Holmes dissented.

"The Fourteenth amendment does not enact Mr. Herbert Spencer's social statics," he remarked. "A reasonable man might think this law a proper measure on the score of health. Men whom I certainly could not pronounce unreasonable uphold it as the first installment of a general regulation of the hours of work."

Backs Organization Right.

Upholding the cause of a worker who had been fired for the crime of belonging to a union, Justice Holmes said:

"In present conditions, a workman not unnaturally may believe that only by belonging to a union can he secure a contract that shall be fair to him. If that belief, whether right or wrong, may be held by a reasonable man, it seems to me that it may be enforced by law."

He condemned an injunction against picketing. He upheld the law intended to abolish child labor by prohibiting interstate commerce in goods produced by child labor. He upheld the minimum wage law for women in the District of Columbia. Passing from labor to other matters, Holmes invariably defended the right of a state to make social experiments, and the right of anybody to say things which Holmes, personally, often did not like.

Cites Quaker's Usefulness.

Remember Holmes' career as a soldier, and then read this support of Pacifist Rosika Schwimmer's application for citizenship:

"I would suggest that the Quakers have done their share to make the country what it is, and that I had not supposed hitherto that we regretted our inability to expel them because they believe more than some of us do in the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount."

Even so small a fragment shows the quality of Holmes' writing. The supreme court in the last few years has had three great masters of English—Holmes, Brandeis and Car-

President Green Delivers Address At Dedication of the New Building For Federal Labor Department

Points Out That Proposal for Federal Labor Statistics Bureau was Made by First A. F. of L. Convention in 1881—Stresses Assistance Which Government Labor Technicians Can Give to Labor Movement.

Washington.—The close relation which should exist between the organized labor movement and the federal department of labor in promoting the welfare of the working people was emphasized by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in the address which he delivered at the dedication ceremonies of the new United States department of labor building here.

He pointed out that while organized labor is necessarily the agency to represent working men and women in their struggle for better work conditions and economic security, the department is the technical agency to develop much of the factual data which labor must have in negotiating effective collective bargaining agreements by which these objects are secured.

Mr. Green, who was introduced by Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins, said, in part:

Labor's Importance Recognized.

"The dedication of this building devoted to work for the advancement of labor, marks a new stage in recognition of labor as an integral basic group in our national life.

"A little more than twenty years ago we achieved the high recognition of legislation, creating a department of labor, headed by a secretary of cabinet rank. That was a milestone in labor progress. Today we meet here to dedicate a building to house the activities of our department of labor.

"This structure is part of a constructive plan to provide in the nation's capital buildings representative of the significance and importance of governmental activity.

"These buildings are material symbols of the size, power and beauty of our nation. They carry continuous inspiration to those selected to work for our common welfare. That in this magnificent plan of structure to house federal governmental activities there is one designed especially for labor, is evidence of the respect and importance which the nation attaches to labor.

Originated by A. F. of L.

"It is a significant fact that one of the basic proposals in the program which the American Federation of Labor adopted after its organization in 1881 was for a federal bureau of labor statistics and similar bureaus of the various states.

"Even in these early days unionists felt the need of having the facts of their problems and having records which would enable them to gauge their progress.

"The general acceptance of the need for such governmental agencies is very largely due to the wisdom and the initiative of the organized labor movement, and pointed the way to the need for a federal department of labor headed by a secretary who is a member of the president's cabinet. Labor proposed that course because it felt that as a large and important group in the nation, it ought and must work out its progress in an orderly constructive way as a part of the body politic.

"Our traditions of democracy and equal opportunities made constructive, constitutional progress possible."

Department's Service for Labor Outlined.

"Labor realizes that our ability to produce sets definite limits to our material standards of living and it further realizes that only when returns in wages and shorter hours of work keep pace with increased productivity does our activity serve to promote the general welfare.

"We look to the department of labor for help in keeping the balance between human welfare and technical progress. Since we do look to the activities housed within this building for service in our work of promoting the welfare of workers, we anticipate a basis of friendly understanding and co-operation.

"The labor movement needs the assistance of experts and technicians and the latter need us in order to keep their work practical and usable.

"The labor movement is the self-created, democratic agency for representation for those who work for wages. The department of labor is the technical and research agency created in response to our petitions, which will expand as our government undertakes a program of economic and social security together with a comprehensive employment service.

"There should be the closest co-operation between the private and governmental agencies operating in the same field.

Pledges A. F. of L. Support.

"Labor looks upon the dedication of this building as marking new opportunities for the expansion of governmental services, which comes at a crucial time in the development of industrial institutions. Upon the direction and character of these developments depends the future of our nation.

"If it means new rights and opportunities for employes—those who have been underprivileged in the past—it will bring progress toward greater human happiness and material well-being for every large group. For this kind of development the support of the American Federation of Labor is pledged.

Wage-earner's Welfare Stressed.

"While we participate in these dedication ceremonies, congratulating each other upon a realization of our hopes and fulfillment of our dreams to establish the department of labor in a building conspicuols for its charming architectural design and adequate housing facilities, we are reminded of the functions of the labor department, of its chief aim and purpose 'to foster, promote and develop the welfare of the wage-earners of the United States, to improve their working conditions, and to advance their opportunities for profitable employment,' as set forth in the statute providing for the creation of the department.

"Labor, the friends of labor, and those charged with the administration of the department of labor, can now look forward confidently, expecting and believing that congress will appropriate sufficient funds so that the secretary of labor, and all those clothed with the administration of the affairs of the department of labor may make real and vital the primary purpose of the department, can accelerate its activities and in a wider, bigger and broader way 'foster, promote and develop the welfare of the wage-earners of the United States, to improve their working conditions, and to advance their opportunities for profitable employment.'"

Local 1785 to Give "Pounding Party" to Help Local Strikers

Members of Local 1785 are giving a pounding party to the strikers at the Chickamauga Knitting mill Sunday, March 10. Meet at the hall in Ridgedale at 2 o'clock and go to the mill together. All other locals invited.

Regular Session To Be Held Monday, March 18.

Friends of Cooke to Hold Forth at Courthouse Night Before Election.

A. C. Kamin, president of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, and chairman of its executive committee, announces postponement of the regular meeting which was to be held next Monday, March 11. In place of the regular meeting there will be a Bob Cooke "pep" meeting to be held at the courthouse. If the weather is clear the rally may be held on the courthouse lawn. If the weather is inclement the crowd will move inside.

The Bob Cooke committee, in an interview with The Labor World, says that all members of organized labor and friends of Bob Cooke are expected to show their loyalty to this candidate by turning out and bring their family with them. The committee is in high spirits over prospects of putting Bob Cooke over in such a tremendous way that his election will be cinched in the primary, and for this reason the rally is called to give "last-minute" talks and instructions to his supporters. Every member of organized labor is expected to attend. Candidate Cooke has shown an increasing strength each day, and this rally will be the climax to one of the most effective and successful campaigns yet put on by any candidate in recent city elections.

Regular meeting of Central Body will be postponed until the following Monday, March 18, to transact necessary business and to celebrate the victory.

CROSLEY RADIO CO. UNFAIR TO PRINTERS OF CINCINNATI, OHIO

Communication from the Allied Printing Trades council of Cincinnati and vicinity sets forth that the Crosley Radio corporation has consistently persisted in ignoring the pleas of the printing crafts to be fair to them, and that of necessity they must inform the labor movement of this attitude.

The letter, signed by Henry Beesten, president of the council, follows:

"At a regular meeting of the Allied Printing Trades council of Cincinnati and vicinity it was unanimously decided to inform all labor union bodies of the American Federation of Labor that all printing used by the Crosley Radio corporation, of Cincinnati, is produced under non-union conditions.

"The Crosley Radio corporation operates radio stations WLW and WSAI, and manufactures radios and refrigerators.

"Printing used by this concern is produced in shops which have a record of being unfair to the printing trades unions.

"The Allied Printing Trades council of Cincinnati and vicinity has spent much time and effort in appealing to the Crosley Radio corporation for support and consideration. However, our efforts are in vain. Therefore we ask for your co-operation in a nation-wide campaign to show the Crosley Radio corporation 'that in union there is strength.'

"Our program is simple and all we ask you to do is to recognize and authorize the sending of a letter to the Crosley Radio corporation, expressing your resentment of their unfairness.

"Thanking you in advance for your support, we are,

"Fraternally yours,
"HENRY BEESTEN,
"President."

A new radio heat treatment for bursitis is announced by the General Electric company. Bursitis is caused by deposits of calcium, a hard, lime-like substance, which sometimes gets into the smooth body "oil" that ordinarily lubricates such parts. The radio waves causing "radio fever" are applied through a powerful antenna of special design. The waves heat muscles and dissolves the calcium deposits. The usual radio waves do not cause "radio fever."

Father Coughlin on Corporations

Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit's "radio priest," sent over the air the other day a call for taxes to stop the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few corporations, and give the "little men" a chance.

"By the year 1950," he said, "unless salutary laws are introduced in the meantime, 70 per cent of all the corporate industrial activities of the nation will be carried on by 200 concerns. By that year, they will possess half the national wealth, and by 1970, they will own all industrial activity and practically all the national wealth."

Coughlin is drawing his facts from one of the most thoughtful books of the past few years—"The Modern Corporation and Private Property," by Gardiner C. Means and A. A. Berle. In this book, the writers—chiefly Means—trace the growth of corporations until less than 200 companies control a majority of the industrial and transportation business of the day. These 200 corporations have less than 2,000 different directors; so that 1,000 men control the bulk of the nation's investment in mining, manufacturing and transportation.

As a matter of fact, a majority of these directors are dummies or representatives of a handful of financiers behind the scenes. But, taking them at their face value, think what it means to have the wealth and industry of the country controlled by so small a group as that.

Father Coughlin can see no escape from industrial feudalism except by invoking the full strength of the taxing power. He would have, not only income and i nheritance taxes graduated steeply upward; but taxes which amount to excess profits taxes on the gains of corporations, though he does not call them that.

The Efficiency of Mr. Grace

Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel company, told Senator Nye at a munitions hearing recently that he—Grace—believed the government would be very inefficient in managing a steel plant, especially in war time.

From his own point of view, Mr. Grace undoubtedly is right. He has an efficiency in feathering his own nest which no government official would know how to imitate.

Mr. Grace collected $12,282,000 of "bonus" for his services to the Bethlehem company in the years from 1917 to 1931. During that same period, he was getting a salary of from $12,000 to $101,000 a year. If a government official got a rakeoff like that from his job—and anyone found it out—he would spend a season of retirement and meditation in Atlanta or Leavenworth.

In one of these years, 1917, Mr. Grace's company cleared $61,800,000 in net profits; 43 per cent in a single year on a grossly inflated capitalization. It made this blood and iron profit after setting aside in the same year $1,501,000 "bonus" for Eugene G. Grace. This profit was a war profit, and the bonus in that year and the next was a war bonus. By the way, does Mr. Grace approve a bonus for the men who served in the war? Probably not. He told the senate committee that he approved drafting men for service at the front, but that to draft capital by taking away its excess profits would be "different."

And in one way, Mr. Grace's testimony does show government inefficiency. That he could take such profits out of the nation in time of war and not go to the penitentiary for it is an evidence of ineptness on the part of some persons in the government which cannot be denied.

Prevailing Wage Rates on Relief Work

After the United States senate had adopted by a vote of 44 to 43 the McCarran prevailing wage rate amendment, approved by the American Federation of Labor, to the $4,800,000,000 work relief resolution, the senate recommitted the resolution on to the senate finance committee with certain senators boasting that these tactics were resorted to in order to defeat the prevailing wage rate section. The amendment provided that mechanics and laborers employed on public works financed by the appropriation should be paid the wage rates prevailing in private industry in the various localities instead of the lower rates which had been recommended by the committee.

In an editorial criticizing the recommittal of the resolution the Washington, D. C., Evening Star said:

"There has been a philosophy in certain quarters in this country which holds that wages of labor must come down before prosperity can return. It is a philosophy of selfishness. The payment by the government of an average monthly wage of $50 to 3,500,000 workers on relief projects will have the effect of bringing lower wages to labor in private industry. It is a weapon to beat down wage scales that have been built up through years of striving by labor. Now, when it is proposed to pay the 'prevailing wage,' the usual wage paid by private industry for labor, on these work relief projects, a howl goes up that men will not go back to private industry under such conditions but will stick to their government jobs. The government is in a position to regulate this, even if it were true. It can give men work for three days a week at the prevailing wages, and thereby reduce their earnings per week far below what they would receive on a private job. Or it can cut off government jobs."

Judge Nields' Decision

Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act declares: "(1) That employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection; (2) that no employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join in any company union, or to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing . . ."

In his decision in the Weirton Steel company case Federal Judge John T. Nields declared that Section 7-A is "unconstitutional and void" as applied to the company and its employes.

It remains for the supreme court of the United States to pass upon this remarkable decision.

A CORRECTION

A report of the labor institute in the March issue of The Labor World contained the statement that "Dr. Guerry, president of the University of Chattanooga, has rendered assistance in preparing the program. . . ." This statement was entirely erroneous, and we are glad to make correction. Dr. Guerry was invited to speak on the program of the labor institute, but on account of a previous engagement, was unable to accept.

RELIEF FIGURES RISE.

The trend of urban relief was slightly upward between December and January, according to preliminary reports from 142 cities made public by the federal emergency relief administrator. The increase shown by the figures on the number of families and single persons was 8 per cent. Expenditures increased 11 per cent.

STORE CHAIN HELD GUILTY OF VIOLATING SECTION 7-A

New York City.—The James Butler Grocery company was given five days in which to comply with Section 7-A, according to a four-page decision on the current strike of store managers and clerks handed down by the regional labor board.

The regional board found the Butler company guilty of refusing to bargain collectively with "duly chosen representatives" of the employes. The board also found the company "took active steps to undo organization work which had been accomplished, and to prevent further organization."

The decision may effect the status of all chain-store employes organizations here and in other cities.

The lesson of experience that teaches kindness, unselfishness and love of service is a greater lesson than any taught in books.

PROSPERITY, BUILDING BOOM, COMING, KIPLINGER PREDICTS

Another Period of Good Times,, Coupled with Inflation, Will Begin Probably in Spring of 1396 and Last Until 1940, Well-Known Washington Economist and Financial Writer Thinks.

Washington.—In a book taking the form of twenty-five personal letters, W. M. Kiplinger, economist and financial writer, tells Mr. Common Citizen that we are due to have another period of good times, beginning probably in the spring of 1936 and lasting until 1940-41. We will have good times, Mr. Kiplinger says, partly because we will have inflation. That is coming willy nilly. Nothing can stop it, though the government can control it; and it will be an inflation of credit, not of currency.

Mr. Kiplinger has a shrewd understanding of forces in Washington as higher percentage of hits than anyone else who has used the difficult bat of forecasting. But the most interesting part is what he expects of housing.

"Until it becomes cheaper to buy than to rent," he declares, "there can be no real home-building boom."

Boom Certain, He says.

Then he summarizes the factors which make him certain that a real home-building boom is coming.

"Depression caused a tremendous shrinkage in the use of houses. Families doubled up. Many families are now undoubling. The marriage rate is now increasing, and new families need homes. Unemployment is still high enough to keep the brakes applied to the demands for houses, and this is likely to continue for at least a year. But the scramble for new houses will come."

Costs of wages and building materials he thinks will not come down much; though in another place, he speaks of new building materials, which would have little reason for existence if they were not cheaper than those in use at present.

Financing Costs to Drop.

But financing costs of home building are bound to drop, partly because interest rates are sure to be generally lower, and because of the strong pressure of the government to lower the financial expenses of owning a home.

As for government housing, Mr. Kiplinger expects this to get really under way next fall. But this is one place where he considers other factors stronger than the influence of the government.

Profit and Wage Trend Threat To Nation, NLRB Member Warns

New Orleans, La.—During the past year and a half the profits of business have boomed while the real wages of labor have increased only slightly, creating the same conditions that existed in this country in the period before the crash, Edwin S. Smith, member of the national labor relations board, warned business and labor leaders and officials from five states at a regional labor meeting here.

The meeting, sponsored by the New Orleans regional labor board, was marked also by an address by Monsignor P. M. H. Wynhoven, director, in which he pointed out that the "country is still in a hell of a mess," that millions are unemployed and other millions are not getting "enough for a decent living." "Things cannot go on as they are now; something must be worked out," he said. "Perhaps hours should be shortened, perhaps labor should share more in the profits of industry. Living conditions, certainly, must change, and industry should certainly not expect to make big profits during the next few years."

Rev. Wynhoven declared that he did not know the private or personal views of his listeners toward Senator Long, "but his share the wealth program is founded on a sound basis." The wealth of the land is held by the few while millions are in want, he pointed out.

Labor must clear its ranks of "hoodlums and rascals" in its leadership throughout the country, but industry also had suffered through the activities of "hoodlums and rascals," William H. Alexander, member of the board representing industry, declared.

Defects in the national board must be eliminated, Holt Ross, district representative of the A. F. of L., declared. Collective bargaining "does not mean merely collective conversation," and must be clarified, he said. Overlapping boards, such as the textile board, must be eliminated and the national labor board given full jurisdiction over labor disputes. Its decisions must be final, and it must have power to enforce them, he added.

Railroad Forced Workers to Take Contract, Charge

Head of Southern Lines Coerced Trainmen and Fought Union Members, National Mediation Board Is Told.

New Orleans.—Testimony that C. P. Couch, president of the Louisiana and Arkansas and the Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas railroads, coerced members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen into signing contracts with his lines and that the railroad discriminated against workers who were loyal to their union was offered at a hearing of the National Mediation board here. The charge was made by C. P. Myers, Shreveport, general chairman of the union men's grievance committee for 16 years, when he took the stand after lengthy testimony by C. H. Smith, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

"I can safely say from my experience with the men in the transportation department of the railroad," Mr. Myers said, "that they are prepared to leave the service rather than continue in their jobs under present conditions." The railroad, after recognizing Myers as chairman of the grievance committee of the employes for 14 years, in 1932 told employes who were on trial for violation of rules that they would be dismissed for insubordination if Mr. Myers was their representative at the trial, the witness said.

Once when committees of the workers union objected to signing a contract with the railroad under which many of their rights were taken away, Myers said, Couch came into the conference room and told them that they would have to take the contract and sign it within a few hours or prepare to lose their jobs.

"The only way we could get any satisfaction out of Mr. Couch," Myers said, "was to agree with him in whatever he wanted." Judge Ben C. Dawkins of the Western Louisiana Federal Court by court order forced the Louisiana and Arkansas railway to recognize Myers as the workers' representative, the witness said, but afterward, although the company officials "recognized" him technically, they never permitted him to really represent the workers.

WORKERS' COUNCIL ADOPTS PLAN TO FURTHER PURPOSES OF TVA

Wage Earners on Great Southern Development Project Adopt Five-Point Program Designed to Promote Success of Undertaking—Trade Unionists Back Equal Pay for Negro Labor.

By JOHN W. EDELMAN

Sheffield, Ala.—"The finest thing that has happened since the TVA was established is the statement of principles and program adopted by the TVA Workers' council," said Floyd W. Reeves, personnel director for the Authority, speaking at a workers' education conference at the Joe Wheeler dam, Muscle Shoals.

The TVA Workers' council is the joint collective agency for all men and women employed on the job, union and non-union alike. It is also the set-up through which the educational and recreational activities of the employes functions.

The council was originally initiated by George Googe, chairman of the southern organization campaign of the American Federation of Labor, and Clair Killen, director of labor relations for the TVA.

Five-Point Program.

The five-point program and statement of policy, adopted by the council, in substance is as follows:

1. To carry out in the most effective manner the purposes and policies of TVA.
2. To assist the directors of TVA and the representatives of all bona-fide organizations of workers on the job to develop the best type of labor relations.
3. To familiarize all workers on the job with the economic and social purpose of the TVA.
4. To serve as the central agency for collective dealings in all matters affecting the welfare of the employes and the successful development of the project.
5. To enable the workers on TVA to obtain and assume more social and economic responsibility in communal activities both in connection with TVA matters and the everyday activities of the workers in their community.

The first TVA Workers' council was formulated after a conference with the international and local officers of the unions engaged in the construction industries at Knoxville last year.

Labor Policy Statement.

A clear-cut and factual statement of the labor policy of the TVA is now in process of formulation. Boards are being set up for consideration of grievances and right of appeal to the national labor relations board itself as the court of last report will probably be provided.

Presiding at the Joe Wheeler council meet was McCoy Fulton, union carpenter working on job, chairman of all groups working at this site. The only set speakers on the program were Dr. Reeves and George Googe. A panel discussion was arranged for the afternoon session with staff members, including J. C. Huntley, superintendent in charge, union organizers, foremen and a couple of plain employes participating.

Ticklish questions of union policy, of discipline on the job, and the issue of construction costs on government projects were discussed candidly.

Organization Urged.

Dr. Reeves declared, "I don't think we could under the act make TVA a 'closed shop' job, but I do feel that all those engaged in the undertaking should be affiliated with the organization of his or her choice.

"The individual will be protected, naturally, but he or she will obtain the best type of representation only through being organized."

George Googe, after making his advertised address to the conference, was invited by TVA officials to discuss plans for organizing the laborers and tradesmen on the job. N. D. Huff, assistant personnel director, introduced to the audience E. E. "Red" McDaniel, newly appointed organizer for the Laborers' union. McDaniel is now organizing the foremen of the labor gangs.

Equal Pay Urged.

In his address Googe stressed the fact that a policy of equal pay for equal work to negro labor must obtain on the job.

Commenting on this stand, Dr. Reeves said, "In my judgment, the real reason that differentials have been permitted in the codes is because of the established practice of paying black labor less than white for similar work all over the south. If we can remedy this situation and remove differentials as between the races we shall be in a better position to work for the elimination of geographical differentials in all codes."

The trade unionists at the conference all firmly stood with the TVA in insisting upon no discrimination in wage rates for colored labor.

Under the leadership of Clair Killen, special labor advisor to the TVA, a tremendous job is being done in this area which was until recently a strong hold of industrial feudalism, to establish a measure of democracy and fair dealings on a vast construction job of this type. In its labor policies the TVA is demonstrating to the whole southland some of the benefits that may permanently accrue to the whole working population, if this opportunity for achieving organization is realized and accepted.

TVA is starting off at least on the right foot.

Labor in America must watch this effort with more than hopeful and prayerful encouragement.

Huge Losses With a City Power System. Are you ready to pay Your part?

YOU DON'T HAVE TO UNDERSTAND "FINANCIAL STATEMENTS" TO UNDERSTAND THIS:

MR. FRAZIER Asked:

"With the present consumption of electricity (that is, the electricity consumed in Chattanooga in 1934) and with basic TVA resale rates, and allowing for all expenses, such as operating expenses, amortization, etc., how much would be the loss to the city the first year?

MR. DAUGHERTY, President of Scofield Engineering Co., Replied:

"Based upon public works administration financing at 4% without grant, the deficit to the city under the above conditions we would estimate to be $666,560.00, which would require a surcharge of 67% upon basic TVA commercial and industrial rates."

IT'S AS SIMPLE AS 2 plus 2

And if the power bonds bear an interest rate of 6%, as provided for in the Public Power League's enabling act, and loss of taxes now paid to Hamilton County by the Tennessee Electric Power Company are taken into account, the total loss will approximate $1,000,000. Yet Messrs. Wilhoite, Chamlee and Clark are still trying to mislead the public on how much their POLITICAL POWER SYSTEM WOULD "MAKE"!

These losses must be made up either by heavy surcharges---at least 67%---or by taxes.

Why vote for an $8,000,000* city power system, when a 50% tax increase stares you in the face?

Why vote for a city power system, when RENTS will certainly go up the minute TAXES go up?

Why vote for a politically run power scheme that would lose heavily from the very day it is started?

It Doesn't Make Dollars . . . and It Doesn't Make Sense!

Vote AGAINST the issuance of $8,000,000 ELECTRIC POWER BONDS of the CITY OF CHATTANOOGA [X]

WAGES MUST GO UP TO ASSURE PROFITS, LABOR SURVEY SAYS

Higher Production Places Many Employers in Position to Raise Pay and Bring Recovery, A. F. of L. Declares —Workers' Share in Wealth Created by Manufacture Shown Falling for Nearly Century.

Washington.—If wages are raised, profits will follow.

Wage-earners' share in the wealth created by manufacturers has declined for nearly a century.

These two points are strongly emphasized in the American Federation of Labor monthly survey of business, just out.

Commenting on the present situation and reviewing the course of business in the last two and a half years, the survey says that the year 1935 has opened with business well above last year's level. "Nevertheless it is still 20 per cent below normal," it is added.

"The present rise of business activity is of particular significance to labor, for increasing production will now place many firms in a position to pay higher wages," the survey says, going on to cite earnings statements to show that many corporations will be able to increase wages this spring.

"It is a well-known fact," the federation continues, "that industry cannot recover from depression and production cannot be lifted to higher levels unless workers' buying power increases greatly above its present volume. It has been and still is the policy of industry, in a period of recovery, to increase profits first and let wage increases follow later as individual firms see fit to grant them. The result of this policy has been a top-heavy industrial development, with a surplus of money invested in increasing machinery and plant capacity and a shortage of buying power among the workers.

"Under modern conditions wages must be raised first; profits will then follow:

The federation stresses the necessity of union organization to aid in increasing purchasing power and shows workers' share in each dollar created by manufacture has been decreasing since 1849.

"Experience under NRA has shown that strong union organization is necessary to increase workers' income. Compare, for instance, the experience of the last two years in the cigarette industry, where employers have fought and prevented union organization, and in the women's clothing industry, where the trade union is well established. The tobacco industries are in a better position to increase wages today than any other group of American industries, for they are making higher profits than any others and their sales volume exceeds 1929.

"Nevertheless from 1933 to 1934, the cigarette industry increased average wage payments by only 75 cents a week while wages in women's clothing industry rose by nearly $3 a week. Average weekly earnings in these two industries in 1934 were: Cigarettes, $11.84; women's clothing, $18.82.

"If industry is to sell its product today, strong trade union organization, with power to raise wages, is essential. With the increased use of machinery in our production processes, workers are sharing less and less in the income created by their work. In 1849, workers received about half (51 per cent) the value created by manufacture. By 1919 their share had shrunk to 42 per cent and today (1935) it is about one-third (36 per cent). The share going to profits and overhead, on the other hand, has increased from one-half to nearly two-thirds of the total during the same period. Increases in overhead have been due to larger interest payments, upkeep of machinery, high salaries to management.

"From 1919 to 1933, while workers' share dropped from 42 per cent to 36 per cent, the average worker's producing capacity almost doubled; production per worker per hour in our manufacturing industries increased 71 per cent.

"Thue we are steadily increasing the proportion of the product our wage-earners can buy.

"This unbalance is the more serious because we must depend on wage-earners' purchases to create a market for our products. In 1949, our industries were not equipped to produce for the mass of wage-earners. Today industry has placed on the market over 21,500,000 passenger automobiles, 20,000,000 radios, 10,000,000 home telephones and other comforts and luxuries in equally large iumbers. Since there are only 160,000 wealthy families in the United States and less than 7,756,000 moderately well-to-do, clearly we must depend on the lower income groups, wage and small salaried workers, who number over 19,588,000 families, to buy the products our industries turn out. This dependence on wage-earners makes their organization essential.

"Therefore, developments of the past month, which have weakened the agency set up by the administration to protect workers' right to organize, are of serious consequences to business."

True to Type.

"Miss Curlycue," murmured the office manager to the stenog, "I don't wanna be harsh. Nothin' like that. I really don't."

"Let's have the answer," said the damsel nonchalantly. "What's bitin' you now?"

"I just wanna ask you not to write your young man during business hours. Letters are apt to get mixed. Herb & Blurb report we have sent 'em a shipment of love and kisses instead of the axle grease they ordered."

U. S. COURT RULES SECTION 7-A INVALID IN WEIRTON STEEL CASE

Denies Government's Plea for Injunction to Restrain Company From Interfering With Employes' Right to Organize in Bona Fide Nnion—Declares Company Union Complies with Labor Section of Recovery Act.

Wilmington, Del.—Federal Judge John P. Nields ruled that Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act is "unconstitutional and void" as applied to the Weirton Steel company and its business.

Section 7-A is the provision which guarantees the right of the workers to organize in bona fide trade unions and select their own representatives for collective bargaining without interference from employers and inhibits employers from making membership in company unions compulsory as the price of a job.

The court ruled that although the Weirton concern had manufacturing plants in more than one state its business is practically all intrastate and therefore does not come under the regulatory power of congress. He added that the relations between the company and its employes "do not affect interstate commerce."

Government Charged Law Violation.

The government charged that the company union promoted by the Weirton concern did not comply with Section 7-A of the recovery act because it did not permit collective bargaining by the employes through representatives of their own choosing selected without interference from company officials. The government also declared that the company conducted a campaign of intimidation against those employes who desired to affiliate with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

Claiming that these practices were in violation of Section 7-A, the government petitioned the court for an injunction restraining the company from continuing to interfere with the exercise of the rights of its employes guaranteed by the labor provision.

Defends Company Union.

In refusing to issue the injunction, Judge Nields denied these contentions of the government. He said:

"By a clear preponderance of evidence this court finds that the plan of employe representation in effect among the employes of the defendant affords a lawful and effective organization of the employes for collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing; that in all respects it complies with the provisions of Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act and Section 1, Article 4 of the steel code; that in all respects it is directly operated and controlled by defendant's employes and is not dominated or controlled by defendant or its agents; that in all respects it is satisfactory to the great majority of the defendant's employes; that the forty-nine representatives elected in December, 1933, are free from any domination or control of defendant or its agents, and that the payment of compensation by defendant to the representatives and the payment by defendant of the expenses of operating the plan are lawful and do not constitute acts of interference, restraint or coercion."

Quite Usual.

Labor Refuses to Accept Weirton Decision as Final, Green Declares

Visions Industrial Servitude for Workers Unless Judge Nields' Decree in Favor of Corporation-Promoted Company Unions Is Overruled by the Supreme Court and Public Opinion.

Washington.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, issued the following statement commenting on the decision of Federal Judge John P. Nields in the Weirton Steel company case declaring Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act "void and unconstitutional:"

"Labor cannot accept the decision of Federal Judge John P. Nields in the Weirton Steel company case, holding Section 7-A of the national recovery act unconstitutional, as final and conclusive.

"An appeal will be taken from the decision to the supreme court of the United States if possible and necessary.

"In the meantime labor will continue to present cases arising out of disputes over the application of Section 7-A to the national labor relations board for decision.

"The decision of Judge Nields is very disappointing and is evidently based upon either a misunderstanding or a misinterpretation of the facts.

"There are grave social, economic and industrial implications involved in this important decision.

"It is inconceivable that either labor or public opinion will support the extension of corporate power and control over the economic strength of the workers through the establishment and maintenance of company unions.

"Public opinion, which after all is the most potent and powerful influence in our political and industrial life, will in my opinion insist and demand that labor must be free, free to organize and utilize its economic strength in the promotion of its social, economic and industrial welfare.

"If the decision of Judge Nields means that corporation power may be extended so far as to establish complete domination and control over the economic lives of the workers through the establishment of the company union, financed, fostered and maintained by the funds of the corporation, labor will be reduced to a basis of industrial servitude, subject to the will, control and exploitation of employers' organizations and powerful corporations."

LABOR ASKS "FULL CREW" ACT FOR BOSTON ELEVATED LINES

Boston.—At the request of union officials, a bill has been introduced in the Massachusetts legislature, aiming at the abolition of multiple control on the rapid transit lines of the Boston Elevated railway, and calling for the placing of one guard for each two cars on subway and overhead electric trains. The bill is opposed by the trustees of the railway on the ground that it would add $135,000 annually to the deficit.

That the multiple control involves danger and poor service, and will mean the loss of jobs by seventy men next January, when an agreement with the unions expires, were advanced in favor of the bill at a hearing. When the multiple control was established several years ago the unions filed a vigorous objection and, finally, an agreement was made that the seventy guards would be retained on the payroll until Jan. 1, 1936. With the expiration of this agreement the guards would be discharged.

Canadian Employment Gains 8 Per Cent Over Last Year

Ottawa.—The Canadian index of employment in January stood at 94.4 compared with 88.6 in January, 1934, an increase of 8 per cent. It declined from 98.9 in December but the decline was less than the usual seasonal change.

The index of building employment in January was 45.4, compared with 33.9 in January, 1934. Public works program accounted for part of this increase.

It is very well to make a good beginning, but it should never be forgotten that the end is what determines everything.

SAYS:

"I'm a big user of electricity . . . . but my bills are most reasonable."

"I'VE noticed some letters you've published recently, from customers pleased with their electric service and their low electric bills. These letters have been from average customers, using from $1.50 to about $3.75 worth of electricity a month . . . and I thought you might like to hear from a larger user of your service.

"We've always considered electricity the cheapest convenience and comfort on the market, and we wanted all of its benefits. For instance, we like lots of light and use about fifty bulbs in our home a good part of the time. We like plenty of hot water and electric refrigeration. We prefer to cook breakfast at the table, with an electric egg-cooker, toaster and percolator. Then there's my Mixmaster . . . I wouldn't swap it for anything . . . and I can say the same for my kitchen exhaust fan.

"Now you can see why I call myself a big user of electricity. We use lots of it because it's cheap. Though such use naturally makes my bills higher than the average consumer's, I am quite sure I am getting value received for my money. Some people seem to think my average bill of $6.56 a month is high; I don't. My electric bill for any month is a great deal less than the $10.37 a month for taxes on our home. Think that over!"

dozo; men whose work are literature as well as law. Perhaps the peak of judicial eloquence was reached in Brandeis' dissent in the Anita Whitney case; but by general consent, in what may be called the mine run of their writing, Holmes bears the palm.

Holmes Splendidly Human.

"It is revolting to have no better reason for a rule of law than that so it was laid down in the time of Henry IV. "The law embodies the story of a nation's development through many centuries, and it cannot be dealt with as if it contained only the axioms and corollaries of a book of mathematics." "I have always thought that not place or power or popularity makes the success that one desires, but the trembling hope that one has come near to an ideal."

And with all his splendid high mindedness, Holmes was utterly if splendidly human. He read French novels and all forms of detective stories by the yard. He had, on occasion, a vocabulary that Queen Elizabeth would have appreciated. He is reliably reported to have said that he would neither die nor retire while President Coolidge had the power of naming his successor—and he kept his word.

Industry Based on Large Profits And Exploitation of Labor Must End, Green Tells Auto Workers

Denounces Motor Magnates for Refusing to Recognize Right of Employes to Organize in Bona Fide Trade Unions.

Flays Company Unions, Spy System and Terrorism Organized by Employes—Condemns Spurious Elections Held by Wolman Labor Board—Genuine Collective Bargaining Urged to Build Just Industrial Relattions.

Severe condemnation of automobile manufacturers in general for their refusal to recognize the right of their employes to organize in bona fide trade unions, condemnation of the company unions controlled by automobile employers as destructive of the rights of the auto workers, and the demand for real collective bargaining based on recognition of trade unions, characterized the address on economic conditions in the automobile manufacturing industry delivered by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, at a mass meeting of auto workers in Detroit, Mich., held under the auspices of the third meeting of the National Council of United Automobile Workers.

Mr. Green charged that in their efforts to victimize their employes with long hours and low wages and to nullify their right to organize the auto magnates had elaborated a spy system comparable to medieval tyranny; and condemned the so-called "elections" for collective bargaining representatives held by the Wolman automobile labor board as fake elections designed to frustrate rather than forward real collective bargaining.

He cited the Hupp, White Motors and Nash companies which have mutually satisfactorily collective bargaining agreements with their employes as proof of organized labor's claim regarding the equity of organization, and closed with a solemn warning that industry based on maximum profits at the expense of the "human factors and human relationships" must come to an end.

Mr. Green said, in part:

Company Unions and Spy System.

"Automobile manufacturers have refused to their employes freedom of organization and the right of collective bargaining. They have created their own company unions which they control and from which they need fear no real demands for better working conditions.

"Men who have tried to organize, in all sincerity and in the belief that the national industrial recovery act means what it says, have found themthemselves discharged or in other ways discriminated against. They have found themselves the victims of an elaborate spy system which would have done credit to a medieval tyrant.

"Their every effort to bring about a peaceful betterment of their working conditions has been rebuffed. They have been met with discharge, failure to rehire, wage decreases, a greater speed-up, with refusal to discuss with them their working conditions.

Decent Wages Demanded.

"Automobile workers do not want to take over control of the automobile industry, as is so fantastically charged.

"They want decent working conditions; they want to be treated at least as well as the mechanical equipment of the factories is treated; they are men and women and want to be recognized as such; they want wages upon which they can live and support their wives and children without dependence upon public relief during a large part of the year."

Right to Organize Stressed.

"They want the right, which is legally theirs, to join labor organizations for collective bargaining; they want assurance that they will be rehired when they are laid off; they want to work at a speed which will not wear them out in a few years; they want foremen who will not drive them as galley slaves were once driven; they want to work under conditions in which they can maintain their self-respect as American citizens; they want to be freed from the intolerable burden of fear and uncertainty which the present situation in the automobile industry has laid upon them.

Government Reveals Victimization.

"In these things, they speak not only for themselves but for hundreds of thousands of workers in other industries in which similar conditions prevail.

"That these conditions actually do exist, let me prove by a quotation from the recent government report on the automobile industry, which says: 'Labor unrest exists to a degree higher than warranted by the depression. The unrest flows from insecurity, low annual earnings, inequitable hiring and rehiring methods, espionage, speed-up and displacement of workers at an early age.'

Exploitation of Labor Condemned.

"Human patience and resignation do not endure forever.

"Industries built upon the exploitation of human beings cannot endure.

"Workers will be freed in the automobile and in other industries from the injustices they suffer. Employers have only to look at the historical development of employer-employe relationships to know that this is so. That development has been steadily in the direction of greater bargaining power and greater freedom for the workers. That development can be delayed by opposition but it cannot be destroyed. Real collective bargaining is coming. The progressive employer will accept it, before it is forced upon him.

False Collective Bargaining Imposed.

"Automobile workers have no place to go to secure a settlement of their problems and their difficulties. They have had imposed upon them a labor board which is so manifestly unsatisfactory and unfair that organized labor cannot co-operate with it. A recent report of that board says that the board has 'seen to it that the methods of collective bargaining are employed generally in the industry.'

"This is flatly contradicted by the report of the division of research and planning of the national recovery administration and the bureau of labor statistics which found that 'many of the complaints against management —such as poor working conditions, terror and discrimination—will disappear when and if facilities are fully extended for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.'

Real Collective Bargaining Essential.

"The very fundamentals of collective bargaining are lacking in the automobile industry today.

"Real collective bargaining must be based upon at least relatively equal bargaining power of employer and employes; it cannot be carried on when employes know that they are constantly spied upon; when they are not free to join a union without fear of discharge; when they work at a speed so great that only the young men can keep up; when the industry assumes no responsibility for the maintenance of its employes for a large share of the year and when those employes are thrown out and cast aside after a few years' work, as old men at the age of 40.

"These are not the conditions in which collective bargaining functions."

Human industrial Relations Stressed.

"It is time for the people of this nation to take inventory of where our vaunted industrial supremacy is leading us.

"Splendid industrial organizations, great profit-making concerns, built up at a cost of human happiness and human lives, cannot and must not be maintained.

"The human factors and human relationships in industry must be given the same thought and attention which has been given to the perfection of machinery."

Gamble Expresses Appreciation To Loyal Friends

A. G. Gamble, who was a candidate for the city commission, but who withdrew from the race a few days ago, expresses appreciation to the many loyal friends who were with him until he decided to withdraw.

"I hope that all my friends will give the same support to R. M. (Bob) Cooke that they extended to me while I remained in the race," Mr. Gamble stated.—Adv.

President Signs Bill Restoring Federal Pay

Washington. — Organized labor's fight for full restoration of government workers' pay was crowned with final victory when President Roosevelt signed the supplementary appropriations bill which carries an amendment eliminating the last 5 per cent of the cut on April 1. Ten per cent of the original 15 per cent reduction has already been restored.

Restoration of the last 5 per cent of the cut entails expenditure of $16,000,000, it is estimated.

Word that the president had signed the bill was received with rejoicing at headquarters of labor organizations here. Immediately upon receipt of the news, the American Federation of Labor Executive council, meeting in Washington, invited Senator McCarran, of Nevada, sponsor of the pay restoration bill, to meet the council for the purpose of extending to him the thanks of organized workers in and out of the government service. Senator Schwellenbach, of Washington, another warm champion of the government workers, was also present, as were members of the A. F. of L. wage restoration conference. A warm expression of gratitude to the two senators was voiced by President Green, of the A. F. of L.

Trade Unionists Plan Educational Program

Delegates Map Out Organization of Workers' Classes and Summer School Recruitment in Southern Industrial Centers.

Atlanta, Ga.—Nearly a hundred trade union delegates from southern industrial centers, including Mobile, Ala.; Macon and Columbus, Ga.; Columbia, S. C., and Atlanta, Ga., attended the workers' education conference held here, sponsored by the Southern Summer schools and the Affiliated Schools for Workers and the Atlanta workers' education committee.

Steve Nance, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades and labor member of the regional compliance board; George Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, and other labor leaders here gave active assistance in promoting this meeting, which had for its purpose the development of workers' education activities among labor groups throughout this section of the south.

The labor delegates were mainly from the United Textile Workers, the United Garment Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Printing Presemen and the American Federation of Teachers.

Plans were drawn up for organizing and conducting classes in many southern industrial centers. Where possible, FERA funds will be obtained to aid in supporting teachers of workers' education. Recruiting for the southern summer schools will be conducted with the co-operation of the state federations of labor and the city central bodies.

"THAT SWEET THING" LAYS IN GROCERIES

A prominent member of organized labor and a delegate to the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, known by his intimate friends as "That Sweet Thing," must have a very large family. This is indicated by the reports that he was seen last week to go into numerous Home Stores. Listen here, "Sweet Thing," you aren't two-timing us, are you?

STARVING FARM ANIMALS WIN $500,000 FOOD APPROPRIATION

St. Paul.—Needy farmers from western Minnesota brought three hollow-eyed animals—a horse, a cow and a pig—to the state capital on Feb. 27 to show legislators that they must have food immediately.

The farmers backed their truck up against the plaza of the capital. Legislators entering the building couldn't help but see the mute appeal.

Within a few hours after the farmers had brought the animals to the steps of the statehouse to emphasize the seriousness of their plight, a bill providing immediate appropriation of $500,000 for feed was introduced in the senate and passed by unanimous vote.

Hoan's statement criticized the $4,880,000,000 public works program, in that it made no provisions for wage fluctuation. He indorsed McCarran prevailing wage amendment.

LABOR INSTITUTE BRINGS BRILLIANT ARRAY SPEAKERS

Edw. F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, Opens Sessions with Address.

"Part of Political Action by Labor" by Dr. Prescott Will Be of Particular Interest at This Time.

Definite plans for a labor institute have been presented by Chairman C. C. Burgner, of the Teachers' union. The institute is arranged in the manner of round-table discussions, and will be sponsored by the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. Educational programs of this nature have been very successful in other cities, and have proven a fine way in which members of organized labor may become informed about labor problems from an academic point of view, participants report.

The institute will extend over a period of two days—Friday and Saturday, March 22 and 23. The location will be at Roosevelt hall. The theme of the institute will be "Social Security."

One of the biggest attractions will be the presence of Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor. Mr. McGrady, aside from achieving national prominence under President Roosevelt, has made a name for himself in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor as one of the most brilliant of leaders. His name has been used frequently when possibilities for a successor to President William Green has been considered. Mr. McGrady will address the "school" on Friday evening at 8 o'clock, and his subject will be "Basis and Background of Social Security Problem."

On Saturday morning at 9:30 Mr. Abraham Epstein will talk on "Old Age Insurance," a subject which has been brought to the forefront since Roosevelt came into power, although labor has advocated it for many years. Mr. Epstein is the executive secretary of the American Association for Social Security: also an executive member. Arthun Warburton will follow on New York, the League for Industrial Democracy and of the joint committee on unemployment of New York. He is a graduate of economics in the University of Pittsburgh and Columbia university, and has published five or six books on sociology.

On the same morning John Edelman, research director for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, will discuss "Health Insurance." Mr. Edelman is no stranger to many unionists of Chattanooga. Mrs. Amy Arthur Warburton will follow on "Unemployment Insurance." She will be sponsored by the Affiliated Schools for Workers.

Round table discussions will be featured following the discourses by the main speakers, and the audience will have opportunity for entering the arguments.

On Saturday afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, a panel discussion will be led by Spencer Miller, Jr., who will set forth "Methods of Action in Achieving Social Security." Prof. Miller has made a name for himself in the south, as well as the entire United States, for his invaluable contribution to the working people in their approach to the economic ills from a sociological angle. He has led several such institutes in the conventions of the Tennessee Federation of Labor. The panel will be formed by George L. Googe, southern director of the American Federation of Labor, who

Mass Meeting Set Sunday Afternoon

Walter Bramley, district manager of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, announces arrangements have been made for a mass meeting at the Memorial auditorium Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mr. John Edelman, research director for the hosiery workers' union, will talk in the interest of the Wagner disputes bill now before congress. Others will be on the program.

On Saturday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m., Roger Baldwin, of the Civil Liberties league, will lecture at the auditorium on "Rights of Free Speech."

Robbins Mill Told to Rehire Its 68 Workers

Board Decision Finds Section 7-A Violated by Hosiery Mill at High Point.

The Robbins Knitting company, of High Point, N. C., is found by the national textile relations board to have discriminated against its employes because of their efforts and activities in self-organization, and the mill is ordered to desist in such practices, and to reinstate sixty-eight of its former employes.

The board directs the mill to offer reinstatement within fifteen days, on a basis at least equal to their employment before the strike, to thirty-eight employes, provided that within ten days they make application for such reinstatement. The mill is directed to establish a preferential list for employment, placing thereon the names of thirty employes, provided they file application with the mill within ten days.

A careful resume of the facts in this controversy is made by the board. It finds that the mill employed from 270 to 275 operatives at the time of the strike. When the strike was extended to the hosiery workers, a sufficient number of these employes responded "to cripple the operation of the mill to such an extent that the management closed the plant." The mill remained closed during the strike.

Pickets Were Orderly.

During the strike small details of pickets remained on duty at the mill. The board says: "The pickets observed the orders of the local police department. There was no disturbance, nor other unusual incident or occurrence which would have any bearing upon this complaint, during the general strike."

The employes reported for work on Sept. 24, and 91 of 181 workers were admitted to the knitting department; 17 of  to the finishing room, and 30 of 42 to the boarding room. A fence had been erected around the mill during the strike, with a gate for employes between the mill office building and the plant. The board continues:

"Foremen stood at the gate and beckoned and nodded to those employes whom they were calling to work. All others were excluded, not admitted to the grounds. It had been customary, before the strike and before the fence was erected, for employes, especially boarders, to wait in the plant while work was being prepared for them.

"Management testified that the change in system was coincidental, in point of time, with the strike, just as the construction of the fence had been; that another local mill had been compelled to pay workers employed on piece-work, for idle time if kept in the mill; that, for this reason, idle hands were excluded from the plant, and since the fence was there, they were required to remain outside the gate.

"Only thirty-six of the forty-two boarders carried on the payrolls as of Sept. 24 reported for work that morning. The foreman called in thirty of them, and excluded six: E. Y. Hall, Richard Truesdale, G. B. Anderson, N. E. Tucker, Carl Banks and Paul Reiser.

Pickets "Bawled Out."

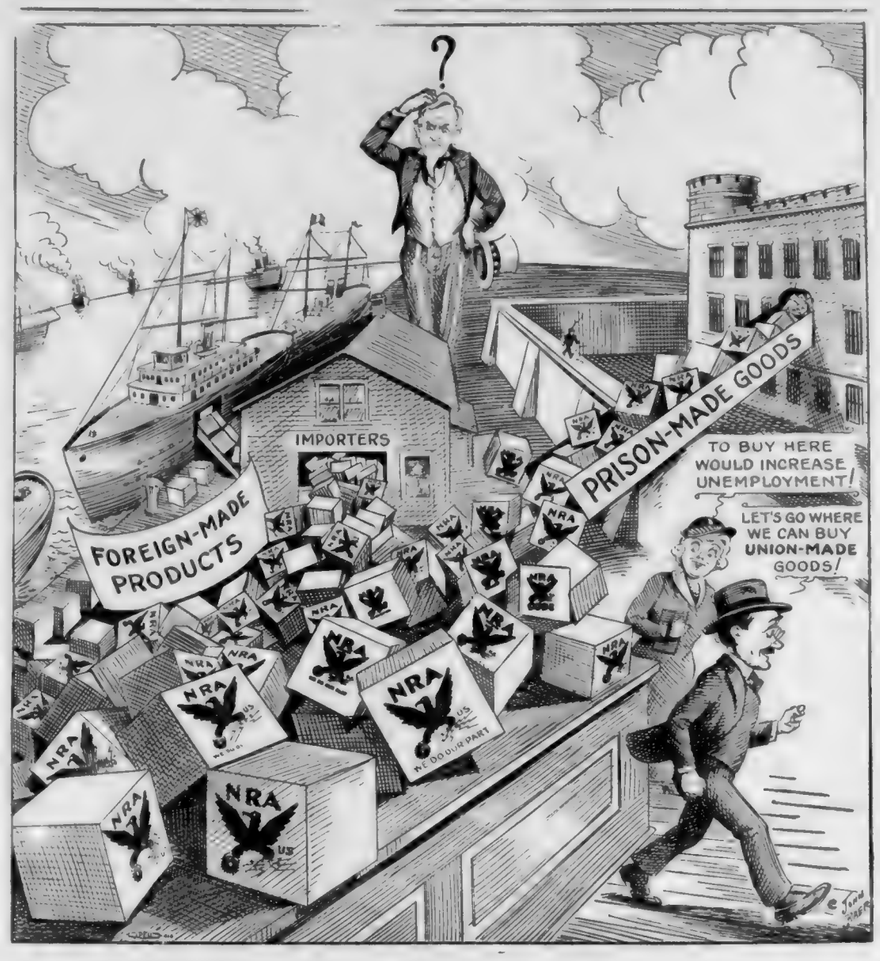
"These six had been active—more active than others in the boarding room—in the picketing of the mill during the general strike, and had spent much time with the relief squad at its station across the street. Hall had been the representative of the boarding room for purposes of collective bargaining for two years, and Anderson had attended conferences with him. On one occasion during the general strike the president of the mill had taken these two severely to task, and had admonished them in no uncertain terms against agitating the strike among the mill's employes.

"The basis of this admonition, the president of the company testified, was the fact that there had been six strikes at the plant in two years, and all of them started in the boarding room. It further appeared that the boarders went out, during the general strike, on the day before the extension of the call to hosiery workers was effective."

WINS REVERSAL OF CONVICTION

Cleveland. — Alvanley Johnson, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, has won a reversal of his conviction of having misapplied funds of the defunct Standard Trust company, of which he was board chairman.

GETTING UNION LABEL CONSCIOUS



BIG FOUR DANGLE BAIT OF HIGHLY PAID JOBS BEFORE "GOOD" TEACHERS

Poorly Paid Instructors Given to Understand Taking of "Right Attitude" Toward Big Tobacco Companies Offers Best Chance of Getting Ahead in World.

Washington, D. C.—The dominating industry of any region always tries to control its schools, and usually with some measure of success. If teachers can be induced to "take the ripht attitude" toward Big Business, most of the children will grow up with a pro-company bias, and not even know it. The Big Four tobacco companies have dominated the schools of their districts to an uncommon degree, and for a simple reason. The Big Four have gigantic fortunes, concentrated in comparatively small cities, where other business interests are puny by comparison.

The three largest of the Big Four have used somewhat different tactics in having their way with the schools. Liggett & Myers, for instance, hold the hope of reward before the teachers of that community, and usually keep the club of punishment for offending the company in the background. Observe the following:

C. W. Toms, now president of Liggett & Myers, was for some years superintendent of schools at Durham, N. C., where the great L. & M. plant is located. He went from the schools to the tobacco plant and became superintendent of the factory. After a time, he was made vice president, and taken to headquarters in New York. In 1928 he was made president of the company, and remains so still. His salary for the next five years was as follows:

1928	$234,442
1929	270,671
1930	286,162
1931	86,956
1932	149,059

The average for the period is $208,450 a year. By way of contrast, the salary of the superintendent of Durham's schools last year was $3,850.

Fat Bonus for Toms.

This, of itself, is enough to make an ambitious school teacher look longingly toward the tobacco factory. But this is not all. It isn't half. Mr. Toms gets a bonus in addition to his salary.

The amount of bonus which Mr. Toms actually received is not a matter of public record. But the profits on which that bonus is based and the plan adopted when Liggett & Myers was split off from the tobacco trust in 1911 are public records, and quite easy to follow with a pencil and paper.

The plan adopted by the company decreed that ten per cent of all net profits each year above those made by the same properties in 1910—the last year before the split—should go into a bonus fund. The net profits of Liggett & Myers for the years beginning with 1928, when Mr. Toms became president, are as follows:

1929	22,017,000
1930	24,002,000
1931	23,121,000
1932	23,075,000
1933	16,731,000
1934	20,087,000
Total	$148,442,000

These are the company's net profits for the seven years that Mr. Toms has been president. Of this, $4,553,000 had to be set aside each year for that is the net profit cleared in 1910. For the seven years, it would amount to $31,871,000. Subtract this from the total net profits of the period, and you have left $116,571,000.

Prize Compels Obedience.

Ten per cent of this last sum, or $11,657,100, goes into the bonus fund. Under the Liggett & Myers plan, one-quarter of the bonus goes to the president of the company, and the other three-quarters are divided equally between the five vice presidents. Therefore, under this plan, Mr. Toms got—or should have got—$2,915,520 in seven years. The payments, of course, were not absolutely regular; but they would average up at $416,360 a year of bonus, or, to use a more common term, $416,360 a year of "gravy."

A corporation which hangs up a prize like that before the eyes of educators gets respectful, not to say obedient attention. Moreover, W. D. Carmichael succeeded Toms as superintendent of Durham schools; and followed on his predecessor's road. From superintendent of the schools, he became superintendent of the tobacco factory; then vice president; and if he has the long-lived endurance which his Scotch name implies, he may become president of the company.

Pays to Please Big Four.

Besides these two shining lights of the way to get promoted, a considerable number of teachers have gone to better-paid jobs in the service of the tobacco company. Does any radical dare to suggest to the pupils of Durham that Liggett & Myers is anything less than perfect? Not so you could notice it. In fact, it would be highly appropriate if Mr. Toms should come to the next teachers' meeting, and indulge in song, thus:

"Now, teachers all, be advised by me!
If you wish to climb to the top of the tree,
If your minds aren't fettered to the public school,
Be careful to be guided by this Golden Rule—
Please the Big Four boss, whoever he may be,
And you all may have a taste of the fat gra-vee!"

Cotton Groups Prepare For Code Revision

At a meeting with the textile planning committee, the cotton textile code authority committee offered to submit to the national industrial recovery board a broad program looking toward a solution of the acute problems of the industry.

The three members of NIRB who are members of the textile planning committee promised to bring the program before the full membership of the board at once. Quick action was urged on the code committee because of its presentation of the situation confronting the industry.

This conference is regarded as the preliminary step being taken by the cotton textile interests for an immediate and sweeping revision of the code for their industry. Private conferences looking to this end have been in progress for sometime, and the matter has reached the stage where the mill owners and mill interests are ready to enter into initial conversations with the officials of NIRB and other interested agencies in Washington.

Seek 100 Per Cent Union Throughout New Hampshire Mills

Manchester, N. H.—Quietly, but thoroughly, General Organizers William Green and Horace Brouillette are canvassing the state to make the United Textile Workers 100 per cent strong in all mill centers. The New Hampshire workers, who were among the first to adopt the educational methods of increasing membership, are attempting to set up a model for other localities.

Hearings to Start On Metcalf Charges

Providence, R. I.—With the national textile relation board ready to conduct public hearings on discrimination complaints of workers of the Oakland and Mohegan mills, Senator Jesse H. Metcalf finds his company the object of the greatest organization campaign ever conducted in this district.

Hosiery Leader Cites Importance Of Trained Members

New York, March 13.—"Education in all its forms must be made part of the life of every labor union," declared Emil Rieve, president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, in an address at the annual luncheon held here by the friends of the Brookwood Labor college, of Katonah, N. Y.

Rieve stressed the need for workers' education in the struggle to build a stronger labor movement in this country. Rieve's speech, in part, follows:

"Any union that is worth its salt today is looking for new leaders, for more organizers and for people who can do things either as paid or unpaid workers in the ranks of labor. And there is an alarming scarcity of good material for leadership in every labor organization. Can workers' education help in this crisis? I am willing to let anyone help build a stronger and better labor movement and am willing to do what I can to further all sound workers' education activities, if there is the slightest hope that out of our labor colleges and classes can come some good material with which to create a finer movement in this country.

"We must never lose sight of the fact that workers' education has been developed to a far greater extent in European movements than was ever dreamed of here—and yet—Germany and Austria went fascist. We here in America have our special problems. Public education is more elaborate and costly than it is abroad. Workers in America have a great amount of information. The trouble is, however, they know so much they seem not to be able to think—and especially to think about the social problems confronting us.

"American trade unionists are like most Americans—they can be stampeded by spiel binders or taken over by racketeers — just because they haven't learned to face facts and analyze the things they see around them. The labor movement today faces a new tide of reaction. Will the newly-organized members stay with the movement if unions are forced to take a backward step? This, I believe, depends largely on the manner in which we conduct our unions.

"I do not propose to stop in the middle of a fight to hold classes nor should we take our good young strike leaders and ship them off to college. But we must make education in all its forms part of the daily life of the union.

"We must create a better labor press; our movement must learn to be effective in politics. Our regular union meetings must be so conducted as to help develop and inspire men and women and not tire them out and leave our best people disgusted and weary. When we find good men and women who have demonstrated their ability and who can be depended upon to stay in the movement, then we can send them to college or school for special training.

"We need a better rank and file and we need better leaders and more of them. Can we get both at the same time? I don't know how this should be done, but I say that is what we must do if our labor movement is to grow quickly enough and become strong enough to save this country from falling prey to some Hitler from the backwoods."

Chattanooga Label League

Regular meeting of the Chattanooga Label league has been postponed to March 29, and will be held at the labor hall at 7:30 p.m. This is done so that members may attend the labor institute which will be in session at the time of the regular meeting of the label league.

Delegates from local unions, and the wives and husbands of union members are invited to join in the work of the league. It was reported that a grocery has ordered a carload of union-made flour, and the information is being checked on so that it may be made public.

Officers of the league are as follows: Miss Ina Green, president; Mrs. Milton McCafferty, vice-president; Miss Virginia Munsey, recorder; Dr. Walter Simon, secretary-treasurer; T. F. Travis, doorkeeper; E. E. Crosby, Lethea Schauffner and F. J. Rickard, trustees. Mrs. T. R. Cuthbert has been named chairman of the label committee.

PETITIONS POUR INTO CONGRESS URGING PASSAGE

Avalanche of Messages Come from Unions of Nations Asking Support of Measure.

From the four corners of the country workers in the textile industry have poured requests in to their senators and congressmen in Washington to give support to, and vote for the Wagner industrial disputes bill. This all-important measure would broaden the power of existing labor adjustment boards, and pave the way for a still more orderly and constructive mode of dealing with the industrial relations of employers and employes in the future.

Employers of the nation, whose conception of industrial relations is that the interests of their workers shall be left solely to their tender mercies, and whose resistance to labor unions is traditional, are almost a unit against this measure. They are mobilizing their forces for its defeat. If its defeat is accomplished, they expect to see the passing of all semblance of Section 7-A, covering rights of collective bargaining, in the present national recovery act.

Senator Wagner, of New York, has drafted this bill in close consultation with Chairman Francis Biddle, of the national labor board. And Chairman Biddle has added his voice in urging its passage. He said:

"Passage of the Wagner labor disputes bill is vital to the continuance of the NRA. While the bill would not provide complete protection for labor, it would be an adequate start for collective bargaining and a basis for effective usefulness of the labor board."

Workers Are Unprotected.

Chairman Biddle cited a recent ruling of his board that Section 7-A does not apply to uncoded industries as "one of the most important reasons for the Wagner bill."

He said this means that as things now stand, workers are protected by 7-A only if employers wish them to be.

Asked what the board could do if the Wagner bill does not pass, Biddle said, "Sure, we can go home."

He said enforcement of the present law "has completely broken down where it has required court action to carry out the board's orders."

Here are a few of the letters that have been sent by various unions to their members in congress urging support of this measure:

Members of Local Union 2129, at Marietta, Pa., to Senators Guffey and Davis of that state—"The future welfare of many workers depend on your vote for the Wagner bill. Please give it your fullest support. We urge that you support and vote for the McCarran amendment to the public works relief bill."

Local Union 2143, of Columbia, Pa., to the same senators: "This union, with a membership of 1,100, representing 80 per cent of the silk workers of this locality, urge your wholehearted support of the Wagner bill. We feel that since Pennsylvania is an industrial state, we should have this bill passed, so that labor disputes can be settled more satisfactorily to all parties concerned. Also, your attention is called to the McCarran amendment to the public works relief bill, providing for the maintenance of the prevailing rates of pay. We feel that these rates of pay should remain as they are, for if they are lowered, it will have effect upon all rates of pay in this vicinity."

The Central District Council of the United Textile Workers of America of North Carolina to Senator Bailey, of that state: "We respectfully and urgently request that you use your influence, support and vote for the Wagner bill."

7-A DEFIED BY EMPLOYERS; NEW LEGISLATION IMPERATIVE TO PROTECT RIGHTS, SENATOR DECLARES.

Washington.—Opening the fight for the Wagner labor disputes bill, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, author of the bill, urged enactment of the measure as a means of curbing "the rising tide of industrial discontent."

Senator Wagner was the first of a number of witnesses before the sen-

Is Labor Awakening to Its Power?

The recent elections Tuesday have demonstrated that labor can enter into politics and protect its welfare any time it makes up its mind to do so. The power issue was put over simply because the working people rolled up its sleeves and voted.

In city and county politics labor has always been forced to select from the field of candidates the ones that were most favorable to its interests. That procedure, while partially effective, has never been entirely satisfactory. The other method we have had to use was mainly to beat some enemy. In this line of endeavor we have been successful in beating almost any candidate against whom our dislike was directed.

Simply to beat an enemy is not enough. It is not sensible and it is not constructive. Yet, up until now, labor has never achieved that cohesiveness in voting that enabled us to pick out an active trades unionist and elect him. There has been too much individualism in our politics. Leaders in the movement have sometimes been parceled out for minor jobs by the politicians, and their allegiance to that politician have prevented labor from giving undiverted allegiance to a labor candidate.

Labor came to its senses this time. Without exception labor put Bob Cooke first. Political line-ups were forgotten. Bob Cooke was elected.

In this election we were not yet all qualified to vote. If every union man had paid his poll tax, Cooke would have received at least 15,000 votes. Until the poll tax requirement is abolished, labor simply must get poll tax conscious.

The bond issue did not require a poll tax to vote, and the total vote in that election was much more representative of the entire citizenship of this city.

We must abolish the poll tax as a requirement for voting. In this way political machines will be harder to be controlled by the bosses, and the working people will be able to take part in their government without a two-dollar bill.

What Next!

A mechanical cotton picker for which remarkable work is claimed was recently tested in Missippi. The inventors announced that it picked more than 8,000 pounds of seed cotton in seven and a half hours. They said it will cover an acre an hour and do the work of from 50 to 100 persons. If the machine is successful, it is expected to revolutionize cotton raising.

In describing how her health improved after she had taken Cardui, Mrs. Ralph R. Courtney, of Wytheville, Va., said: "I was run-down and suffered from pain in my side. I wanted to feel well and get rid of the pain in my side, so I sent for Cardui and began taking it. By the time I had taken three bottles of Cardui, I was feeling much better. The pains had gone. I am very glad to recommend Cardui to other young women." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Why We Help

The labor press of America is asked by the Tobacco Workers' International Union to join the fight to save the 10-cent cigarette.

There could be but one answer: We join.

Until the cigarette tax is equalized to be fair to the 10-cent cigarette, the labor press will fight on for that purpose.

The 10-cent cigarette is always a union-made product.

The Big Four, top heavy with fabulously swollen profits, makes no 10-cent cigarettes. The Big Four, fat with profits that have rolled in during all the long years of hunger and depression, wants the present unjust tax to remain. The Big Four want the 10-cent cigarette killed; they want ALL competition killed.

Labor wants justice for the dime cigarette. The labor press wants justice for the dime cigarette.

What Labor Wants

In an address at the Town Hall Meeting in Washington, D. C., a forum for the consideration of questions of public interest, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, discussed in detail the objectives whose achievement motivates the organized labor movement of the United States. In concluding his address, Mr. Green gave the following summary of these objectives:

"The keystone in labor's program at all times is the right to organize and bargain collectively. It asks recognition and acceptance of this right by employers and protection by the government against violation or invasion of this right.

"It asks the right to representation and participation in agencies and decisions where issues which affect its interests and welfare are determined.

"It asks that society make provisions for those to whom an opportunity to earn a living is denied and for those who have lived beyond the productive period.

"It asks that all work, both public and private, be kept on a self-respecting basis so that no one shall be forced down to pauper standards of life and work.

"It asks that educational opportunities be made freely available to all and designed to meet the needs of all.

"It wants child labor abolished permanently and wage standards commensurate with the requirements of the American standard of living established and maintained.

"It insists that cultural and recreational opportunities be created in all civic centers so that leisure gained as a result of technical improvement may be made as available and profitable to the individual and the nation as are the hours utilized in earning wages in mills, mines and factories.

"It believes that the way to democratic living is to extend privileges and rights to the underprivileged—the great masses of wage earners and small-salaried workers.

"It believes it is not only possible but highly desirable for men to work together for common betterment and that men would prefer to compete with each other in giving service rather than in gaining control over other men's li es.

"This faith gives labor courage to ,.in in the common effort to develop the agencies and the practices of a new age,"

All of these objectives harmonized with "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," stressed by the Declaration of Independence as the "unalienable rights of all men." Nevertheless, subversive organizations of business men, like the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Association of Manufacturers, bitterly oppose their realization.

A Labor Charter of Liberty

The preamble to the Wagner National Labor Relations Act, now before the Senate committee on education and labor and the House labor committee, stresses the right of workers "to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing" as the basic plank in the platform for economic liberty of the wealth producers and declares the realization of that right to be the public policy of the United States.

Asserting that the major purpose of the bill is to promote equality of bargaining power between employers and employes,t to diminish the causes of labor disputes and to create a national labor relations board, the declaration of policy says:

"Equality of bargaining power between employers and employes is not attained when the organization of employers in the corporate and other forms of ownership association is not balanced by the free exercise by employes of the right to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing.

"Experience has proved that in the absence of such equality the resultant failure to maintain equilibrium between the rate of wages and the rate of industrial expansion impairs economic stability and aggravates recurrent depressions, with consequent detriment to the general welfare and to the free flow of commerce.

"Denials of the right to bargain collectively lead also to strikes and other manifestations of economic strife, which create further obstacles to the free flow of commerce.

"It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to remove obstructions to the free flow of commerce and to provide for the general welfare by encouraging the practice of collective bargaining, and by protecting the exercise by the worker of full freedom of association, self-organization, and designation of representatives of his own choosing, for the purpose of negotiating the terms and conditions of his employment or other mutual aid or protection."

This declaration of policy of Senator Wagner's bill may accurately be called a labor charter of liberty. Organized labor expects that the text of the bill which is designed to give validity to the declaration of policy will pass both houses of Congress without amendments designed to weaken any of its provisions.

Foreign Encroachments Menace American Mills

Japanese encroachment upon the textile markets of the world, including the markets in the United States, is causing the gravest concern in textile circles. Japanese inroads on the American market have reached the point of more than 1,000,000 square yards a month, with an alarming rate of increase. The situation is not confined to American markets, nor is it confined to Japanese production. It is a world-wide situation, with India, Russia and Brazil entering into the matter almost as fully as does the industry in Japana.

This competitive condition is coming up for the most thorough consideration in the hearings relative to a renewal of the cotton textile code. Suggestions and proposals for meeting it will be put forward by various men in the industry. It is one of the sternest of the problems facing the commerce of the country.

Textile interests want something done about it—now that they have belatedly awakened to the danger at theird oors. No one has a very clear view of what should be done. But it is admitted that the well-being of both textile mill owners and the textile mill workers are intimately bound up in the matter and in the solution that may be attempted.

Cotton textiles today are the center of one of the titanic struggles of modern times. Old channels of distribution of three-quarters of a century duration are giving away before the wage of products of Russian, Indian, Japanese and Brazilian mills. Operating on low wage scales and with depreciated currencies, they are challenging the old established textile centers of America, England and Germany.

Oriental Mills Busy.

There are idle mills in these centers—closed by effects of the business depression, but there are no idle mills in Russia, India, Japan and Brazil. Twenty-two years ago England had 55,650,000 spindles; the United States was second with 32,150,000, and Germany was third with 11,200,000. Russia had 7,668,000, India had 6,000,000, Japan had 2,300,000, and China had 2,000,000.

Today England has lost 10,000,000 of her spindles; the United States has lost 1,200,000, and Germany has lost 1,000,000. Russia has climbed to 9,800,000, India has 9,600,000, Japan has 9,115,000. Behind the rise of the textile industry in Japan is a carefully perfected plan of high-pressure salesmanship. Its agents are encircling the globe in exhibiting the Japanese products; they are cutting into the markets which in other years have been held exclusively by English, American and German products.

Last October Francis J. Gorman put forward a proposal to the textile mill owners of the nation to join with the United Textile Workers of America and their workers in a joint study of methods to hold the American position in the world market, and as far as possible, to regain markets that had been lost.

For the most part Gorman's proposal went unheeded. A few farsighted and clear-visioned mill owners with a comprehensive grasp of changing world conditions in textiles communicated with him and expressed a desire to join in a long-range study of the textile situation and for the preservation and further development of the American position abroad.

Industry Stands Idle.

But a majority of mill owners, north and south, stood silent, although the threat facing American textiles from world competition was manifest even to the most casual bystander. Today it has a plaintive echo in the appeal of Gov. Curley, of Massachusetts, to New England to join hands to save its textile activity.

The Cotton Textile institute, which of its own initiative should have launched such a study long ago and energetically crystallized the nation's viewpoint to the danger at hand, stood mute in its traditional inertia.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Just why it should take the American wage-earners so long to become aware of the value and necessity of radio is one of those big mysteries which probably is no use trying to solve.

Radio is the fastest means of communication. There is no "blanket" that can match it. There is no such general listening to any other voice.

Yet organized American workers seem to regard radio as belonging to "the other fellow" with nothing to be done about it.

Radio is a costly agency, for one person to own, or to buy.

But radio isn't costly, for a million.

As a whole and in the main, American wage-earners think too little of telling their story—that's what propaganda really is—telling the story.

Mostly, the telling of labor's story is in the other fellow's hands today—his radio and his newspapers.

If the labor press could be sufficiently supported, that would be enough, as far as labor itself is concerned.

The labor press is as good as its readers allow it to be. When they take a more live and intelligence interest in their weekly press, it will be stronger and better.

As it is, no other nation has anything half s good as the American labor press, weekly and monthly.

The past year has seen a real growth in the labor press—better papers and many new papers.

But, with few exceptions, they still are not supported as they ought to be. Where there is real support a good job is done.

But there is not a daily newspaper for labor in the whole nation. There is not a publication that speaks for labor and that at the same time has any considerable following outside the ranks of organized labor. A commercial firm that did no more to convince strangers of the virtue of its product would go out of business in a hurry.

The American labor movement has never been "sold" to the general public and the daily press abounds in misunderstandings and misrepresentations, not all of which are the fault of those who own the daily papers of the nation.

Labor men shout "prejudice" and of course there is prejudice. Why not? There is prejudice among plenty of wage-earners who honestly do not know why unions exist, what they do or what they seek to do.

There is only one way in the world to remove prejudice and that is to earn the confidence of those who have prejudice and to tell them the facts repeatedly. Nobody ever learns about facts unless those facts are placed where he can hear or see them. That doing such things costs money is no answer.

Not to do these things costs progress, or costs a longer period of exploitation, whichever way anyone cares to put it. This is isn't scolding. It is merely a way of discussing a great problem. There are plenty of obstacles. There are plenty of other things to consume time and money. But every other task is made easier by creation of general understanding. Of course further development of channels of education will be made easier by better support for the existing labor press. That, then, is the first job. It ought to be an easy job—but no job is an easy job until there is created a determination to do the job. What would happen if every local union in America named a standing committee of able and determined men and women for this primary job? The answer—is it too good to be true? Who knows?

Oil Labor Board Gets New Powers

Washington. — Administrator Ickes has granted new powers to arbitrate labor controversies in the oil industry to the petroleum labor policy board.

The board, he ordered, can, on its own motion or on complaint of any party, inquire into alleged violation of Section 7-A.

The board may, he said, act as a committee of voluntary arbitration, or mediate in any dispute between employers and employes in the petroleum industry.

The board also was authorized to conduct secret ballot elections to determine collective bargaining desires of oil company employes.

Ickes also confirmed re-appointment of Chairman George W. Stocking, John A. Lapp and James Mullenbach as board members.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Does labor favor abandonment of the national industrial recovery act?

A.—No. President Green, of the A. F. of L., recently declared economic, social and industrial conditions were so serious as to call for enactment of a new recovery law as soon as possible.

Q.—Have industrial accidents taken a larger toll of deaths and injuries in this country than war?

A.—Edison L. Powers, in his book, "Is It Safe to Work?" says: "Since our country became an independent nation, fifteen times as many persons have been killed or injured in industry alone as have been lost in the nation's battles."

BIG UNION DRIVE IN NEW ENGLAND BRINGS RESULTS

Air Mass Meetings and Social Gatherings Used by Leaders to Recruit Ranks.

Fall River, Mass.—Over the air, in mass meeting and from the rostrums in community halls, the United Textile Workers of America, under the direction of Vice-President Horace A. Riviere, is conducting one of the most extensive educational campaigns in the history of the labor movement in Massachusetts.

Thousands have been converted to cause of industrial improvement. The true meaning of a true message is being accepted.

A record crowd is expected to tax the capacity of the municipal auditorium at Webster, Mass., Sunday, at 2 p.m., when Vice-President Riviere brings the union's latest message to thousands of the workers in the district where recently a successful campaign of readjustment has been completed.

Many New Members.

In this city, through eastern Massachusetts and in Lowell, and neighboring mill centers, scores of meetings have been held during the past few weeks and as a result an unprecedented number of new members have been added to the ranks, the union records show.

Eight hundred and seventy-seven carpet workers in Worcester no longer march alone in their movement for industrial betterment They have accepted the challenge of the manufacturers and sought admittance to the U. T. W. of A. Soon a charter will be in the hands of the officials of the local, which long boasted of its independence from any international union.

Believing that "all work and no play makes Johnny a dull boy," Vice-President Riviere has used social gatherings to advantage. In Lowell, between the strains of jazz and concert music, President Thomas F. McMahon and Vice-President Riviere provided the educational features at recent gatherings of union workers. The social was a success and the "musically coated" information was absorbed.

Radio Brings Results.

Twice weekly the gospel of the United Textile Workers of America is preached from two Massachusetts radio stations. The voice of John Malloy is heard from Station WLLH at Lowell at 6 p.m. on Tuesday and at the same hour the air carries the voice of George Cottell, of Fall River, from Station WSAR.

The addresses are selected with great care and arranged so that the textile operatives will be familiarized with every move to improve or defeat the purposes of their campaigns for economic improvement.

The radio pleas for unity of action are already bearing fruit. In a recent address over the ether waves, General Organizer Cottell declared:

"First, to the manufacturers in Fall River: Are you going to bury the hatchet, take off your coat and go to 'bat' with us to correct conditions?

"To the officials and members of the American Federation of Textile Operatives: Are you going to give us your advice and counsel, and are you going to lend your undivided support, morally and financially, in assisting in revising the textile codes to eliminate the stretch-out, provide shorter hours, equalization of wages in the north and south, and the establishment of differentials in salaries for skilled, semi-skilled and non-skilled workers?

"And last, to the non-union workers: Are you going to join this great army and pay your proportionate share of the cost to make this program a success, or do you intend to continue to be a free passenger on the wagon, accepting all the benefits in shorter hours and higher wages, made possible by the united efforts of fellow workmen, without giving anything in return?"

Mellon Millions to Pay Big Damages Under Court Decision

Washington, D. C.—For the first time in the memory of high finance, the Mellon millions have taken a knockout blow in a big legal battle. A federal jury at Hartford, Conn., the other day found the Mellon-dominated Aluminum Company of America liable to the Baush Machine Tool company for damages to the sum of $956,300.

Since this verdict was also a finding that the aluminum company had been guilty of monopolistic practices, it is liable under the anti-trust laws to three times the actual damages found by the jury. Federal District Judge Howe promptly assessed the total bill against the aluminum company at $2,868,000. Also, he declared, that the Mellon concern would have to pay the attorney's fees of the Baush company, which is also provided by law. Those fees have not been filed at the present writing; but no one expects them to be light.

Of course the aluminum company will demand a return match before the federal circuit court. But for the moment, at least, the verdict is a knockout. The jury found, in substance, that the aluminum company monopolized interstate trade in crude aluminum, and "squeezed" its competitors in manufactured aluminum wares by holding up illegally the price of the raw metal.

Almost at the same time, the government suit to recover several million dollars from Andrew M. Mellon for evading income taxes moved into a new phase. Hitherto, the government has been contending—and the department of justice thinks it has proved—that Mr. Mellon concealed his profits of 1931 by manipulating his securities through a flock of holding companies. The other claim, which came up last week, is that in 1931 Mr. Mellon concealed his profits from the sale of the McClintic-Marshall Construction company to Bethlehem Steel.

This company had only four stockholders. H. H. McClintic and Charles D. Marshall had built it up. It made the gates for the Panama canal, losing $2,000,000 on the work, but constructing the gates so well not a drop of water seeped through. But Andrew Mellon and his brother R. M. Mellon owned 60 per cent of the stock of McClintic-Marshall when the Bethlehem took it over.

The Mellons claim that their profits on this transaction were "only" $21,000,000. The government claims that those profits were $65,000,000; and furthermore, that this profit came from a cash investment of $250,000. The McClintic-Marshall is known to have paid $8,000,000 in dividends to their quartet of stockholders prior to the sale.

RELIEF ADMINISTRATION REOPENS OVERALL PLANT

Gadsden, Ala.—The United Overall company's plant here, which recently reopened, has booked an order for 240,000 pairs of overalls to be furnished the Alabama relief administration to families on the relief rolls. One hundred and twenty-five operatives who have been out of work two years have been given work. The plant has been rented to the relief administration and the cloth furnished by the surplus relief corporation. The cost of manufacture is said to be less than 25 cents for each garment. The garments are to be given relief workers on certain projects as compensation. Families needing work clothing and who are placed on rural rehabilitation projects will be furnished what they need and it will be paid for out of their farm income.

LABOR INSTITUTE SPEAKERS.

Durham, N. C.—Four addresses by well-known persons are scheduled for the three-day session of the state vocational labor institute which opens here March 15. "Social Security and Industrial Relations" will be the general theme before the institute. It will be discussed by Benjamin Geer, president of Furman university; Spencer Miller, Jr., secretary of the Workers' Education Bureau of America; Sidney Hillman, a member of the labor advisory board of the national industrial recovery administration, and George Googe, southern field representative of the American Federation of Labor.

TELEPHONE PROGRESS IS NOT AN ACCIDENT...

In your lifetime, there have been many changes in the telephone system. The telephone was born in the United States, and here it has reached its greatest perfection.

You have watched the open wire pole lines dwindle, as wires have gone into protective cables.

The number of Bell System telephones has grown steadily: 1900, one million; 1910, four millions; 1920, eight millions; 1934, thirteen millions.

Long distance lines have spread from city to city, and in recent years radio telephone circuits have brought the world to your telephone door.

The speed of long distance connections has increased, until today most calls are completed while you hold the line.

And despite this growth and added complexity, the cost of the service has been kept low.

Such progress is not an accident. It is because telephone workers are trained and capable—engineering, research, plant, commercial, executive, traffic—and because they have in them the desire to serve in keeping with their expressed aim: "The most service to the public and the best, at the least cost consistent with financial safety."

MORE ABOUT INSTITUTE

will take for his subject "The Part of Organized Labor." Mr. E. B. Shultz, of the TVA, will take "The Part of the Consumer," and Mr. John Ferris, also of TVA, will discuss "The Part of Industry."

"The Part of Political Action by Labor," led by Dr. Frank Prescott, of the University of Chattanooga, should be of peculiar interest to labor members of the institute at this time. Prof. Lionel Silverman, of the University of Chattanooga economics department, will talk on "The Part of Workers' Education."

Saturday night, beginning at 7:30, Mr. Epstein will resume the lead once more in "Implications of the Social Security Problem." Spencer Miller, Jr., will close the two-day session with "Summary of the Institute and Recommendations for a Labor School."

The entire institute is brought here by Central Body with the idea in mind to afford education along labor problems to our new membership as well as the "old-timers." The committee in charge has shown by the comprehensive program drawn up that they have given much thought and a great deal of effort in performing the duty entrusted to them. They express the wish that every one in the labor movement will avail themselves of the opportunity to enlarge their field of thought anw become better trades unionists.

CODE RAISED STEEL PAY

Washington.—NRA reports the annual rate of steel workers' earning $100,000,000 higher than they would have been on a pre-code basis, in an analysis of wage and hours trends in the steel industry. Statistics collected by the code authority show that shorter hours and wage increases under the code have maintained earnings and employment through a period of depressed production, and that workers have shared the benefits of rising production and higher prices, NRA says.

MORE ABOUT WAGNER BILL

ate committee on education and labor. Witnesses scheduled to appear before the committee in support of the bill include William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, which is giving the measure determined backing.

Wagner made the following points:

1. He declared Section 7-A had been flaunted with injustice to employes, and the law should be clarified by passage of his measure.

2. He explained that the only type of union outlawed by his bill is the company dominated union.

3. He said the majority rule for employe representation is carried in his bill and defended it as the only orderly process for collective bargainin.

4. He asserted that the NLRB suffers from inadequate enforcement powers and should be made the supreme administrative agency.

5. He cited supreme court precedents in defending the constitutionality of his bill and criticized the recent Weirton decision.

The new Wagner bill would:

1. Re-enact Section 7-A in clarified form and make it of general application rather than affecting merely codified industries.

2. Outlaw company-dominated unions.

3. Establish majority rule for employe representation.

4. Make the labor relations board permanent.

5. Give the board power of final administrative interpretation of the law.

Describing how the national labor relations board and other labor boards had been hampered in efforts to obtain enforcement of Section 7-A of the recovery act, Wagner said that of sixty-eight rulings by the national board, forty-three had not been obeyed. Twenty-one have been sent to the NRA for action to remove the Blue Eagle, and of the nineteen cases sent to the department of justice one was taken into court.

Courts Block Elections.

Attempts by the labor board to hold elections, Wagner explained, have been held up by employers asking that the election orders be reviewed in the courts. As a result, he said, the board has been able to hold but two elections out of eight ordered.

When the steel code was renewed last summer and Resolution No. 44 was enacted, assuring for the employes elections of spokesmen for collective bargaining, it was expected that prompt action would be taken to carry out this guarantee, Senator Wagner continued. Instead, the national steel labor board has been unable to hold a single election it had recommended.

Too Many Boards, He Says.

Turning to the confusion existing in the handling of labor complaints, the New Yorker declared that Section 7-A had been "emasculated" by several factors, principally the fact that there were thirteen labor boards, exclusive of the national labor board, delegated to handle such cases. In addition, 103 codes had provision for creation of industrial boards, he said.

To have several hundred boards handling Section 7-A cases, Wagner argued, would lead to hopeless confusion. One board, the national labor relations board, created as a separate and independent body, should have that power, he said.

Clarification Urged.

Senator Wagner emphasized that Section 7-A had been flaunted by employers and that the time had come to clarify it. He would re-enact the labor section of the recovery act and give to it general application, rather than limiting it as at present to codified industries.

Defending "majority rule" for employes as well as for employers, Wagner remarked that the National Association of Manufacturers, in its platform for American industry, adopted on Dec. 5 and 6, had declared that trade practices submitted by the majority of an industry should be binding on all units. He added: "Yet the employers say that the workers should not have the right of majority rule."

Majority Rule Not New.

In this connection Wagner pointed out that majority rule was provided for in the president's executive order to the national labor board, dated Feb. 1, 1934, and that Public Resolution No. 44 envisaged majority rule.

He emphasized that the principle of majority rule had been embodied repeatedly in laws of congress, that it had been applied for the war labor board and the railway labor board and that it was followed in business and in public affairs.

FEDERAL RELIEF ROLLS AT RECORD HIGH FIGURE

Washington.—Federal relief rolls have topped the 22,000,000 mark, an all time peak.

Costs of supplying 5,400,000 families averaging four persons to the group, and 775,000 individuals—a total of 22,350,000 needy—with food and clothing reached $5,000,000 a day. Administrator Hopkins has $20,200,000 on hand to care for one-sixth the national population after March 15.

WESTERN UNION COMPANY IS EXPOSED AS ANTI-UNION

PUPPET LABOR ORGANIZATION SUCCEEDS IN BLOCKING CODE

Betrays Workers' Interests by "Agreeing" to Reduction in Pay and Increase in Hours Over Proposal of Telegraph Companies—Postal Stands Firm for 40 Hours With 45 Hours' Pay.

Washington.—The company union of the Western Union Telegraph company has succeeded in blocking the telegraph communications code by advocating a cut in wages and an increase in hours over that proposed by the telegraph companies.

On Jan. 31, after nearly two years of stalling, the Western Union and Postal finally agreed to submit a revised code. It provided for a 40-hour week with approximately 45 hours' pay. Included in the proposal were many other clauses not at all acceptable to labor, as represented by the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of North America, but on the whole the code was a long step forward.

On Feb. 16 the Western Union announced that its company union, the Association of Western Union Employes, had "agreed" to a 43-hour week with 43 hours' pay, and, therefore, the Western Union was now proposing those amendments to the first proposal. Postal is understood to have refused to join with this backward step, and is standing pat on 40 hours with 45 hours' pay, although Postal is the weakest of the two companies financially.

Powers Make Protest.

International President Frank B. Powers, of the C. T. U. of N. A., sent the following telegram to President Roosevelt, Secretary of Labor Perkins, William Green and Sidney Hillman:

"As representative Postal and Western Union employes affiliated with or designating Commercial Telegraphers' union as spokesman I vigorously protest proposed telegraph code providing for 43 hours with equivalent reduction in earnings. Company union conspiring with Western Union to betray workers by agreeing that employes accept equivalent reduction earnings. Company union proposal will reduce earnings already scandalously low. Average hours now 45, hence re-employment will be nil. Urge administration not delay further in imposing decent code on this defiant industry. If this travesty to be seriously considered respectfully request legitimate representative of employes be heard."

"The company union is only playing true to form," Powers said, "and no one but the uninformed is at all surprised at this betrayal of commercial telegraph employes.

Sees End of Fake Union.

"I predict that this attempt to cut wages and lower the already deplorable wage condition of telegraph workers will bring about the early death of this company union.

"We testified at a hearing before the federal communications commission in December that this company union had been initiated by the Western Union Telegraph company, and that the delegates to the first convention were paid their salaries and expenses. We also testified that the first constitution was prepared and submitted by the lawyers for the Western Union to the 'convention.'

"Officials of the company union did not deny either of these accusations. They could not, for it was a matter of record.

"Western Union employes of this generation have been slow in discovering that their so-called 'union' is a fake and a double-crosser. They will throw off the chains which bind them and join with their Postal brothers and sisters in the legitimate union of the craft, the C. T. U. of N. A."

NEWSPAPER GUILD ENJOINED IN NEWARK LEDGER STRIKE

Will Ignore Injunction, Broun Says.

Newark, N. J.—The American Newspaper Guild has been enjoined from continuing all strike activities against the Newark Ledger.

The injunction was issued to trustees of the newspaper by Vice-Chancellor Major Leon Berry, after a conference between trustees and guild officials ended in disagreement.

The injunction was served on Heywood Broun, national president, wo expressed great indignation at the granting of what he termed "the most sweeping anti-labor injunction ever issued in America.

"It may be stated here and now," Broun said, "that American newspapermen have not the slightest intention of respecting such a tyrannical injunction."

The restraining order prohibits circulation of the Guild Reporter, national organ, and use of the radio by the guild.

Restitution of Pay Made to Mill Workers

Ira L. Pope, of Anniston, Ala., is awarded the difference between 22½ cents an hour and 31¼ cents an hour for the time in which he was engaged in hauling roving boxes in the mill of the Anniston Manufacturing company. Pope was engaged in such work over an extended period for approximately one and a half hours in each eight-hour day.

The Barnard Manufacturing company, of Fall River, Mass., is directed to reimburse Albert Bigos in the sum of $90 to $100. The mill is also directed to make restitution of back wages to its night watchman.

JOBS FOR THOSE OVER 45.

London.—In an attempt to meet the misfortunes of persons whom British employers ban from jobs because they have passed their 45th birthday, the Over Forty-fives association, Ltd., has been organized here. The association, which already has a membership of around 2,000, will establish hotels and country clubs with employment limited to men over 45. Members are requested to buy stock at $1.25 a share to start the scheme. The association, it was announced, will endeavor to "smash the fallacy that a man is too old for useful work when he reaches 45."

CHEAP RELIEF ATTACKED.

Washington.—Six citizens of Ohio lodged a complaint with Aubrey Williams, deputy FERA administrator here, against what they alleged to be "starvation relief allowances" in that state. The delegation claimed that in Stow, Ohio, 7½ cents a day, or 2½ cents a meal, was the maximum procurable by persons on relief, in comparison with a cost of 11 cents a day to feed each dog in the pound and 23 cents a day to feed prisoners. Mr. Williams promised an investigation.

BAN STAR CHAMBER CONFAB WITH BOSSES

Plainfield, Conn.—Workers in this town will attend no meetings called by textile officials here to consider the closing of the plant unless such a gathering is sponsored by the United Textile Workers of America, General Organizer Sylvia told local officials here.

Sylvia went into action after he had been informed that the plant intended to close and that the workers would be called into a huddle with company officials and the union leaders would be barred admittance.

"There will be no meeting of the workers unless the session is sanctioned by our organization. We will see that the rights of the workers are protected," Sylvia said.

To My Friends

The greatest source of gratification to me in my election to the Board of Commissioners is the unselfish support accorded me by all the local unions and the membership of the labor movement in general.

STATE FEDERATION OF LABOR ISSUES ANNUAL CALL TO CONVENTION

Knoxville to Be Host for State Body May 13-16.

Chattanooga Locals Plan to Send Largest Delegations in History of Movement.

Call for the convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor has been issued by Secretary W. E. Cheek. Sessions will be held in Knoxville, Tenn., convening May 13 and lasting for three days. The call states that the Andrew Johnson hotel will be headquarters.

It is pointed out by Secretary Cheek that this convention should be one of the most progressive, and that plans will be set into operation for further organization of the unorganized, with a consolidation of gains already secured. Many new unions are expected to be represented in these sessions, and it is thought that the spirit of trades unionism will instill in these new members of organized labor the renewed enthusiasm to go back home and get to work with increased vigor.

President Kamin, of the Chattanooga Central Body, stresses to those new organizations in Chattanooga the value of having their locals represented. It will be especially easy for locals to send delegates, he said, when the proximity of the convention city is taken into consideration. Many cars going to Knoxville will be able to take delegates with them, thus cutting down expenses. Since Chattanooga has led the entire state in organization activities, President Kamin feels that the prestige of our Central Body requires that it lead all other cities in representation.

The call, as issued, follows:

To all Local Unions, City Central Bodies in the State of Tennessee affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, Greetings:

You are hereby advised that the thirty-eighth annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor will convene in the Andrew Johnson hotel, Knoxville, Tenn., Monday, May 13, 1935, at 10:30 a.m. The sessions will last about three days. Hotel rates are herewith enclosed. It is the hope of the convention committee that all delegates will use the regular hotel headquarters.

Basis of Representation.

Aticle III, Section 3. The Tennessee Federation of Labor shall be composed of one delegate from each trade union and labor organization in the state. Trades and labor councils and district bodies shall be entitled to three delegates. All bodies must be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Section 6. No delegate shall be admitted to a seat in the convention whose organization is in arrears for dues or assessments to this body, or who is not a qualified voter, or who is in arrears with his local union.

Article XI., Section 8. No delegate shall be seated in the annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor unless his organization is affiliated with the central body in his city, if one exists, and said central body affiliated with the American Federation of Labor; this shall not apply, however, to fraternal delegates from farmers' unions. Nor shall any delegate be seated who does not wear union-made clothes if same can be obtained in the community in which he lives; nor any delegate who, in charge of any work that can be done with union labor who does not use same, when charges to this effect are sustained.

Credentials are enclosed herewith in duplicate. The original must be filled out and given to the delegate to be presented at the convention. The duplicate must be filled out and mailed at once to W. E. Cheek, secretary-treasurer, 207 Polk avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

GREEN STRESSES HOME OWNERSHIP

High Wages Policy Is Vital Element in Enabling the Masses to Free Themselves from Rent Lords, A. F. of L. Head Says.

Washington. — Emphatic indorsement of efforts of the government to stimulate ownership of homes by persons of meager income was given by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address here over the network of the National Broadcasting company. He declared that home ownership is essential to permanent democracy and that the high wage standards demanded by the American Federation of Labor are necessary in order to enable the workers and other persons of small incomes to become home owners.

"I well remember when I worked in the mines, living in a modest little home with a garden plot," Mr. Green said. "It was the first little home I set up as my very own. Though I did not own it, the garden gave me a feeling of ownership. I liked to work in the garden, till the soil and watch the products of my garden grow. I experimented in subsistence homesteading and augmented my modest wages which I earned in the mine by producing fruits and vegetables from my garden.

Importance of Home Ownership.

"Each real American home serves as an instrumentality through which the family reaches its roots down deep into the soil of our national life and thus adds to its vigor and richness.

"Because home means so much to everyone, I welcome whatever our national government can do to promote better homes for persons of small incomes and to make home ownership practicable and sofe for America's wage-earners. Homes are a great conserving force to wage-earners. Each month a fixed amount from income goes to pay for the home and bit by bit ownership is established.

"But, time and again I have seen sickness, an accident, or loss of work wipe out the whole investment. Some way must be found to safeguard small equities of wage-earners so that they can liquidate in their emergencies as the larger investors are able to do.

"My own experience convinces me there is no more important problem our government can consider than home ownership for the average citizen.

Family Life Is National Asset.

"Home and family life are the chief assets of the nation. In fact, the American home is the cornerstone of the republic. In proportion as we create opportunities for home ownership and the elevation of family life to a higher, materialistic, cultural and artistic plane we create guarantees for the preservation and perpetuation of our free institutions. Democracy with all its implications will be permanently established on the American continent if we make America a land of home-owners who are guaranteed an annual income sufficient to maintain life and living commensurate with the requirements of modern civilization and American life.

High Wages Essential.

"The American Federation of Labor is endeavoring to achieve this purpose. Its fight for higher standards of living, annual wages, with annual incomes sufficient to maintain a breadwinner's family in decency and comfort is in the interest of American home-owners and, in the last analysis, in the interest of our national life and our free, democratic institutions."

Pickets Taken For Ride By Hoodlums

New developments in the strike at the Chickamauga Knitting mills, called about Jan. 15, have taken a turn toward old-time gang methods to break down opposition to working people fighting for their rights to exist. Striking against violation of Section 7-A, the employes, members of Textile local 2309, have withstood all manner of intimidation, such as evictions, starvation and in a few instances, being beaten up by strong arm men.

All was quiet on the picket line at midnight Thursday night. Pickets on duty at that time were Frank Nolan, Parks Clinton, Nick Smith, Clyde Evans and Clarence Yarbrough. They were in the picket tent playing cards to pass the time away. Shortly after midnight the door was broken through by five or more men armed with shotguns and pistols. The pickets were forced to turn their backs, says Frank Nolan, and their faces were wrapped in heavy cloth. "We were then told that we were going to get what was coming to us," he said. "We were put in a closed car, the five of us in the back seat and guns pressed into our bodies. Others of the gang were in the car and on the running board. We were driven out quite a distance to Pete Hinds' beer garden and told to get out. The assailants wore masks and as we left the mill bullets were shot into the tin around the tents. We have a bullet that we found when we got back.

"We were unloaded from the car at the beer garden and lined up with our backs to the road. We were told that we were not the ones really wanted, but they wanted to get Fernwood Broom, president of our union. We were told that if we looked around while they left that we were to be shot down. After they left we had to walk back and we got back to the picket tent four hours later. Three policemen were at the tent with a lot more of our pickets.

"The tent was riddled with shot and the lights were torn down. One bullet went clear through the stove."

The pickets were not seriously injured. Pickets are still about the mill, and feeling is running high in the district of the mill. No arrests have been made. From comment of the strikers and sympathizers the purpose of the thugs was not accomplished. Strikers appear more determined than ever to stick to their cause.

It is recalled that in the Richmond hosiery strike one of the scabs killed a striker, "Pinkie" Walker, under conditions that appeared to be a frame-up, and from developments of the affair last night some more strikers may have to pay for their fight for freedom with their lives. Under the NRA it was first believed that such terroristic methods would never happen again, but the workers have found in the last two years that they still must face the determined and bloody opposition that has always existed.

While leaders of the strike express the hope that blood will not be shed, the outrage of last night has caused serious doubt of the prospects of an orderly conduct of the campaign.

Secretary Cheek Says Federation Against Prison Competition

Nashville. March 20.—W. E. Cheek, secretary of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, announced here today that his office is co-operating 100 per cent with the movement to exclude prison-made goods from the open market.

In commenting on the state's use plan as advanced by the Tennessee committee on prison competition, Mr. Cheek said:

"It is the only workable and logical answer to a problem that has confronted both the American Federation of Labor and the Tennessee Federation of Labor for many years.

"While we well recognize that in the interest of prison discipline and to safeguard the morale of the inmates themselves, it is vitally necessary to keep them employed. We also realize that their employment in any productive labor is to some extent competitive to paid workers.

"However," he pointed out, "since these men through their crimes owe a debt to society, the taxpayers who must support the penal institutions are entitled to every advantage which the products of prison factories might save in the maintenance cost of every state, county and municipal institution."

This saving in the state's own usage of prison-made clothing, overalls, shoes, bedding and other necessities where no labor costs are incurred would be enormous, accoring to Mr. Cheek, and would make the small sums derived from the sale of these goods on the open markets fade into insignificance. He added that the entire output of the prison's factory could be absorbed by the state and thus eliminate the evils of dumping these products upon the open market.

"Under present conditions," the labor leader stated, "the taxpayers of Tennessee are losing hundreds of thousands of dollars, manufacturers are being forced to close their plants and thousands of Tennessee workers are being thrown into the unemployed as under the NRA wage scale private industry cannot compete with cheap prison-made goods. It is an evil that must be corrected."

A. P. Frierson, Knoxville manufacturer and chairman of the committee, stated that the condition is becoming increasingly alarming in view of the fact that new states are being added to the twenty-seven which now exclude prison-made goods from the open market. He added:

"Unless the state's use bill, which will be introduced when the legislature reconvenes is passed without delay, Tennessee will become the dumping ground of all prison-made goods from other states whose lawmakers have passed measures protecting their workers and their industry as we seek to protect our own."

Belmont Mill Told to Rehire Eleven Workers

Decision of Board Finds Mill Has Discriminated Against Striking Employes.

Eleven employes of the Knit Productsucts corporation of Belmont, N. C., who struck last September, and have since been discriminated against by the mill, are ordered reinstated in their former positions in a decision handed down by the national textile labor relations board. The eleven employes are Tom McCall, Evelyn Dunn, Arno O'Neil, William Hamilton, Alva Watts, Huey Sanders, Elsie Sanders, Ethel Cowen, Narah Dunn, Albert Wright and Dave Seagle.

In respect to four other complainants, the board says that the evidence does not establish whether they have been discriminated against by the mill because of union membership and their strike activity, or because of participation in a crowd described as unruly and boisterous at the mill gates on Sept. 13. The board makes no finding in respect to them. They are Otis Dunn, Hester Perry, Virginia Pope Rozzelle and Mary Wright.

Texas Solons Consider 30 Bills for Workers

Austin, Tex.—Thirty measures affecting the interests of the workers in Texas have been introduced during the present session of the state legislature. One of them—the child labor amendment to the federal constitution—was defeated in the senate. The other twenty-nine are now under consideration either by the senate or the house of representatives.

These measures, sponsored by the organized labor movement of the state, cover the following subjects: Amending the workmen's compensation act so that state employes may recover damages; prohibiting state courts from enforcing yellow dog contracts; limiting and regulating the use of injunctions in labor disputes; prohibiting the employment of anyone but a citizen of the United States on public works; minimum wages for women and children; limiting freight trains to seventy cars and passengers trains to 144 coaches; requiring labels on all prison-made goods; regulating lobbying; amending state eight-hour law so as to make it applicable to public works; prohibiting employers from contracting with employes for a certain wage and then compelling the employe to give part of it back to the employer; requiring plumbing fixtures to be installed in conformity to fixed standards by competent mechanics licensed by the state labor department; requiring employers to pay twice each month and within ten days of the end of the work period.

Crosby Notifies Of Meeting of Chatta. Label League

E. E. Crosby, chairman of the label committee of Chattanooga Trades and Label council, gives notice that the newly formed Chattanooga Label league will have a meeting on Friday, March 29. Mr. Crosby states that wonderful interest is being shown by those already taking part, and it is his belief that the new organization will soon be felt as a power in the labor movement. If the label league is successful, Mr. Crosby says, strikes and lockouts need never occur and peace and prosperity will reign in Chattanooga industry.

National Meat Market Kicks Out Union Cards

Business Agent Mack Ball, of Meatcutters' local 600, reports to The Labor World that Thursday, March 21, National Meat Market, chain concern, broke a written agreement with the local union and severed its connections with organized labor. Mr. Ball states that this concern is violating NRA rules and regulations, besides refusing to employ union butchers according to its agreement.

Wages paid to non-union employes of this concern are said to be paying less wages than other legitimate places of business, and Local 600 officials declare that all organized labor will re requested to co-operate with them in protesting such business ethics of this chain company.

Pickets are in front of the store stating that "National Meat Market is unfair to Meatcutters' Local No. 600."

FIREARMS WORKERS STRIKE.

Hartford, Conn.—Following a long-standing dispute over the right to organize, around 1,000 employes of the Colt Patent Firearms Manufacturing company walked out. A recent ruling by the national labor relations board found that "the Colt company for more than a year had refused to accept the board's procedure for collective bargaining, in violation of Section 7-A."

Ford Mine Closed by Strike.

Williamson, W. Va.—Local 5737 of the United Mine Workers of America called a strike at the Stone, Ky., unit of the Fordson mines, near here, in protest against the discharge of two union workers for alleged "insubordition." Two hundred and fifty miners walked out, tying up operations.

MILK WAGON DRIVERS STRIKE.

Toledo, O.—Union milk wagon drivers struck in the Toledo area after demands for union recognition, shorter hours and wage increases were refused.

GREEN SEES WAVE OF STRIKES IF WAGNER BOARD FAILS LABOR

"We Cannot and Will Not Continue to Urge Workers to Have Patience Unless the Wagner Bill Is Made Law, and Unless It Is Enforced Once It Becomes Law," A. F. of L. Head Tells Senate Committee.

Washington.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, predicted that failure of congress to enact the Wagner labor relations bill would inevitably precipitate strikes of so serious a scope that the "entire industrial life of our nation" would be disorganized.

Testifying before the senate committee on education and labor, Mr. Green gave a detailed account of the hope for justice which animated the workers when congress enacted Section 7-A of the recovery act, with its guarantee of the right of collective bargaining. But that hope was rudely smashed by employers who "resorted to every kind of subterfuge to evade the law," aided by the fact that the "machinery set up to enforce the law has not been given sufficient power."

Methods of Evasion.

Among the methods practiced by employers to prevent the workers from realizing their rights under Section 7-A, Mr. Green cited discrimination, discharge, creation of company unions, the use of great financial resources to prevent or destroy union organization, all supplemented by a notorious spy system to intimidate union members and employes generally.

Plants Turned Into Fortresses.

In summarizing his reasons for the prompt enactment of the Wagner bill, Mr. Green said:

"I want to urge again that nothing be permitted to stand in the way of the adoption of this bill. Unless this action is taken, we must face the fact that we are only at the beginning of a series of strikes which will upset the entire industrial life of our nation if we continue to deny to workers their rights.

"We have had isolated instances within the past year of very real, armed industrial warfare. When a strike was threatened in steel plants last year, those plants were immediately turned into fortresses by the installation of machine guns and barbed wire entanglements. Flood lights were installed, and preparations were made for taking care of workers inside the plant. In addition, private armies were recruited, ready for use should the strike occur.

"The steel workers were threatening strike because their legal right of collective bargaining was denied them, and because company unions were forced on them. The strike did not occur, because the national steel labor relations board was formed to hear and act upon the complaints of the workers. Yet, that board has been openly flouted and challenged by the steel companies.

Armed Warfare.

"You know the cost of the recent textile strike in human lives. Neither you nor I can ever know its cost in human suffering. Let me remind you very briefly of what happened in San Francisco, in Toledo, in Minneapolis, in those struggles which are, in effect, armed warfare. There is only one way to avoid a recurrence of such events. That is by assurance to the workers that their rights will be observed by employers.

Section 7-A Not Enforced.

"The working people of this country have during the past two years been very patient. They have suffered discharge and want and humiliation, believing that the government was behind them in their struggle. They have waited for government enforcement of their rights through the agencies set up to enforce section 7-A. The department of justice has failed to act; the national labor relations board which has the responsibility for enforcement of Section 7-A has not the power of enforcement.

"The department of justice has not the experience and perhaps not the sympathy with collective bargaining legislation to make an effective enforcement agency; its attention is divided among many phases of law enforcement. Collective bargaining is a

RY. PENSION ACT IN HIGH COURT

Government Defends Power of Congress to Enact Law Providing for Retirement of Aged Railroad Employes.

Washington.—The constitutionality of the railroad pension act passed by the United States congress last June was argued before the supreme court of the United States. The law, which effects millions of railroad employes, provides that both railroad employes and railroad companies shall contribute to the pension fund, administered by a railroad retirement board.

The executives of the railroad companies secured an injunction from a court in the District of Columbia restraining the board from enforcing the law on the ground that it was a violation of the federal constitution. Among their claims was the one that while railroad transportation itself is interstate commerce, and therefore comes under the regulation of congress, many railroad employes, such as shopmen and stenographers, are not in interstate commerce.

Harold Stevens, assistant attorney-general, presented the argument in favor of the constitutionality of the law. He declared that "in the exercise of the commerce power of the constitution congress may legislate with regard to persons engaging in business which is commonly regarded as local in nature, so long as the regulation is within the purpose of the act." He cited a number of supreme court decisions to support his contention and quoted a recent decision of the court to the effect that the operations of all railroad men were "part of the current of commerce or closely associated therewith."

Holding that the act was necessary and justified because it aims at increased "efficiency and safety" through elimination of old workers, Stephens told the court that under it within five years one-fourth of the million railroaders could be retired and their jobs given to younger men. He said present voluntary retirement systems were unsatisfactory and covered only 17 per cent of the workers.

Railroad executives claimed that the act would cost the railroad owners around $60,000,000 a year and held it to be arbitrary, unreasonable, and far beyond the power of the federal constitution.

Majority Rule in Collective Bargaining

The Wagner Labor Relations bill provides that "representatives designated or selected for the purpose of collective bargaining by the majority of the employes in a unit appropriate for such purposes shall be the exclusive representatives of all the employes in such unit for the purposes of collective bargaining in respect to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment."

Replying to criticism of this provision made by anti-union employers Senator Wagner in his argument for the bill before the senate committee on education and labor pointed out that the majority rule principle is found in a number of laws already enacted by congress. He stated that it was applied during the World War by the War Labor board, that it is now the practice of the Railway Labor board, and is followed in business and public affairs.

Explaining why the majority principle is written unequivocally into his bill, Senator Wagner said:

"All collective bargaining is simply a means to an end. That end is not the mere exchange of pleasantries between employer and employes, but rather the making of agreements which will stabilize employment conditions and set fair working standards.

"Students of industrial relations are in almost unanimous accord that it is practically impossible to apply two or more sets of agreements to one unit of workers at the same time, or to apply the terms of one agreement to only a portion of the workers in a single unit.

"For these reasons, collective bargaining can be really effective only when workers are sufficiently solidified in their interests to make one agreement covering all. This is possible only by means of majority rule.

"Freedom for the individual worker does not mean that he should be free from the orderly processes of determining questions which prevail in business and in public affairs. That kind of freedom is the trade name for exploitation."

All reasoning persons will be compelled to admit the indisputable logic and validity of Senator Wagner's statement.

Holding Company Propaganda

President Roosevelt's message to congress urging the enactment of legislation curbing public utility holding companies and criticising propaganda organized by company executives to defeat the legislation was regarded so favorably by congress that 50,000 copies of the message were ordered printed in order that Senators and Representatives might send it to their constituents. The president said:

"I have been watching with great interest the fight being waged against public utility holding company legislation. I have watched the use of investors' money to make the investor believe that the efforts of the government to protect him are designed to defraud him. I have seen much of the propaganda prepared against such legislation—even down to mimeograph sheets of instructions for propaganda to exploit the most far-fetched and fallacious fears."

Asserting that he was as "unimpressed" by this propaganda as he was by "the similar effort to stir up the country against the securities exchange bill last spring," the president claimed the chain letter, circular and verbal pressure on members of congress so thoroughly misrepresented the purpose of the proposed law that the people should "understand once and for all the actual facts of the case." He continued:

"Such a measure will not destroy legitimate business or wholesome and productive investment. It will not destroy a penny of actual value of those operating properties which holding companies now control and which holding company securities represent insofar as they have any value. On the contrary, it will surround the necessary reorganization of the holding company with safeguards which will in fact protect the investor."

The President charged that the devices inaugurated by many utility executives "have given tyrannical power and exclusive opportunity to a favored few" and made "once traditionally independent owners of their own businesses helplessly dependent for their daily bread upon the favor of a very few, who through devices such as holding companies have taken for themselves unwarranted economic power." He declared that the holding company legislation was in the interest of the real investor as well as of the rate payer.

Observers predict that the message will greatly facilitate the speedy enactment of the law, which the administration claims is designed to remove recognized evils of holding company organizations.

A Silly Argument for Tax Secrecy

In the drive now being staged to abolish publicity for income tax returns, one argument is made which in the light of revelations of the last two years is so silly that it ought to be rejected at once. This is the claim that publicity for income tax returns has no value in helping to check income tax evasions.

Test that statement by one group of facts which Ferdinand Pecora dragged from reluctant Croesuses during the Senate investigation of Wall Street. The House of Morgan—J. P. Morgan & Co.—has twenty members. Except for two or three juniors, probably all are multimillionaires in their own right. Yet—not one of these rich men paid income taxes for 1930, 1931, 1932. Every one of them, including J. P. Morgan, himself, "avoided" any payment of income taxes in the United States, though Morgan, during those same years, paid income taxes to England.

Now, does anyone able to keep out of a home for the feebleminded believe for a moment that the House of Morgan would have dared to "avoid" its income taxes for those three years if the plutocratic partners had known that the whole story would be told to the world as soon as the treasury had finished compiling the returns?

Even Wall Street is not dense enough to invite public wrath in that way. Very likely there are many cases of evasion which would not be stopped by publicity. But there are many that would be stopped by that means, and these include some of the cases which the American people are most anxious to stop.

Mr. Dawes Predicts End of Depression

Charles G. Dawes, known in Chicago as the man who borrowed $90,000,000 of public money from the RFC, says that the depression will be over in two months.

That sounds like a large order. There were on federal relief in January 4,533,840 families. Counting four persons to a family, this means 18,135,360 people dependent on the national government for a living.

Does Mr. Dawes mean to say that the millions of these destitute who are still employable can be put to work and those who cannot be given tasks at the industrial machine can be assured of decent security—all in two months? The labors of Hercules, rolled together and multiplied fifty fold, would not be a start at such a task.

Probably, however, Mr. Dawes does not mean any such thing. When he says that the depression will be over in two months, he means the depression as it affects his business and the business of his friends and associates in the financial game. They, evidently, count on flying high within the next sixty days.

For that matter, the depression as it affected Charles G. Dawes ended a good while ago. It came when, after serving as first chairman of the RFC, he resigned with a flourish, and came back to borrow $90,000,000 of public money for private use—the use of the Dawes bank. Something like half that huge sum has not been paid back.

Depression almost over? In the sense that factory hands and farmers and small merchants and professional workers use the word, Mr. Dawes and his ilk never had a depression; and so far as lessened profits and more difficulty in paying debts is concerned, Mr. Dawes cast those burdens on the RFC more than two years ago.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Charts and rows of figures seem to indicate that business is getting better and that next year will see a rather sizable growth of improvement. It is all very puzzling. Automobiles are booming along, steel is doing very well and textiles are better than textile management justifies. Forecasts of those who are professional forecasters are for gains running through the next two or three years, on to 1940, which, in terms of weekly pay envelopes, is a long stretch ahead. The figures seem to be all right. They have been put together with great care and as the result of much study. It is to be hoped they are not full of blow holes.

Very few who read these words are likely to be readers of Fortune, the big magazine that sells for a dollar a copy. But Fortune, this month, prints pictures that show the distribution of wealth and of poverty. This magazine, which carries in colors the advertising of the fabulously profitable non-union cigarette industry, shows that poverty is almost the rule in American life. To be "wealthy" is to be the rare exception. Wealth is concentrated in a very few hands.

The reviving state of business looks very much like the old racket of taking a few handfuls of people out of the abject poverty line and lifting them temporarily just a trifle above that line, where they will hover in uncertainty until with another smash they go down again. That's what we had visions of when Franklin D. Roosevelt thrilled so many Americans with his pledge of a new deal. The issue between recovery and reform lies, for the time being, with reform.

Meanwhile the greatest battle to break the strength of organized labor is getting under way. The greatest battle ever staged, in all probability. And a great many unions find it impossible to believe that such a thing can be, in view of Section 7-A and the rest of the Roosevelt legislative grist. But 7-A hasn't much longer to live and there is no assurance that the Wagner industrial disputes bill will be enacted into law. Surely it will not be unless there is an overwhelming clamor for its enactment. And just at this moment there isn't any assurance that there will be any law to supplant NIRA when it dies by statutory limitation in just a few weeks. There has been a notable and saddening sagging downward and backward.

But one thing is sure: Governmental activities have already given private business a new grip—and business, like a lady just picked out of the gutter mud, is in the act of passing on, nose thumbed haughtily at the rescuer.

So be it. But no, so be it not. There has been too much ferment for all things to settle back as they were, with power flowing through the same old hands of the same old gang. A certain process of change has set in and that process is going on. There may be—there will be—fumbling and halting and it may be a decade before the world can see clearly what the change has been. But the tight little group that could twist a nation's economic forces around its fingers and shovel a nation's wealth into its pockets will not be in the same place when that change has been accomplished. As a matter of fact, just what happens to that little group depends in large part on how stubbornly that little group resists the change that is in the hearts of the people.

VARYING PAY RATES BIG EVIL

* * * * * * * * *

Cause Gross Injustice To Labor and Employers

Washington.—Widely varying wage rates in American industry are a big industrial evil, the women's bureau, United States department of labor, found in a recent survey. Findings are made public in a bulletin entitled "Variations in Wage Rates Under Corresponding Conditions."

The report discusses the variation of wage rates in eight important woman-employing industries — laundries, cotton mills, work clothing, shoes, shirts, underwear, hosiery and department stores. Wage rates are compared in different plants in the same industry, and instances are cited of the variation of wage rates in the same occupation in different plants and even in the same plant. The data used in the report were secured from more than 400 plants in seventeen states.

The gross injustices both to employers paying fair wages and to workers receiving low wages, as a result of the lack of wage standardization are stressed in the bulletin. The difficulties that the better-paying employers must face while competing with those whose wage rates are totally inadequate as a basis of decent living are self-evident, the study says.

In May, 1933, women shakers in certain New York laundries were paid at a weekly median rate of $6.90 at the same time their more fortunate sisters doing practically identical work in other laundries of the state were paid at a rate of $14.65, or more than twice as much. Even wider variation in wage rates for the same work occurred among women weavers in South Carolina cotton mills during the same week in 1932, the median weekly rate ranging from $5.50 in one mill to $16.60 in another. These are but two of many such illustrations of varying wage rates.

The subject of wage levels becomes increasingly important when it is realized that the very existence of industries depends on the ability of enough people to buy, the report points out. A widely distributed purchasing power is impossible of achievement where wage levels vary as greatly as the women's bureau study shows.

One method of approaching a wider distribution of buying power is the minimum wage, the report suggests. This "fixing of a point below which the wage for stated services cannot legally go, in consideration both of a decent minimum standard of living and of a fair return for services rendered" is a method adopted currently by the NRA and by specific states. The minimum wage thus constitutes at the present time perhaps the most practical remedy for certain of the evils of widespread variations in wages for essentially the same work.

Labor Backs Connery Proposal To Bar U. S. Arms in Strikes

Washington.—Strong support for the Connery bill, prohibiting the use of federal supplies and military equipment by state troops in labor disputes, without the express permission of the secretary of war, is being given by labor organizations throughout the nation.

Members of the house labor and military affairs committees and other members of the house have been deluged with letters from labor organizations, including the New Bedford, Mass., Weavers' association; the American Federation of Teachers, with headquarters in Chicago; the Upholstery Weavers' union of Philadelphia; the Philadelphia District Council of Textile Workers; the Boston Central Labor union; the American Federation of Hosiery Workers' national offices, in Philadelphia, and branch offices in High Point, N. C.; Milwaugee, Wis., and other labor bodies throughout the country.

The Chicago Federation of Labor through its president, John Fitzpatrick, has sent a barrage of telegrams to representatives in Washington, urging passage of the bill.

AGREEMENT-BREAKING BOSSES ARE FOUGHT BY ORGANIZED LABOR

Minneapolis, Minn. — A militant fight against employers who break agreements with trade unions is being waged by organized labor in Minneapolis. The Huntinger garage and the Builders Sideboard company are charged with practicing this device to lower labor standards.

It is claimed the garage concern failed to carry out the terms of a strike settlement which prescribed that the firm should re-employ four workers who had participated in a strike. The company refused to keep this agreement. As a result it was placed on labor's "unfair" list and is being militantly picketed. Union officials assert that employes of the company are now compelled to work fifty-four hours a week when the strike settlement called for forty hours a week.

The builders Sideboard company, manufacturers of fixtures for stores, saloons and cafes, signed an agreement with the Twin City District council, which was a necessary procedure to comply with union specifications in a contract it had secured. Later it broke its agreement with the carpenters. The concern was therefore listed as "unfair" to labor.

SOCIAL INSURANCE PROGRAM HELD NEEDED IMMEDIATELY

Washington.—The house labor committee, in a report to the house recommending passage of the Lundeen unemployment insurance bill, warned that an adequate social insurance program is immediately necessary to "prevent appalling destitution."

The bill would provide permanent unemployment benefits of at least $10 a week to each worker.

MINNEAPOLIS CLOTHING WORKERS WIN STRIKE

Minneapolis, Minn.—United action by organized labor here won the strike declared by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers against Martin Brothers, whom the union charged with victimizing their members for union activity.

Acting under the right to organize guaranteed by Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery law a number of the employes of this concern began to do constructive trade union work. Officials of the Clothing Workers charged that the company "laid off" the men for their activities in the interest of labor organization. When the company hired new employes in the place of the old ones "laid off," it became apparent that the union men had been discharged.

The Clothing Workers called a strike to protect against this discrimination. The Central Labor union placed the concern on organized labor's "unfair list." After several days of picketing the case was taken over by the relations board, which reached an agreement with the company stipulating that the workers in question be reinstated and that the right of employes to join a trade union would not be interfered with. The strike was therefore called off.

Green Favored by Auto Workers for Spokesman

Detroit, Mich.—F. J. Dillon, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor here, announced that the tabulation of the ballots already indicated that the United Aotomobile Workers will overwhelmingly approve the action of the national council in designating the American Federation of Labor as their bargaining agency with management in the automobile industry, with President Green, of the A. F. of L., as their duly accredited spokesman.

"The enthusiasm and the determination which is being manifested by the automobile workers throughout the country can be attributed to the fact that the issue has been clarified," Mr. Dillon said. "They are now privileged," he added, "to demonstrate in their own way their preference for a free and independent organization to function for them and to be represented by a man who is not controlled or dominated by the corporations."

ELECTRICAL WORKERS STRIKE.

El Paso, Tex.—The twin cities of El Paso, Texas, and Juarez, Mexico, were left without electric service when skilled employes of the El Paso Electric company went on strike for union recognition. City officials acted as mediators and announced several hours later that differences had been settled and the men would return to work.

Newspaper power plants were paralyzed. The El Paso Times issued a mimeographed morning edition and the El Paso Herald-Post, its staff working through the night by candle light, was preparing to issue an afternoon edition with hand-set type. Two oil refineries shut down their stills for lack of power.

LABOR MEASURE BEFORE MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, Minn.—The Minnesota State Federation of Labor is sponsoring a number of important social welfare bills before the state legislature. The bills propose the 30-hour week; labeling of prison-made goods sold in the open market and coming into Minnesota from other states; licensing of steamfitters and supervision and inspection of steamfitting; codifying wage laws; state workmen's compensation fund, and unemployment insurance.

Employers, manufacturers and retailers' associations favored the prison-made goods bill.

Secretary George W. Lawson, of the State Federation of Labor, said that "one of the difficulties in securing action on labor legislation is the lack of quorums at committee meetings." He pointed out that when a quorum does not appear it generally means a week's delay in considering the measures before the committee.

LABOR TO CONTINUE FIGHT TO MAINTAIN PAY, DESPITE M'CARRAN AMENDMENT DEFEAT

Washington.—Labor will continue to fight to maintain wages, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, announced following defeat by the senate of the McCarran prevailing rate of wages amendment to the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill.

Vote against the McCarran amendment, which had previously been approved by a close vote, was 50 to 38. After defeating the McCarran proposal, the senate adopted the compromise Russell amendment by a vote of 83 to 2.

Approval of the Russell amendment, offered by Senator Russell, of Georgia, assures payment of prevailing rate of wages on all permanent public building projects under the work relief bill. Elsewhere the amendment says the president may fix the wages he chooses, if in his opinion they will not operate to tear down the wage scale.

The McCarran amendment would have made mandatory the payment of wages prevailing in every community on federal aid projects.

In announcing that labor would keep up its fight to maintain wages, President Green reiterated labor's opposition to the Russell amendment, saying:

"Labor does not accept the Russell amendment as an improvement over the measure originally reported by the senate appropriations committee. It cannot and does not accept the Russell amendment."

Dallas Garment Manufacturers Refuse Federal Conciliation

Dallas, Tex.—The Dallas garment manufacturers as a body refused to accept the services of J. C. Howard, U. S. commissioner of conciliation, to bring about an amicable settlement of the controversy with the workers, according to Meyer Perlstein, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union. Declaring that he believed some of the smaller manufacturers might be willing to deal directly with the union, Mr. Perlstein said that separate agreements would be offered to all of them. The agreements provide for increased production in return for increased wages.

"The international union is behind the Dallas locals and is prepared for a six months' strike if necessary," Mr. Perlstein said, adding: "However, we are making every possible effort to obtain a fair settlement without resorting to a long drawn-out struggle."

LOAN SHARK LEGISLATION.

Little Rock, Ark.—The legislative committee representing the Arkansas State Federation of Labor and the Railroad Brotherhoods are supporting a bill regulating loan sharks which is before the state legislature. It is claimed that there are instances on record in which 600 per cent interest on money was often charged and that one debt of $44 ran up to over $1,500 in nine and one-half years. The bill provides that if usurious rates are charged, the borrower may bring suit against the broker and recover the overcharge as well as lawyers' fees.

MORE ABOUT LABOR BOARD

new field and requires specialized study and interest.

Swift Action Necessary.

"The board which is dealing constantly with collective bargaining problems is the only logical enforcement agency. The present method has and would in the future mean delays which are destructive to the unions. The very nature of a union requires swift action. Delay, beyond the power of the board to prevent, has in the past two years been the means of completely destroying many unions and of bringing great hardship and bitterness to the members of those unions. You have heard the very able analysis of Mr. Biddle (chairman of the national labor relations board) on what has happened to cases under the present set-up.

Resentment is Increasing.

"We have counseled patience and the use of peaceful means of settlement; we have assured groups of workers that they do not need to strike in order to secure their legal rights; that much of the difficulty they experience is due to misunderstanding on the part of the employers of their new responsibilities under Section 7-A, and that when employers have had more time to adjust themselves to the new situation, they will co-operate with their employes to fulfill the purposes of that section.

"We cannot and will not continue to urge workers to have patience, unless the Wagner bill is made law, and unless it is enforced, once it becomes the law. There is growing in the masses of American people a bitter resentment at the position in which they find themselves and a deep conviction that only their own economic strength will avail them in their struggle against the injustices and inequalities under which they work. We must face the consequences of a deliberate destruction of that faith. Working men and women throughout the land are demanding justice, demanding the rights and privileges to which they are entitled.

Employers Use Force Against Labor.

"On the one hand, we have employers banding together and compelling workers to accept their terms by use of armed force. On the other hand, we have subversive influences at work—influences which, if permitted to continue, will develop very real power to overthrow our present economic system. Where deprivation and injustice prevail over a period of time, men and women rebel to secure their rights.

Workers Kept Voiceless.

"Stockholders and directors of a corporation have a voice in the operation of that corporation because their money has been invested and their future will be affected by the policies of management. Is the employe who has invested his skill in the plant, his very life, to be denied a voice in the determination of those policies which directly affect his welfare?

Real Collective Bargaining Necessary.

"The individual employe cannot longer be considered a robot, as an automaton whose very action is in direct response to the pressure of management. Groups of employes cannot longer be considered a lifeless matter, held within the palm of management, whose very being will be extended or contracted at the will of the management. True collective bargaining is the main shaft upon which our whole economic machinery resolves. This economic machinery cannot function unless there is true collective bargaining by which nation-wide organizations of employes in bona fide labor unions wholly removed from any control or interference by management."

KNITTING MILLS REGAIN RIGHT TO NRA INSIGNIA

Washington.—The national recovery administration has announced it has restored to the Atlanta Knitting mills, Catskill, N. Y., the right to use NRA insignia. The right had been withdrawn for violations of the labor provisions of the underwear and allied products manufacturing industry code.

Assurance has been received that the company is complying and will continue to comply with the code, and has posted $10,000 bond and agreement as to the amount of restitution to be paid its workers will be determined soon.

UNION APARTMENT HOUSE NOW VIRTUALLY FINISHED

Philadelphia.—The Carl Mackley houses are now virtually completed. Certain formalities remain to be completed before the Juniata Park Housing corporation, technical owners of the hosiery workers' project, take full title to the property from the government, but for all practical purposes the construction job is now done.

The one portion of the whole job that cannot be completed at present is the planting and landscaping of the grounds. That work will have to wait for another month or two.

Building mechanics are out of the building, except for minor details, and all four units are ready for occupancy. Tenants are now moving in.

Hundreds of visitors continue to inspect the project every week-end and a constant stream of callers is on hand day in and day out.

WAGES MUST ADVANCE AS PROFITS INCREASE

A. F. of L. Business Survey Holds That Larger Buying Power in the Hands of the Masses Is Major Element in Business Recovery.

Washington. — Large purchasing power for wage-earners through increased real wages is stressed as the basic foundation for business recovery in the current issue of the monthly survey of business of the American Federation of Labor.

"To raise workers' living standards progressively as industry recovers and profits increase is without exception the most important economic problem which faces us today," the survey said.

Profit Motive Explained.

"That this problem is fundamental in our economic growth is clearly illustrated in a study just published by Brookings institution, based on careful analysis of a century of economic experience in this and other countries," the survey continued.

"The institution points out the following facts: 'The motivating force in all economic activity, under a system of private initiative, is the wants and demands of the people.' These wants, of course, are expressed in proportion as the people have purchasing power. 'The base of the economic pyramid is the production of consumption goods' —such as food, clothing, housing, passenger automobiles, etc.

"To supply these consumption goods, 'capital' goods are created—factories, farm and industrial machinery, railroads, electric power lines, etc.—but growth of capital goods 'does not take place unless expansion of consumption is also occurring . . . The demand for plant and equipment is derived from the demand for consumption goods' and the moment this demand declines, the demand for new capital goods declines also in vastly greater proportion.

Reduced Buying Power Starts Depression.

"Production of capital goods is at the top of the economic pyramid, and 'a slight shrinkage at the base of the pyramid (a shrinkage in consuming power) very nearly eliminates the top.'

"This explains why a shortage of workers' buying power can start a depression which stops production and throws millions out of work in the 'heavy' or capital goods industries.

"The institution finds also that changes in business conditions, such as the start of recovery from depression, or the change from prosperity to business decline, appear to begin with forces which affect the production of consumers' goods.

"Thus an increase in workers' buying power may start recovery, or a shortage may cause a turn from prosperity to depression.

Rich Use Surplus for Speculation.

"In the period of prosperity from 1923 to 1929, tre institution finds, vast increases in wealth produced by our industries, created huge surplus funds in the hands of corporations and persons with high incomes these surpluses rose from eight or nine billion dollars in 1923-24 to fifteen or sixteen billion in 1928-29; they were used not for productive purposes but for speculation on the stock market, and thus became the cause of the financial orgy of 1928-29 which ended in the worst depression in history.

"The study concludes that America's present economic problem differs greatly from that of the past. In the past, there was a scarcity of funds for business enterprise; today there is a surplus which tends to produce financial maladjustments. 'The primary need is a larger flow of funds through consumptive channels.'"

Coal Companies Cause Chaos in Relief Work

Uniontown, Pa.—Chaotic conditions in relief work among mine workers in Fayette county were directly attributed to officials of coal companies by state investigators sent here from the Harrisburg office of the emergency relief administration. It was charged that the companies take a large portion of the contents of the miners' envelope each pay day to liquidate various back bills.

"One of the prime causes for the confusion," the report said, "is that men who live in company houses have their rent deducted by the company and rent is not figured as income in making up a budget deficiency. The men who do not live in company houses do not have their rents deducted and the money they receive is a greater amount than the money received by the other men, giving them a lower relief check. In this case the men must still pay the rent. The situation is not at all fair."

The investigators pointed out that the policy of the coal companies in deducting store bills and rentals from the miners' pay envelope requires the state relief administration and the taxpayers to support the miners while the back debts to the operators are being and in effect amounts to a state subsidy to the operators.

MORE ABOUT CONVENTION

unions in Tennessee are urged to send delegates to this convention. Local unions not affiliated are requested to affiliate at once. The initiation fee for local unions, central district bodies, is $5.00. Local unions with twenty-five members or less shall not be required to pay any initiation fee. Local unions that are affiliated and who are in arrears with their per capita tax are requested to square up all arrearages, in order that their delegates may be entitled to a seat in the convention. Section 2, Article 7, of the laws of the federation read as follows:

Sec. 2. Any organization affiliated with the federation not paying its dues within thirty days after being notified by the secretary-treasurer shall be reported to the executive council, and if, at the end of three months, it is still in arrears, the executive council shall suspend such organization from membership in the federation, and it can be reinstated only by payment of all arrearages or by a two-thirds vote of the convention; provided, however, that any local union or central body being more than one year in arrears shall be reaffiliated upon the payment of their regular initiation fee and six months' dues.

The coming convention will be a very important one. Plans for further organization of the workers in Tennessee will be outlined. The employers are doing everything within their power to retard the organization of the workers into legitimate trade unions.

Trusting that your organization will be represented and hoping to meet your delegates at the convention, we remain,

Sincerely and fraternally,

WHO IS PUBLIC POWER LEAGUE?

Closed Shop Employer Testifies to Benefits of 100 Pct. Union Plant

UNION TOBACCO COMPANIES BACK COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

Axton-Fisher Company and Brown & Williamson Corporation Support Wagner Disputes Bill and Tell Senate Labor Committee A. F. of L. Makes for Better, Happier Nation.

Washington. — Emphatic indorsement of organized labor and its principle was given by two successful employers of union workers, in appearing before the senate education and labor committee in support of the Wagner labor disputes bill.

Views of two employers—the Axton-Fisher Tobacco company and the Brown & Williamson Tobacco corporation, both of Louisville, Ky.—were epitomized by the declaration of Col. Wood F. Axton, president of the first-named company, that organized labor is a great constructive force, making for better economic and social conditions in the nation.

"Organized labor symbolized by the American Federation of Labor stands squarely behind the worker and the fair employer," said Colonel Axton. "We believe in and heartily indorse their principles."

"I firmly believe," Colonel Axton said at another point in his testimony, that the organization of workers under the American Federation of Labor plan leads to better wages, fewer hours and improved working conditions. That vast benefits can accrue to the employer, that it develops character, fosters justice and tolerance, and makes for better economic conditions in the nation."

Profits Unfairly Divided.

Thorough agreement with the views of Col. Axton was expressed by H. M. Robertson, general counsel for the Brown & Williamson corporation.

"Our experience convinces us that there is no reason why any employer could not operate under union conditions," said Mr. Robertson, who also told the committee that manufacturers of tobacco products are getting too much in profits and farmers and labor are getting too little out of the tobacco dollar."

This inequitable distribution in industry generally endangers our economic existence, said the Brown & Williamson representative, and he urged union organization and genuine collective bargaining as an essential method of correction. He testified to the benefits of union organization, and his company's plant was a closed union shop, and urged the passage of the Wagner bill.

Committee Members Impressed.

Testimony of the two employers strongly impressed members of the senate committee, and Senator Wagner, of New York, author of the labor disputes bill, said he wished there were more employers with similar views of view.

Col. Axton, whose company has dealt with the Tobacco Workers' International union for more than thirty-five years, said that his experience had convinced him "that organized labor is a great constructive force in the betterment of economic growth, when applied to industrial relations.

"There is no question," Col. Axton stated, "but what the application of this philosophy has made consistently for the betterment of conditions of employment and progress in my company."

"No Occasion for Regret."

After telling how he became convinced of the value of unionism by watching the successful working of the agreement between coal operators and the United Mine Workers in Illinois, Col. Axton went on to say:

"Having witnessed at first hand the benefits that accrued to all through collective bargaining, I became thoroughly imbued with belief in the principle of collective bargaining and, therefore, in opening my factory on April 1, 1899, I requested the secretary of the Tobacco Workers' International union to come to Owensboro and organize the employes of my plant. From that day until this we have operated a strictly union shop, and never once have had occasion to regret our contracts with the Tobacco Workers' union. We have found that, not only the workers in our plant have been willing to live up to their agreement, but the officials of the international union, as well, have always been more than anxious that agreements were not violated, and that the rank and file live up to their contracts."

"Labor Must Have Voice."

"There is no doubt," Col. Axton said in ending his testimony, "but what at times human nature will assert itself, and many men, whether employers or workers, will sometimes commit overt acts. This has been my observation, however, based on experience, that where I have found one or several labor bodies violating the terms of their contracts there have been, on the other hand, far more individual employers and organizations trying to foment disorder and discord. I have found far more men representing anti-labor forces going much further in their attempts to spread misinformation to the general public. I have heard anti-labor employers speaking in public make the statement that labor must be brought to its knees.

"In my opinion the bringing of labor to its knees, and the destruction of its purchasing power has very nearly brought this country to its knees. If our country is to effectuate recovery and again reach a place where labor can buy back the products it produces, we, in this country, must see to it that labor shall have some voice in the determination of conditions under which they work and wages which they are to receive.

"I am fully convinced that the labor of an individual is not a commodity or article of commerce, to be bartered and bargained for. The worker should be given the right to organize. Organized labor symbolized by the American Federation of Labor stands squarely behind the worker and the fair employer. We believe in and heartily indorse their principles."

Saw Change Was Necessary.

Mr. Robertson told the committee that Brown & Williamson operate a closed union shop in its plants at Louisville, Ky., Winston-Salem, N. C., and Petersburg, Va., having signed a contract with the Tobacco Workers' International union in November, 1933.

After explaining that in 1933 his company became convinced that there was an inequitable distribution of the tobacco dollar, with labor and the farmers receiving too small a share, the witness continued:

"With this situation it became obvious to the management of our company that no mass production could long be carried on unless there was increased purchasing power by the great masses of the people. To us this meant that there must be increase in wages and shortening of hours. This became the very fixed conviction of our management.

Why Union Was Required.

"The more difficult question was as to how this should be accomplished, and we arrived at the conclusion that collective bargaining my employer and employe, with both of these elements dealing at large length and yet fairly with each other, was the only means by which, under our system, any adjustment in the inequitable distribution of income could be accomplished. We realized the difficulties of this method, but we felt that if

Wagner Disputes Bill To Be Made an Issue In Future Elections

Senators, Congressmen Must Vote Right on Measure to Merit Labor Support.

"Organized labor in the south is prepared to mobilize itself for a militant drive to pass the Wagner-Connery Labor Disputes bill," declared Holt Ross, representative of the A. F. of L., addressing a mass meeting in the municipal auditorium arranged here Sunday by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, as the first gun of the local campaign to secure enactment of the Wagner bill.

Other speakers at this demonstration were Paul Aymon of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, A. C. Kamin, president of the Chattanooga Central Labor union, John W. Edelman, of Philadelphia, research director of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, Warren D. Mullin, Washington, D. C., labor secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, and Walter Bramley, district representative of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

"Labor in the south is in a strategic position to put pressure on the members of congress and should use every bit of power it has to force our senators and representatives to declare where they stand on this vital issue," Ross said.

The majority of the senators and congressmen from the southern states are pretty well convinced that labor in this territory can defeat most anyone who makes an anti-labor record for himself in Washington. If the organized workers in the south put all their effort back of the Wagner bill, the members of congress will quickly come to realize that a vote against this measure will mean political suicide.

"Here is our chance to punish the employers in the south who have shown such outrageous and barefaced defiance of the NIRA and the regional and national labor compliance boards. We can, by writing to our congressmen and senators, pass a bill which will enable us to secure speedy prosecution of law-breaking employers," Ross declared.

"It would be futile for congress to extend the life of the NRA unless the labor disputes bill is first enacted into law," J. W. Edelman said.

"The codes of fair competition cannot be enforced either in the north or the south unless labor is organized and workers are protected in their right to bargain collectively. The labor disputes bill enables the administration to quickly bring offending employers before the federal courts and instead of merely losing their Blue Eagles, the manufacturers will find themselves declared in contempt of a court order. Not many employers will take that chance. Some measure of legal compulsion must be exerted to force employers to cease discriminating against workers who join a labor union," Edelman declared.

Warren Mullin discussed the Connery resolution which would forbid the use of federal military equipment by national guards in strike situations.

"Every effort must be made to force this resolution out of the house military affairs committee where it now rests," Mullin said. "Congress will enact this legislation if it comes out for a vote," Mullin predicted.

Paul Aymon declared that organized labor in Tennessee had prevented the passage of a sales tax bill in the state legislature without very much effort and could certainly bring the Tennessee congressional delegation in line for the Wagner bill if a determined campaign was waged.

A. C. Kamin announced that the Chattanooga Central Labor union would appoint committees to secure signatures and petitions for the labor disputes bill throughout the city.

"We will get petitions filled out by the general public in addition to having our members write individual letters to their representative in congress," Kamin said.

An exposure of company union tactics in Chattanooga featured the address by Walter Bramley, district representative for the American Fed-

PUBLIC AGENCIES MUST BEAR MEDICAL SERVICE

Edelman Charges American Medical Assn. Acting Liwe First Class Racket.

Rickety Children and Physical Debility Is Price of Years of Depression.

By JOHN W. EDELMAN

Armies of undernourished, rickety children are now growing up in this country as a result of the depression and millions of adults are suffering from debilitating illnesses entirely due to poverty and unemployment.

As a nation, we have not yet begun to comprehend the awful physical havoc which the dislocation of our economy has caused. When this bill for physical deterioration caused by the depression is added up and payments are due we will be staggered at the costs we have incurred.

Adequate medical care in America is fast becoming a prerequisite of the wealthy or comfortably well off. Forty-seven per cent of the people—the lower income groups—have no medical, dental, or optical care whatsoever. For the first time in decades death rates in our cities in 1934 were greater than the previous year despite the absence of serious epidemics. It can be assumed that this alarming situation is a result of the breakdown of the economic system because it has been proven that there is about half again as much illness in families of the unemployed than in those whose heads have full time work. (Rates of disabling illness in 1933 were fifty per cent higher among families whose incomes suffered most heavily between 1929 to 1932 than among families not suffering those losses.)

The whole burden of illness always falls most heavily on those least able to carry it, and for that reason a totally new approach to the problem of health and medical care must be made in this country.

The community as a whole pays the bill for neglect of health and poor medical attention, whether it wants to or not. Health is even more a matter of public concern than education, and is even more vital to the public well being than the regulation of transportation or a provision of a postal system which costs us millions annually.

It is ludicrous to spend millions on the mechanical means of making war while permitting the health and vitality of the nation to be sapped by lack of a comparatively inexpensive public health system.

Drastic reductions have been made in appropriations from tax funds to public health services during the depression years while the need for such expenditures has been increasing and becoming more essential to the welfare of the community as a whole.

Relief and medical officials estimate that half a million children on relief are physically handicapped, and the merest fraction of this army of the doomed is being given any expert care whatsoever. Almost 17,000 women die in childbirth each year, and it is estimated that 10,000 of these deaths could be prevented. Hospital report a maternity death rate far below the figure of 6.4 per 1,000 which is the rate for the country as a whole.

Within the next decade the American people must come to understand that medical service should be borne by the public as a whole in the same way that education is provided thru

American Legion Assails Prison Goods On Open U. S. Market

State Commander Sisk Sends Letter to All Posts Authorizing Action.

Nashville, Tenn., March 29.—The American Legion today through a letter from its state commander, Leonard Sisk, has lent impetus to the movement started by the Tennessee Committe on Prison Competition to curb the sale of prison made goods on the open market in competition with free labor and Tennessee industry.

Mr. Sisk's letter was addressed to all American Legion posts in Tennessee authorizing the individual posts to take whatever action they desire with reference to a resolution adopted by Post No. 2, of Knoxville, which said:

"Whereas, the matter of prison labor competition with that of free labor in this and other states has been so fully and forcefully brought to our attention that we consider it a vital economic question affecting employment; and,

"Whereas, it has been clearly demonstrated to our entire satisfaction that the products of the labor of convicts of the state of Tennessee are now being disposed of to private interests who profit thereby to the detriment of our state, private industry, free labor and taxpayers; and,

"Whereas, we feel that the exploitation of state convicts for the benefit regardless of the extent of such benefit by private interest is in violation of the spirit of fairness to those who toil, industry labor and taxpayers; and;

"Whereas, we believe this matter to be a vital public question in which the American Legion should as a public duty express their views; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That Post No. 2 of Knoxville, American Legion, do by this resolution go on record as disapproving and condemning the present methods now employed by the penal institutions of Tennessee of selling competitively with private industries which are required to pay U. S. code wages, and that we favor and urge the passage of a state law that will forbid the sale of products of the labor of convicts in the open market and confine sales of such products to tax supported institutions, thereby accomplishing the five-fold purpose of increasing employment, diversifying the activity of convicts, adding revenue to the state, protecting private industry against unfair competition, protecting free labor and reduce the burden on taxpayers. Be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be furnished each member of the Knox county delegation in the Tennessee committee on prison competition."

Commenting personally on the resolution, Mr. Sisk said:

"The Knoxville post is to be commended for its keen interest in public affairs which effect all of our citizens, as this is in keeping with our policy of encouraging good citizenship within the legion. Each post may take whatever action it desires in the matter."

Dictatorship By Ring Within Power League Tries to Pull Fast One

THIMBLE, THIMBLE, FIND THE THIMBLE

The main question on every lip today is "Who is the committee?" That unknown creature, either real or imagined, of unknown size and make-up, has successfully eluded the search for its identity for several days. The only clue thus far comes from the president of the Public Power league, and he himself seems to be in the dark.

Of further interest is the question, "Who is the Public Power league?" No one seems to know. Many have joined, but evidence points that they did not "take" and that they are not members after all.

"Who is the Power League?"

"Who is the committee?"

Freezing out of organized labor on the proposed commission to direct the public power system that will eventually be in operation has evoked strenuous protest from Central Body. At the regular meeting Monday, March 25, officials were instructed to submit the names of W. P. Bales, F. T. Carter and W. E. Eckenrod to the Hamilton county legislative delegation for consideration, and to insist to the delegation that the Public Power league was usurping unto itself powers that it does not possess.

When approached by representatives of labor, the Rev. T. B. Cowan, known as the president of the Public Power league, said that labor had not been given a place on the board because he left that there was not brains in the movement to handle such a big job. When questioned further, the Rev. Cowan, who has received much publicity locally for alleged radical utterances, expressed an opinion that the labor movement of this country was led by "stuffed shirts," who did not know how to settle strikes, who did not care to settle strikes except "around the banquet table," and in general the workers were victims of ultra-conservative leadership. When asked just how the strikes in Chattanooga should have been settled, and the fact brought to his attention that they were settled before blood was shed, the Rev. Cowan had nothing to say.

Telling the world that the Power league had no right to name the commission, other than to recommend its choice, and further, that the Power league did not submit the list given to Senator Morgan, officials of the Central Body visited Nashville on Wednesday and presented its claim to the legislature.

Senator Morgan informed the committee that he had given his word to the Public Power league to accept its slate, and that he would do so. After much investigation and questioning of very prominent members of the Power league, no one seems to know who it was that named the proposed commission, other than the information from Rev. Cowan that "a committee" had been "appointed" by "somebody."

Vagueness on the part of Dr. Cowan as to who named the committee reminded numerous people of the report before election time that Rev. Cowan had also forgotten to make himself qualified to vote in the same bond election that he was fighting to put over.

When the fact is brought out that the proposed slate named by the Power league is composed of four manufacturers and one lawyer, labor is said to be justified in its uneasiness for its welfare in future public power transactions. Labor leaders insist, however, that they are not trying to remove any particular gentleman named or detract from their integrity, but simply want representation.

Hosiery Tri-State Council to Elect Officers April 6

Officers of the Tri-State Council of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers will be elected at the second meeting of this body which will be held in Roosevelt hall all day Saturday, April 6th, announces Representative Walter Bramley.

The Tri-State Council includes all branches of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. Delegates attending first meeting were most enthusiastic and voted to establish the council as a permanent organization to co-ordinate all activities in this section of the south.

A session devoted to the transaction of business will take place in the morning, and the afternoon will be devoted to instruction on the establishment of educational activities in the local unions, on the conduct of union meetings and the transaction of union business and the legislative activities of organized labor.

The delegates will also receive special instruction in the methods of negotiating with employers and the formation and duties of shop committees.

A social affair will be arranged in the evening for those of the delegates that can remain in Chattanooga.

Movie Operators Win Long Battle

St. John, N. B.—Persistency seems to have won a decisive battle for the St. John local of the International Union of Moving Picture Operators and Theater Employes. Two years ago the local declared a strike on the Mayfair theater, a movie house in St. John. Members of the local picketed in front of the house each afternoon and night, while the theater was open, and motor parades bearing painted and printed notices that the Mayfair owners were unfair to organized labor circulated through the streets every day. Banners carrying similar notices were carried on the streets by men employed by the local. Union men and their families were asked to boycott the Mayfair. About a year ago Joseph Franklin and Myer Herschorn, owners of the Mayfair, established the Mainstreet in the north end of the city. The union boycott was extended to the branch house.

The boycott has worked havoc on the neighborhood house. It has been functioning in the red ever since it was opened, due to the refusal of union men and members of their families to patronize it, with the result that Franklin & Herschorn have been making overtures to the union, with a view to arranging a working contract.

Union labels assure you that the products are American-made. Increase employment in our own country by buying union-made goods.

Every cent spent for foreign-made products decreases the payrolls of American workers.

If higher wages mean greater purchasing power, then higher union wages mean greater organized purchasing power, and that spells prosperity for everybody. Look for the Union Label!

The Public Power League

Naming of members of the public power commission is creating quite a stir in this city. There are some who think the public power commission should represent the city and the people therein. Unlike Mussolini or Hitler, these places of trust are not to be grabbed off by persons opportunely located within grabbing reach. There will be the expenditure of millions of dollars for the employment of labor which will be directed by the members of this power commission. Naturally, labor will be interested in the manner in which these wages are set, how they are paid and under what conditions they are earned. For that reason, labor contends that to induce harmony, to insure justice to the wage-earners, and to allow representation for the largest single group of people who will expect to benefit by the public ownership system, a representative from labor should be named.

Labor is not requesting the Public Power league to grant this privilege. The league has no more right to name this commission than labor has to name it. The attitude of the president of the Public Power league indicates that he believes that he has received another call to duty, and that he and the few master minds about him constitute an all-wise entity that knows all that is best for the community at large. This holier-than-thou attitude makes one inquire, "Upon what meat hath this our Caesar fed that he hath grown so great."

What Next!

With no roasts or steaks in sight, customers at the first unit of a new chain of food stores select their meats from photographic reproductions on the wall back of the counter, guided by price lists on the counter. Purchases come fresh from the refrigerator at the rear of the store. Upholstered stools are provided for the comfort of the customer.

Cardui gave me strength, stopped the nervousness and helped me in every way." . . . Cardui may be just what you need. It can't do you any harm, so why not try it? Prison-Made Goods

(Editorial from Knoxville Journal, March 19, 1935.)

"Hundreds if not thousands of manufacturers in the United States are said to be facing liquidation and their employes idleness on account of the competition of prison-made goods. Manufacturers must by law pay NRA code wages, and cannot meet markets made by prison industries that have no wages to pay.

The industries of Tennessee are asking the legislature, as twenty-seven other states have already done and thirteen more now considering, to remove prison-made goods from sale on the open market in competition with private industry, and confine sales of prison-made goods to tax-supported institutions, whereby the state, private industry, free and paid workers and the taxpayers will benefit.

Tax supported institutions throughout the state buy the identical articles and supplies now being produced by Tennessee prison labor, paying therefor the manufacturers, jobbers and retailers' profit when they could be obtained from a large prison industry, supported by taxpayers, that has none of the overhead and wages that private industry must meet. The taxpayers are the ones who suffer and the prison contractor, who in Tennessee has only an oral arrangement to take the prison output, is the one benefitting at the expense of the state, private industry, labor and the taxpayer.

Tennessee is one of the few states that have not corrected this old evil by the adoption of the state's use plan. Unless Tennessee takes the forward step that many other states have, it will be one of the few states left in which convict-made goods can be dumped, thereby closing the markets to Tennessee prison-made goods and will be the dumping ground for other states, relegating Tennessee convicts to complete idleness, stopping all revenue to the state from prison industry, crippling Tennessee industries and throwing thousands out of work and on to relief rolls.

The convict system will never be solved by the state protectin gspecial interests. The taxpayers should have the benefit of prison labor and not private interests seeking personal gain or others seeking political advancement.

There really appears to be no issue to this public question, but merely a will to break away from an old political evil that is almost tradition in Tennessee.

Taxpayers are no longer the lambs, but the leaders in governmental economy.

UNION LABEL IS KEY TO PROSPERITY

By I. M. ORNBURN
Secretary-Treasurer, Union Label Trades Department.

During those trying days of the Civil war, when politicians, army generals and greedy business lobbyists were as numerous in the nation's capital as they are today, Lincoln finally had to take full charge of the critical situation, brush them all aside, and declare that the only test of every measure was, "Will it win the war?" The idea of the great emancipator applies to our present-day economic "war." The supreme test of every proposed remedy should be, "Will it put men to work?"

By putting men to work, purchasing power will be increased and only through mass buying power of the people can our nation pull itself out of this disastrous depression. If a larger number receiving wages means greater purchasing power, then a larger number receiving union wages means still greater purchasing power. Union wages will quicken recovery, and bring permanent prosperity to every citizen.

But even prevailing union wages will not bring better times if they are spent for foreign-made goods. Can there be anything so ridiculous as to send American dollars abroad for unfair products while millions of American workers are walking the streets in search of work? We are thus paying a bounty to Europeans and Asiatics to increase our own breadlines.

The best guarantee that products are not only made under union conditions, but also in America, is the Union Label. Even the NRA allows importers to display the Blue Eagle on foreign goods. Consequently, there is no substitute for the Union Label, shop cards and buttons. Demand them! Ask them, also, to buy both American and union-made goods. They are manufactured by skilled workers at decent wages and under the most sanitary conditions.

Purchasing power is the door at which opportunity is knocking. The Union Label is the key to this door of prosperity!

Shocking Language.

A sponster was shocked at the language used by workmen repairing telegraph lines near her home. She wrote to the company and the foreman was asked to report. This he did as follows: 'Me and Bill Wright were on this job. I was up the pole and accidentally let the hot lead fall down Bill's neck. Bill looked up and said, 'You really must be more careful, 'Arry.'" — The Hercules Mixer.

HOSIERY BRIEFS

There has been a most encouraging pick-up in the activities of the branches of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in this area during the last couple of weeks, reports Representatives Walter Bramley and Frank Ward.

A number of new members have been taken in from several shops, including the United Hosiery mills and the McAllester shop, which has been completely reorganized. A considerable number of reinstatements have been noted also.

Recreational activities are being undertaken by the members of the United shop which should encourage similar activities in other mills.

The United shop has organized two baseball teams. One for girls and another for boys, and both teams have been admitted to the City league.

A play entitled "Heart Exchange," is being rehearsed by the group and will be staged at an early date.

The appointment of William Frazier, leader of the Richmond strikers, in Rossville, to the district organizing staff has made possible the extension of local activities. Organizer Frazier is popular with the membership and he is doing much to revive the unionization drive in several outlying sections which were necessarily somewhat neglected during the recent strike.

Representative Bramley reports that he attended an excellent union revival meeting in Lenoir City a week ago and finds the branch there adding new members. Plans are being made in Lenoir City for an open air demonstration shortly.

A class in labor problems is being formed in Soddy, Tenn., which will be led by the Reverend DeJarnette and Organizer Tom Upton.

Missionary work is being done in Niota and Cleveland, Tenn., and several other hosiery mill centers.

EDUCATION LEADS TO UNIONIZATION

By JOHN H. CRUMP

Quite a bit has been said in letters to the daily newspapers on both sides of the strike question and the organization of mill workers, and, while I do not like to enter into an argument on which it might be said I have a prejudiced opinion, I cannot sit idly by and see statements made which experience has proven to be wrong.

I refer mainly to a statement recently made in which the writer said mill workers should not be organized because they are an uneducated class of people; that organization could not do them any good, would lead to strikes and strife because their ignorance lets them be easily swayed by silver-tongued orators.

It is the uneducated class of workers which need organization most, so that they may awaken to the fact they are being exploited by the manufacturers. Families of uneducated mill workers remain uneducated mill workers for generation after generation. Why? Because the children are sent to the mills to work as soon as they are large enough to help the family eke out a meagre existence. The wages of the father, and in many instances the mother also, are so low that the few dollars the children can earn are necessary to help support the family.

Thorough unionization of a class which has never before been unionized is a slow process, as is any other evolution of civilization. It cannot be accomplished in a day, or a month, or a year. History of organized labor bears this out. The reason? Because employers as a whole so strongly fight the progress of organized labor.

Look at the areas where mill workers have been organized for years and see what you find. You find the father earning enough to support his family; you find the children going to school; you find them enjoying a few more of the conveniences of life (which used to be called luxuries) than the unorganized workers. Where organization has been for years you find the workers take more interest in their surroundings. They are more intelligent because they have been taught to think for themselves. Even so, there is plenty of room for progress, and what little progress they are making will continue to be slow until most all mill workers are organized and in a position to help themselves.

The children of the uneducated workers will grow up to be uneducated workers themselves, unless their parents are given a chance, through increased earnings, to keep them in school. It is not fair to the American children for the mill owners to cheat them by paying their parents low wages. The only way for the mill workers to give their children the chance in life which is rightly theirs lies through organization. Seldom, if ever, do mill owners voluntarily raise the wages of their unorganized employes. Occasionally you will hear of a "voluntary" raise; if investigated you will find it to be a defensive move on the part of the employer in an effort to forestall organization.

If the ignorance of mill workers allows them to be easily swayed by smooth-tongued orators, that is just another reason they should be organized. For every orator labor produces the manufacturers can dig up ten more to argue on the other side. If for no other reason, mill workers should be organized and taught to think for themselves and not be led by hirelings of industry.

It cannot be denied that strikes follow organiztion—the employers see to that. The employers welcome a strike among newly-organized workers, believing that workers who have just become unionized can be easily starved into submission. When a group has been organized long enough to develop capable leaders the employers dread a strike for they know the workers will fight for justice under the leadership of capable men in whom they have confidence.

We hear of mill workers making high wages, higher wages than workers in other lines. Labor does not attempt to deny there are some highly paid mill workers, just as there are some highly paid workers in other lines. What labor does prove is that the vast majority of mill workers make considerably less than other workers. We hear of mill workers making from $30 to $40 a week; that this is a rare exception is proven by A. F. of L. figures showing the average wage of mill workers a few months ago was less than $10 a week. If the average is $10 or less, and the wage ranges up to $40, then there must be about 90 per cent making less than $10.

Should the workers be blamed if they grow tired of such injustice and organize for their own protection? Should they be blamed if they fight to keep other workers from taking their jobs away from them? They are more to be congratulated for standing up for their rights and a chance to make decent, upright and intelligent citizens of their children. This they cannot do as long as the mill owners hold their wages down to a mere existence.

Capital demands a fair, and in many instances a huge, return on its investment. The worker has only his labor and his life to invest in industry; shouldn't he be entitled to a fair return on his investment, a return which will give him a chance to prepare for the time when he can no longer be of any service to industry? Capital can work forever, keep right on earnings its profits; but labor gets old and worn-out, loses its efficiency—and capital discards it.

Alert labor leaders keep watch on business trends, and when the cost of living goes up demand and receive a corresponding equalization of wages. The unorganized worker must depend on his own individual plea to his employer, and in most cases the employer turns a deaf ear to such pleas.

A recent news item quotes Secretary Wallace as saying food prices will advance 11 per cent over last year's level, with meat prices possibly going up 32 per cent. Will the employers of unorganized labor pay any attention to that? Sure-thing gamblers will give you odds that they won't. But the leaders of organized labor will be on the job and see that their members get raises corcosts.

The only way the poorly paid responding to the increase in living worker can ever get justice for himself and a chance to make a American citizens of his children to stand up and fight with his fellow workers against the tyrannical practices of capital.

NEW YORK ACT TO REGULATE HOMEWORK IS HAILED AS BLOW AT PARASITIC EXPLOITATION

Albany, N. Y.—Passage of the Esquirol-Neustein bill providing for state-wide regulation of industrial homework and signing of the bill by Gov. Lehman, was hailed by Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews as a historic step in the liberation of women and children from parasitic exploitation.

The law becomes effective immediately. At the direction of Commissioner Andrews, the division of women in industry and minimum wage of the state department of labor will proceed at once to draft rules of procedure for the regulation of industrial homework throughout the state, whether performed in tenements or in one or two-family dwellings. Work performed in one and two-family dwellings has hitherto been exempt when these dwellings were located in cities of more than 200,000 population. Investigations have shown that probably a majority of the industrial homework performed in New York state has been in exempt houses. The Esquirol-Neustein law provides that all homework contractors shall be licensed, that industrial homeworkers shall be required to obtain certificates and that houses in which industrial homework is performed shall be listed.

The industrial commissioner is empowered to make investigations and decide in which industries homework is necessary, socially and economically permissible, and under what conditions it may be done.

Commissioner Andrews, in commenting on the enactment of the Esquirol-Neustein law, said:

"The new law provides that rules shall be made to assure industrial homeworkers reasonable protection in such matters as wages and hours of work per week. Such rules and regulations are now being drafted and will be put into effect at the earliest possible date."

Statistics submitted by industrial homework contractors at NRA hearings indicate that there are more than 1,000,000 industrial homeworkers in the United States. Although exact figures as to the number of such workers in New York state are not available because there has been no all-inclusive state-wide regulation, it is estimated that at least 30,000, mostly women and children, will be affected by the Esquirol-Neustein bill.

Every dollar you spend for Union Label goods and services is a vote for better union conditions.

Black-Draught Good For Biliousness and Bad Taste in Mouth

"I have found Thedford's Black-Draught so good for biliousness, bad taste in the mouth and other disagreeable feelings due to constipation," writes Mrs. Mary Garner, of Burleson, Texas. "My mother used it for a number of years and we do not think there is a better medicine. I was pleased when I saw Syrup of Black-Draught advertised. I sent for it and gave it to my children (as a laxative) for colds and when they felt bad. Soon they felt fine." . . . Thedford's Black-Draught for the grown folks—and Syrup of Black-Draught for the children.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

A plan to take the profits out of war has been laid before the munitions committee of the United States senate which at least grapples boldly with this thorny subject, instead of doing an egg dance around it. It offers twelve proposals to be put into effect immediately on the declaration of war. The following seem to be the more important of these proposals:

1. Take 50 per cent of the first 6 per cent profits of corporations, and 100 per cent of all over that in excess profits.
2. Limit all individual incomes to $10,000, and take all over that in income taxes.
3. Check numerous known methods of defeating income tax levies.
4. Publicity for all salaries immediately upon declaration of war.
5. Commandeering of all essential industries and services.

The plan was drawn by John T. Flynn, one of the foremost and most forceful writers on economics, and head of the research division of the senate committee. It is marked by Mr. Flynn's usual wide range of knowledge and brutal directness of attack. But more important than even these qualities in the writer is the fact that a majority of the munitions committee seems ready to embody most of these proposals in a bill to be laid before the senate by April 1.

To say that the Flynn proposals will wring cries of anguish out of those American corporation magnates who piled up profits running above 100 per cent a year in the last war is putting it mildly. But Senator Nye of North Dakota, head of the committee, says that the law to be presented will go farther still. It will present:

"A plan dealing with profits in war supplies in time of peace, which, in the opinion of the committee, is even more important than even taking the profits out of war after war has started."

These old and far-reaching plans are well worth while, and the chances are increasing that they will be followed by drastic action. But why wait for a war to make some of the proposed reforms? One proposal is to "check numerous known methods of defeating income tax levies." If methods of tax evasion are known—as every well informed person believes—why not check them now?

The senate munitions inquiry, with its startling revelations of the part played by arms makers in fomenting war, seems to have started what is likely to become a world-wide investigation. Largely as a result of the interest created by the American investigation, Great Britain has launched an inquiry into the private manufacture of arms to be conducted by a royal commission of seven. Unfortunately, British labor is not represented on the commission but it is composed of outstanding men and may be expected to shed much light on the munitions industry.

A strong demand for a similar investigation has been made in the French Chamber of Deputies. France is a center of the international armament ring, and a searching investigation there should reveal many secrets of the "merchants of death."

War Profit Slow To Reach Labor, Flynn Declares

Big Corporations Gave Fat Gains to High Officials Before Workers Benefited, Senate Committee Is Told.

Washington, D. C., March 29.—Big corporations began distributing profits of the world war to their higher officers and other "insiders" before giving any to labor, John T. Flynn, noted economist and financial writer, charged in testimony before the senate committee investigating the munitions industry.

Flynn said salaries of top officials of big corporations profiting from the war began increasing as soon as the conflict started in 1914 and that not until 1916 and 1917 was there any appreciable increase in wages.

'It is an interesting thing also," he said, "that the huge salary increases did not take place among the lower officers."

Citing as an instance the American Rolling Mills company, he said the salary of the president increased from $16,000 to $86,000 a year between 1915 and 1917, "while the salary of the chief engineer was going down."

Flynn named the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company and the International Harvester company as examples of corporations which gave high officials war time salary increases many months before labor benefited.

International Harvester, he said, increased wages of common labor from 20 to 28 cents an hour between 1913 and 1917, while the pay of the general manager jumped from $43,000 to $117,500 a year.

American Rolling mills increased the pay of common labor from 18 cents an hour in 1914 to 24 cents in 1916, while the company president's pay was advanced from $16,000 a year to $86,000.

Goodyear, Flynn testified, increased the pay of common labor from 20 cents an hour to 36 cents, or 80 per cent, between 1914 and 1917, while the pay of the managing official climbed from $12,000 in 1914 to $75,000 in 1917, "or about 600 per cent."

At the same time, he added, the company built up a surplus which grew from $1,800,000 in 1915 to $5,900,000 in 1916, to $8,000,000 in 1917, to $12,000,000 in 1918.

"It got up as high as $22,000,000," Mr. Flynn said, 'then disappeared."

He did not explain when or how it "disappeared."

"This reserve never did pay taxes, did it?" Senator Vandenberg asked.

Flynn said he had no record of it.

Garrison Sees Labor Chief Bulwark Against Communism

Washington, D. C., March 29.—Organized labor is the chief bulwark in the United States against communism, Lloyd K. Garrison, chairman of the former National Labor Board, said in testimony before the Senate Education and Labor committee.

Garrison endorsed the Wagner labor relations bill.

"I think those employers who are out to strangle organized labor are simply playing into the hands of extremists," he said.

"This will put a stop to the destructive anti-union tactics which have long flourished in this country, particularly in the large industries.

"It is absolutely essential that the level of wages should be increased if the mass of consumers are to have the necessary purchasing power to keep industry going.

"Legislation can fix bare minimums for wages, but over and above that it is essential to have collective bargaining between organized labor and organized government.

"In no other way will the wage structure be maintained at the proper level.

"The economic power of the employers, particularly in the large industries, completely overshadows the economic power of the workers unless the latter are organized."

Garrison said he considered it desirable to legislate all company union out of existence, whether or not they were organized and dominated by employers. He declared Section 7-A of the NIRA "cannot now be enforced except in a handful of cases.

"Unless this bill can be passed," he said, "I doubt if 7-A should be retained at all.

"It is worse to have a law holding out false hopes than no law at all."

the public school system.

Medical science will decay if the present trends are permitted to continue.

Doctors will become the servants of the leisure class, whose principal occupations is to have ailments. The only doctors who will be able to make a decent living will be those who happen to find favor with the wealthy. In 1929 one-third of all the private practitioners of the United States have incomes of less than $2,500 annually. Half of the doctor's income goes to overhead. Probably half of the doctors in America today are poverty-stricken and are living on less than an adequate health and decency budget.

The idea of socialized medicine is of course not new. Governmental regulations require many socialized medical services. Today more than half of general hospital care is provided by public funds, one way or another. Opposition to socialized medicine, we charge, is largely the result of intimidatory tactics practised on the poorer members of the profession by the older medicos whose livelihood is dependent on fees from the wealthy.

A true interpretation of medical ethics requires the doctor to treat rich and poor alike. This is impossible as things are today. Medical associations are dominated by specialists whose point of view is colored by the prejudices of reactionary, conservative elements in society. The large mass of the profession dares not speak out in favor of public medicine for fear of what amounts to a professional blacklist.

The government must step in and tell the old fogies in the American Medical association that they will be regarded as high-class racketeers if they do not permit freedom of action among doctors on questions that are not actually technical in nature.

As an interim measure, we must have a system of health insurance as recommended by the president's committee on economic security. Organized labor is opposed to employees' contributions to social insurance funds, but some of us might be disposed to compromise on this point for health insurance systems which would be supplementary to the general social insurance system which will be enacted this year.

Go to Your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of unior meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

MORE ABOUT UNION PLANT

this method did not accomplish the desired end, then the present capitalistic system would collapse.

"There is a further—and more selfish—reason as to why we took the step which we did in co-operating with the organization of our plants. We felt that if the present economic system was to continue, it was inevitable that in the future there should be the organization of labor, and that real collective bargaining would eventually be made effective. We were familiar with the experiences in England and we know that trade unions had been successful there.

Labor Found Co-operative.

"We also knew that industry had not become socialistic or destroyed by that movement. It seemed to us, therefore, that with the more complete organization of labor an inevitable fact, it would be to the benefit of our company to be one of the first companies to take the step and join in this movement. In this way we hoped to gain good will from the labor people and to be of some assistance to them in bringing about the organization of labor generally.

"Now, what has been the result of our operations under labor conditions? We have found that the labor organizations have been at all times reasonable and helpful; that they have made every attempt to understand our point of view and in dozens of instances when there have been demands of various kinds, we have either been able to meet these demands by a reasonable explanation as to why certain things could not be done, or we have met the demands and have found that it has bettered the conditions not only of labor, but of our company. Our experience convinces us that there is no reason why any employer could not operate under union conditions.

"With these facts, it is our sincere belief that a provision in the law such as that contained in the proposed Wagner bill will facilitate the organization of labor, to the ultimate benefit not only of the workers, but also of industry itself."

Dealing With Union Works.

"Our policy of industrial management has proven successful," he said. "We know of no better plan for the working out of our industrial problems than that of the American Federation of Labor, which organization offers to the employer a system of collective bargaining. Many people have a wrong conception of the importance and purposes of the organized labor movement. Many of them feel that it creates class hatred; that it fosters strikes; that it refuses to treat fairly with the employer and endeavors only to gain its ends through force and coercion. This, I feel, is untrue. My experience in dealing with organized labor proves to me that it is a force for good. I have found that, on the whole, trade unions are organizations of peace and functioning in relation with employers are the best agencies for industrial peace and for the well-being of the human race.

Strictly Business Relationship.

"We feel that the relationship between our employes and ourselves is strictly a business one. We cannot be secretive in our dealings with our employes. Subterfuge, patronage and even charity accomplishes nothing. We assume that every employe in our plant is a potential business man, and a leader, and that it is no more than good business to develop every man for leadership. This is impossible, however, unless employes be taken into utmost confidence, and be treated as fellow business men. Such action on the part of the employer is appreciated by the worker, as well as everything else that is done for him.

"Our belief in the principles of the American Federation of Labor and the Tobacco Workers' International union has, in our opinion, been one of the largest contributing factors to the success of our company, and we, therefore, without hestitation, commend such to plan to other employers."

eration of Hosiery Workers.

"In the Davenport Hosiery mill in this city, employees have in recent weeks found on their machines copies of the Hosiery Examiner, the organ of the 'company union' movement in the hosiery industry, published in Reading, Pa.," Bramley said. "Who pays for distributing this anti-union rag in Chattanooga?" Bramley asked. "When we distribute our union paper, or any other union literature, the whole world knows who puts it out. The Davenport Hosiery mills is unquestionably paying to circulate anti-union propaganda and is attempting to camouflage its part in this business. Passage of the Wagner-Connery bill would enable us to have the National Labor Relations board bring in this company to testify under oath how scurrilous company union literature from Reading, Pa., comes to be strewn around the mills in Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Organized labor must see to it that legislation is enacted which will enable the administration to combat the vicious tactics of employers in forming puppet unions to undermine bona fide labor organizations and prevent real collective bargaining from taking place between employer and employee," Bramley declared.

Terming the Wagner-Connery labor disputes bill to be of the same importance as was the defeat of Judge Parker's nomination to the supreme court, Central Body advised every craft to immediately inform Tennessee's two senators and the congressman from this district that they must support the measure.

Section 7-A has always been an inanimate object in the NIRA set-up, it was pointed out by various speakers for the Wagner bill in the last session of Central Body, held Monday night, March 25. The new disputes bill will give 7-A some teeth and will provide a means of defense against the iniquitous company union which is even now doing much damage to the working man of Chattanooga in his efforts to organize for better living conditions.

Pointing out that even senators and congressmen own stock in company-unionized plants, delegates expressed increased determination to make labor's wishes clearly known to the congressional representatives.

Letter to Senator Bachman, copies of which were also mailed to Senator McKellar and Congressman McReynolds, follows:

March 27, 1935.

Hon. Nathan L. Bachman,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Senator:

Labor of Tennessee is looking to you to lend your active support toward the passage of the Wagner-Connery labor disputes bill. We seek the passage of this bill with as much energy and interest as we evidenced in defeating Judge Parker's appointment to the supreme bench.

Please inform us how you stand on this question.

Yours very truly,
T. R. CUTHBERT,
Secretary.

ACCORD SEEN IN NEW ACTION BY POWER LEAGUE

Directors Overrule Plans of "Inner Circle."

STANTON E. SMITH PICKED FOR POST

Suggested as Labor Representative on Proposed Commission.

Meetings of the board of directors of the Public Power league Thursday brought apparent accord in a dispute which has raged "hot and heavy" for several days, following action by "a little group of wilful men" within the league who arrogated to themselves the duty of naming the members of the power commission to be created by the state legislature in the bill now pending before the state lawmakers.

The group referred to, apparently a sort of "inner circle," had selected the personnel of the proposed commission without consultation with other members of the league, including labor representatives, and a "howl" was immediately raised by the latter. Consultation with the president of the league, Rev. T. B. Cowan, a local minister, failed to bring any results, and Chattanooga Trades and Labor council appealed to the Hamilton county legislative delegation to include a labor representative in the list, suggesting W. P. Bales, F. T. Carter or W. E. Eckenrod.

When it became apparent, through subsequent negotiations, that neither of these gentlemen would be satisfactory to certain interests, the name of Prof. Stanton E. Smith, president of Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, was proposed, and it is thought the substitution of Mr. Smith will prove satisfactory to Central Body membership.

While Mr. Smith's trade union activities cover but a comparatively short period of time, he has indicated a keen interest in the movement, and has been unusually successful at the helm of the teachers' organization since its formation some two years ago. He has also evidenced an unusual insight into governmental affairs, and was an ardent and valuable supporter of public power during the recent campaign as well as prior to that time.

Although it appears the present proposed set-up will not be satisfactory to other interests, it was believed the naming of Prof. Smith will remove the bitterness engendered by action of the "committee" which assumed the right to name the entire commission without reference to labor, so far as labor is concerned.

Colt Arms Firm Clouts Labor Board's Order

Hartford, Conn.—S. M. Stone, president of the Colt Patent Fire Arms company, informed the national labor relations board that the company refused to comply with the board's order to adhere to Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act by bargaining collectively with its employes. The board had threatened to withdraw the Blue Eagle if its ruling was not obeyed. The company justified its action on the ground that the national recovery act is unconstitutional.

Over 1,000 employes of the Colt concern struck because of its alleged refusal to recognize the shop joint council, representing the unions, as the exclusive bargaining agency for the employes.

Church Leaders Back Wagner Labor Bill

Collective Bargaining Held Necessary for Workers—Majority Rule Approved — Wage Increases and Hours Cut Are Essential to Provide Buying Power for Masses and Jobs for Millions of Idle.

Washington.—A strong indorsement of the Wagner labor relations bill was presented to the senate committee on education and labor by three outstanding leaders of the social and welfare departments of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths.

The views were set forth in a joint statement signed by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan, director of the department of social action of the National Catholic Welfare conference; Rabbi Sidney E. Goldstein, chairman of the social justice commission of the central conference of American Rabbis, and the Rev. James Myers, industrial secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

All three of the spokesmen declared that the welfare of labor in the United States and abroad had been advanced solely through its effective organization and its power to bargain collectively with employers. On this subject Msgr. Ryan said:

"With practical unanimity the economic historians and the economists have for many years held that labor organization is necessary for the workers. The argument is very simple: The individual wage-earner does not possess equal bargaining power with the individual employer; in order to obtain a reasonable measure of such equality he must combine with his fellows and act as one moral person in the bargaining process."

Msgr. Ryan also favored majority rule in collective bargaining. He pointed out that representatives of the bona fide labor unions will not accept either communists or company union members as fellow negotiators, adding: "Therefore the only practical solution is to let the representatives who have been elected by the majority of the employes in any plant or industry carry on the bargaining process for the whole group."

Strong Labor Boards.

While making it clear that the Federal Council of Churches had taken no position on the Wagner bill as such, Rev. Myers pointed to statements by the executive committee which support the basic principles involved. He cited a recent resolution of the committee specifically calling for "the strengthening of the authority and effectiveness of impartial national and regional labor boards."

He also directed attention to a declaration of the council which declared that "competent workers" of all races and nationalities should be found in labor unions.

Hours Reduction Necessary.

In behalf of his organization, Rabbi Goldstein declared:

"In this economic crisis it is more necessary than ever to protect and preserve the rights of labor to organize and to direct its own destiny. It is only through a decrease in hours and an increase in income that the workers can assure themselves even a reasonable amount of employment and a decent standard of living.

"With 12,000,000 men and women still out of work, full-time labor must insist upon a reduction in the weekly hours of work. With the annual income of the great mass of the working classes far below a normal level, it is impossible to escape from this morass of misery. There can be no recovery from the economic collapse until the working classes recover their purchasing power."

NATIONAL MARKET DECLARED UNFAIR BY CENTRAL BODY

National Market, a chain meat concern operating a store at 605 Market street, was declared "unfair to organized labor" this week, following unsuccessful efforts by Central Body executive board to prevail upon the local manager to live up to a contract signed some time ago with the Meatcutters' union, it was announced Thursday.

It was said the company had agreed, with a great majority of local ment markets, to employment of members of Local 600 exclusively, and had failed to live up to the signed agreement. Local manager, it was reported, declined flatly to adjust the matter in dispute, and the action was taken by executive board upon direction of Central Body.

Union, Employers, Press for Change In Cigarette Tax

Present Federal Imposts Menace Dime Cigarettes, Brown & Williamson Corporation and Axton Fisher Co. Declare.

"The 10-cent cigarette is threatened by the present inequitable tax," said the statement issued by the two manufacturers, "and it is to the interest of the manufacturers and the employes alike that there be a revision of the tax provision so that taxes may rest upon a sound principle, rather than upon an unsound and unjust idea.

"Because manufacturers and employes have a distinct mutuality of interest, they have joined in a united endeavor to bring about devision, so that the tax on cigarettes may be in proportion to price, rather than a tax on bulk. The soundness of our case is demonstrated by the fact that the United States treasury favors the revision which we jointly seek.

"The 10-cent cigarette is needed. It is the cigarette of the wage-earning masses. It should bear a fair tax, but it cannot live under the present unfair tax. The workers employed in its manufacture have invited this joint participation in a fair and honorable effort to secure revision of the tax. The employers are glad to join in this co-operative effort and they announce their acceptance publicly, so that there may be complete understanding of their position. This joint effort is, among other things, a demonstration of the value of right relations in industry. With the unions we ask the support of all fair-minded men and women in this just effort."

COL. WOOD AXTON DIES SUDDENLY

Friday morning's Associated Press dispatches carried a brief notice of the passing Thursday of Col. Wood F. Axton, president of the Axton-Fisher Tobacco company, at his home near Louisville. Mr. Axton was the victim of a heart attack. He was 63 years old.

The Axton-Fisher company is one of the largest manufacturers of cigarettes and smoking tobacco in the world, and has operated as a 100 per cent union shop for many years. Col. Axton, as its directing head, was known as one of the most progressive employers in America, and battled unceasingly over a long period for the rights of his thousands of employes, as well as workers in other lines. He had gained nation-wide prominence through his consistently fair labor policies, and although accumulating millions for himself, had shared generously the profits of his company with those who helped to make them possible.

The passing of Col. Axton is a blow to labor's cause, and workers throughout the land will mourn his sudden demise.

Louisville, Ky., April 4.—A joint labor-employer campaign to protect a unionized industry was announced here through the publicity department of the Tobacco Workers' International union. The Axton Fisher company and the Brown & Williamson Tobacco corporation, manufacturers of union-made cigarettes and tobacco products, jointly announced their participation, with the unions in the industry, in an effort to secure revision of the tax on cigarettes. The unions are the Tobacco Workers' International union and the Cigar Makers' International union, which operate jointly through the Allied Tobacco Trades council.

Coffin Company Tries To Fill Strikers' Places With Strikebreakers

Efforts of the management of Tennessee Coffin and Casket company to secure strikebreakers to replace employes who struck Monday morning of this week for the right of organization and representation through committees of their own choosing, featured the past two days, according to officials of the union, with little success reported.

Some time ago, it was said, coffin company employes formed a local union affiliated with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and a proposed working agreement was presented to the management. Officials of the local union declared that the company representatives agreed that they would take up grievances of "individuals" at any time, but declined to deal with their employes collectively.

Report that the employes had demanded a closed shop was strenuously denied by spokesmen for the strikers, but it was admitted that a wage increase was requested, together with the right to bargain collectively through their own representatives.

It was recalled that two cases involving the discharge of employes of the coffin company were recently taken before the labor board in Atlanta, and although the employes were unable to prove their contention that these men were discharged for union activities, they still maintain that such was the case.

Spokesmen for the strikers said the employes would remain on strike until they are accorded the right to speak for themselves without influence or coercion on the part of company officials.

Members of Branch 99, Hosiery Workers, are planning a benefit dance, with lunch, to be staged at the Rossville arena Saturday night, April 13, proceeds to go to unemployed members of the local. The festivities, it is announced, will begin promptly at 7:30. Admission will be 25 cents per person, and tickets may be had from any member of the local.

Textile Workers Given 25 Per Cent Pay Slash

NIRB Order Reduces Work Week to Thirty Hours Because of Overproduction — Union Officials Protest Cut.

Washington, April 4.—Because of the alleged crisis in the cotton textile industry caused by overproduction the national industrial recovery board issued an order authorizing some branches of the industry to reduce hours of machine operations not more than 25 per cent and to reduce by not more than 25 per cent the machines operating in these groups. The workers affected will go from the 40-hour week to not less than 30 hours. The hours cut is effective for twelve weeks.

It was stated that there is abnormally restricted demand for cotton products because of high prices made necessary by doubling the cost of raw cotton, adding the cotton compressing tax, and increases in a number of other elements in the price structure.

The hours curtailment was condemned by Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, and Vice-President Francis Gorman. In a joint statement these officials pointed out the real meaning of the order is that the textile workers are given the 30-hour week with a 25 per cent pay cut, which will bring their wages in the south down to $8 a week.

"If that is justice to the textile workers, we ask the NIRB to explain it," the statement said. "Once again labor is penalized for having been too efficient and productive, while an industry that is altogether heartless in its dealing with labor refuses to set forth any program to prevent these periods of recurring curtailment and wage slashing."

In criticizing the reasons given for the hours cut the textile union officials declared:

"We are told curtailment is needed because of 'inadequate consumer demand,' so that if the public doesn't buy enough we must quit our jobs. The mills say they cannot maintain the increased wage scales unless they can shut down a part of their operations to stop production. That looks to us like inverted economies. The whole thing is crazy quilt."

Roosevelt Will Rule Big Work Relief Fund

Washington, April 4.—It was announced by the White House that President Roosevelt would superintend spending the $4,800,000,000 work relief fund appropriated by congress. Reports had previously been published that Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, would have charge of relief operations. The reports occasioned considerable unrest among congressmen, a number of whom have acquired a dislike for some of Mr. Hopkins' methods.

The White House spokesman also stated that Mr. Roosevelt would be chairman of the allotment committee, which will determine the specific projects undertaken in the broad groups of public works set forth in the act. It was added that field marshals in carrying the works program into effect would include Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior; Rexford G. Tugwell, under-secretary of agriculture, and Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, director of the procurement division of the treasury.

Fight to Pass Child Labor Amendment Will Go Forward

Washington, April 4.—Fight for the child labor amendment will go forward, Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the children's bureau, said here.

Hope for passage of the amendment this year was eliminated when the Connecticut legislature voted adversely.

However, Miss Lenroot pointed out, four states have approved the amendment this year. During the same time sixteen states rejected the amendment.

Ratifications of the amendment total 24 with 36 necessary to add it to the constitution.

PREFERS "CLUB" TO LEGITIMATE LOCAL

Secretary Says Walkout and "Stayout" Is 100 Per Cent Effective.

Management of the Dayton Veneer and Lumber mills, where a strike of employes has been in effect for the past three weeks, does not, according to reports, think much of the American Federation of Labor, and was under the impression his employes wanted to organize a "shoulder-to-shoulder" club, which rather indefinite and vague proposition might be acceptable, it was indicated.

Employes of the company walked out, according to a letter from John R. Wilson, financial secretary, to forestall a wage cut, and, Mr. Wilson comments, the "walkout was 100 per cent and the stayout is 100 per cent."

Mr. Wilson's letter, received by The Labor World Thursday, gives a clear picture of the situation at the Dayton plant, from the start to date, and is given below for the information of local trades unionists:

> I have been requested by several unionists in your city to acquaint the public with the facts as regards the strike at the plant of the Dayton Veneer and Lumber mills. This firm is engaged in the manufacture of shipping baskets, berry crates and hampers. They were also engaged in the manufacture of lumber but sometime ago ceased this operation and dismantled and stored the sawmill.
> Prior to their subscribing to the NRA and going under the code the prevailing wage at this plant was 10 cents per hour, with a few of the more skilled jobs paying up to 15 and 17 cents per hour. Since going under the code they have been paying 23 cents per hour.
> During the week ending March 16 it became rumored among the employes that the management was contemplating going off the code and putting a reduction of wages in effect on Monday, March 18. However, no notice of this intention was posted on the premises. I would say here that the rumor was started to the best of my knowledge by the superintendent of the plant. By Monday morning the rumor had persisted and grown so rapidly that the employes decided that before starting to work they had better find out about it, as previous to this on one occasion the same company had reduced wages without notifying the employes and some of them did not find it out until they missed the money in their pay envelopes, so they went in a body to the superintendent and were told that the rumor was a fact and were told very arrogantly to "take it or leave it" as it was immaterial with the company. When the men refused to work he went to the office and brought out the secretary of the company, who said that the manager was in Atlanta and that owing to the prices being quoted by their competitors it was impossible for the mill to run and pay the wages they were paying and asked them to work until the manager returned from Atlanta. The men then asked if they worked until the manager returned would they receive their present rate of pay and were told very bluntly that they would not, whereupon every man walked out. The walkout was 100 per cent and the "stay-out" has been 100 per cent.
> Before the manager returned the employes got in touch with some organizers in Chattanooga. They paid us a visit and told us about the workings of organized labor and told us to think it over and if we wished it they would return on the following Saturday and organize us into a union.

When Mrs. Ida Hege, of Edinburg, Ind., was in a painful, run-down condition, she took Cardui, with the results she describes below: "I had just been what one might say dragging around, feeling miserable and all out of sorts. I remembered how Cardui helped my aunt. I sent for six bottles of Cardui and when I had taken them, I was much better and stronger. I did not suffer so much pain. I continued taking Cardui until I had taken nine bottles. I do not have the severe pains." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

The First Half

The first half of the first Roosevelt administration closes on a record containing several splendid and unquestioned achievements, many partial successes, and a number of failures which will be final or not, according to what is done about them from now on.

The Civilian Conservation Camps are probably the least criticized of the Roosevelt works. They have given a vast army of boys and young men experience in useful work and habits of discipline and industry which these youths never could have secured for themselves under present conditions. They have stopped and turned back the epidemic of tramping which was one of the most dangerous and least recognized menaces of the depression.

The TVA, though still under court fire, has made such a success that only reactionaries like Judge Grubb, the Edison Institute and the NAM can question its value. It has lowered electric light rates over a vast area, set new standards in social and industrial planning, and cleared the way for other projects of the same sort in widely separated parts of the country.

The relief agencies, and the frank acceptance by the Federal government of responsibility to stop starvation, saved this country from collapse or revolution—perhaps from both. The breaking point of human endurance was perilously close when Uncle Sam "took over."

The insurance of bank deposits has ended the regime of bank failures. Other banking measures apparently make for stability, but have shown no gains in active service. Agricultural prices have been raised and the sudden threat of the drought was met with prompt aid; but full agricultural relief is still miles away.

Public works have started—all too slowly. Child labor has not been abolished, but it has been suspended during the life of the NIRA. The new commissions, Securities Exchange and Communications cannot yet be appraised, although, like the reorganized Power Commission, they seem to be working forward. Congress raised the flag of labor's rights and liberities in Section 7-A of the Recovery Act; and the employing oligarchy of Big Business is trying to tear down that flag in the courts.

Meanwhile—

Nearly 11,000,000 people are still out of work.

Payrolls total about 60 per cent of the 1926 total, according to the Research and Planning division of the NRA, while interest and dividends, by the same authority, are 150 per cent of the 1926 total.

Or, to put it another way, men and women who should be breadwinners for at least 35,000,000 people are still denied the right to work; wages of labor have dropped 40 per cent while wages of capital have climbed 50 per cent; and the captains of capital, with closed ranks and renewed hopes, are trying to win back their former complete mastery of the nation.

This brief and imperfect survey shows no reason for discouragement. It shows every reason for redoubled effort. And it shows, to borrow a phrase from U. S. Grant, that every gain the New Deal has made has been won "by the left flank, forward!"

Bankers and Railroad Financing

The proposed congressional investigation of railroad financing by bankers promises to reveal the remarkable extent to which our railroads have been made the tool of racketeering banking concerns to the detriment of the railroad properties, the general public and millions of railroad employes.

An illustration of this racketeering was told a senate committee by J. L. Kraus, a New York lawyer, who in 1932 represented a group which petitioned for a receivership of the St. Louis-San Francisco railroad.

Mr. Kraus testified that Speyer & Co., New York bankers for the Frisco, compelled that road to purchase in 1927 through a joint account 275,000 shares of the Rock Island railroad for speculative purposes, 92,000 shares going to the bankers. The block of stock was enough to corner the market. Speyer & Co. sold their 92,000 shares during the period when the price rose from $60 to $130 a share. Prior to this deal, Mr. Kraus said, Speyer & Co. had bought 11,000 shares and sold them at a 15-point profit on the day when the 275,000 share transaction was culminated.

Mr. Kraus stated that Speyer & Co. had its representative, E. N. Brown, made chairman of the Frisco's board, and intimated that Brown was the banking concern's agent for putting through the stock purchase deal, which was effected without the knowledge of President J. M. Kurn of the Frisco.

Later, when the Frisco secured control of the Rock Island, Mr. Kraus stated, Brown was made chairman of that road's executive committee at a salary of $50,000 per year. The job had paid no salary prior to Brown's taking it over.

People familiar with the railroad situation claim a Congressional investigation of railroad financing by our big bankers will reveal general racketeering of the sort described by Mr. Kraus. This nefarious practice has loaded the railroads up with so many bonds that it is difficult for them to pay their interest. This difficulty also leads them to demand higher rates, to the injury of the shipping and traveling public, and is the major force which motivates railroads to resist paying their employes decent wages and providing shorter hours without wage cuts. More than this, the railroads are menaced with bankruptcy.

Congress should authorize the investigation and go to the bottom of banker racketeering in railroad financing.

Fresh Air Schools

A commendable plan for giving school children in the overcrowded areas of London, England, an opportunity to grow up healthy and intelligent is being applied by the London County Council Education Committee in its policy for fresh air schools.

With a three million pound better education fund at its disposal the committee is developing a project for a combined playing field and open-air classroom in the outskirts of the world's metropolis. Early in the morning complete classes and teachers will leave the regular school buildings and do their work in the open-air classroom constructed along the lines of the standard park shelter. As a supplement to the usual school work the children will be encouraged to study bird and plant life.

The health of school children is likewise receiving special consideration. They will be weighed every six months until they are twelve years of age. Four nutritional centers are being constructed in the London area, to which children who do not reach the prescribed weight standard will be sent.

The committee has also adopted the progressive policy of reducing the size of classes. Official returns show that in London there are still 44 classes with over 50 children on the roll and 5,810 with between 40 and 50 out of a total of 14,300 classes. In addition to providing more efficient instruction for the children, the reduced size of the classes will give employment to a number of jobless teachers.

STOCKHOLDERS SCORE BONUS.

Springfield, Mass.—Angry stockholders at the annual meeting of the American Woolen company charged that company officials in 1934 paid themselves as much in bonuses as stockholders got in two preferred dividends. Lionel J. Noah, president of the company, admitted he had never visited all the mills of the company and had not visited a single mill in 1933 and 1934. His salary is $85,000 a year.

FREE EDUCATION FOR JOBLESS.

Philadelphia.—Free college education for unemployed youths was advocated in an address here by Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of education. He said that the 3,500,000 jobless youths between the ages of 18 and 25 are "social and economic dynamite."

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

In the interesting game of watching turns to the right and turns to the left, we seem to be at a point where the governmental path again turns back to the left, away from the previous swing toward conservatism, or toward business—you name it.

It is all most interesting and also it is all dictated by what seem to be the necessities of politics. But it would be more heartening to the masses of the people if there were a solid policy that didn't bend first one way and then the other. However, out of all of the turnings that have come up to this hour, labor's position is stronger than ever and its convictions are written more firmly into governmental policy.

Labor has been a pretty good diplomat, too.

Around the world the war drums are rolling. Sooner or later they will grow more commanding and then armies will go hammering toward each other. There doesn't seem to be any chance that war can be avoided. It all seems very foolish and worse than that. It seems very criminal. But there hasn't been very much refining of national nature or of human greeds since idealism was ground to pieces at Versailles. There has not been much change.

Versailles seems not only to have left things no better, but to actually have made some things a great deal worse. And so, all nations are rushing to gather strength. In a world that clamors for war like some crazy monster, for one to remain weak would be for one to invite annihilation without a struggle and nobody likes that. So each takes the position of being the one that must arm because the others do and, of a truth, all are in about the same dangerous boat.

Watchman, what of the night—it's an old cry. Change it a bit and ask the watchman what about the codes and NRA. A powerful cabal is organized to defeat NRA. About that there is no mistake. It probably will not come much into the open, but it is there and the dagger is unsheathed for dirty work in the dark. Those who want NRA to continue aren't very well organized for the job, thinking, perhaps, that it isn't necessary. If the big Wall Street gang is as strong as it thinks it is, then organized effort will be surely and sorely needed among those who want NRA in a decent form, to prevent a recurrence of jungle competition.

Mostly it seems that humanity staggers along, like a drunken man, escaping fatality by absurd antics which take it from under the wheels in the nick of time.

Today organized labor wields a more powerful influence in national affairs than ever. But the big money boys are ganging up to attack wages just the same. It is possible to be strong in one place, not so strong in another.

Labor needs to be strong in almost every place to check the drive against wage rates. Political influence probably will not be used against wage rates now, but economic influence, possessed by the same men who drained the nation prior to 1929, will act pretty much as a unit.

It is a time to build strongly. It is a time for new membership and for fast thinking—fast, but clear. If corporate wealth can now be set back on its haunches it will be a victory worth writing down in the book. It will affect the workers for the next decade.

Failure of the child labor amendment to secure a sufficient number of ratifications this year to make it a part of the United States constitution means that the fight for the amendment will have to go on for a year or two longer. Labor and other friends of the amendment are not going to abandon it, not by a long shot, and can be depended upon to press the fight until victory is won.

Approval of the amendment by only four states this year, while at least sixteen have rejected it, shows the need for further educational work on its behalf. Apparently foes of the measure have been able to fool a lot of legislators into believing the amendment is an undesirable thing, instead of the good thing that it is.

States that have refused to ratify the amendment will not succeed in permanently blocking it. In the end, the amendment will become a part of the constitution, to the benefit of the nation and those states that have opposed it will not have accomplished anything except to write themselves down as having tried in vain to stop progress.

TEXTILE WORKERS TO FIGHT BEDEAUX SYSTEM TO FINISH

...n to Throw Every Resource Into Battle Against "Stretch-Out" at Calloway Mills, Whose Head Is Declared Chosen to Lead Big Wage-Smashing Campaign.

...shington, April 4.—The United ...le Workers of America will fight ...ish to finish to prevent operation of ... Calloway mills in Georgia under ... Bedeaux system, it was made ... here by Francis J. Gorman, vice-...ident of the union, in charge of ...shington headquarters and leader ...e union's organizing campaign.

The union regards the Bedeaux system as an obnoxious form of stretch-out, designed to lower wages and speed up the workers to the utmost, and the action of the Calloway mills is seen as a move in a nation-wide fight to lower wages.

"Every resource of the union will be thrown into this battle," said Vice-President Gorman.

"It is our fixed conviction that the cotton textile industry has selected the Calloway mills to lead a nation-wide battle to install the stretch-out system.

"The industry has picked the southern industrialist which it believes closest to the White House and in our opinion it is up to the White House to repudiate that belief, because the Calloway mills, in our judgment, are in open defiance of the president's own executive order, which has all the force of law and which provides specifically that there shall be no change in the work load without permission of the board.

"The Calloway mills have ordered a change in the work load, installing the stretch-out, which is technically known as the Bedeaux system. In addition, the Calloway mills have ordered a reduction in the earnings of its employes.

Calloway Defies Boards.

"The president set up a series of tribunals to handle just such cases. There are the work assignment boards and there is the national textile labor relations board. The Calloway mills have proceeded in utter ruthlessness to defy the work assignment boards and the national textile labor relations board, created by the president, proceeding as if these boards did not exist and proceeding as if there were no executive order. It cannot be made too clear that such an executive order is exactly the equivalent of law.

"There is no mistaking the signals when a mill whose head is regarded as closest of all to the White House proceeds thus in complete disregard and defiance of the White House orders which were intended to promote peace in the industry with some slight measure of justice to the workers. We do not know just how close Mr. Cason Calloway thinks he is to the White House and the new deal program, but we know that the industry regards him as standing highly in that respect and we have every reason to believe the industry is prepared to back him on that account as the leader in a nation-wide wage-smashing program.

Workers Seek Peace.

"The United Textile Workers of America have made every effort at restraint, in order to give the new machinery every possible chance to get into real operation. We know it is no easy task to educate the mill owners in a whole industry to new ways. We have offered every possible kind of co-operation. We have sought to bring about joint action with the industry for the promotion of sales of its products. We want peace and we have the strength to follow the ways of peace if employers permit us to have peace.

"But we have here, in the Calloway mills, just such a situation as threatens the whole much-sought structure of peace. We have here a Balkan district in which the ill-considered and dictatorial act of an industrial overlord may menace the peace of a national industry.

"Of course we cannot forget that in this huge industrial picture there is one of the south's most reactionary magnates at the very top of the governmental machinery governing codes and code enforcement, in the person of S. Clay Williams, whose vast tobacco interests demand continuance of the ancient low-wage practices and union-smashing tactics. Tobacco and textiles run side by side geographically and gains for the worker in one industry menace the supremacy of industrial autocracy in the other.

"But the United Textile Workers of America, today stronger than ever in numbers, solidarity and spirit, are determined that the new deal shall not be wrecked on its own doorstep if that combination of numbers, solidarity and spirit can prevent it. If the Calloway mills have been picked to carry the black flag in a new field-wide conflict, the United Textile Workers will carry the American flag."

Complaint Is Filed.

Formal complaint charging specific violations of the cotton textile code has been filed by the union against the Calloway mills. To decide upon what next steps to take the United Textile Workers' executive board has been called to meet in Washington.

Calloway has refused to come to Washington, according to Vice-President Gorman, unless formally served with an official summons. To bring that about the union filed the complaint.

"The union has been patient since the strike, even in face of conspiracy, discrimination and defiance of the president's executive order. The Calloway situation is the breaking point," Gorman said.

"The executive council will not declare another strike before consulting with the president, and giving him a detailed explanation."

RFC CONCERN VIOLATED SECTION 7-A, IS CHARGE

Washington.—An instructive mix-up illustrating the ramifications of holding companies has indirectly involved the Reconstruction Finance corporation in a case of discrimination against trade unionists.

When Gen. Dawes was on the verge of bankruptcy for his Chicago bank, he borrowed $90,000,000 from the RFC, posting certain collateral for the loan, including controlling ownership in the Public Utilities Securities corporation. Dawes defaulted, and the RFC came into control of the corporation, placing five of its members on the eight-man directorate. This holding concern controls Utilities Light and Power company, which in turn controls the LaClede Gas company, of St. Louis.

Gas House Workers' Union No. 18799 asked the LaClede Gas company to recognize the union and negotiate an agreement with its representatives. The company refused to do so and dismissed Joe Davis, a union worker, who had been employed by the company for fourteen years, charging him with sleeping on the job.

The case came before the national labor relations board, which ruled the company had violated Section 7-A of the national recovery act by refusing to bargain collectively with the Gas House Workers' union and gave the concern ten days to put Joe Davis back to work.

Of course, the holding company, on whose board Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, has a majority of the members, is responsible for the policy of the LaClede company. But the board does not meet until April 24. In the meantime it was expected that Mr. Jones would tell the boss of the gas company to obey the mandate of the labor board and keep the Blue Eagle.

MARYLAND ADOPTS SALES TAX.

Annapolis, Md.—A 1 per cent sales tax designed to raise approximately $5,000,000 for unemployment relief was adopted by the Maryland legislature. The tax is collected from merchants, who are permitted to pass it on to buyers with increased prices.

The trouble with giving until it hurts is that so many persons bruise easily.

CONVICT LABOR BILL IS BACKED BY IOWA UNIONS

Farmers' Union Is Criticized For Opposing Measure.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Federated Labor Legislative Council of Iowa, representing 1,800 labor groups, urged the organized labor movement in the state to give their unanimous support to Senate Bill No. 133 to prohibit the sale in Iowa of prison-made goods.

"The only opposition to the measure so far as we know is the Farmers' Union of Iowa," the council said. "Their representatives have appeared before the committee in opposition to this bill. We believe that many of the local unions of the Farmers' union throughout the state are in sympathy with the labor movement."

In emphasizing the importance of the measure the council declared: "Approximately twenty states in the Union have just such a law, therefore, in the event the legislature does not pass this measure, we will be the dumping ground for prison-made products from other states."

In view of the necessity of protecting the workers of Iowa against a possible deluge of convict labor goods from other states the council urged the trade union movement to petition farm union organizations in every community to support the bill and requested all local trade unions to urge their senators and representatives to vote for the measure.

WAGE BOOST FOR CLERKS.

Memphis, Tenn.—Liberty Cash Grocers, a chain store concern, announced pay increases ranging from 10 to 20 per cent for between seventy-five and 100 tri-state employes of the company. The increases applied largely to clerks paid less than $30 per week.

Go to Your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

Justice Department Drops Belcher Case

Washington.—The department of justice announced that it would ask for a dismissal of its appeal before the supreme court of the Belcher case, which was regarded as the first important judicial test of the NRA.

Belcher is the owner of an Alabama lumber mill. He is charged with violating the wage and hour provisions of the lumber code. He did not deny the charge, but claimed the code was unconstitutional. Judge Grubb, of the northern district of Alabama, sustained Belcher's contention.

The case was set for early argument before the supreme court. Attorney-General Cummings said the lumber code contained administrative provisions "peculiar to itself" with respect to extension of discretionary powers to non-governmental agencies. He believed the fundamental questions involved in the recovery act should be presented to the supreme court in a case which would bring out the full facts, which the Belcher case did not.

ROOSEVELT ORDERS FIRM NRA CODE ENFORCEMENT

Department of Justice Urged to Hit Wage and Hour Chiselers With the Heavy Hand of the Law—Recommends Extension of Recovery Act.

Washington, April 4.—The national industrial recovery board, through Donald R. Richberg, acting chairman, informed President Roosevelt that because of the mistaken belief that the recovery act will not be extended and the conviction that the government will not vigorously enforce code requirements, violations of the wage and hour provisions of the codes have been increasing in some industries.

President Roosevelt met the issue by asking the department of justice "to give every assistance in maintaining compliance with the codes and in advising the district attorneys throughout the country to take prompt and vigorous action to prevent or to punish such violations."

Information regarding the president's action was revealed in correspondence with Mr. Richberg. Mr. Roosevelt said that "there is no excuse whatever at the present time for members of trade and industry who have sponsored and are subject to these codes to fail to give them wholehearted support." He added that he could find no "justification for the bad faith involved in attempting to lengthen hours or reduce wages contrary to code requirements."

The president also urged the NIRB to present the facts about increasing violation of code wages and hours provisions to the appropriate committees of the senate and house of representatives "so that they may understand the importance of accelerating action to extend the national industrial recovery act" and thus bring to an end a period of uncertainty which has a "retarding effect upon industrial recovery and tends to unsettle commercial and industrial relations."

The president's action was taken shortly after Philip Murray, vice-president of the United Mine Workers of America, was made a member of the NIRB, in addition to Sydney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, thus giving representatives of organized labor equal representation with industry on the board.

JOBS FOR 5,000,000 UNEMPLOYED WILL BE MADE BY 30-HOUR WEEK

Senate Committee Urges Passage to Effect Economic Recovery by Increasing Mass Buying Power—No Wage Cut for Shorter Work Week.

Washington.—Declaring that the Black bill establishing a compulsory 30-hour week in industry is the solution for the business depression, the senate interstate commerce committee asked the senate to enact the measure into law without delay.

The report, written by Senator Neely, of West Virginia, estimated that 5,000,000 idle would be provided with jobs by the shorter work week which the bill makes mandatory for all industries whose products enter interstate commerce.

In urging the passage of the bill the report said, in part:

Wage Cuts Banned.

"In addition to providing a shorter work week and work day, this bill would prohibit any reduction in the hourly, daily, weekly, or monthly wages of employes affected by it, pending a reasonable opportunity for discussion and agreement between employers and the duly selected representatives of a majority of their employes.

"The bill contemplates the employment of America's jobless men and women in private industry by giving work to all who desire it at shorter hours, instead of giving work to a part of the people at longer hours.

"The measure proposes that private business supply this work at shorter hours without reducing existing wages, thus increasing the aggregate purchasing power of the nation.

Government Feeds 20,000,000.

"The greatest menace to our economic and political system is widespread unemployment, with its consequent waste and misery and discontent.

"In spite of all the efforts that have been made to employ the idle, the government is today necessarily feeding more than 20,000,000 people at public expense.

"Probably more than 10,000,000 who are able and eager to work cannot find employment.

"The traditional American method of employing our people is through private industry.

"We are now appropriating about $5,000,000,000 to give jobs to three and a half million on public works rather than in private business.

"How many other millions will still be jobless after this $5,000,000,000 appropriation has been exhausted, no one can accurately foretell."

Provides Buying Power.

"A shorter work week and work day will restore happiness and hope to millions who will be given employment. The bill, if passed, will increase production throughout the nation. It will put idle men and idle machines to work. It will support our idle toilers with wages instead of taxes."

"The 30-hour week, without decreasing wages, would supply jobs and purchasing power; would increase production; reduce costs of production, and raise the living standards of the average American family."

Twenty Million Affected.

"According to the most generally accepted views, the working hours of 20,000,000 toilers would be regulated by the pending bill.

"The most conservative estimate is to the effect that the reduction in average weekly hours would be 25 per cent.

"At the outset, 5,000,000 men and women would be employed, and there would be no decrease in per capita earnings, but a great expansion in mass purchasing power.

"This direct employment of millions would indirectly bring about the employment of other millions who would be required to produce all the things necessary to satisfy the wants of those who are now idle and who are now without purchasing capacity."

Officials of Alcoa, Tenn., Gave Police Power To Aluminum Co.'s Imported Strikebreakers

Knoxville, Tenn.—An alliance between the Aluminum Company of America and the town officials of Alcoa, near here, to browbeat the employes of the aluminum company's plant in case of a strike was reported to the Central Labor union by Delegate Lloyd Luttrell, of the Alcoa local of the Aluminum Workers' union.

Mr. Luttrell declared that while representatives of the Aluminum Workers' National council and the management of the aluminum company were in Pittsburgh undertaking to renew the agreement, company officials imported strikebreakers into Alcoa from Knoxville and adjacent counties and states ready to be used in case of a strike. The local union, it was pointed out, had not declared a strike and had no strike vote under consideration.

A number of the strikebreakers, Mr. Luttrell said, had criminal records. Despite their unsavory reputation, they were given police power by town officials of Alcoa. After President Wetmore, of the local union, issued a statement condemning the company's action, the strikebreakers were paid off by company officials and given transportation back to their homes.

In order to stop the practice of importing strikebreakers, which veteran labor officials said were almost invariably used by large companies to disrupt labor organizations during strikes, the Central Labor union instructed its legislative committee to prepare a general law designed to prohibit the use of any guard or peace officer, bearing arms, who had not resided a certain number of years in a town or county where there is an industrial dispute.

ACCIDENTS INCREASE.

Albany, N. Y.—Thirty-six workers were killed by industrial accidents in New York state during February compared with twenty-one in January, Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews reported.

MORE ABOUT DAYTON STRIKE

Prior to Saturday the manager returned and called for a meeting with our committee. He told them that he could pay them the same wages and asked the men to return to work. The committee told him that they had decided that we should have some protection and had decided to organize. He told them to go ahead and organize and call on him. We organized a local union of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America on Saturday, March 23. On the same date our committee waited on the manager and presented a contract. He expressed surprise that the union formed was affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and said he thought they were forming a "shoulder-to-shoulder" club. Since then our committee has met with a committee of business men of Dayton and they said that they could see nothing wrong with the contract.

Again on April 2 our committee met with the business men's committee and received through them a proposition from the secretary to return to work at our former wages, although less than three weeks have passed since he made the statement that they could not pay this wage owing to competition in the market, but he balked at the union and we turned down his proposition by unanimous vote.

A. C. Kamin, president, was unopposed for a fourth consecutive term, and T. R. Cuthbert, financial secretary; J. L. Carpenter, vice-president, and Miss Lassie Munsey, recorder, were also re-elected by acclamation. E. E. Crosby, who formerly served as sergeant-at-arms, was again named to that position succeeding J. E. McDaniels, who retired due to the fact that he has accepted a post as representative of an international union.

Members of the board of trustees are as follows: W. E. Eckenrod, V. W. Hallmark, W. L. Gardner, G. G. Grigsby and W. P. Bales.

Contest for the honor of representing the Chattanooga Central Body at the convention of the State Federation of Labor brought out, as usual, a large field of candidates, and the voting was for a time "fast and furious." When the smoke of battle had cleared it was found that A. C. Kamin, Stanton E. Smith and R. M. Cooke had received the necessary majority and they were declared elected.

The meeting was one of the most interesting in many weeks, some 100 delegates participating in the deliberations.

Chain Meat Market Denied Injunction Against Meatcutters

Chancellor Holds Right to Picket Is Recognized by All High Courts.

At least one concern doing business in Chattanooga has been checked in an appeal to the courts to prevent picketing by members of a union organization which has branded it "unfair," and according to daily newspaper reports the attorney who represented the concern has practically admitted the futility of further effort to block the lawful activities of this union in promoting a campaign of publicity respecting the attitude of the company toward union workers.

The concern involved is the National Market company, a unit of a chain which has one local establishment at 605 Market street. Some time ago officials of Local 600, Meatcutters, complained that local officials of the chain had broken a signed contract with the union, and when subsequent negotiations failed to induce the management to live up to said contract, the firm was declared "unfair" and pickets were placed in the vicinity of the market. Representatives of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council also failed to impress the spokesmen for the chain market with the desirability of living up to this signed contract, and the action of the Meatcutters was approved by that body.

The company went into court seeking injunction against resultant publicity, but Chancellor Foust ruled the union had the right to "lawfully and peacefully picket" the chain market.

McMahon Says Curtailment Is Textile Outrage

Shortened Hours in Mill Operation, He Asserts, Mean 25 Per Cent Cut in Pay.

"What the curtailment order for the cotton textile industry means is a 30-hour week with a 25 per cent cut in pay and if that is justice for the textile workers then we ask the recovery board to explain it," said the United Textile Workers of America in a statement issued by President Thomas F. McMahon, denouncing as an "outrage" the official order of NIRB for a three-months period of curtailment.

"Once again labor is penalized for having been too efficient and productive, while an industry that is altogether heartless in its dealing with labor refuses to set forth any program to prevent these periods of recurring curtailment and wage-slashing.

"We call attention to the fact that there was a curtailment last fall prior to the national strike, added to which the strike almost completely stopped all production for four weeks. If curtailment is a remedy, then why did not curtailment effect a cure? In five months the disease has come back upon us and again our people face the misery of a slash of one-fourth off their already miserably inadequate wages.

Basis for Order Unsound.

"Let us ask the national industrial recovery board where they found the wisdom out of which they have given us this fresh punishment. Let us ask why our counter proposals, which actually were sound, were not adopted instead.

"Let us ask the board show long they think textile workers can or will stand such treatment and such fruitless efforts to 'cure' what is so wrong in the industry that nothing short of drastic and properly conceived efforts ever will effect a cure.

"Let us say that not for many months has an official order been based upon stranger promises or contained stranger language. We are told curtailment is needed because of 'inadequate consumer demand,' so that if the public doesn't buy enough we must quit our jobs. The mills say they cannot maintain the 'increased wage scales' unless they can now shut down a part of their operations to stop production. That looks to us like inverted economies. The whole thing is a crary quilt."

SMEDLEY BUTLER FLAYS USE OF MILITIA TO BREAK STRIKES; GOOGE URGES WORKERS TO ACT

Not Slightest Justification in Sending Troops to Shoot Workers in Defense of Property, Former Marine Head Declares in Blistering Address Supporting Connery Bill.

USE OF FEDERAL ARMS

The Connery resolution, which is in the hands of the house committee on military affairs, to prohibit the use of federal-owned equipment by state militia engaged in strikebreaking, reads as follows:

"To prohibit the use of supplies and equipment furnished by the United States to the national guard while on service in connecnection with any labor dispute without express approval of the secretary of war.

"Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That no arms, clothing, equipment, equipage, stores, or material heretofore or hereafter supplied by the United States to the national guard, or heretofore or hereafter purchased for the use of the national guard out of any funds appropriated at any time by the United States, shall be used by any unit of the national guard of any state, territory, or the District of Columbia while on duty for any purpose in connection with any labor strike, dispute, or controversy whether or not martial law has been declared in force in respect thereof, unless express approval for such use is given at the time by the secretary of war in each case for each such unit."

Philadelphia, April 11.—Some definite check should be placed on governors who rush troops to the scene of strikes at the behest of employers, Gen. Smedley D. Butler, outspoken former marine commander, declared in a radio address over WCAU.

In any strike today, property is worth more than life in the eyes of the authorities, and armed militia place more value on a pane of glass than on a human life, Butler said in excoriating the use of troops during strikes. He spoke in support of the Connery bill to provide that federal arms and equipment shall not be used by state troops in strikes without the express permission of the secretary of war. Butler testified for the bill in hearings at Washington.

"You know," he declared, "the way it is now, a life is worth less than a pane of glass. Particularly in a strike. . . . Some thug hired by the mills slams a blackjack across the head of a striker. And someone hurls a rock. Maybe it breaks a 60-cent pane of glass in the factory and maybe it doesn't. The hired thugs or the police—or the national guard—whoever is there to guard the property—gets excited and starts shooting. And a striker or an innocent victim, maybe a woman or a child, gets shot. That seems to be all right with the authorities.

Shooting Not Investigated.

"There is an investigation to determine who broke the window glass. But there is no investigation to determine who did the shooting and the killing. No one takes away the rifles and the revolvers and the machine guns from those who did the shooting. No, the shooting was to preserve the peace, law and order. What they really mean is that the shooting was to preserve the property and break the strike.

"In any strike today . . . property is worth more than life. What's the life of a striker or two, more or less, in these days of ten million or more unemployed? But a pane of broken glass—that's serious . . . so, turn out the state militia—and start shooting.

"You put guns into the hands of young and untried national guardsmen, many of them mere boys, and the first thing you know at the first sign of trouble, some of these boys get excited and shoot, and then we have real trouble. I told that to the committee (at the Washington hearing on the Connery bill) because I have handled hundreds of thousands of these boys and I know how they react.

"Men can't go around with rifles without hurting people.

Definite Check Urged.

"I believe some definite check should be placed on governors who mobilize the national guard the moment some employer who has a strike on his hands lets out a wail about protecting his property!

"If the right to use federal equipment—and that means the guns and bayonets that the national guardsmen use—if the right to use federal equipment by guardsmen is vested exclusively in the hands of the president of these United States, through the secretary of war, then these panicky governors won't be sending troops out every time there is a strike and someone shies a stone against a factory wall. Yes, make the governor of the state get permission to use federal equipment in the same way he does to use federal troops.

"By the titme such a panicky governor, who wants to mobilize his militia, informs the president and the president calmly studies the situation, the need for troops generally will have passed and trouble will be averted.

Strike Killings Unjustifiable.

"And there will be fewer killings just because someone has smashed a window in a mill.

"Whether the strike is justified or not, there is not the slightest justification in sending out soldiers to shoot down strikers because the mill owner is afraid a little of his property may be damaged. The property can be repaired or replaced. But you can't bring a dead striker back to life. You can't restore him to his widow and his children. And a human life is too great a price to pay for a broken window.

"And remember, there is no law against strikes. Strikes are legal in this nation. And, when there is a strike, why should the employer have the sole right to call upon troops to take his side. What right has the employer to call upon troops to break up the strike? That's why the militia is called out—to break strikes.

Troops Not Mill Owners.

"These troops don't belong to the mill owner. They are the people's troops—the people's defenders. That is, they are supposed to be. The people pay for their upkeep. But did you ever hear of strikers being protected by state guardsmen in any strike?

"This Connery resolution won't stop all of our governors from using state troops to break up strikes. Some of these governors will simply get the mill owners to put up the money to buy guns and bayonets and other equipment. But it will help. If this resolution becomes law, an exploiting mill owner, whose men are striking for a living wage, won't be able to run to the governor every time a striker heaves a stone through a little 60-cent window pane and demand that the troops be called out.

Connery Bill Would Help.

"No, because the governor would have to ask the president of the United States for permission to use federal guns and federal bayonets, and federal equipment, and the president, you can be sure, won't authorize the use of this federal equipment to kill a lot of strikers just because someone broke a window glass or threw a few stones at hard-boiled hoodlums hired to break up the strike by beating up the strikers.

"Yes, the Connery resolution would help. Let's hope it becomes law."

Washington, April 12.—Southern labor organizations are urgently requested by George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, to demand that the house military affairs committee report at once, with favorable recommendation, the Connery resolution 141 which would limit the use of federal military equipment in strike situations. The house military affairs committee has had one hearing on this resolution. John H. McSwain, chairman of the committee, who is from Greenville, S. C., insists that southern governors should not be required to ask the war department for permission to use federal armaments in strike situations.

Googe, who was in Washington fighting the case of the Calloway cotton mill strikers of Georgia, said:

"The use of national guards in strike situations has been more frequent in the south during recent years than in other sections of the country. For that reason I urge my fellow-southerners to bend every effort to have the Connery resolution come out on the floor of congress for a vote. Governors acting in the interest of employers use United States army equipment, including gas bombs, bayonets and bullets, to overawe and intimidate, and often murder and maim, strikers. If the governors are interested in maintaining order, and not in breaking strikes, let them call out the national guards without arms of uniform. Then let the mill doors be closed to all persons while a dispute is in progress. When Gov. Hill McAlister, of Tennessee, offered to do this in the textile and hosiery strikes the employers refused troops under such conditions. This proves the national guards are called out, not to keep the peace, but to throw a scare into the hearts of the people who can be frightened by a show of armed forces.

"We must use all our efforts to have the Connery bill come out of committee and be voted on by house and senate."

No Further Gain In Jobs Seen By Green Until Fall

A. F. of L. Head Declares Only Work Relief Employment for Idle Will Be Available for Many Months.

Washington, April 11.—A pessimistic view of the unemployment situation is taken by President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, in commenting on the federation's latest unemployment report.

"It is significant that we are at present making no progress whatever in putting the unemployed to work in industry," he said. "Prospects for further re-employment before next fall are slight. Whatever work is given to the 11,000,000 unemployed will be that furnished on a relief basis through the government's $4,880,000,000 program."

Trade union reports showed that 20 per cent of the members were unemployed last February, as contrasted with 22 per cent in February, 1934, and 19.4 per cent in March of this year, as compared with 21.3 in March of 1934.

"The upturn in business which started last September had, by January, 1935, already carried industrial production 17 per cent above last year and put 639,000 persons to work," President Green said. "Employment in January, 1935, exceeded January, 1934, by this amount.

Judge Blocks Bonuses For Motor Magnate

Detroit, Mich.—Bonuses of various forms for Archie M. Andrews, chairman of the board of the Hupp Motor Car corporation, were blocked when Judge Edward J. Moinet issued a temporary injunction restraining Andrews and five other directors of the corporation from executing certain contracts relative to Andrews' remuneration.

The injunction was asked by J. W. Drake, former chairman, who claimed the officials were planning contracts which would award Mr. Andrews $10 on every car sold beyond a fixed minimum, give him an option to buy 100,000 shares of stock for less than its present value, and, in addition, guarantee him a good monthly salary.

Label League Becoming Strong Force for Good

Newly Organized Unit Local Movement Aided by Active Interest of Ladies.

Under the able guidance of Miss Ina Green, as president, and Miss Virginia Munsey, as secretary, the Chattanooga Union Label league, organized less than two months ago, is increasing the interest of local trades unionists in union-labeled commodities, and bids fair to become one of the most effective units of the movement in Chattanooga.

Active participation in the label-booster movement by many of the lady members of local unions is being reflected in the renewed demand for "fair" products throughout the city, according to E. E. Crosby, who has himself worked tirelessly to place the new organization on a firm foundation, and today there is more labeled merchandise on the local markets than ever before in history.

"There is hardly an article which bears the label, whether it be for men or women," Mr. Crosby sadi, "but what can be obtained by sincere effort to find it. The quality of this class of merchandise also has greatly improved, and there can be no excuse for a real trades unionist wearing or using non-union or sweat-shop products.

"At our last meeting a question arose as to the authority of the makers of 'Friendly' and 'Service' frocks, sold locally, to stamp 'Union Made' on their product, and a query addressed to the United Garment Workers' local union at Atlanta brought the informatiton that the company making these frocks operates under a closed-shop contract with that local, and has been co-operating with the workers to the fullest extent. These frocks may be secured at several local stores, among which is Effron's, and are said to offer splendid values.

"At our last meeting C. F. Weidner was named publicity chairman, and the league is planning a series of entertainments at which the value of label boosting will be stressed.

"We meet each fourth Friday, at Central Labor hall, and attendance has been increasing at each session. At our next meeting, Friday, April 26, further plans will be made for an intensive campaign to make the organized workers label-conscious."

Good-Will Envoy Starts Summer Tour for Union

Dedication Attended by Leading Labor Officials Who Congratulate Union.

With the magnificent memorial to Samuel Gompers as a background, a sound truck to be used by the United Textile Workers as organizing vehicle and good-will envoy was dedicated in Washington on Friday in the presence of most of the leading labor officials in the capital.

First Vice-President Francis J. Gorman dedicated the beautiful truck for the United Textile Workers, while Secretary Frank Morrison delivered a dedication address for the American Federation of Labor and as the personal representative of President Green. Organizer Paul R. Christopher delivered an address representing the textile workers of the south.

The ceremonies opened with the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" and closed with "America."

The truck is equipped to broadcast voice, records and radio and carries music reproduction fully fifteen blocks. It is modern in every respect.

"PINK SLIP" REPEALED.

Washington.—The senate passed the "pink slip" bill repealing the publicity provision of the income tax law by a vote of 53 to 16. The measure had already passed the house by a vote of 302 to 98.

The income tax law provided that every person submitting an income tax return shall include a "pink slip" giving his total income. The provision was belligerently fought by wealthy individuals and corporations generally who did not want the public to know the size of their incomes. From the fight they put up for the repeal of the provision, observers would be justified in concluding that the rich regard their riches as the result of social crimes against the masses and that the size of their fortunes so acquired should be kept strictly secret.

GORMAN, PEEL TO ADDRESS BIG MASS MEETING

Textile Union Officials Here Next Saturday.

LOCALS PLAN FOR GREAT OUTPOURING

Expect Capacity Crowd at Auditorium to Hear National Leaders.

A great rally, staged particularly for textile workers but open to all trades unionists and the public generally, is carded for the Memorial auditorium on next Saturday, April 20, at 2:30 p. m.

Francis Gorman, first vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, who successfully led the great nation-wide strike last fall, will be the feature speaker at the rally, and John Peel, third vice-president of the International union, well known locally, will also be on the program.

Arrangements for the meeting are in charge of local textile officials, according to Charles Puckett, general organizer for the parent body, and a capacity crowd is practically assured.

Mr. Gorman's local engagement is occasioned by a national speaking campaign planned for the aggressive unionist which covers a wide territory. He became a national figure through his leadership of the great strike, and since has been greatly in demand as a speaker at labor rallies throughout the nation.

The speaker will discuss the causes leading up to the walkout, the gains made by same, and the results of the protest on the industry in general.

Final arrangements for the meeting, Mr. Puckett told The Labor World Friday morning, will be announced through the daily papers and next week's issue of The Labor World.

Dayton Workers Make Peace With Lumber Company

Three-weeks strike of employes of the Dayton Lumber and Veneer company, who recently organized into a unit of the American Federation of Labor and completely paralyzed activities at the plant when the management denied recognition to their organization, was reported ended Thursday on a basis completely satisfactory to all interests involved. Although little details of the agreement could be learned, it was strongly intimated that the workers had secured every right for which they struck, and returned to work with their union intact and prepared to deal collectively with the employers in future.

Much interest was taken locally in the struggle of the newly organized workers in the thriving neighbor city, and local trades unionists were gratified with the outcome of the short battle.

Bakers to Hold Social Session

Local 25, Bakers, and Local 549, Bakery Salesmen, their families and other workers in the industry, will join Saturday night at 7:30 in a social session at Roosevelt hall, which will be featured by the serving of refreshments, speaking and other entertainment.

Curtis R. Sims, president of Local 25, asked The Labor World Friday morning to state that all bakers and bakery workmen, union or non-union, are invited to bring their families and participate in the festivities.

Adolph S. Ochs

While men of affairs throughout the civilized world mourn today the passing of Adolph S. Ochs, and while all Chattanooga is shocked at the loss of its long-time benefactor and citizen emeritus, an even deeper and more poignant grief consumes a small group of citizens to whom the writing of "30" on the life of this great man means the loss of a staunch and never-failing friend.

Adolph S. Ochs, although a world figure and a man of considerable wealth, was regarded as a sort of godfather to all printers, and particularly to those who have made Chattanooga their home. Having begun life as a member of the craft, a bond of sympathetic interest between the late publisher and the printers had never been strained by the constantly widening gap which material affairs brought, and his occasional visits to the city which he loved so well were always heralded as a pleasant event by members of the fraternity employed on the Times.

Local printers saw in him the really great man which he was, humble, kind, charitable, a friend to the meek and to those less favored with the world's goods.

The nation has lost a valued citizen; this city is bereft of an honored benefactor; the printing fraternity mourns the passing of a staunch champion who was never quite able to outlive the subconscious title, to them, of "fellow-craftsman."

Look to the essence if a thing, whether it be a point of doctrine, of practice, or of interpretation.—Marcus Aurelius.

Three Items of News

Three items in one morning's news recently deserve to be told together.

1. Andrew Mellon admitted on the stand at Pittsburgh that he sold 123,000 shares of Pittsburgh Coal company stock in 1931 in order to claim a loss on stock for his income tax. The government is suing him for some $3,000,000.

2. The Internal Revenue Bureau announced that $964,870.53 had been turned back by the government to income tax payers. The sums were classified as refunds, credits and abatements; but at bottom, they mean the same thing. All three either take money out of the U. S. treasury or keep it from getting there. The largest sum, $692,260.55, went to a Chicago newspaper publisher whose paper was mixed up in the Teapot Dome scandal of the Harding administration.

3. The Office of Education announced that schools in twenty-five states, with 3,429,920 pupils and 102,116 teachers have not funds enough to complete the spring term. Back pay owing to the teachers amounts to $24,544,874.

Technically, these three items have connection with each other. Practically, every unpaid teacher and every parent of untaught children has a right to feel that there is a very close connection; for all three things spring from a system in which wealth is privileged, even to favors from the government, while poverty too often is ignored.

Beasts and Corporations

Scientists after working more than twelve years on the subject, starting with bones collected from widely different places, believe they have worked out a pretty accurate picture of the largest land mammal ever known. They call it "baluchitherium," but that has nothing to do with its size; it merely tells the scientific reader that the creature's remains were first found in Baluchisan.

Imagine a dehorned rhinoceros nearly eighteen feet high, with legs like those of an elephant, though longer, small head, large nose, neck longer than that of most animals but not long enough to let him graze. He had to find vegetation tall enough for him to browse upon or small enough to push over. With twice the length and several times the weight of an elephant, he had a brain pan about large enough to accomodate the thinking apparatus of a moderately intelligent cow.

In short, he was considerably like some of the big corporations of our own day; big enough and strong enough to push over any immediate rival, but had to have conditions exactly his own way in order to live. Conditions, apparently, wouldn't stay that way, and there hasn't been a live baluchitherium in anybody's back yard for 25,000,000 years.

There would seem to be a moral in this neighborhood, but it might hurt some people's feelings to tell it.

A Novel Idea

One of the hopeful things of the time happened in Washington a few days ago. Gray haired veteran Frank Morrison, known to every American trade unionist and to thousands and thousands of others, stood by the side of a shining orange-colored sound truck from which twelve amplifiers sent forth his voice and he said, "I dedicate this truck to the cause of labor." Then Francis J. Gorman, known to more millions than knew him a year ago, stood in the same place and he said, "I dedicate this truck to the cause of the United Textile Workers and the entire labor movement."

On the side of the truck there was emblazoned the name of the United Textile Workers of America and the words "Good Will Sound Truck."

The United Textile Workers are sending that truck through the South to amplify the cause of oppressed textile workers and International Labor News Service will send a picture of it to enterprising labor papers.

* * * *

Use of such a device is like the use of labor newspapers and like the use of the radio. It spreads constructive ideas—the ideas and ideals of labor.

If statesmen were to spread the ideals of labor instead of spreading, as so many of them are, the ideas of conflict and greed, the world would be helped.

It is to be hoped that the time will come when, instead of having station WEVD in New York and station WCFL in Chicago, labor will have a network of stations, when instead of having one sound truck, it will have fleets of them, and when it will have a labor paper circulation of fifty millions. Such circulation can be held only by the most intelligent editing and the most efficient business management.

More and more labor's struggle needs ideas and there is no reason in the world why labor should not reach out and take for itself the benefit of ideas to match the ideas used by the employers and the bankers.

* * * *

Of course the execution of ideas usually costs money and labor has always feared its opposition because the opposition has so much money. Now the truth is that where the other side has a man who can spend a thousand dollars, labor has a thousand men who can spend a dollar and who can add to that the influence of a thousand men among their fellows.

We have had a lot of foolish fear of the other fellow's money. Mostly he doesn't know how to spend it wisely anyway.

Of course ideas will not turn the world over tomorrow, not destroy the great economic might of greed and avarice, but in the end it is ideas—right ideas—that will prevail.

We hasten or retard that day, accordingly as we use effective methods on the spread of ideas. The operation of one sound truck may be but a small thing—a minor event. But it is a mighty encouraging one.

Reports long current that Germany has perfected use of the oil-burning Diesel engine for airplanes were confirmed recently by an announcement which said the Lufthansa Air company made the first successful and complete demonstration of the engine's efficiency.

Conference Ends Dyersburg Strike

At a hearing for the Dyersburg Cotton Product, Inc., vs. Local Union 2076, U. T. W. A., before Aubrey Folts, special examiner for the textile labor relations board, at the courthouse in Dyersburg, the mill officials and representative of labor went into conference, the outcome of which resulted in a signed agreement satisfactory to both parties.

C. D. Puckett, general organizer for the United Textile Workers of America, said Friday that this conference was one of the most pleasant he had experienced in settling strike controversies and every consideration was made for the interest of both sides.

Under this written agreement the mill agrees not to hire any new employes or outsiders until all strikers are re-employed, and agreed to receive employe representatives in weekly conferences where labor relationships would be discussed and wherever possible adjustment will be made.

A local Dyersburg arbitration board was set up to hear and endeavor to settle any differences that might arise in the future.

The Chiseler's Creed

I want the earth and all that is in it; to get it I cheat, lie, steal and kill.

I specialize in sending men, women and children into roaring factories, sunless mines, and many other insanitary places, crushing their spirits, their minds, their bodies, their very lives; taking the wealth they earn for myself, leaving them a mere pittance. Money means more to me than human life!

When I increase their work-load and cut their wages to get more money for myself I am called "A Captain of Industry." MONEY MEANS MORE TO ME THAN ANY PRINCIPLE OF FAIR PLAY!

I agree to codes only when I think it is best for my own interests; however, they mean no more to me than a scrap of paper.

I send travelers to sea on unseaworthy ships; if the ships sink—what of it?

I oppress the poor, the aged, the blind, the helpless, for there is neither love nor mercy in me.

In order to add a few more dollars to my overflowing coffers, I send men, women, boys and girls to ruin and a devil's hell—they are my victims. MONEY MEANS MORE TO ME THAN THE SPIRITUAL CONDITION OF HUMANITY!

Being responsible for the crime wave that is sweeping the country—racketeering, bootlegging, robbing, kidnaping, dope-peddling and rioting—makes me prance with glee. Money means more to me than social peace!

I defy law and order, the pulpit and the press, all the established principles of mankind, in order to accomplish my own schemes. I SERVE NEITHER GOD NOR MAN, BUT I AM IN PARTNERSHIP WITH THE DEVIL.

If the pulpit and the press had the moral courage to do it, they could soon force me to loosen the strangle-hold I have on humanity, force me out of public life and force me into submission by telling the world what and who I am.

I AM A CHISELER, A LIAR, A DECEIVER, A THIEF, A TRAITOR, A MURDERER; AND MY REAL NAME IS—GREED.

Green Defends Recovery Act; Labor Provisions Must Be Strengthened To Give Toilers Better Protection

Washington, April 4.—A firm defense of the principles underlying the national industrial recovery act and the strong recommendation that it be strengthened and re-enacted characterized the testimony given by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, before the senate finance committee which was investigating the effects of NRA codes.

Although declaring that working men and women have not received as many benefits as they rightfully expected from the act and the codes established by its authority, Mr. Green insisted the thing to do was not to destroy the law and return to the jungle of unregulated industrial relations but rather to perfect it and make its basic principles valid in practice in addition to being commendable in theory.

He urged that additional legislation should strengthen the collective bargaining section of the act, stressed the necessity of a work week shorter than the basic forty hours stipulated in most codes, and emphatically opposed removing the so-called service trades from NRA jurisdiction.

Importance of Collective Bargaining.

Declaring that the national industrial recovery act "is the first step in the establishment of real collective bargaining," Mr. Green said it had "served a great purpose" in this direction and "must not be underestimated," adding:

"The NRA has given millions of workers the legal right and the courage to organize for the first time in their lives. It has made them feel free for the first time in their lives. They will not see that right taken from them without a struggle.

"On this most important phase of the new economic order instituted by the NRA, we need now to take the second step. We need to strengthen and clarify the collective bargaining provisions of the act. I have already urged that this can best be done by a federal statute, as proposed by the Wagner labor disputes bill.

"A federal statute will extend the self-organization and collective bargaining provisions of the recovery program to all employes. Collective bargaining must not be looked upon as an emergency measure only. It must become a basic part of the changed economic order which is our ultimate aim."

Stating that during the first stages of the NRA the codes and the president's re-employment agreement had reduced the number of jobless from 14,000,000 to 11,000,000, Mr. Green claimed this experience amply proved that the unemployed can be provided with jobs by reducing the hours of work.

"That there are still many millions of unemployed is not proof against the soundness of the principle," he said. "It is, rather, proof only that we have been too hesitant and timid to reduce the hours of work sufficiently to absorb a major portion of the unemployed. Hours of work have been fixed by most of the codes at forty per week. That is too long a work week, in view of the present technological and managerial development of industry."

Mr. Green emphatically condemned the proposal made to the committee that the so-called "service trades" should be dropped from the jurisdiction of the NRA. Claiming that the trades employ between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 men and women, he charged that they are among the "most exploited and poorly paid groups of workers" in the entire country. "I say now," he declared, "that labor will never willingly see them denied the protection given to all other workers and will oppose with all the force at its command any attempt to limit the NRA in such a way that these millions of men and women will be without any regulation as to their wages, hours and working conditions.

"It is squarely up to the federal government to chart the course which is to be followed. The formation of policy must be centralized under the national recovery administration. It is not my province to discuss the legal basis for the protection of these workers. It is my firm conviction, however, that some method can and must be found whereby they shall be covered by codes."

In concluding his argument in favor of legislation continuing the national recovery act, Mr. Green said:

"No one would urge tearing down the foundations of a great bridge or dam on the theory that it should be destroyed because it was not yet a completed structure. Yet, there are those who urge that a great social and economic experiment be scrapped because it has not reached completion in the short space of two years.

"Labor is not so impatient. Labor recognises that social progress is a slow and unending task and that no worthwhile venture should be abandoned until there has been every opportunity for a thorough trial."

When a man in a cheap restaurant informed the waiter he was hungry enough to eat a horse, he was politely informed he had come to the right place.

MELLON ADMITS STOCK SALES AT LOSS TO DODGE U. S. TAX

Former Secretary of Treasury Says He Took Advantage of Provisions of "Strange" Law to Cut Down on Tax Payments—Government Charges Transactions Were Fraudulent.

Pittsburgh, April 12. — Crowds packed the federal courtroom here while Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury, told how he sold stocks to "establish losses" because otherwise, the "strange" income tax law would have made Mr. Mellon pay more taxes than he thought he ought to pay.

The government claims that all these sales were fakes, made to dodge taxes. For example, Mr. Mellon "sold" 123,602 shares of stock in the Pittsburgh Coal company at a loss of $5,600,000. But this same stock a little later turned up in the portfolio of the Coalesced company, owned and controlled by Mr. Mellon and his children, and they have only the stock which he gave them.

In other words, the government claims that in this case Mr. Mellon transferred this stock to what Wall Street calls an "incorporated pocketbook" purely to cheat the government. Mr. Mellon on the stand admitted that he put through the transaction solely to lower his taxes, but claimed that he had a perfect right to do this. It was while talking on this point that he spoke of the "strange" income tax law which at that very moment he was supposed to be administering.

Admits Dodging Taxes.

Mr. Mellon repeatedly declared that he might have avoided all tax for that year if he had wanted to do so.

On cross-examination, Mellon was confronted with a list of nine ways to dodge income taxes. This list was prepared while he was at the head of the treasury, and at his request, by David H. Blair, commissioner of internal revenue. He claimed not to know anything about this list, but admitted that he had employed five of the schemes himself.

He had sold securities solely for the purpose of offsetting capital gains, and thereby cutting down his tax liability.

He had made gifts to members of his family to reduce his income.

He had placed a substantial part of his property in corporations controlled and owned by himself.

Sold on Instalment Plan.

He had sold property on the instalment plan, receiving less than one-fourth of the value in cash and the rest over a term of years.

He had received "loans" from corporations in which he was a stockholder, these loans being to all stockholders in equal proportion, and therefore tax-exempt.

Also, Mr. Mellon declared that it would have been "stupid" not to avoid his taxes as far as possible. Some people present at the hearing recalled that he had preached practically the same doctrine while secretary of the treasury.

Another circumstance brought out related to Mr. Mellon's banking connections. When he came to Washington as secretary of the treasury, he claimed that he "sold" his bank stock to his brother. He did not mention the fact that his brother paid him "interest" exactly equal to the dividends on this stock. Nor did he tell the other fact that the sale contract was drawn so that on the deah of either brother, the stock would revert to Andrew W. Mellon or his estate.

"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught several years and find it splendid," writes Mr. G. W. Holley, of St. Paul, Va. "I take it for dizziness or headache (due to constipation). I have never found anything better. A short while ago, we began giving our children Syrup of Black-Draught as a laxative for colds and little stomach ailments, and have found it very satisfactory." . . . Millions of packages of Thedford's Black-Draught are required to satisfy the demand for this popular, old reliable, purely vegetable laxative. 25¢ a package. "Children like the Syrup."

Federal Relief Rolls Declined in February

Washington.—Federal relief rolls declined 239,428 persons from January to February, Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins announces.

The decrease, not including individuals on relief and recipients of rural rehabilitation aid, was 1.3 per cent.

Federal, state and local relief cost declined $15,678,321, from $196,630,787 for January to $180,952,466 for February. The decrease was figured at 8 per cent.

The January relief rolls, counting only persons in families, listed 18,176,732 needy.

Hopkins said "it should be noted that the largest declines were reported by the areas in which both the rural rehabilitation program and the transfer of 'unemployables' to the care of local authorities have made most progress."

He said the decline in relief cost is due primarily to the fact that February was three days shorter than January and that in many localities the February expenditures included only four work program payrolls in January.

Industry's Lockout Of Workers Continues

Green Declares That, With Over 11,000,000 Idle, Employers Have Practically Stopped Putting the Jobless to Work.

Washington, April 12.—Those who own and control work opportunities in private industry are making no appreciable headway in providing jobs for our stupendous unemployed army numbering over eleven million able-bodied adults. The only hope for these unforunates and their dependents is the government's $4,800,000,000 work relief program. These are the outstanding points in the current statement on unemployment by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Pointing out that the improvement in business which began last September and continued through January put 639,000 persons to work, Mr. Green declares this upturn ended in February, adding:

"It is clear now that we cannot expect this year's spring busy season in industry to bring any further progress in putting the unemployed to work. We can hope only for temporary jobs, which will be lost again by summer for industrial production in February rose less than the usual seasonal amount. Production in February exceeded last year by only 10 per cent. The gain in employment in February this year was less than last year, amounting to 250,000 jobs compared with 370,000 last year. Thus, in creating jobs for the unemployed, we actually lost ground in February since employment exceeded last year by only 519,000 compared to 639,000 in January. The total number without work in February was still above 11,000,000.

"It is significant that we are at present making no progress whatever in putting the unemployed to work in industry. Prospects for further re-employment before next fall are slight. Whatever work is given to the 11,000,000 unemployed will be that furnished on a relief basis through the government $4,800,000,000 program. When nearly one-third of our wage and small-salaried workers must either go without work or accept work on a charity basis, we may expect serious consequences to the morale of our entire nattion.

"Statistical information, recently made available, enables us to improve our unemployment estimate. Pending revision, which is now in process, no estimates of total unemployment in the United States will be published."

Mr. Green also emphasized the fact that trade unions are still heavily hit by unemployment, reports received by the A. F. of L. showing that 20 per cent of the union members were jobless in February, 1935, as against February, 1934, and that for March 14.9 per cent were jobless as against 21.3 per cent in March, 1934.

RAILROAD EXECUTIVES PLAN BIG WAGE SLASH

Chicago.—Railroad executives will initiate procedure soon after May 1 for a huge wage cut below the levels which became effective on April 1, it was announced here by W. F. Thiefhoff, general manager of the Burlington railroad and chairman of the conference of the committee of railroad executives which conducted the last negotiations with the railroad labor representatives.

According to the agreement negotiated a year ago, which went into effect April 1, railroad employes received a wage increase estimated at from $80,000,000 to $100,000,000 annually. Neither party can give notice of an intended change before May 1.

FAT SALARIES ARE PAID TO RAILWAY EXECUTIVES

According to data recently filed with the interstate commerce commission, railroad executives are not compelled appreciably to reduce their living standards because of the increased cost of food and other necessaries. The figures reveal that Howard S. Palmer, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, was receiving $36,000 annually at the end of 1934. Charles Donnally, executive of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, was paid $42,000 annually at the end of 1934, plus $6,000 a year by two affiliated companies, a total of $48,000, and R. W. Brown, vice-president and general manager, was receiving $18,250.

J. J. Pelley, who preceded Mr. Palmer as president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, was paid $75,000 annual salary in 1929, but took a reduction to $37,000 at the end of 1933, probably because of the restriction on high-salaried railroad executives imposed by the Reconstruction Finance corporation as the price of federal loans to help the railroads pay their bills and keep out of bankruptcy.

LIQUOR BUSINESS HAS NO RIGHTS, CHOATE DECLARES

Washington.—The liquor industry "has no rights," but only "privileges" which the government grants, according to Joseph H. Choate, Jr., chairman of the federal alcohol control administration.

He made the statement in connection with opposition recently expressed by distillers, brewers, wholesalers, importers and rectifiers to certain rulings of the FACA and code regulations.

Declaring that sooner or later restrictions must be imposed upon the liquor business, Mr. Choate added the warning that "the liquor industry better make the best of the situation as it now is, unless it gets something worse."

DUBLIN STRIKE CONTINUES.

Dublin, Irish Free State.—Settlement of the long strike of the Dublin tramway and bus employes was postponed when by a majority of 350 the men rejected the government's proposal that representatives of the strikers and the tramways company begin negotiations for adjusting the trouble, with the proviso that the employes return to work pending the negotiations. Evidently preferring to reach strike settlement terms before going back to the job, the proposal was voted down. The vote was 1,521 against and 1,171 for accepting the government's plan.

Carthage, Mo.—Contempt charges were filed against six striking marble quarry workers here for alleged violation of a circuit court injunction restraining them from interfering with operation of the quarry. The strike began a number of weeks ago in a dispute over recognition of the union. Since then more than a score of strikers have been charged with contempt of court.

Go to Your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

New NRA Bill Includes Section 7-A; Does Not Give Labor Representation Contains Provisions That Employes May Collect Damages From Employers for Violation of Wages and Hours Provisions.

Washington, April 12.—The fight over the future of the national recovery administration reached a new belligerent stage when Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the senate finance committee, introduced a bill, drafted along the lines said to be recommended by President Roosevelt, providing for a two-year extension of the national industrial recovary act, which expires on June 16. The measure was referred to the finance committee, which had not completed its investigation of the NRA.

Senator Harrison said the action was taken by administration leaders in the endeavor to prevent strikes in the key industries arising to a certain extent from uncertainties over the status of the recovery act and the national industrial recovery board which administers it.

Omits Labor Representation.

The bill was introduced shortly after President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor; President John Lewis, of the United Mine Workers of America; President Sidney Hillman, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and a member of the NIRB, and other representatives of organized labor had made a defense of the underlying principles of the recovery act and urged its extension with certain amendments more adequately clarifying the rights of working men and women.

It does not contain the provision, urged by the American Federation of Labor, that organized labor shall have equal representation with industry on all boards administering fair practice codes established by authority of the act. Suitable amendments along this line and other lines designed to protect the workers will be presented to the finance committee during the hearings on the measure, A. F. of L. officials declared.

Labor Provisions Summarized.

The main things which the bill does in the field of labor follow:

Re-enacts Section 7-A.

Restricts codes to interstate commerce.

Permits the president to impose limited codes with "fair and reasonable" wages and specified hour requiremtns and to put groups of small industries under general codes with the consent of the industries.

Proposes a maximum size, based upon the number of workers employed, of industries that may come under blanket codes.

Continues the present set-up of code authorities, with extensive power conferred upon the president.

Provides fines for code violation; eliminates prison-sentence provision.

Permits employes to collect damages from employers for violation of code wages and hours provisions.

Authorizes the NRA to promote compliance with codes by use of "distinctive insignia or labels," but omits all mention of the Blue Eagle.

Senator Harrison declared the bill was introduced as "a basis for discussion" and would be subject to substitution in whole or in part by the finance committee.

Dillon Visions Auto Strike Unless Wagner Labor Bill Is Passed

Washington, April 4.—Francis J. Dillon, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor in the Detroit area, told the house labor committee that a strike menaced the automobile plants of the nation unless congress speedily enacted into law the Wagner-Connery labor relations bill. He expressed the belief that if the strike occurred the rubber workers would join the auto workers.

"The day has come," he declared, "when congress must enact legislation to compel employers to recognize the rights of working men and women," adding:

"Unless congress passes the Wagner-Connery bill, which is Section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act in much stronger terms, or unless some similar relief is given workers in the auto industry, workers in all auto plants will go on strike and take the workers in the rubber industry with them."

The Wagner-Connery bill bans as unfair practices the policies of e mployers designed to discriminate against trade unions, encourages collective bargaining, outlaws the company-dominated union, and establishes majority rule in collective bargaining, and sets up a permanent labor relations board to enforce the act.

Charging those who own and control the automobile manufacturing industry with "totally and deliberately" disregarding the workers' rights to bargain collectively, Dillon claims the Wolman automobile labor board had been a "dismal failure."

Although the board had been organized under the most auspicious circumstances, he declared no board had ever done "more to perpetuate the exploitation of the workers" and to "hold the workers in bondage" than this same board. He said labor had never been consulted by the board in planning an industrial relations policy for the auto industry. He accused the dominating groups in the industry with studied refusal to cooperate in the administration's recovery program and with having wantonly violating Section 7-A of the recovery act.

Henry Ford was described by Mr. Dillon as the largest employer in the United States and the "most unscrupulous."

TWO SLAIN AS OFFICERS CLASH WITH UNEMPLOYED

Gallup, N. M.—Two men were killed and five persons wounded in a battle between officers and unemployed when trouble started over eviction of tenants.

Sheriff M. R. Carmichael and Ignacio Velarde, one of the unemployed, were shot to death.

A crowd of about 100 men and women charged the officers. A few were armed. Others swung clubs and wielded knives and ice picks.

SUNDAY RADIO ADS BANNED.

Ottawa, Can.—Sales talks or sport advertising on Sundays were prohibited over Canadian stations by the Canadian radio commission. The regulation, it was pointed out, will not only ban sales talks on Sunday which originate in Canada but will also ban similar talks over outlets in Canada of the National Broadcasting company and the Columbia Broadcasting system. Officials of the commission explained that the new rule will not prevent the mere sponsoring of the program by an advertiser, but all mention of specific products will be barred.

TOWING WORKERS' AGREEMENT

Cleveland.—An agreement between tug firemen and linemen in the towing industry and the Great Lakes Towing company was signed after two days of negotiations.

Under the settlement, employes of the company will be guaranteed at least 210 days of work a year—a 10-day increase over last year. Wage scales are not changed.

Gorman Urges Probe Of Textile Industry

Hours, Wages, Labor Representation on Code Boards, and Union Recognition Stressed as Subjects for Inquiry.

Washington, April 12.—Francis J. Gorman, vice-president of the United Texitle Workers of America, urged a congressional investigation of the textile industry in a letter to President Roosevelt and members of congress. He outlined the following eight points for the probe:

1. A thorough and merciless investigation of this industry, its capital structure and its methods of operation and selling.

2. Compulsory elimination of obsolete machinery.

3. A 30-hour week.

4. Drastically increased rates of pay, elimination of the north-south differential and a restoration of the differentials between minimum rates and skilled rates to their pre-code ratio.

5. Imposition of a new code, with labor sitting in equal numbers with employers on the code authority and all subordinate boards.

6. A joint government-labor-management study of marketing and market extension.

7. Mandatory recognition of the union wherever the union can show a majority in membership by secret ballot or by union books.

8. Immediate action by the department of justice to punish those who violate textile labor relations board orders or national labor relations board orders.

While not conveying any threat of a strike, Mr. Gorman said that "one must come unless the evils of the industry are corrected quickly."

McCANN PLANS BUYERS' CLUBS FOR TFL DRIVE

Calls Attention to Union Buying Power.

UNION LABEL DEMAND LABOR'S BEST DEFENSE

Sees Women as Ones Who Spend Union-Earned Wages.

R. S. McCANN

President R. S. McCann, filling out unexpired term left vacant by resignation of J. Cohen, of Memphis, announces part of his program to be presented to the convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor to be held in Knoxville on May 13, 14 and 15. Mr. McCann, who will in all likelihood succeed himself for the coming term of office, has extensive ideas for injecting new life in the labor movement of Tennessee. Formation of union buyers' clubs throughout the volunteer state will be suggested at the coming convention.

Definite plans for organizing these clubs to boost the union label were outlined to President McCann recently by L. M. Ornburn, secretary-treasurer of the Union Label Department of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Ornburn conferred with the state president in Memphis recently.

Following Mr. Ornburn's suggestion, Mr. McCann will suggest the organization of ladies' auxiliaries and union buyers' clubs to stimulate interest in union-labeled merchandise.

The state federation will gather in Knoxville on Monday, May 13, for a two-day session.

"It is generally known that wives and mothers of union men spend 90 per cent of the union-earned dollars. If these ladies can be induced to demand the union label when they do the family shopping merchants will soon stock their stores with union-labeled goods.

"Many campaigns to make the public 'union-label conscious' have been carried on in the past and great benefits have been derived. At the present time, many merchants are telling the buying public that the Blue Eagle has taken the place of the union label. This is untrue. Central labor unions and local unions should do all in their power to halt the circulation of this propoganda, which is being used to mislead the buying public.

"Every dollar earned by a union man should be spent for union-labeled goods. In buying an article carrying the union label, you are showing the manufacturer that he made a good investment when he signed a working agreement with his employes.

"In demanding the union label you will also help organized labor in its fight to obtain decent wages, reasonable hours of labor and better working conditions. And you will be assured that the article purchased was not manufactured in a sweat-shop, where men and women toil for starvation wages. In buying union-labeled merchandise, you are certain that the article was not manufactured in prison institutions. Organized labor has vigorously fought the competition of prison-made goods with free labor. You may be assured that a union-labeled article was not made in a non-union shop where the exploitation of labor is practiced. Organized labor will make every move to free the children from this outrageous and inhuman industrial system.

Nation Dare Not Scrap NRA, Says Union President

Emil Rieve Cites Gains Under Recovery Act and Declares People Demand Its Preservation and Strengthening.

Washington.—The NRA dare not be abandoned, declared Emil Rieve, president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers and labor member of the hosiery code authority, before the senate finance committee here.

It must be continued, and strengthened, and the Wagner labor disputes bill must be passed, he testified, declaring that real code enforcement such as in the hosiery industry under the NRA resulted in decreased unemployment, raised wages and spread purchasing power.

"The adoption of a code of fair competition in the hosiery industry," he declared, "has been of great benefit to the employes and has also saved many manufacturers from extinction. We do not claim that the adoption of a code of fair competition in the hosiery industry worked miracles; but it did double the weekly wage of a number of our workers and put an end to the practice of forcing employes to labor as many as seventy and ninety hours per week.

"More than 21 per cent more persons have found employment in the hosiery industry after the first year's experience with the NRA," he cited from statistics published by the hosiery code authority.

"There have been two labor union representatives on the hosiery code authority of twelve members. We attach much importance to that fact. There has been an exceptional degdee of compliance and this we attribute mainly to the fact that there has been an effective union and the union representatives on the authority were able to secure co-operation from the manufacturers' representatives," Rieve said.

"Widespread extension of labor unionism is a fundamental requisite for the rebuilding of our economic order and the new NRA should be drafted with that objective in mind," he declared. "The American Federation of Hosiery Workers would object to the renewal of the present act unless the Wagner-Connery disputes bill becomes law at the same time. Section 7-A as now written in the bill has become worthless and merely defrauds the workers.

"Self-regulation of industry in the true sense of the term is impossible unless labor—the most important element in industry—has an equal vote and a free voice in this set-up Equal representation for labor representatives should be obligatory on all code authorities."

He cited as gains under NRA, halting of "sweat shops" and decentralization of industry, though he blasted certain regional differentials set up under the codes. "When small town factory workers are assured standard wages we shall witness a tremendous economic advance in the now 'backward' sections of this country. We shall be able to develop genuine regional planning and avoid the evils of haphazard development which brought ruin to invesors.

"The NRA must be improved and strengthened, not abandoned. It has been the most significant and important economic and social experiment in our whole history and it would be treachery and folly to drop it." He declared that clear-sighted observers expected courts, "committed to an outworn system of special privilege," would fight the new legislation, but that "the people of this country demand the preservation of the NRA.

"We strongly urge the re-enactment of the NRA along with the labor disputes bill and recommend that the terms of the law be so modified as to provide for a much greater measure of genuine social control in the interest of all employers, employes and the public at large," he said.

Bramley Starts Home For Short Vacation

Walter Bramley, district manager for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, left Chattanooga Thursday for a short vacation of a few weeks to his home and family in Philadelphia. Mr. Bramley stated that Frank ("Hap") Ward, well known to hosiery workers here, will take his place during the time he is gone.

Mr. Bramley hopes to be able to bring his family to Chattanooga and establish a permanent residence here.

CONGRESS TO LOWER TAXATION ON DIME CIGARETTE IF GIVEN CHANCE TO VOTE ON PROPOSAL

Poll Indicates Strong Congressional Sentiment for Fair Tax on 10-Cent Cigarettes, Which Are Product of Union Labor and Are Threatened With Extinction Under Present Rates.

Washington, April 18.—A poll of congress indicates there is enough sentiment in favor of lowering the tax on 10-cent cigarettes to pass a bill providing for this, if the proposal can be brought to a vote at this session.

A flood of letters from all parts of the United States supporting labor's effort to keep these union-made products on the market has greatly helped in the development of this sentiment. The Allied Tobacco Workers' council has asked that this expression of sentiment be continued, even though senators and representatives may be getting too many of them to answer them promptly.

Some attention must be given by congress to tax matters at this session. Whether the tobacco tax matter receives final action has not been ascertained positively. It will undoubtedly come to a hearing, for it has been introduced into the house by three members of the ways and means committee. The individual bills, identically worded, are H. R. 5450, H. R. 6124 and H. R. 6368.

At present, all cigarettes pay the same tax, $3 per 1,000, no matter what the selling price. Under the proposed law, there will be a graduated tax according to price. Ten-cent cigarettes will pay a tax of $2.70 per 1,000; 15-cent cigarettes will pay as now, $3 per 1,000; and higher priced cigarettes will pay $3.30 per 1,000.

Clearly, the new rates would be much fairer than the old. At present, the flat tax of $3 per 1,000 works out as a levy of 252 per cent on the wholesale value of the dime cigarettes, and a levy of 126 per cent on the wholesale value of 15-cent cigarettes.

Ten-cent cigarettes are all union made.

Fifteen-cent cigarettes are made in overwhelming proportion by the Big Four tobacco companies, which are bitterly anti-union.

The present law puts a penalizing tax on labor's friends, and in substance gives a bonus to its enemies.

That contrast alone should rally all union labor to fight for fair play for union tobacco workers.

Under the present schedule, ten-cent cigarettes will be taxed to death. They made their first appearance on a large scale in 1932, when tobacco prices dropped so that the independent tobacco companies saw that they could pay the existing tax, sell packages at 10 cents, and still come out ahead. They cut a big swath out of the Big Four business, and their competition raised the price of tobacco to the growers. The secretary of the treasury of the United States has testified to that.

But now that tobacco prices are up to a decent level again—thanks in part to the bidding of the independents, it is impossible to pay the present tax on cigarettes, sell them to retail at 10 cents a package, and still come out even.

The two chief firms making dime cigarettes, Axton-Fisher and Brown and Williamson, are 100 per cent union. They pay union wages and deal with the representatives of the workers. They sent telegrams to the White House calling for a cigarette code that would be fairer to workers than the present one. W. F. Axton, president of Axton-Fisher, who died recently, was a staunch friend of the unions for thirty-five years.

Organized labor is making a concentrated drive to pass a tax law which is fair in itself, which will give the only friends of labor in tobacco manufacturing a chance to stay in business, which will maintain the competition by which the 10-cent cigarette manufacturers boosted the farmer's price.

Roosevelt Starts Pushing Fight on Work Relief Plan

Expects to Spend Most of $4,880,000,000 by July 1, 1936, in Providing Jobs for 3,500,000 Now on the Dole.

Washington. — President Roosevelt began the serious business of administering the $4,880,000,00 work relief program by holding a series of conferences with the heads of various governmental agencies to draft a tentative division of funds among the various types of work to which the 3,500,000 now on the dole will be ultimately allocated.

By the terms of the law the president has been given almost unrestricted authority to spend the big appropriation by June 30, 1937, to "provide relief, work relief, and to increase employment by providing for useful projects." Mr. Roosevelt stated, however, that it is the intention of the administration to spend all that is possible of the fund by July 1, 1936, probably reaching the peak of the operation by next November.

Earmarked Appropriations.

Definite sums are specified for eight divisions of projects, with authority given the president to shift $800,000,000 to various projects under a flexible provision. The allocations follow:

1. Highways, roads, streets and grade crossings, $800,000,000.
2. Rural rehabilitation and relief in stricken agricultural areas, and water conservation, transmountain water diversion, irrigation and reclamation, $500,000,000.
3. Rural electrification, $100,000,000.
4. Housing, $450,000,000.
5. Assistance for educational, professional and clerical persons, $300,000,000.
6. Civilian conservation corps, $600,000,000.
7. Loans and grants for non-federal projects, $900,000,000.
8. Sanitation, prevention of soil erosion, reforestation, forestation, flood control, rivers and harbors and miscellaneous projects, $350,000,000.

Prevailing Wage Rate.

Payment of prevailing wage rates on all federal buildings constructed is required, but on all other work the wage rates will be fixed by the president with the stipulation that they shall not lower the rates in private industry.

It is also prescribed that not less than 25 per cent of the cost of state, municipal and other political subdivisions projects, for which $900,000,000 is allomated, shall be spent for labor, with the power to determine the factors that comprise labor cost vested in the president.

To relieve certain forms of distress in agricultural communities the law authorizes loans to finance purchase of farm lands by farmers, sharecroppers, tenants and farm laborers.

Woolen Workers Plan Box Supper to Benefit Richmond Employes

Textile Workers Local 1751, of Peerless Woolen mill, announce a box supper to be given on Saturday, April 27, to be held in their regular meeting hall at 7:30 o'clock. There will be music and good singing, besides other attractions for the amusement of the unionists. Proceeds from the affair will go to the relief of former strikers in the Richmond Hosiery mills who are now out of employment.

All are invited to attend and bring a box lunch with them.

Government Sells 26,403 Seal Skins or $616,990

St. Louis, Mo.—The auction here of 26,403 Alaska fur seal skins by the United States government brought a total of $16,990 for the federal treasury. The auctions take place semi-annually. The sale attracted seventy-seven buyers from the large cities. Some of the purchases were made for London and Paris dealers.

PIER WORKERS JOIN STRIKE FOR RECOGNIZING OF UNION

New York.—Construction work on two piers here was almost suspended by a sympathetic strike of about 100 workers who walked out to assist members of two locals of the International Association of Bridge and Iron Workers who were demanding union recognition and the union wage scale of $13.20 a day. The work is a PWA project.

FAILURE OF NRA LAID TO BOSSES BY SECY. CHEEK

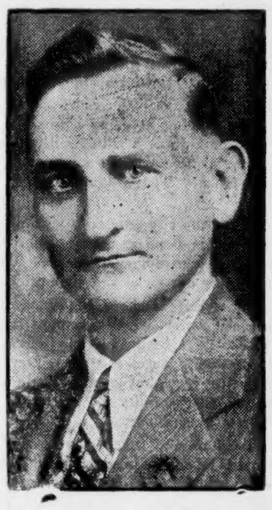
TFL TO ASSIST NEW UNIONIS TO SOLIDIFY

Sees Prosperity for Country Only When Workers Receive Good Wages.



W. E. CHEEK

Declaring that the Tennessee Federation of Labor will exhaust every resource at its command to assist the organized workers of the state in securing their rights under the national recovery act, and blaming not so much the NRA, as the employers who have failed to comply with the codes that they themselves formulated, W. E. Cheek, secretary-treasurer of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, today stated that the forthcoming convention of this organization will give special consideration to the organization of the workers of Tennessee, with the ultimate aim of securing for them collectively what they cannot gain by individual efforts.

Mr. Cheek stated "the intent and purpose of President Roosevelt and the members of congress when the national industrial recovery act was made into law was to relieve the deplorable situation then existing in all parts of the country," but he said, "in my many years of dealing with employers as a representative of labor, I have been confronted with problems of unfair competition, and even with the assurance of our national government that such competition would be removed, and with the NRA as that assurance, some unfair and selfish employers have banded together and defeated the intents and purposes of the first piece of legislation that would have benefited both employe and employer alike.

"Prior to the enactment of the NRA," Mr. Cheek declared, "organized workers were enjoying fair working conditions and a wage whereby they could live in decency; on the other hand the unorganized workers had no protection, and received very poor wages and were forced to work long hours. With the enactment of the NRA and the much-discussed Section 7-A, which gives the workers the right to organize into legitimate trade unions, there seemed some hope for better conditions, yet the workers were again met with strong and determined opposition from employers and in many instances company unions were instituted, not for the benefit of the workers, but for the benefit of the employers, in fact, most of the company unions are company controlled and are nothing more than a 'dodge' to prevent the organization of workers into legitimate trade unions.

"The only method by which the workers of Tennessee and the nation can hope to secure better living standards, shorter hours and a decent wage is by affiliation with a bona fide trade union, affiliated with the great American Federation of Labor."

"During the past year," states Mr. Cheek, "John E. Edgerton, president of the Southern States Industrial council, has had much to say regarding conditions in the southern states. He has attacked the wages paid work-

Teacher's Salary Bill

By T. R. CUTHBERT

Listening intently to echoes from the state capitol, and noticing with disgust activities by certain political powers of Chattanooga regarding the proposed bill to provide an almost living wage for our school teachers, one wonders if teachers are commodities, luxuries, or flesh-and-blood human beings like the rest of us.

Undoubtedly the proposed wage scale for teachers will increase the amount of money that must be appropriated to fill the need. Possibly, but not at all probably, a tax rate increase will follow. So what?

If we desired to declare war on a country to protect an oil well in China or Mexico, money would be hilariously appropriated — our jewelry would be hocked to foot the bill. That's patriotism.

If an epidemic of smallpox broke out in our community, no cost would be too great to eradicate it. That's sanitation and essential to continuation of human life.

If a gangster holds up a bank and escapes, or kidnaps a child, millions will be appropriated without a tremor to run him down. That's administering justice.

When the city entertains visiting veterans, there is no argument against voting money to defray expenses. That's upholding our social and civic pride.

But when teachers go crazy from financial worry, when they must actually keep up a good front on less than a day laborer's wage, and when they ask, not a just wage, but merely a little more money, that's raising the tax rate! It's ungrateful and unsound.

Teachers and other members of organized labor should note well the many trips made to Nashville by high political powers to defeat their bill. They should also take note of the fine action and support given thus far by most of the legislative delegation. If the bill is defeated it will be because some legislator killed it. That name should be engraved in the memory of these teachers who must be turned out to graze during the summer months, who cannot afford sufficient nourishment to keep themselves well and happy, who must teach our children to be confident, independent, efficient citizens, and all the while have a black cloud of despair hanging over their heads.

Lady Says She Took CARDUI for Cramps; Was Soon Relieved

Women who suffer as she did will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Maude Crafton, of Belleville, Ill., who writes: "For several years, I suffered from irregular trouble and cramping. There would be days when I would have to stay in bed. I would get so nervous, I was miserable. My aunt told me to try Cardui. She believed it would build me up, regulate me and help the nervous trouble. I knew after taking half a bottle of Cardui that I was better. I kept on taking Cardui and found it was doing me a world of good. I am in good health, which means a lot to me." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. . . . Price $1.

Union Men Ought to Smoke Union-Made Cigarettes

There's a big battle on in Washington to save the union 10-cent cigarette.

The unionized portion of the tobacco and cigarette industry which turns out dime cigarettes needs the support of every wage-earner in its fight to bring about a tax equalization that will permit the 10-cent cigarette to live.

If the dime cigarette is killed by failure to equalize the tax, then the wage-earners who smoke the dime brands will either have to pay more money for cigarettes or go to the roll-your-owns.

Today the federal tax on every pack of twenty cigarettes is 6 cents.

For the makers of the dime brands there are just 4 cents left after the tax is paid and that has to cover every cost, from farm to customer.

When the same tax is taken from dime cigarettes that is taken from the 15-cent cigarette, that's unfair.

Weeks ago the Tobacco Workers' International union asked the labor press of America to join in the battle to equalize the tax and thus save the dime cigarette.

The labor press has responded nobly, but the battle isn't won yet.

Remember: Every dime cigarette is union made.

The "Big Four," whose profits are so huge they almost look unreal, does not make dime cigarettes.

Identical bills, now before congress, to save the dime cigarettes are H. R. 5450, H. R. 6124 and H. R. 6368.

Build sentiment for these bills.

Write to senators and congressmen.

Introduce resolutions, get them adopted and send them to senators and congressmen.

Send copies to the Tobacco Workers' International union, Louisville, or to the Allied Tobacco Trades council, Carpenters' building, Washington, D. C.

This fight is in every sense a labor fight.

The two big companies, 100 per cent union, that make dime cigarettes, and every other kind of cigarette and tobacco product except cigars, are the Axton-Fisher Tobacco company and the Brown & Williamson Tobacco corporation, both of Louisville.

Not only back these union companies and the Tobacco Workers' International union in the fight for tax equalization, but buy their union-made products, all as pure and fine as good tobacco and good union members can make them.

For myself, I think it would be a fine tribute to these companies and to the memory of Col. Wood F. Axton to roll up this support now. It would be a fine tribute to the memory of this man who lived a lifetime in harmony with union labor.

This bill can pass if labor rallies to the call.

Woodword Fitch Axton

Woodford Fitch Axton, founder, president and chief stockholder of the Axton-Fisher Tobacco company, died in Louisville recently at the age of 63 years; and with him passes one of the very remarkable men of his generation.

Mr. Axton founded the Axton-Fisher company and brought it to a point where it is the largest independent tobacco company of America, employing nearly 5,000 workers and doing a large and prosperous business. That is an achievement in itself; but it is the least of Mr. Axton's titles to remembrance.

He ran a union factory from the very start. For thirty-six years the Axton-Fisher firm has had a contract with the Tobacco Workers' International Union of America. At the last convention of the A. F. of L. in San Francisco, Mr. Axton was invited to speak by President William Green, and recalled how E. Lewis Evans, now president of the Tobacco Workers, had come to the newly opened Axton-Fisher factory to organize it.

That is a record worth studying. Here is something more. Axton, as said, was president and controlling stockholder of the company. His salary was $10,000 a year—and he would take no more, even when his directors and other stockholders asked him to do. That was enough, he said, and he did not believe corporation officials had any right to take fantastic salaries. Meanwhile, George Washington Hill, head of the American Tobacco company, bulkiest of the Big Four, was making over a million dollars a year in salary and bonus—and other sums in stock deals on the side.

Perhaps the best idea of Axton's life can be gained from bits of the speech he made at the A. F. of L. convention. Saying that men are producing fully ten times as much as they did fifty years ago, he went on:

"If men are producing ten times as much as they did fifty years ago, they must have ten times as much purchasing power, for if labor produces ten times as much and can buy back only five times as much, we are going to have so-called overproduction, and unemployment is sure.

"If we are ever to have a return of prosperity in this country, the producer must have enough to buy back the product of his labor.

"If I am unable to manage a factory without taking our profits out of the pay envelopes of the workers or chiseling the consumer, the sooner I get out of business, the better. That's what brought on this depression. There has been too much 'take out' in business."

The man who, in Axton's position, can talk like that, and who has backed all his words with deeds, is a man for labor to remember.

A Welcome Change

Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, calls the Wagner labor disputes bill "most unfair and one-sided," and a law that will put all power in the hands of "professional labor leaders." Not true; but if it were true, what of it?

Auto workers now are in the hands of professional labor exploiters. The auto industry, which Mr. Sloan represents, is the world's worst social criminal in the matter of irregular employment, and is charged by a government board with maintaining a speed-up system which wrecks men, and a spy system that will not let them call their souls their own.

"Professional labor leaders" would be a welcome change.

LABOR BOARD RULES RADIO COMPANY VIOLATED SECTION 7-A

Washington.—The Atlanta, Ga., local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers won its charge before the national labor relations board that Southern Broadcasting Stations, Inc., of Atlanta, which operate station WGST, had violated Section 7-A of the national recovery act by refusing to bargain collectively with the authorized representatives of its employes. The board's ruling reversed the decision of the regional board of the Sixth district.

Supported by the fact that all eligible employes of station WGST were members of the Electrical Workers' local union, a representative of the union in December, 1934, presented an agreement covering wages, hours and working conditions and the closed shop to the manager of the company. The manager refused to consider the proposed agreement on the grounds that he would not accept the closed shop. Later the company without consulting representatives of the employes sent individual letters to all of its employes summarizing the wage and hour provisions that would apply in the plant.

Pointing out that the presence of a closed shop provision in a proposed agreement "does not justify a refusal to discuss other terms or to suggest other proposals," the board declared: "In our opinion the company has failed to bargain collectively with the authorized representative of all its employes." The ruling added that unless within seven days the company notified the board that it would enter into negotiations with Local 647 and endeavor in good faith to arrive at a collective agreement covering terms of employment the case would be referred to the compliance division of the NRA and to other enforcement agencies of the federal government for appropriate action.

Montgomery Ward & Co. Loses Blue Eagle Right

Washington.—The national recovery administration announced that Montgomery Ward & Co., nation-wide operators in the mail order and department store field with headquarters at Chicago, had been deprived of its right to use the Blue Eagle because of its "failure to pay its equitable contribution to the costs of administering the code for the retail trade."

The order emphasized the importance of the withdrawal by the declaration that "this administration and the code authority will no longer certify to agencies disbursing federal funds that you are in compliance with the above named code."

Chicago.—Sewell Avery, president of Montgomery Ward & Co., declared that the machinery established for the administration of the NRA retail code was "illegal and unfair" and that the company would continue to refuse to pay assessments demanded by the local and national code authorities.

When you sum up the many advantages of telephone service, compared with the small cost of only a few cents a day, you will probably decide it really doesn't pay to try to do without it.

SSOURI HOUSE PASSES OLD-AGE PENSION BILL

Jefferson City, Mo.—The passage the house of representatives of the ate old-age pension bill insures measure becoming the statute of the state. Because of a num- of amendments adopted by the e, parliamentary observers said bill would probably be whipped final shape by a conference com- ee of both houses.

"I shall, however, not go into the ails of the bill at this time except to say that if there is a scarcity of labor in any line of business, there is scarcity in very few lines; and if there ould be a scarcity of labor it would somewhat of a repetition of the rs when labor received a fair wage d the country was moving for- d."

Talmadge Goes A-Panhandling But Comes Home Empty-Handed

Eugene Talmadge, governor of Georgia, has joined ranks with Gov. Martin L. Davie, of Ohio, in demanding that federal Relief Administrator Hopkins resign. Talmadge is irked at Hopkins. Just the other day Davie, too, demanded that Hopkins resign, after Hopkins had said the Ohio relief situation was being run as a political shake-down.

Talmadge's ire was aroused when Hopkins said that Talmadge's state "should think of its own school children a little bit." Just what Hopkins meant wasn't altogether clear, but anyway Talmadge was peeved.

In a state run largely at the point of a bayonet, it seems there is a shortage of state funds for school purposes. Some of the schools are in danger of closing down.

Talmadge has been using a lot of Georgia taxpayers' money to chase state troops around to strike areas and bullyrag the workers on behalf of some of Georgia's chiseling mill owners. That has been costing a lot of money—thousands and thousands a day. At the same time it appears there is a shortage of funds for school purposes.

Talmadge hit on the happy idea of coming over to Washington and panhandling Hopkins for a large slice of federal relief funds to go into that school fund hole in the state of Georgia's pocketbook. In other words, Talmadge wanted Uncle Sam, through his relief funds, to replace the costs and expenses of Talmadge chasing his troops round to act as strikebreakers and do missionary work for his "god-given right to work."

Hopkins made short-shift of the request; he curtly said, in substance, that Georgia should stop wasting its funds in strikebreaking efforts. Talmadge—hot under the collar—came right back and said that Hopkins should resign—which Hopkins has shown no inclination to do.

Even while Talmadge was engaged in panhandling Hopkins for some money, his troops were in La Grange, Ga., to help the owners of the Callaway mills win a strike and force the Bedeaux "stretch-out" system on its employes. It is estimated that, in total expenses, the cost to Georgia in maining state troops in these strike areas is from $20 to $25 daily for each man under arms. At this rate the cost per day of keeping 200 troops in a strike area is from $4,000 to $5,000.

Firestone's Scheme For Injunction Hit

Green Flays Company For Seeking Order Prohibiting Board from Enforcing Section 7-A.

Claims Company Defies Government Tribunals and "Has Forfeited All Claim for Governmental Protection."

(Reprinted from April 6, 1935, issue of American Federation of Labor Weekly News Service Supplement.)

Washington.—District Supreme Court Justice James M. Proctor issued a temporary injunction here prohibiting the national labor relations board from withdrawing the Blue Eagle insignia from the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, Akron, Ohio, as a penalty for the company's order to hold an election, supervised by representatives of the board, to select a collective bargaining agency for the employes, and to withhold, until such election, the company's contributions to pay the expenses of the company controlled union.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, issued the following statement relative to the Firestone company's injunction application:

"The Firestone Tire and Rubber company defied the ruling of one court created by the congress of the United States, the national labor relations board, but is endeavoring to secure the help of another court created by congress, the supreme court of the district of Columbia, to continue its flagrant and rebellious opposition to duly constituted authority.

Unclean Hands.

"The Firestone company does not come into the supreme court of the District of Columbia with clean hands.

"Because of its defiance of duly constituted governmental tribunals it has forfeited all claim for governmental protection.

"Those who seek the protection of the law and of government should be first required to obey the law and respect the instrumentalities of government.

"The Firestone Tire and Rubber company in seeking a temporary restraining order and an injunction against the execution of the decision of the national labor relations board ordering an election, is determined that its employes shall not exercise the rights and privileges conferred upon them by Section 7-A of the national recovery act.

Opposed to Secret Ballot.

"They are determined that their employes shall not through a secret ballot decide by a majority vote as to whether they want the company union or their own independent union as their bargaining agency.

"Why are they afraid to risk a vote of their employes if as they allege their workers want to maintain the company union fostered and financed by the company?

"The action of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company in this particular case offers the strongest possible argument in support of the early enactment of the Wagner labor disputes act ito law.

"The American Federation of Labor will resist the efforts of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company to defy the national labor relations board, and will oppose its application for an injunction.

"Labor will concentrate all its efforts in an endeavor to secure complete and full compliance on the part of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company with the decisions rendered by the national labor relations board."

TWO KILLED IN JOBLESS RIOT.

Gallup, N. M.—Eviction proceedings in the case of an unemployed worker resulted in a disturbance here which caused the death of the sheriff, a jobless miner and the injury of seven bystanders, including a woman.

The outbreak occurred at the conclusion of a court hearing for three jobless persons, including the evicted man, who were charged with forcibly restoring his household goods to the dwelling. When officers removed the prisoners from the hearing before the justice of the peace, the melee in the street began. Each group charged the other with opening the attack.

Deputy Sheriff Roberts swore in 125 World war veterans and others as special deputies and called members of the American Legion to the city hall as a precautionary measure. He attributed the outbreak to the communists and was reported to have said that he and his deputies would round up every person suspected of being a member of the communist party or the Unemployed union, which he cliamed is an affiliate of the party.

Puerto Rican Is Jailed For Slur at Legislature

San Juan, P. R.—Antonio Soto de Jesus, deputy sergeant-at-arms of the Puerto Rican senate, arrested James R. Bourne, federal relief administrator, on the charge of slandering the insular legislature. In the language of the warrant Bourne said: "There are more criminals in the legislature than in this organization." By "organization" he presumably meant the relief administration.

13,000 Dressmakers Stop Work; Wage Rate Dispute

New York.—Over 13,000 dressmakers in 400 shops of the metropolitan area here halted work without leaving places in a stoppage to influence readjustment of work prices. The "stay-in" strike was ordered by the joint board of the Dressmakers' union after negotiations with the employers had failed.

The 400 shops are in New York City, Philadelphia, Connecticut and New Jersey. The concerns operating these shops are engaged in manufacturing what is termed "the $4.75 dress line." A similar "stay-in" strike took place in shops manufacturing dresses selling for $3.75. The workers included operators and finishers.

Julius Hochman, general manager of the Dressmakers' joint board, said the work stoppage was ordered "when it became evident that chiseling on piecework rates fixed in the union's agreement with the National Dress Manufacturers' association was increasing and no agreement could be reached." He stated the agreement calls for payment to operators of 90 cents an hour, but that "little by little there has been chiseling until now operators in some shops receive as little as 50 cents an hour." He stressed the fact that close to $250,000 had been collected from employers as penalties for violations of collective agreements in the last year.

STRIKE FOR PAY INCREASE.

New Philadelphia, O.—About 350 employes of the Belmont Stamping and Enameling company went on strike following refusal of officials to grant a general wage increase.

Go to Your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand, Divided we fall."

22,200,000 JOBLESS.

Geneva, Switzerland.—Quarterly report of the international labor organization on unemployment in twenty-nine principal countries warrants the estimate that the total is now 22,200,000, which is 2,200,000 more than the organization's figures showed on Jan. 1. The report said that owing to methods of compiling and estimating, the figures reveal only tendencies.

MORE ABOUT SECY. CHEEK

ers in the south, has declared for a larger wage differential for this section of the country, stating that southern workers are slow, inefficient and illiterate. He fails to recognize, however, that southern manufacturers have depended upon the labor of these men and women to harvest for them enormous profits, or rather he would ignore this in an effort to secure even longer hours and lower wages for the southern workers. If the above statement of Mr. Edgerton is true, why is his mill located in the south?

"Labor insists that the workers of the south are are intelligent, as capable and efficient as are the workers in other parts of the nation, and notwithstanding that thousands of these workers have demonstrated their intelligence by affiliation with units of the American Federation of Labor, there are yet thousands to be enlisted under the banner of this great organization; many of these having been frustrated in their desires by unfair and unscrupulous employers.

"Edgerton further states that wages of textile workers in the south since 1933 have increased 82 per cent. According to my information the minimum wage in this industry is $12.00 per week. According to Edgerton's own statement, if correct, what were the poor textile workers getting at that time? The handsome sum of $2.16 per week. You figure it out for yourselves. Then, why shouldn't the textile workers organize into organizations that would permit them to meet their employers around the conference table and work out problems that arise on a fair, just and equitable basis."

Concluding, Mr. Cheek stated "that the forthcoming convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor will devote much time to the problem of organizing the workers of the state solidly into units of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, with the sole purpose in mind of putting the underprivileged in a position where they can speak to the employers in terms of trades unionism and collective bargaining, instead of through puppet organizations, owned, controlled and dictated by the bosses.

"The organized labor movement is dedicated to this purpose," says Mr. Cheek, "and the forthcoming convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor will not fail of its purpose."

Secretary Cheek urges a full representation of delegates at the Knoxville convention on May 13, 14 and 15, and insists that if every man and woman in the trade union movement will do their part, that the time is not far distant when the workers of the state will be receiving a fair day's pay for a fair day's work.

POLICE VICTIMIZATION OF STRIKERS BLOCKED

St. Louis, Mo.—Police court judges here promptly discharged fifty-two striking employes of the Laclede Gas Light company who had been arrested on the charge of disturbing the peace in connection with workmen who were trying to clear gas mains of water. When the cases came before the court witnesses marooned by the police were unable to identify any of the defendants as having committed an overt act to support the peace disturbance charges.

The strike was called by the Gas House Workers' union to compel the company to bargain collectively with the union in accordance with a decision of the national labor relations board. After Mayor Dickman's conciliatory efforts had been unable to iron out the disagreement between the union and the company officials, the company turned its installation work over to Louis J. Cuneo, a gas fitting contractor, who unsuccessfully sought to hire union men. He then resorted to scab labor and was still greatly handicapped in restoring service.

Meanwhile customers piled up their complaints about interrupted service and threatened to call the attention of the state public service commission to the refusal of the company to render adequate service even though it was necessary to reach an agreement with the union to do so.

Municipal Light and Power Plants Are "Regimented"

Albany, N. Y.—"Regimented accounting was imposed upon all municipal electric light and power plants in New York state by the public service commission. Privately-owned electric corporations have been regimented in this way for a number of years with respect to operating property, income and expense accounts, but this is the first time the commission has prescribed a uniform accounting system for municipally-owned plants, of which there are fifty-two in the state.

UNION STRIKER SHOT.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Juan Duran, a striking member of the Ship Scalers' and Painters' union, was shot through the right lung during a mix-up between pickets and strikebreakers near the gate of the Bethlehem shipyards at Terminal Island in Los Angeles harbor.

Lumber Companies Cut Wages and Lengthen Hours

Arkansas and Tennessee Firms Impose 56 and 60-Hour Week in Place of Code 40 Hours and Reduce Pay from 28 Cents to 14 Cents Per Hour.

Little Rock, Ark.—An order was issued by Max H. Haden, manager of the Bruce Lumber company here, lengthening the work week to fifty-six hours. As supreme dictator of labor relations in the plant, he notified employes that their hourly wage rates would be reduced so that their weekly earnings would not be slashed under the new rule. Robert G. Bruce, of Memphis, president of the company, said the concern was not abandoning the NRA code.

The notice of the wage rate cut and longer work week followed a strike of the employes of the Chicago Mill and Lumber company, at West Helena, Ark., where over 1,500 men walked out when the mill owners decreed the 60-hour week instead of 40 hours and cut hourly wage rates from 28 cents to 14 and 16 cents. The order also included the company's mill at Greenville, Miss.

At Memphis the Anderson-Tully company boosted the work week of its 600 employes to sixty hours, with the promise that the reduced wage rates per hour would not decrease their weekly pay. Two other Memphis mills followed the wage cutting and hours boosting policy of the Anderson-Tully concern.

Nickey Brothers added eight hours to the work week of its seventy-five employes and cut the hourly wage rate. Longer hours and lower wage rates were also imposed upon 500 employes of the C. M. Gooch Lumber company.

PRISON LABOR REFORM URGED

Nashville, Tenn., April 13.—A bill now under consideration in congress and referred to the house committee on labor will have a vital effect upon Tennessee labor and Tennessee industry, if and when it becomes law, according to word around the Capitol here today.

The bill will prohibit the transportation and importation of prison-made goods, wares, or merchandise into any state or territory which prohibits the sale of prison-made goods within its borders.

Enactment of this federal law puts teeth in the Hawes-Cooper act which became law in 1934 as an enabling act to permit all states to make their own laws prohibiting and regulating the sale of prison-made goods in competition with private industry and paid workers.

To date twenty-seven states have already passed laws excluding prison products from the open market, with similar legislation pending in thirteen other state assemblies. In Michigan, Texas and West Virginia proponents of the measure report favorable passage of the bill through these respective legislatures.

Similar bills were recently introduced in both houses of the Tennessee legislature, sponsored by the Tennessee committee on prison competition.

The Tennessee measure embraces the cotton garment, hosiery, foundry and mining interests of the state, with the full indorsement of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, the American Legion and the Tennessee Federation of Women's Clubs.

Enactment of the Tennessee bill will prohibit any prison-made or prison mined products being sold on the open markets of the state which has become a dumping ground for prison products of other states. This condition has paralyzed certain industries within the state and precipitated great unemployment among its workers, according to A. P. Frierson, chairman of the Tennessee committee on prison competition.

A remedy for this unhealthy economic condition is provided by the bill now before congress. However, this bill will be of no aid to Tennessee unless the present legislature passes the necessary enabling acts now before it, Mr. Frierson stated.

The bills sponsored by the Tennessee committee on prison competition provide for a state's use plan supplying tax-supported institutions with prison products, as a solution for the time-old convict labor problem.

L. P. Marquardt, Atlanta Labor Board Official, Is Dead

Atlanta, Ga.—Louie P. Marquardt, Sr., former president of the Georgia Federation of Trades and former secretary of the Georgia State Federation of Labor, died here of a paralytic stroke at the age of 60. Mr. Marquardt became interested in the labor movement while working as a tailor in a clothing factory. At the time of his death he was assistant solicitor-general of Fulton county in charge of drawing indictments. He was born in Havannah, Ill., and spent much of his youth in Asheville, N. C. He came to Atlanta in 1902.

MORE ABOUT PRES. M'CANN

"The buying public should be informed by trade unionists that prison-made goods as well as imported commodities are allowed to bear the Blue Eagle."

In closing his interview, Mr. McCann called attention to a remark made by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who declared in a recent radio address:

"I believe in the union label with all my heart. It is typical and emblematic of organized labor and all that organized labor stands for and I sincerely hope that the purchasing power of labor and its friends will be so mobilized that we will extend the use of the union label and the sale of union-made goods and products."

Commenting on Mr. Green's statement, Mr. McCann said that "this should be not only the desire of every trade unionist but also of friends of organized labor."

Ry. Carmen Deplore Deaths of Brothers

"It is with deep regret that we are called upon to chronicle the death of our friend and fraternal brother, J. E. Darr.

"Brother Darr was a consistent, loyal and useful member of Lookout Lodge No. 211, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America. We knew him as a brother, a fellow-worker and a friend, and we consider it a privilege to pay this tribute to his memory.

"We shall no more be greeted in our lodge by his smile; no more shall we receive his handclasp and look upon his face, but let us hope that in the Great Beyond whither we are all traveling we may meet our comrade and friend who has preceded us.

"Brother Darr was a man of sterling character, and loved by everyone who knew him. He was loyal to all principles of truth and righteousness. He was kind and sympathetic to everyone. He was a model husband and father.

"In the going of this man our lodge has lost a member who was an honor to his lodge, his church and his community, but we find comfort in the good influence which he has left and which will continue to live, and we shall look forward with confident faith to a happy reunion with him in heaven. Therefore, be it

"Resolved, That as a fellow-worker and an esteemed member of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, we shall ever hold in loving memory his services and counsel in behalf of this organization.

"Resolved, That we, his brothers, strive to emulate his virtues and cherish his examples as embodying the principles upon which our order is founded.

"Resolved, That with deep sympathy for the bereavel family and relatives of our brother, we express the hope that this, our common loss, may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this assembly; that a copy be furnished the family of Brother Darr with the sincere sympathy and respect of every member of this brotherhood, and that our charter be draped in mourning for thirty days.

"J. W. FULLER,
"J. H. WOOD,
"Committee on Resolutions."

"Whereas, the hand of death has snatched from our presence our beloved friend, Brother J. T. Burk; and,

"Whereas, the loss caused by the going of one so well liked and respected and with such a good character is felt very sharply; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That an expression of our sympathy be sent to the members of the family of our deceased brother.

"We realize that our words may sound cold in this hour of deep grief and heart-suffering, yet our expression is one of deepest sincerity.

"Our loss cannot for a moment compare with that sustained by those of immediate kinship, yet the ties of friendship that bound close together have been severed and we are conscious of a distinct loss.

"Memory of long association will not fade. Our minds will carry the recollections of one who was held in highest esteem, and whose life was an inspiration to many. Whatever principle of moral, business or social life was preached was most rigidly adhered to in personal example.

"Character such as this cannot be removed without being aware of the going. The community can ill-spare those who by their daily living make the sphere in which they move the better for having their lives placed there.

"Our friend died in the firm conviction that the parting would be but for a short time. He would not have us grieve but live in the expectation of a greater day.

"J. W. FULLER,
"J. H. WOOD,
"Committee on Resolutions."

It costs no more in effort or money to secure UNION GOODS and SERVICE, if you demand and insist on them.

What Next!

Russian inventors are working on the problem of producing a mechanical cotton picker and are reported to have made considerable progress. They have already invented and manufactured "shuttle cotton harvesting machines" which have been used for picking cotton for several years in Central Asia, taking the place of hand labor.
